

Ms. Marlene H. Dortch, Secretary
Federal Communications Commission
445 Twelfth Street, SW
Washington, DC 20554

Via Electronic Filing

Re: GN Docket No. 14-28, Protecting and Promoting the Open Internet
GN Docket No. 10-127, Framework for Broadband Internet Service

Dear Ms. Dortch,

Enclosed please find the signatures and comments of 60,269 people urging the Federal Communications Commission to protect real Net Neutrality.

Since the FCC's proposed rules were announced we have seen a groundswell of public opposition to that proposal. We call on the FCC to abandon any unworkable rules based on compromised legal theories, and instead reclassify ISPs as common carriers.

_____/s/____

Craig Aaron
President and CEO
Free Press

This is insane. DO NOT VOTE for this bill.

—Candace Clement, Hadley, MA

Don't mess with net neutrality--period!

—Tim Hayes, El Cajon, CA

It is unreasonable and irresponsible to treat communications as anything other than a public utility.

—Seth Jackson, Florence, MA

We're counting on YOU to do the RIGHT thing!!!

—Mr. Gregory McCoy, Asheville, NC

Stop the hi-jacking of OUR internet for profit!

—James Pritschet, oakdale, MN

Bob Latta - bought and paid for by lobbyists

—tom swem, dayton, OH

We need to keep a free and open Internet.

—Bill Eagle, St. Helens, OR

We will not let up until real net neutrality is a permanent reality.

—Eric Schmitz, Bloomington, IN

Dear Mr Putin, Please do not stop net neutrality

—Eileen Kapetsky, Lelend, NC

"Some members of Congress" need to be told to mind their own business.

—Ramsay MacInnes, Cherry Valley, MA

Time to stop caving in to corporate greed!!

—Jeff Childs, Eugene, OR

2014

—W F. Noble, BOSTON, MA

The FCC and the Congress is charged with serving the public interest. It's time they did.

—Peter Butt, Los Angeles, CA

Open communication is the life blood of democracy!

—Justin Herndon, Beaverton, OR

Stop serving big business interests over the public good.

—Edward Maloney, New York, NY

Conner says you're all baddy scrubs!!!!

—Yoni Lerner, Sunnyvale, CA

For the little people not the 1%

—Badah Badah, flint, MI

What ain't broke don't need no fixin'.

—Robert Ross, Staten Island, NY

Stop the attack on our democracy!

—Guy Zahller, Aptos, CA

Don't destroy the internet

—Erik Bristrand, ,

This bill is outrageous and does nothing to protect consumers...or more importantly for you, voters.

—Cody Sharp, Indianapolis, IN

Stop! Back up! Wrong way!

—Denis Michael Raines, Currituck, NC

Please listen to us. Millions of dollars are flowing to keep us quiet, and the people cannot compete. But is that fair? Is that just? No. Please reclassify corporations, bring them to our level, before they own it all...

—David Anver, Denver, CO

The internet is a UTILITY!, -NOT- a private for-profit enterprise!

—M Solomon II, Harrisburg, PA

Kill HR 4752. Net Neutrality is essential... support making broadband providers under Title II.

—Larry Lohrman, Issaquah, WA

Allowing paid preference for better Internet service will predictably disadvantage political campaigns of candidates whom Comcast, Verizon, and their buddies disfavor. I think we can all figure out who such disfavored candidates are likely to be.

—Sarah McKee, Amherst, MA

Free net

—S, ,

Don't be duped by an attempt to destroy one of the engines of America's economic success and a key to America's future success.

—Donald Jones, Austin, TX

Net neutrality is at the foundation of the creative process that the internet fosters. It is how we generate new ideas and advance our society at the rate we do. Please don't take that away from us, or it will slow progress.

—Haris Khan, Hilliard, OH

BE ON THE "LEFT" SIDE OF HISTORY.

—Richard Heivilin, Germantown, MD

If anything, Congress should ask the FCC to classify the internet as a utility. 50% of Americans access the internet through a broadband monopoly in their area.

—Duane Johnson, Salt Lake City, UT

9% approval rating for Congress? Could it be because it's seen as doing money's bidding, rather than the people's?

—Patrick Mastrobuono, New Haven, CT

FREE COUNTRY??????????

—Edythe Rickard, Hagerstown, MD

This is deplorable, anyone who is against Net Neutrality is against the United States being the leader in technology.

—Dave Padovano, Brooklyn, NY

Kill this bill and classify the Internet as a common carrier and public utility.

—Walter Birdwell, Port Isabel, TX

Sometimes I am amazed at the chutzpah of some representatives. This bill so obviously and blatantly serves the interests of They the Corporations at the expense of We the People that it is incredible that anyone, even a Republican, would have the nerve to propose it. NO TO THE DESTRUCTION OF NET NEUTRALITY!

—Alan D McLemore, Beaumont, TX

Your constituents and all the people of the United States, possibly even the whole world depend on the net being open and free. Do not betray your constituents trust!

—Richard Duffield Jr., Osceola, IA

The internet should be open to all users and available as a level playing field. I oppose giving any entity favorable treatment at the expense of others who are not so powerful. The internet should be treated as a utility not a profit driven power trip.

—Wayne Foote, Smithtown, NY

My water utility doesn't care whether I use my water in my washing machine or in my shower. My broadband provider shouldn't care whether I'm getting my data from netflix or google or whomever. Net neutrality is an important foundation for the internet. Please protect it!

—E J, Parker, CO

SAVE THE INTERNET

—Mike C, Camarillo, CA

Support Net neutrality. Please listen to the majority.

—Isa Cann, Salisbury, MA

Stop the Fascism

—Norman Emmons, Charlestown, NH

We expect this sort of thing from Republicans. Why are Democrats refusing to stand strongly for the public interest internet against big corporate dollars? Get a backbone, Democrats!

—Christy Rodgers, San Francisco, CA

Please don't ruin Net Neutrality. My small business depends on this.

—Penelope Sallberg, Pasadena, CA

Don't cave to the internet companies lobbyists - this is exactly the opposite of what we need. Banning this is even worse than letting it remain as a possibility that isn't enforced.

—Klara Schmitt, Jessup, MD

I wonder how much money Comcast and AT&T has shoved into his pockets.

—Craig Foster, Shepherdsville, KY

Keep our country competitive, keep net neutrality.

—Dan Owen, Carbondale, IL

WHAT IS THE INTERNET IF NOT COMMUNICATION? It needs to be regulated under the communications Act. NET NEUTRALITY IS ESSENTIAL FOR SMALL BUSINESSES. Please vote against HR 4752.

—Nina Birnbaum, New York, NY

Please protect internet freedom

—Stacey Lane, Mechanicsburg, PA

Don't let the "market" control our rights.

—Mike Regan, hadlock, WA

Net neutrality is critical to start-ups, innovation, and competition. Corporate oligopolists undermining net neutrality will deliver less and charge more while killing the public's ability to protest. Stay away from voting against net neutrality.

—Ed R Armas, Elmhurst, NY

Please stop putting corporate interests before the average Joe. Please do not vote for this bill

—James Johnson, New York, NY

For once, you have a chance to cast a vote in favor of most of the citizenry of this country and against further corporate greed and the expanding corporatocracy that is trying to take over our nation. Please vote to save net neutrality.

—Perry Bergman, Thornton, CO

The Internet is a Public Utility, and should be regulated as such.

—, Madison, WI

Do not support this bill.

—Eric Connally, Cambridge, MA

this is how the playing field gets tilted (and the rich keep getting richer...)

—J Talbot, austin, TX

US Government... best government corporations can buy!

—Bruce Johnson, Carson City, NV

Just goes to show you that campaign contributions really do have strings attached. We live in a plutocracy where the rich give millions to our government to do their bidding. Just like how it works in China and the Middle East: You have to bribe the local official to get what you want. DISGUSTING!

—James More, Brunswick, GA

We need to keep the internet neutrality Government needs to stay out of such matters. It cannot run a candy store and it needs to stay out of things it knows nothing about. We the People say no so please protect Net Neutrality that is what you were voted in for to work for the people not Obama

—JB Marks, Tehachapi, CA

The internet gives us the last free voice in America. The corporations already have everything else. Leave us this.

—Lawrence D. Snyder, Davis, CA

Latta's Bill is a typical move by a Republican to give more power to big business instead of the citizenry of the United States. So you say you support freedom? Only the freedom of big business to make money on the backs of those who without them, you would not exist.

—Jeremy D'Arcy, Rocklin, CA

This is reprehensible! Save Net Neutrality!

—Elissa Menconi, Dorchester, MA

Please consider the possibilities of true Net Neutrality, and help reclassify broadband as a common carrier! Don't let this bill pass-

—Charles Steinkraus, APO, AP

We need access to small voices, not just large monied voices!

—Mr. Peter McKnight, Fairfield, CT

Comcast and their ilk are greedy. Why should the government feed their greed at the expense of the rest of us 99%?

—David McGlocklin, Davis, CA

If this bill became law, it would sell a big piece of our democracy to a for-profit, for-shareholders entity. Vote "No," please.

—Charles Quinn, Columbus, OH

Net neutrality is a prerequisite to freedom of the press and opinion and the unfettered exchange of ideas. The Internet should be under the umbrella of Title II.

—Mark Albertson, Norwalk, CT

Say no, I'm ashamed that my Congressman would support such a dangerous bill. Keep the Internet free.

—Ms. Kim Kensler, Toledo, OH

Freedom for open internet of, by and for all people~~~

—Kathleen Alexander, Houston, TX

I will be paying attention to how you vote on this and I will do my utmost to influence the entire community to vote for or against you based in large part on this critical issue.

—Ian W. Price, Warrenville, IL

Broadband should be a common carrier utility. This move by Rep. Latta is crony capitalism at its worst and represents a danger to innovation and commerce in the United States.

—Michael Fay, Normal, IL

Congress: you serve at OUR PLEASURE, and your job is to enact THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE, not the will of large corporations and lobbyists. Ignore us at your peril; you will be held to account in November.

—James Mason, Modesto, CA

Please keep the internet neutral! Don't mess with success!

—Marolyn Caldwell, Geneva, NY

We must keep the internet free and restricted

—Paul Mazzella, New York, NY

No surprise to find that Bob Latta gets big bucks from the cable and telecommunications industries, a clear conflict of interest.

—Jon Kapecki, Rochester, NY

This bill is the exact opposite of what needs to happen to broadband service in this country!

—Bridget Magnus, Las Vegas, NV life depends it

—Daniel Ross, London,

We need to vote any dirt bags control by their money, it's that simple.

—Dominique Cote, Cambridge, MA

Don't allow this travesty to happen! STAND UP FOR NET NEUTRALITY!!!

—Jahnvi Stenflo, Boulder, CO

Please media conglomerates to do to the internet what they've done to a free press and public airwaves -- twist their content to serve corporate agendas.

—Robert Robinson, Washington, DC

Please protect a level playing fiend on the Internet!

—Patrick Tillmann, Evanston, IL

How about the Congress actually defending the free speech rights of the vast majority of Americans this once? It must quit bending over for the One Percent, like Rep. Bob Latta, and support true net neutrality. Thanks for showing the courage to represent the bulk of your constituents.

—Michael D. Spence, Tukwila, WA

Please, don't approve it. This bill will extinguish net neutrality!

—Hudson César T. Ribeiro, Recife,

Real net NEutrality , is an open internet with no fast lanes, no slow lanes, just LANES Stop cowtowing to the corporations, they do not vote WE THE PEOPLE VOTE.

—Steven Leach, Grass Valley, CA

People before profits! People before corporations!

—David Caligiuri, Buffalo, NY

The type of "priority lanes" Internet behavior has already been instituted in Australia, and the net effect to end users has been quite unpopular. Plus, it isn't really fair if the interests of the monied few end up trumping the interests of taking steps to preserve the Internet as a free-and-equal democratic platform for all ideas both big and small. I beg you to please vote for what will most benefit we the constituents, and to not take the side of big corporations who wish to make the playing ground less than equal.

—Thomas James Durkin, Carol Stream, IL

Stop the take over of the internet by Corporate America, and keep the internet natural, for all Americans sake.

—Barbara Campbell, Vidor, TX

Why the opposition to protecting real Net Neutrality. The Internet is used primarily for communication so should be classified as such.

—N Shephard, ,

Don't be on the wrong side of history

—Craig Claeys, Minneapolis, MN

Keep our internet free.

—Raymond Spellen, McDonough, GA

This bill is nothing more than corporate welfare!

—James Feathers, Santa Cruz, CA

Are you guys joking?!

—Bruce K., Oak Ridge, TN

This bill is threatening a free and democratic society.

—David Cannon, ,

This takes an industry that already has far too much power and guarantees that power for the foreseeable future. In the end, your constituents will suffer.

—Mark Knight, Harvest, AL

A sure sign of corporate overreach is when bills are introduced that FORBID Federal agencies from exercising their powers. It's time to stop this attempt at undermining citizens' rights and at preventing citizens' concerns from being appropriately represented.

—Dr. Michael Mislove, New Orleans, LA

I swear these flipping politicians are in bed with all the big businesses and they have no interest in actually serving the people of this country. Maybe Mr. Latta should be flipped out of his district this next election? Stop these officials from ignoring the people, and stop this attack on net neutrality. Half of these people don't even know what the Net is. They simply sit in Washington and suck up tax dollars for doing nothing and take money from lobbyists and corporations. This NOT the country my family fought wars to preserve.

—Julie Cleveland, Bozeman, MT

This is another attempt to put the people in a lower class than the corporations or wealthy. Keep the internet open and free.

—Jeff Wickline, Granada Hills, CA

Vote NO on this bill: which means YES for freedom and democracy.

—Martin Wolf, Colorado Spgs, CO

Don't be a puppet of the telecommunication industry's lobbyists.

—Joseph M. Glombiak, Haymarket, VA

You were elected to represent the best interests of the people who voted you in. Did the post offices charge utility companies extra because everyone used to have to mail in their bills? It's the same concept!

—Eric Milliot, Palm Harbor, FL

Don't make a liar out of Mr Obama, and don't cave in to corporations. For once, do something for the good of the people

—Nick Quinlan, Mt Pleasant, MI

VETO THE BILL!

—David Csontos, ,

This bill is poisonous.

—Robert John Bennett, Honolulu (Absentee Voter in Germany), HI

Only this Congress, who has every reason to keep the public suppressed, would push hard to let corporations control everything including the Internet. I thought the definition of Fascism was where corporations control government.

—Shelley Snow, Paso Robles, CA

I, like many of the voting public, am retired and struggling to make ends meet. This will mean more expense. Vote against it please. Thank you.

—Brenda Volpe, Hilliard, OH

Please listen to the urge of the people.

—Elias Bastos, South Lake Tahoe, CA

We need your wisdom also for use of the internet in Germany and everywhere else on the world!

—Bert Zandwijk, Utrecht,

This amounts to outright censorship which is against the law of the land. Any bill like this should be null and void.

—Lynda Leibowitz, New Smyrna Beach, FL

This is the voice of the people, not the corporations and politicians who only want to deepen their pockets.

—Stephen, Garner, NC

Save the internet. Save Democracy.

—Frank Ackerman, Walnut Creek, CA

Do not pass this bill. Ever. Create a bill to bolster Net Neutrality protections from the FCC.

—James Marin, Okaton, VA

Money is not speech.

—Tor Nichols, Las Cruces, NM

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality. A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet. Stop deliberately going against what the American People want. You do not work for the big companies. Pandering to them in this way, in direct opposition to clear instructions from the populous is disgusting.

—Kayla Domeyer, GRAND RAPIDS, MI

Let the FCC do its job, and support true internet neutrality. Urge the FCC to classify broadband providers as common carriers!

—John I. Clark, Ridgway, CO

Reclassifying Internet/Broadband as a utility is necessary to support the free and open internet. Please don't vote for this bill.

—Miguel Asse, New York, NY

Damn you... listen to the people.

—Jill Lapple, McKinleyville, CA

We have the right to net neutrality, even though im from europe, if you guys put this through in the states, you give a bad example, and countries will copy it. So please... stop this before its too late.

—Jeroen Brouwer, ,

Again, this is the single most important issue of our time. All freedoms come from this freedom. Thank you.

—Ruth Waytz, LOS ANGELES, CA

Please listen to all constituents who demand a truly open internet. Do not vote on any legislation that would stifle creativity and competition in all markets. The internet is an increasingly important medium of commerce. Please fight to keep it alive and thriving.

—Jordan, Bloomington, MN

This has gone far enough

—Aaron Cordero, Weslaco, CA

Support we-the-people for a change. NO! to FCC's so called Net Neutrality. It is not neutral NO! NO! NO!

—Donald L. Anderson, HARPSWELL, ME

Rep. Latta, You took an Oath Of Office to represent your true constituency, the citizenry, and not corporate special interests. Introducing this bill proves you have abdicated that oath of which you swore to uphold? To me, this is a treasonous act, and you should be removed from office for promoting this fascist ALEC bill!

—Todd Johnston, Oxford, MI

A vote for this bill is a vote against the free press. It is a vote against the free market. It is a vote against the First Amendment.

—Caitlin Gilson, Phoenix, AZ

Reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act...NOW.

—Rita Larkin, Addison, IL

Keep the Internet Neutral! No special privileges for those with a pocket full of money.

—Glenn Ferren, Saint Regis, MT

Save the Net Neutrality! It is very important for us as researchers. Don't let anybody mess with it, please!

—Pia Hellertz, ,

The internet is a utility and must remain so if the US is to continue to lead the world, level the playing field for new innovations...

—K Christensen, Baldwin Park, CA

Do not support this bill!

—Patrick Cicere, Chicago, IL

These companies are most definitely COMMON CARRIERS and should be classified as such. REJECT Latta's bill.

—Robn Diekow, Sequim, WA

Why do those in charge of country think it's always a good idea to hurt the freedom of choice that allowed them to get to their seat of power? I don't understand why the big business agenda seems to be so much more important than the welfare of the people. Think about how the public will react if we can no longer CHOOSE what we support? I know this is only the Internet this bill concerns, but I see this kind of mindset on many other levels and scales - it's upsetting and stressful.

—Matthew Squier, Latrobe, PA

A vote against H.R. 4752 is the best way. NO to H.R.4752. Title II of the Comm. Act protects Net Neutrality.

—Mary Kroncke, Frankfort, KY

This bill is an insulting workaround and it's not fooling anybody. The American public has spoken very clearly in its comments to the FCC chairman. Please respect the will of the people and oppose this bill.

—Mr. Hugues Saint de Salvy, San Francisco, CA

Representatives need to know that the internet being as open as the road system is as important as wide open sky.

—Jeremy Josiah Johnson, Juneau, AK

This is a gross abuse of influence on a congressman.

—Brian Rowe, Ellabell, GA

It is time to NATIONALIZE Telecommunications.

—Mark Alan Dellavecchia, Campbell, CA

Quit being a corrupt ass hole. True net neutrality will happen even if we have to vote you out to do it.

—Daniel Gutierrez, Dublin, OH

Will you never get it into your head that the public DOES NOT WANT THIS?

—David Rix, London,

All options for protecting Net Neutrality should be on the table.

—Christopher Aycock, San Francisco, CA

Stop trying to take our internet away, please!

—Rafe Moran, Highland, IL

Anyone letting this happen will lose my vote at their next election!

—Aurora Insurriaga, CHICAGO, IL

Fuck Corporate Censorship - —Hall Hodgson, San Diego, CA

Why am I not at all surprised, the people who profess to represent us, represent their campaign financiers instead?
—Bruce Eliot Linton, Wilmington, DE

Broadband is a utility. Make it one.
—Windy Buddenbaum, Chico, CA

This issue has gone on long enough. The Internet belongs to the people who make it up, not the corporations that own the wires.
—Joshua Newman, Northampton, MA

Protect the internet...protect the hope for true democracy in America.
—William T. Shields, Portland, OR

Please note that a large number of my friends are relatively young. We have a lot more votes in the coming future.
—Xin Zhang, Rochester, MI

The FCC needs to simply say that the suppliers of internet connections are to be called a "common carrier".
—John Weaver, Fremont, CA

PLEASE!!!
—Dan Karney, West Chester, PA

Real broadband competition now!
—Ron Carlson, Erie, PA

Deviating from the simple proposition that network providers CANNOT favor content providers will have dire consequences for the economy.
—Payam N Minoofar, Ventura, CA

This bill is insulting to the American people. A disproportional amount of citizens blatantly disagree with this action and passing it would only show how broken our democracy is by allowing big businesses to bribe their way into cornering the market.
—Kyle Keine, Lakeland, FL

Let's help the little guy for once!
—Robert L. R. Wesly MD, PhD, Gainesville, FL

Net neutrality is important for the maintenance of our democracy.
—Angela, Fort Bragg, CA

Rep. Bob Latta from Ohio is a current member of ALEC. This is reason enough to question his bill, H.R. 4752.
—Margarita C Denevan, Arroyo Hondo, NM

This only serves the 1% and creates more of a divide between the haves and have nots' the internet is the great equalizer in business and freedom of information. Don't allow this to happen.
—jonathan Bouley, Greenville, NH

net neutrality is MANDATORY, as a simple function of FREE SPEECH !!! Comcast, on the other hand, SHOULD BE BROKEN UP !!!! They own TOO much of the web's infrastructure, to be trusted with protecting free speech.

—Chris S., Danville, CA

Actually, it is the President - not the Congress - that has been relentlessly attacking Internet freedom. Congress shot down SOPA, PIPA, CISPA, CISPA II, and it appears, the TPP as well. Now the President has simply ordered it through his man in the FCC. He said he would bypass the Congress and rule by fiat. This happens to be the one time he was telling the truth.

—Phillip Larrea, Sacramento, CA

The preservation of true Net Neutrality is important to me, and I vote!

—Cary B. Cornett, Lincoln Park, MI

Who paid off Mr. Latta? Now I know why my AT&T bill went up.

—John Flaig, San Jose, CA

were are the anti-monopoly laws now? Why are we allowing the ISP's power to throttle and potentially put other out of business and strangle growing companies because they can't pay the outrageous fees to make sure they can be seen. Keep the freedom of information alive! PLEASE!

—, Addison, TX

If we don't maintain Net Neutrality, our democracy is irretrievably lost.

—Patti Batchelder, Georgetown, MA

We want action for democratic media, not platitudes as smokescreens for corporate domination of the Internet. We want net neutrality. JUST DO IT! Seriously!! No more privatization of public assets to enrich the 1% who contribute 0%!!! No more privatizing profits while socializing all avoidable corporate messes and disasters - from exploding crude oil trains to fracking-caused earthquakes and oil spills, etc., caused by greed-driven short-cuts and deliberate negligence. NO MORE!!! As one of the cogs in the wheel that helped build and shape the net, I demand it remain neutral as originally intended before inequality pushes the majority over the brink... dashing their hopes and dreams upon the unrelenting and undeserved waves of misery, for no greater reason than to provide a handful of entitled gluttonous leeches with more blood money than the most ravenous parasite could possible need and/or use. Please. No more blood for the 1% leeches sucking our society dry. Save Net Neutrality! PLEASE!!!

—Cheryl Dykstra, Niskayuna, NY

Why are you trying to stop the FCC from doing what they are supposed to be doing? Why are you scared that they'll do their jobs (unlike you)? I suppose next you'll try to stop firefighters from putting out fires, or stop doctors from treating people.

—Kris Tennant, ,

Congress is determined to be ruled by the wealthy, but the people don't want that. We want a representative democracy.

—Peggy Braun, Lenox, MA

Do not support this bill. Your actions will be remembered in November by legions of geeks, artists and consumers who VOTE.

—Mark Tosiello, MI, MI

This is one of the most critical decisions of our time and I implore you to do what is right for the people of our country - not the corporations that control you.

—Doug Dilling, Indianapolis, IN

Internet is global network and relies on fair play so nobody should be allowed to have advantage and put others at their mercy.

—Ivo Minkov, Beverly, MA

ANY attempt to do away with net neutrality should be stopped.

—Jan C. Porter, Spring Lake, MI

I am sick and tired of the govt working for corporations.

—John Cummings, Madisonville, TN

Other advanced industrial countries have internets that work for everybody.

—Edwina White, Sacramento, CA

This bill is in and of itself an insult to the constition and taking us back to the days of merry ol'endland when everyone's mail was spied on and taxes were out weighing the income. Let the FFC do what it is suppose to be there for, regulating "fair" usage of communication and not something that will cause hindering effects like "HIPPA" information being called the "properity of verzion" becuase it happen to go through thier networks. As Verizon had disclaimed back in 2012 that "Any data that crosses thier network is thier property". We don't need a toll or slow/fast lane system for that would crush small businesses, including small government contractors. Since Comcast and AT&T seem to have billions to toss around to buy out competitors that should show they have enough money to reinvest into expanding the networks allowing for all to be able to have faster more reilible ways of communicating. This bill is just one of many lobbist and pork that is trying to kill our current structure of economy. I would need a book to write just how many ways this bill will hurt the U.S and the world.

—Robert Emminger, Covington, TN

Say no to corporate greed!

—Jeff Crawford, Chandler, AZ

OPPOSE this attack on consumers!!!

—Glen Anderson, Lacey, WA

Keep the internet free

—Charles, Palm Beach Gardens, FL

This is likely more important than you know.

—Rick Olson, Las Vegas, NV

Prove you stand with the people who elected you and not the Corporations who funnel money your way.

—Guy L McCoy, Springfield, IL

Net neutrality is the epitome of freedom. Keep it.

—David Cosloy, Bel Aire, KS

Why would you vote for this? Rep. Latta is apparently so bought and paid for he's not afraid to show it. At least keep up the charade.

—Nick Zachariasen, Vermillion, SD

Disgusting

—Gregory David, St Louis Park, MN

Everybody assumes Verizon, AT&T, Comcast and Time-Warner have more right than we consumers, but although they have more money to pour into the pockets of legislators; there are millions of us and with one vote from each of us, we can eject ALL these parasites from our midst!

—Ms. Rose Riker, Sioux City, IA

This is RIDICULOUS! DO NOT LET THIS HAPPEN!

—Jody Webb, Asheville, NC

Providers in this country have been dragging their feet in this country while Europe and Asia operate at much faster speeds. Now they want a "two lane" approach, charging higher rates for a faster service. No to corporate greed!

—Anthony Albert, Corvallis, OR

please stop insane laws which oppress people.. there IS a final day of Reckoning. no friends to save you!

—Rashid Abass, ,

Information wants to be free!

—Matt Mastro, Bound Brook, NJ

The FCC needs to protect Net Neutrality. I understand that very few Congressman understand how the Internet works so I would ask that you trust US voters that do and not Comcast, Verizon, and AT&T when it comes tell how important Net Neutrality is to small business like mine. Allowing Big Tech Business to slow down those that can't afford the toll for fast and reliable internet will further damage our economy and put the US far behind other countries. In fact, it will likely drive innovators to take their idea out of the US. Don't stop the FCC from doing their job. Drop HR 4752.

—Max Maurer, Seguin, TX

They don't own the airwaves we do. What gives them the right to take them over as if they were property?. What's next, selling sunlight?

—Forrest Hopping, LA, CA

It's time for Congress to quit lining their pockets with special interest money and do the work of the people that elected them! Enough already, the internet is a public utility and needs to be treated as such.

—Bob Morse, St. Louis, MO

Let's work for the common interest of "We the people", not the corporations that only care about profit for their shareholder.

—Fernando pacheco, Pompano Beach, FL

The citizens of this country need a protected open internet, not a corporate cash machine.

—Thaddeus Ryker, Elkton, MD

Don't destroy the internet please

—Marc Varone, Aurora,

If you don't do our bidding and stop this bill, we will see that your house has no internet. None. Not one packet. Try getting through your day with no internet access.

—Mr. Jonathan David Cobb, Lilburn, GA

Keep the net neutral and accessible for all!

—Tyler Price, Davis, CA

STAND UP AND DEFEAT THIS ONEROUS BILL!!! Keep the Net neutral. I'm watching!

—Stan Gershon, Marietta, GA

What is the matter with you people? It's not your job to actively oppose what the public wants. Do not support this bill!

—Susan Galt, Sachse, TX

The Comcast/AT&T lobby is really throwing their weight around lately aren't they? Please take a look at this and decide if such a blatant under cutting of the FCC is in any consumer's best interest. Thank your for taking the time.

—Aaron Taylor, Layton, UT

Keep the internet free

—Charles Brenenr, Palm Beach Gardens, FL

Congress has lost credibility with the American people. Everyone knows Congress represents only the interests of 1% of the population, the wealthy. It's time Congress started representing the other 99%. A two tier system on the internet means those who "have" get unfettered access and those who "have not" get whatever is left.

—Daniel P. McCarthy, New York, NY

Keep the new free. This is a Big-Money sponsored bill. It should be thrown out.

—Joe Kelty, Waterford, MI

Keep the Internet open.

—Dave Lindblom, Mt. Pleasant, UT

NO on HR 4752!

—Ch, Albuquerque, NM

Rep. Latta claims this is the way to protect innovation on the internet. It's actually the dangerous opposite: It risks destroying innovation on the internet for untold numbers of potential success stories to ensure the pockets of the scant number of de facto monopolies and duopolies of the telecommunications industry are well-lined. The next great idea won't come from the broadband industry -- it will come from some small startup who shouldn't have to pay a ransom to communicate with their customers.

—Andrew Cherry, Everett, WA

nothing is free. a fast lane for those who can pay means a slow lane for others who cant. Money should not dictate the quality of service you get.

—Troy Toggweiler, Melbourne, FL

A free and open internet is absolutely foundational to a free society.

—Chris McCamic, Rochester, NY

The internet, should be used by the people for the people, it shouldn't only be there to be controlled by private companies that can hind behind their own lawyers, which they can control the use of the internet, and then stop anybody who doesn't fit into their boxes.. (I'm really angry about this). In a country that likes to preach peace and democracy normally at the end of a gun..

—Dave G J Rothwell, , restore democracy... end the corporate-fascist state

—Armando Aranjó, Vista, CA

Uphold Free Speech and Free Press!

—Elaine Becker, Roanoke, VA

It is getting pretty obvious which politicians are OWNED by the cable industry. The level of corruption has gone from ugly to disgusting.

—Jeffrey Hagerty, Portland, OR

And a vote against this bill will help preserve the free and truly open internet we have come to enjoy and expect.

—Dan Grassi, Binghamton, NY

Hands OFF the 'Net!

—Mrs Carolyn B Kenney, Benson, NC

While I am sure you do not support HR 4752, you might need to demonstrate to your fellow representatives that your position is the will of your constituency. Go get'em, girl!

—Ken Marsh, Los Angeles, CA

Net neutrality means standing up for free speech which is one of our constitutional rights - please do not go against our constitution.

—Debra A. Hoffman, Eden Prairie, MN

Hi Bob Latta, how much are you getting paid by big cable. hope you enjoy the money, turncoat.

—Gary Stillman, Keyport, NJ

Restriction of the open internet is a restriction on freedom of speech.

—Nicholas Thompson, BELLEVUE, WA

We want a free and open Internet always.

—Linda I Hixson, Ludington, MI

No way, Jose

—Jim Locke, Williamsburg, MA

Do something for taxpayers instead of corporations.

—Ray Bellamy MD, tallahassee, FL

Please ensure internet access becomes classified as a common carrier. It is as much a public resource as water and heat, and in today's world, as necessary. Thank you.

—D Burgos, Brooklyn, NY

Neither Republicans nor Democrats should forget that they serve the people, not money. An open internet is a vital tool for new small business. Take it away and you take away prosperity.

—Mary Welter, Chicago, IL

Get corporate money out of the decision making of the free opportunities the Internet offers to people of the United States.

—Miguel Colon, Chicago, IL

Rep. Latta's bill is ridiculous and insulting, and would put the United States back to the 1980s in terms of technological advancement and collaboration. Do not allow Rep. Latta's bill to see the light of day.

—David Atwell, Indianapolis, IN

Killing the open internet will affect you too. Is this what you really want for your self and your kids?

—Barbara Nadel, Milford, PA

I believe that anyone who is attempting to oppose real Net Neutrality is either badly mis-informed or is trying to place the interests of the few over the interests of the citizens, especially those in rural Missouri, who will be among those who are most adversely affected.

—Wayne Gifford, Laquey, MO

Understand what it is you are doing before you do it. And if you do understand the consequences of this bill and still support it, then you should not be in office.

—Jereme E Guenther, Lebanon, OR

Bob Latta clearly has no idea how the internet works and provides tax revenue for the nation. The end of net neutrality will be the end of the US as a leader in the software industry.

—Tristan Mayshark, Arlington, VA

This could be likened to electronic book burning. This is how it begins.

—Michael Smith, Winchester, MA

I do not want fast and slow lanes. keep the internet equal!!

—Timothy Renshaw, Grandview, MO

So, how large a bribe did Latta get before he introduced this insult?

—ben Lichtin, rochester, NY

Please do the right thing and don't support this bill.

—Ken Trauhber, Clermont, FL

Rep Latta seems to prefer us to be dragged kicking and screaming into an era where Big Business holds sole control over the internet, its content and how fast we get there. I refuse to agree to this, and I urge you to do the same.

—Kate Davis, Melrose, MA

Protect Net Neutrality. There are enough problems on the way with attempts to get TPP passed. This must be stopped immediately. We have to protect the open Internet. This is what it was designed for!

—Mannie De Saxe, Preston South,

Don't be an asshole.

—Adriana, Brandon, FL

Net neutrality is absolutely vital to all Americans. Don't vote for H.R. 4752.

—Calvin Mannes, Tiger, GA

I will consistently disagree and vote against action that erodes, blocks, or attacks net neutrality. I hope you will, too. Thanks.

—Cheri Soliday, Saint Joseph, IL

I will not buy on the net if net neutrality is not preserved. I will not be commecialed-to-death and defrauded by any satellite and/or cable company (and one tried to do) and other wealthy parasites who feed off the poor and uneducated for commercial expediency - who wish to destroy our government and lead us to slaughter.

—Mr. Harv Buchman, gobles, MI

Please don't pass this bill!, Keep the net open and free of these leaches.

—Susan Slack, Woodland, WA

As a member of the working press, net neutrality is critical to me for research and verification. Otherwise, only companies who play to play might get covered in industry wrap ups.

—Peggy Malnati, Farmington Hills, MI

don't these guys owe a few communities some new infrastructure?

—Andrew Kroese, Lincoln, NE

Be fair to the ordinary American whether or not they have money.

—Dan Mitchell, Green Bay, WI

This bill would do exactly the opposite of what it should. If Congress wants to give any direction to the FCC on this issue, it should be telling them that broadband Internet access providers should be classified as common carriers.

—Shawn J Porter, Rochester, NY

I have to think the only reason Rep. Latta is doing this is because of a backroom deal that will line his pockets with money from mine.

—Nora-Adrienne Deret, Brooklyn, NY

I urge you not to back this bill. Telecommunications companies such as AT&T, Comcast, and Verizon have focused primarily on profits rather than on improving our nation's broadband infrastructure. If we are to be more competitive in the global economy, we will need greater access to high-speed, low-latency Internet for all businesses.

—Matthew Chen, Boston, MA

Net neutrality is key, the foundation of our creativity and dynamism. The internet needs this basic level of regulation, just like other utilities, because they're essential services in the modern world.

—Michael Frishkopf, Belmont, MA

This matters to me VERY MUCH. I am paying attention, and I VOTE.

—Earl Rexrode, Charlottesville, VA

This is a freedom issue. There's no free market when corporations get to manipulate costs for common infrastructure - and there's no freedom when coporations get to dictate law preventing the minimal regulation that would keep the market functioning freely and fairly. Both the Right and the Left can come together in favor of Net Neutrality and freedom on the internet, and the common carriers on which the internet runs and relies.

—Edward Iskra, New York, NY

Internet access should be regulated as a common carrier's service.

—W Flanagan, Oakton, VA

There's more at stake here than meets the eye. Net neutrality allows people to share opinions that are not necessarily approved by the 1%. Suddenly corporations can have free speech but not ordinary people? Noooooo!

—Mary-Alice Shemo, Plattsburgh, NY

As one of the proponents of free access to the internet and information exchange I want to stop all restrictions attempting to be placed on my use of the internet and information. It is ironic that with a current president that is in favor of quality and unrestricted access to the internet, you are attempting to stop that from happening. Are you going for internet for the rich and no access for the poorer citizens of the US? That would make you very similar to countries like China that restrict access to information for their citizens.

—James Wallis, New Port Richey, FL

No slow lanes on the information highway. Our democracy depends on it.

—Carmin Tronolone, New York, NY

In a democracy it is important to have freedom of speech, thought and communication. Do not let all media be owned and controlled by a few giant corporations.

—Lois, Tacoma, WA

Don't let the conservative corporate blowhards get in the way of open access to information for all!

—Mr. Dale Gilman, Beverly Hills, MI

Stop the corporations from shutting down the internet.

—Chris Saia, Brooklyn, NY

Allowing a pay to play system for internet access would add yet another threat to our democracy. Free internet communication is important to maintaining an educated public. Internet access and broadband access of all types needs to be classified as a common carrier because it's a public utility just like phone service and other public utilities. Let's reclassify it to that category

—Mickie Lynn, Delmar, NY

Do not support it. Please.

—Eric Roach, Chicago, IL

Any multi-tiered system of internet access is a subversion of the 1st Amendment.

—John McPeck, Fairfax, VA

I am against this bill!!!

—Alyssa Schartz, Southgate, MI

Bob Latta is one of the best politicians money can buy. Unfortunately those he represents are corporations who own him and not American citizens. We need _real_ Net Neutrality. We do not need Bob's bill protecting his owners profit margin.

—Dave Lozier, Scandinavia, WI

We need net neutrality, congress your job is to do things that benefit the American people, not harm them. Do not pass this bill

—Marshall Wegh, North Bellmore, NY

This is about access to information and freedom of speech. These are rights not privileges. Do not support Latta's bill to reclassify broadband Internet service.

—C Morgan McNeil, Beverly Hills, CA

Taxpayer money created the internet and the idea that they should pay for access to corporations is ludicrous and disturbing!
—Chris Noyes, bloomfield, NJ

What Tom Wheeler is doing is a disgrace. I think he should be fired.
—Ronald Norman, Miami, FL

H.R. 4752 is Toxic to Democracy. Please vote against it at every opportunity. Thank you very kindly for your time and attention & that of your fine staff. Yours truly, Mr. Brett Greisen NYC 10025-4537
—Mr. Brett A. Greisen, New York, NY

Legislation that prevents the FCC from enforcing network neutrality is a TERRIBLE idea! Such legislation will harm the internet, and that harm will cause significant harm to the US economy. Network neutrality is a vital ingredient to protect against monopoly or oligarchy.
—Lawrence E. Pfeffer Ph.D., Arlington, MA

This is more important than many people care to know, and has repercussions for the future that are not yet easily grasped.
—Jonathan Lipsmeyer, Brooklyn, NY

I'm disgusted by this bill, as you all should be. Please don't pass it, and support the people and real net neutrality.
—Samuel Mellman, Montclair, NJ

This bill is yet another outright attack on freedom and democracy. Rep. Bob Latta should be impeached.
—James Milnthorpe, Phoenix, AZ have some courage and stand up for small business

—Marty Bullock, West Palm Beach, FL

Already the corporate state has seriously damaged our democracy through big money in politics through unethical lobbying and financial contribution, dominant ownership of the mainstream media, and political action committees that bombard us with too often dubious and stilted information. If we permit it to further control information on the Internet simply for more profit and power, we will have lost one of our last means of a democratic transmission of the things we need to know. A vote for this bill is not only a vote against the open Internet, it is a vote against our democracy!
—Paul Cranmer, Harvard, IL

Keep Net Neutrality because we need open Internet not Corporate net
—Charles Roberts, Detroit, MI

The bill H.R 4752 is an obvious and transparent attempt to kill net neutrality. There is no reason for it to exist other than letting ISPs get away with what they are trying to do. It has to be stopped.
—Krzysztof Bieniek, ,

Classify the internet as a utility so it works for EVERYONE, not just big-bucks mega-corporations.
—Jeri Khajeh-Noori, Clearwater, FL

LEAVE MY INTERNET ALONE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!
—Marc McGuire, Venice, LA

We invented the Internet, yet we have some of the worst Internet services in the developed world. Do NOT allow Comcast and others to hold this jewel of American ingenuity hostage.

—Joan Greco, New York, NY

This is one of the single most important long-term issues facing Congress today, and a mis-step here could handicap the development of our information economy for decades to come. Please support true network neutrality, so that providers remain providers, and not gatekeepers.

—Scott Francis, Moorpark, CA

How could anyone support Latta's proposed bill? Clearly the people do NOT want these fast/slow lanes, and clearly the people want the Internet to be protected from the current proposed abuses. By allowing the Internet to be classified under Title II, not only will the integrity and productivity of the Internet now be protected in the short term, its freedom and accessibility will secure in the future. PLEASE DO NOT SUPPORT LATTA'S BILL!!!

—Tiffany Jansen, Latonia, KY

As a developer, lack of Net Neutrality will result in me moving overseas. If you really want to assist the American economy, you need to support it. Giving transit carriers the right to restrict traffic rates is anti-competitive. The EFF has a wonderful article for this, if you need info.

—Jacob Slater, Santa Rosa, CA

The internet is the definition of a Common Carrier. It carries traffic for everyone, Phone, data, News, Entertainment, you name it, it is traveling on the Internet.

—James Baker, Royal, AR

Thank you for standing with me on this problem

—Gus Henning, Waterbury, CT

This bill is in direct conflict with the FCC's ability to perform their regulatory duties. By preventing the FCC ability to classify broadband as Title II or common services carriers this bill essentially forces the governments hand away from the ability to regulate how companies can use the network we, the people, subsidized Verizon, Comcast, & AT&T to build.

—Joel M Dunbar, Brighton, MA

Rep. Bob Latta & his proposed bill H.R. 4752 is UNAMERICAN! JUST SAY NO! It's far past time that our elected CIVIL SERVANTS got their hands out of corporate pockets & started actually working for the good of the people.

—Christopher Coleman, Blue Creek, OH

What are you doing supporting this bill. STOP.

—Robin Bartoletti, Grapevine, TX

Congress is nothing but a corporate sell out filled with traitors and vipers. They've been bought and paid for. Impeach them.

—Julia Dalton, New York, NY

Stop letting backdoor capitalism destroy ability to be free.

—Jim Wilkinson, Pittsburgh, PA

Enact the will of the people, as of course, an elected official is supposed to do.

—Chris Dashke, Saint Paul, MN

Please. This is incredibly important for our freedom, economy, and innovation.

—Amy, Honolulu, HI

Net neutrality is important right for people. It should be regulated as a utility.

—Gamage Wathugala, Rancho Palos Verdes, CA

I strongly urge you to support net neutrality. Please take this into consideration.

—Michael Andrews, Kearney, NE

The oligarchs keep trying to take the internet from the people. Please stop them and stand with the people and with freedom.

—Marc DiPaolo, Weatherford, OK

There is already a significant class gap in this country. By allowing this bill to pass, you are just contributing to an even larger class gap. People will not stand for this for very long. History has shown us that the more privileges and power that depend solely on money, the more violent a society becomes and the more likely people are to rebel. Please don't contribute to an action that could reshape the class gap yet again and ultimately bring about violence and an era of terror for the common person. Perhaps you think I am overreacting - read some history books, do your research, educate yourself. Maybe read a Wiki article. Do the right thing and keep net neutrality.

—Anna Poley, Renton, WA

Anyone who shows support for this bill will not receive my vote in the next elections

—Mr. Jaison Bechar, Spring, TX

Education is not just for the rich, powerful, and elite. Our country can only benefit from Net Neutrality.

—Christopher Tunstall, Asheville, NC

It looks suspiciously like Mr. Latta gets big donations from the companies that want to eliminate net neutrality.

—Mr. John Countryman, Yelm, WA

Seriously, I mean it. Please!

—Julia Glahn, Urbana, IL

DON'T SELL OUT OUR FIRST AMENDMENT FREE SPEECH RIGHTS TO THE CABLE, TELEPHONE AND WALL STREET OLIGARCHS!! DON'T LEAVE THIS TO THE WEAK, UNDERFUNDED, COMPROMISED AND CO-OPTED REGULATORS AT THE FCC!!! PUT IT INTO FEDERAL STATUTORY LAW!!! MAKE THE INTERNET A PUBLIC UTILITY AND MAKE ACCESS TO IT A CIVIL RIGHT!! KEEP THE INTERNET FREE AND OPEN!! FOR ONCE IN THIS MISERABLE, USELESS CONGRESS, DON'T SELL OUT TO THE OLIGARCHS!! SHOW SOME SPINE, SOME DECENCY AND SOME CONCERN FOR THE RIGHTS AND WELLBEING OF ORDINARY AMERICAN CITIZENS INSTEAD OF YOUR CORPORATE MASTERS!!

—Philip Core, Pittsburgh, PA

This is an insult to democracy and to the millions of people who rely on the Internet every single day.

—Marianne Robinson, Berkeley, CA

Seriously Bob Latta? How much is Time Warner paying you? You are disgraceful, and I intend to do my little part to help ensure you do not get your job back next time elections are held.

—Russel Hampton, Tomball, TX

Instead Congress needs to review the anti-trust and anti-monopoly laws that these corporations are violating. Yes AT&T, Verison and Comcast are attempting to monopolize the industry.

—Joseph Placucci, West Palm Beach, FL

Do not support this bill. All this assaults on the diminishing middle class will eventually turn against our elected . Elected should not be bought and become traitors to a democracy still becoming true to its ideals.

—Maralupe Duarte, El Segundo, CA

As a citizen who already feels that the extremely limited choices in broadband providers already causes a stagnant market for consumers this bills sole aim is to prevent the FCC from protecting the citizens it's supposed to protect.

—Randall Bil, Bloomington, MN

Let the the internet be what it was designed to be. If this passes not only will I cancel all my subscriptions to online services and debase the reason for priority access to content providers, I will find other ways to obtain the content I desire and I will encourage others to do the same. You want to end piracy?, stop them from extorting society.

—Jeremiah Bayles, Overland Park, KS

This would yet be another step towards Corporatocracy and a population that would eventually have to revolt against it's government to reestablish a democracy for the people.

—Tom Mills, Salt Lake City, UT

STOP THIS BILL IF YOU HAVE ANY shred of respect left for the people of this country and not protecting big business interests

—Micah Thompson, Tyler, TX

This bill is an attack on free speech and the American people

—Michael Hanebutt, Sacramento, CA

I don't recall building two kinds of freeways to haul corporate traffic/family cars. Where does this come from? Oh yeah: Corporatism.

—Paul L. Richey, Portland, OR

I do not support H.R. 4752. Stop giving away the internet to corporations.

—Piri McMullan, Vista, CA

If the cable companies get their way and this bill gets passed, it would mean higher costs for IPTV, elimination of free IPTV that will effect middle and lower middle class people like me to have free or low cost entertainment. The cable companies want this bill to stop IPTV from continuing, thus creating a monopoly by controlling or limiting what TV we can watch. I ask to PLEASE do not take this away from us by passing any bills that support the cable companies for more profits on the backs of us low income people.

—Gary Zarzycki, Tucson, AZ

The web must remain free and open

—Mr Edward Armm, Lake Hopatcong, NJ

My business, coachaccountable.com, is able to thrive largely because of net neutrality. Please keep it in tact as a measure to enable small businesses like mine to survive and grow.

—John Larson, Glendale, CO

We need you to stand with us against corporate takeover of our basic rights.

—Ann E. Thornton, Marblehead, MA

I stand by net neutrality and reclassifying broadband.

—Michael Rashkovsky, Millburn, NJ

Criminals!

—David Reid, Colorado Springs, CO

Vote for the people, not for the ISPs!

—Erik Rieselbach, Bronx, NY

You have a responsibility to uphold the ideals of the constitution.

—Jared Berkowitz, Los Angeles, CA

Internet service should fall under Title II. It should have the same basic protections that have worked with the old telephone system for generations. ISPs should not be able to mess with the websites we try to access or prioritize traffic we can see online.

—Brandon Bowersox-Johnson, Urbana, IL

Damn it! Have you no shame in screwing over your fellow humans on this planet? STOP IT!

—Larry L Trail, Lakewood, WA

Our country is ours, not the few corporations.

—Brad Cramer, Milwaukee, WI

please contain the slime

—John Brewster, Troy, ME

If campaign finance is a freedom of speech issue, then this certainly is! Please do NOT allow this bill to pass. Thank you.

—Kristina Detmer, Columbia, MO

The internet was build with our tax dollars and belongs to all of us

—Beatriz Baldan, Miami, FL

As a constituent, I ask that you oppose the Latta bill, H.R. 4752. Thanks, Curt.

—Mr. Curt Dunnam, Trumansburg, NY

An open internet is the only thing keeping the world from being totally consumed by greedy corporations and unaccountable governments.

—Zachary Fleischman, Fort Collins, CO

Don't kill the goose that's laying the golden eggs... if net neutrality dies, so does the Internet and all the possible billions of dollars in revenue that could have been generated. Keep the net open and free!

—John V Thorn Hart, Chico, CA

The best solution would be for congress to enact a true Internet neutrality act, an act that would require all traffic to be handled equally.

—Mr. Robert Clyne, Yale, MI

Reclassify Now. Screw you Bob Latta.

—Josiah Matthews, Wheat Ridge, CO

PLEASE PROTECT OUR INTERNET!!!! IT'S THE ONLY THING WE HAVE THAT ISN'T REGULATED TO HELL & BACK!!!!

—Heath Holbert, Gillett, AR

assholes owned by big corps

—Ken Rhines, dighton, MA corporate desperation, greed, evil and desire to kill the truth is behind this, do not allow it

—Leslie Harris, Mt Marion, NY

This is important, please allow the internet to remain neutral, to allow small, innovative firms to compete with the big corporations.

—Andy Pickett, Chico, CA

Please STOP giving everything, EVERYTHING, to wealthy corporations and their lackeys. STOP.

—Patty Ridenour, Dayton, OH

Representative Bob Latta and colleagues, please do not pass this bill. The internet should be classified as a common carrier and all users and content providers should be treated equally, not based on how much money they have.

—Andrew J. Young, Bloomington, IN

As a small business owner having an open Internet is critical for me.

—Ginger Voll, Columbus, OH

Please don't let big business continue to run this country.

—Joseph P Catanese, WYCKOFF, NJ

The internet broadband should not be classified. The internet cablenetwork has been built with public funds and the internet brings many profits to the economy (online shops, industrial innovations in communication) therefor it should not be sold to private companies. Once the internet will be slow and censored people will cease to use it and above all start for another network which can replaced it and which is not censored.

—Charlotte Cremaschi, Chalons en Champagne,

It's in your best interest to plaquette the masses while you whittle away at their freedoms and civil rights. Leave the internet alone and stop listening to the corporate monsters.

—Paul G Ecklund, Easley, SC

PLEASE PROTECT THE INTERNET FROM CORPORATE TAKE OVER AND MONOPOLIZATION!!

—Monica Gomez, Houston, TX

Why are we as citizens having to organize to be protected from you who are supposed to be protecting us? Your entire roll is to protect our freedom from corporations who want to usurp it. Do your job or get out.

—DeWayne Youts, VICKSBURG, MS

Please, for the sake of the livelihoods of thousands of web-software developers like me, vote no on 4752.

—Jeff McMahan, Flat Rock, MI

I belong to a minority religion and I don't want my faith relegated to the Internet "slow lane" while major churches get the "fast lane."

—David R. Burwasser, Oberlin, OH

The Internet needs to be classified as a telecommunication provider in order to be regulated properly. Please do not support this bill!

—Aislynn Denny, High Point, NC

This is another case of "if it ain't broke, don't fix it!"

—John Hayter, Jacksonville, IL

Corporations controlling the biggest boon to free speech since the printing press(the Internet) is a crime against free people, and no less a form of tyranny than what Hitler did to Europe. Don't let this happen!

—Gene Taber, Garland, TX

It seems that at every turn, there are attempts being made to prevent Americans from getting the real news.

—Ronald Wharton, Columbus, OH

Dear Representative, please remember the people you serve when voting on this. Please remember you are in office to represent our best interest. Thank you for your service to our nation.

—Christina Rubino, Staten Island, NY

Don't take this away from the FCC, for it is then given to we the Corporations of America rather than the people.

—Jeremiah Williamson, Arundel, ME

Protect the consumer and the middle class. Not the wealthy ISPs. If Comcast can afford to pay 45 billion for Time Warner and AT&T can afford to pay 50 billion for Dish they don't need protection and true net neutrality isn't a threat to them.

—Phillip John, Mount Juliet, TN

This is a blatant power grab by the the big communications companies.

—Lorna the internet open. This is not Holmes, Hillsdale, MI

A free and accessible internet IS our future. Vote against this bill, please.

—Cameron Parham, Havre, MT

The only way to stop Internet fascists dead in their tracks is to vote their bills down!!

—Victoria Parks, Worthington, OH

We must not have yet another way to make the majority of the people have even less power. We need the same internet access that rich people have.

—Rose Bertrand, Madison, WI

A free and open Internet should not even be in question in a democracy. Allowing only the wealthiest to dictate and access--to "own"--the content of the Web is dangerous and would also put a lot of people out of work [freelance writers/editors, journalists, artists, and others who rely on a democratic, open Internet].

—Amy Henry, Northampton, MA

Stop and reverse the rise of fascism in America! Stop and reverse the rise of the American fascist military/police state! Preserve net neutrality!

—John and Martha Stoltenberg, Elkhart Lake, WI

Only someone who hates Democracy would vote against Net Neutrality....If you hate Democracy then you hate America....if you hate America your a traitor.

—Victor Giganti, Brooklyn, NY

The internet is the "free press" as well as the "free speech" of our time, and restricting it is nothing less than censorship of both. This isn't about commerce or proprietary rights, this is about continuing or discontinuing constitutionally protected expression.

—Jerry Mastriano, Forest Hills, NY

Vote against H.R.4752. Support Net Neutrality

—Joan Marie Churton, Raleigh, NC, NC

We already know that there is a huge economic divide in this country, and this furthers that divide. Please protect Net Neutrality. Do your job, and represent your people, and their wishes and needs.

—Sharon S Dymowski, Alexandria, VA does capitalism always have to be so desperate that nothing can be for all ? ?

—Kay Harmon, hilo, HI

I am totally disgusted with Rep. Latta!! How dare he even present such a bill in Congress!!!! Kill this bill now!!!

—David Moyer, Waukegan, IL

Protect an open internet!

—John Ocampo, Miami, FL

The large internet companies may not be one monopoly as the word suggests, but it will create a triumvirate of control which will negatively impact the people.

—Joanne Koehler, Vineland, NJ

It is imperative that we wrest control of our lives from corporations and government and return it to individual citizens. This is ridiculous!

—Alexander Metea, Los Angeles, CA

Internet connectivity must become a utility. It is no longer optional in today's world.

—Paul M Haggerty, Minneapolis, MN

And a vote for this bill guarantees I will NEVER vote for you!

—Angelo Caruso, Marion, NY

is filling Your pockets really worth it. don't You have enough already ? are You really trying to collapse the world around You ? perhaps people in the streets is what You looking for.

—Beowulf Gilbert, Central Village, CT

The internet is not a luxury, it is how all Americans do business and personal transactions and communication. It should be considered much like our highway and electricity systems. We can't shop, borrow a book from the library, keep in touch with family and friends without open access and high speed internet.

—Gay Northrup, Winthrop, WA

WE URGE YOU TO STOP TAKING BRIBES FROM SOULLESS and UNGODLY CORPORATIONS. Please listen to the people who trusted you, HIRED you, to fulfill their wishes. WE THE PEOPLE insist upon it. We are putting US back into the US=A. Thank you in advance. And may God bless you

—George Grasmann, Saint Petersburg, FL

This decision affects everyone who uses the net

—Noel Lyle-Stirling, Southampton,

The internet is a platform for freedom, don't let companies be in charge of American's ability to speak.

—David, New Albany, IN

we cannot allow the freedom and openness of the internet to be restricted in by toxic legislation and corporate friendly BULLSHIT!

—Christopher Henry, Columbus, OH

Common carrier classification is the way to keep the net neutral. Do your job, protect our freedoms.

—Margaret Comfort, portland, OR

PRESERVE net neutrality, don't destroy it!

—Debra Petersen, Clinton, IA

The internet should be a public utility.

—Omar Gawayed, Columbus, OH

Net neutrality is a core concept to the internet. Without it, the online community that America helped develop will wither and die. Online innovation will move to other countries and will lead to the downfall of the US as a great nation. DO NOT DO THIS.

—Nathanael Letchford, Austin, TX

Reclassify! Why is this not an obvious matter?

—Mr. Thomas Johnson, Memphis, TN

Only the wealthy would prosper from reclassifying the internet. The internet is an equalizer - please keep it that way.

—Karen Genest, Vancouver, WA

the internet is for everybody, not just corporations and corporations have no right to control what the home user does on their own computers!

—Raymond Lombardi, east dublin, GA

Net Neutrality is essential for individuals who live in the rural areas of our country - for our schools in those areas as well to keep our level of education up to the highest standards possible for all our children. Broadband Internet Service should be classified as a common carrier to protect levels of service and all that goes with it. Please stay away from this bill it is outrageous that it would even be considered.

—Kim Young, Tully, NY

Representative Latta is no expert on communications and even if he were the proper role of Congress should not be to stifle public input, sentiment and discourse but to respect and enhance it. His bill is yet another parochial "business" (read monopoly) friendly attempt to curry favor with and from the economic top dogs of our country. It's time that Congress paid attention to the people.

—Greg Young, San Francisco, CA

Please do not support this bill. We need to classify ISP's as a Title II common carrier.

—Giancarlo Maruggi, Charlotte, NC

Keep the net free!

—Ted Beatie, Oakland, CA

We know where Latta gets his money - tell him no deal.

—Robert McCombs, Arcata, CA

To interfere in tampering with what we have now is to limit public freedom to communicate thoughts, ideas and principles as now we can..

—LuMarion Conklin, Flagstaff, AZ

This is just one action that our leaders have side with big business over the people they are suppose to serve. Remember, so far we still vote and until we can not we will not step back. It is time for you to serve us not the 1%.

—Lonny D LeFever, Conover, OH

The internet is like a modern Library of Alexandria. Let this library be free and open to the public.

—Meg Elliott, Chicago, IL

Keep internet as it is!

—Gabrio, ,

Congressional members supporting this bill (H.R. 4752) are acting like shills for groups like AT&T rather than supporting their constituents.

—Tom Shields, Moss Landing, CA

Save Net Neutrality

—Hunter Baker, Trafalgar, IN

Stop this!

—Dinči Okic, ,

Stop, stop, stop this!

—Miss Bianca Victorica, Santa Ana, CA

I am a retired faculty member in Electronic Media at Kansas State University. This bill is exactly opposite of what the public needs to have.

—David T MacFarland, Manhattan, KS

Stop helping just corporations and letting the rest of Americans down over and over!!!

—Ana P, Miami, FL

Please support Net Neutrality on this issue, and with your voting in general! You can make a difference!

—Emily Haven, Boston, MA

A free world depends on uncensored communication.

—James Melloh, Portland, ME

Keep the internet open and inexpensive for ALL.

—Gayle Goff, Austin, TX

Do not remove the last democratic institution from our republic. ENOUGH has already been compromised and we need to get our country back on track. We need an open internet to allow the free flow of information to get things working again.

—Francis Battaglia, Santa Cruz, CA

ONCE AGAIN ELECTED OFFICIALS WHORING TO SPECIAL INTERESTS - ESPECIALLY REPUBLICANS!!!! WE NEED TO DUMP THEM - THEY ARE SELFISH, GREEDY AND UNETHICAL - TOTALLY AGAINST THE PEOPLE!

—Maggie Schafer, Boulder, CO

Democracy is based on free flow of information without restrictions and controls

—Barry Danielson, New Westminster, AZ

DON'T DO IT

—Aziz Natour, Shefaamr,

This is disgusting. Net Neutrality needs to be protected or tons of jobs will be at stake. Broadband needs to be reclassified as a common carrier NOW. Throw out Bob Latta's bill and him along with it!

—Patrick F Collins, Austin, TX

Please don't turn our internet in to the internet of communist china. That is what the loss of neutrality will do to our country.

—Darcy Guderjan, Surprise, AZ

Forbidding the FCC to do its job is ridiculous, and just shows how scared the companies sending money to Washington are that they might not get their way. Stand up for all of us, please.

—Robert W Archer, Toledo, OH

We all have the same rights to free speech and press. Some don't have more right than others.

—Cassandra Lyons, Lexington, KY

This is particularly important in Alaska since, as is demonstrated everyday, market forces have not, and never will, provide adequate Internet access to rural and semi-rural areas.

—Scott Chesney, Fairbanks, AK

Protecting Net Neutrality is vital as an extension of the right to free speech: it should be seen as part of the First Amendment.

—Kathy Goble, Chicago, IL

Not all regulation is bad. These greedy ISPs deserve our committed skepticism in a Title 2 framework.

—Harald Conradi, Los Angeles, CA

Could it be any more apparent that this Bill reflects the Republican leash to the corporate oligopoly? The rest of us want democracy, and that means keeping the internet neutral. And that means it must be classified as a common carrier. Don't worry, the ISPs will still continue to make a lot of money that way so they can fill up your coffers. But let's preserve democracy, since the rest of us can vote you out of office if you keep sucking the corporate teat. Then NO money for you. Until of course you go to work for the ISPs, your ultimate goal apparently.

—Edward Berge, Albuquerque, NM

The Internet must remain as it presently is!

—Bill Deutschlander, New Providence, PA

Please, get back to being "for the people, by the people," and not just for those who give you the most money.

—Evan Kline, Wrightsville, PA

If H.R. 4752 becomes law, the door will be opened for all kinds of non-regulated chaos, because there are technologies already developed and waiting in the wings as well as new technologies coming on line which will allow technophiles to perform work-arounds to create both a level playing field and certain subversion of commercial interests to maintain a level playing field in the Age of Information. It is a BAD bill and ought to be rejected outright.

—Oliver Seely, Lakewood, CA

Prove that you're a government of the people and not a government of powerful corporations.

—Vicki Cintron, newton, MA

Please help keep the internet neutral.

—Mr. Fred Talari, Morris Plains, NJ

Don't the big companies have enough perks already? They already collect obscene profits and have more privileges than anybody ought to have! Give the rest of us a break!

—Susan Hayward, Bronxville, NY

Why allow internet providers to restrict citizen's access to information and entertainment? By restricting use of the internet we, the American people, could lose a vital tool that is becoming more and more a part of Americans personal lives. By restricting the internet now we may never know just how great a tool the internet could become. Those providers will still make plenty of money, probably more than if they take over and control access to the internet now. Thank you for your time.

—Gary Potts, Ellensburg, WA

From Chris: Please, please, protect the open Internet. The livelihood of my students, my family and countless colleagues relies on fairness and equality online - which is what our country means in the larger, historical sense. Please. Chris

—Chris Oatley, Columbus, OH

Support your constituents and you will be rewarded. If not, then beware of us... we Vote.

—Ted Szostak, Greensboro, NC

As an elected official, I think you would want the people you represent to be as knowledgeable about events as possible. True, their views may not mirror your own, but at least you know they are thinking about an issue and have a say about it. If you further control the internet, more than is currently done, you are appearing to be afraid of people who think and that you are trying to control us. We then fight back against being controlled.

—Nadine Voelz, Live Oak, FL

Many do not understand the monopoly that these Internet providers have, and many more do not understand that Free-Markets only work when monopolies do not exist. Do not support H.R. 4752.

—Bradley Ray Crain, fairifield, OH

A No Brainer for Common Sense!

—Mr. Greg Gentry, Ruckersville, VA

PLEASE PROTECT NET NEUTRALITY NOW - DO NOT SUPPORT LATTA'S SHAM OF A BILL (HR 4752). THANK YOU!

—C s, san diego, CA

This proposed legislation is a direct and heinous insult to the intelligence of the ordinary citizens of this country. Cease this embarrassing pandering to corporate campaign contributors (and speculative employers in your hypothetical post-political careers). The sponsors of this bill cannot be unaware that they are willfully ceding control of our democracy to multinational corporate interests. How about acting in the genuine best interest of US citizens & consumers for a change??

—Timothy Forsythe, Greensboro, NC

No net censorship!!

—Emily Malone, Milwaukee, WI

This bill is more sad evidence that Congress is usually for sale to the highest bidder. What a blatant purchase Bob Latta is. We must have election finance reform....and we surely won't get that either if the corporations continue to expand their influence by stomping out net neutrality

—Jake Jacobs, Kailua-Kona, HI

Does anyone in our government actually represent real people? You know, the ones who work, vote, and suffer or prosper under the rules passed by officials who increasingly seem out of touch with the America they supposedly represent? Or are we truly just a plutocracy viewing citizens as nothing more than tools to further enrich the already rich? How you deal with this bill will indicate your answer.

—M Amedeo Tumolillo, New York, NY

Please let the internet remain open and without restrictions!

—Farooq Hameed, ,

How can the little guy get a head when he can't afford high speed net, keep it neutral!!!

—Nicole Potter, Irvine, CA

Stop failing us.

—Joel Hornsby, san francisco, CA

Net neutrality promotes innovation, creativity, and entrepreneurship – the backbone of America – by maintaining an even playing field with big business. Fast lanes and a tiered internet bows to greed by providing yet another revenue stream – for significantly diminished value to consumers – to companies already making billions.

—Randy Connell, Nederland, CO

Not that you would pay attention. Why let congress destroy one more freedom?

—Daniel Wiberg, ZipCode, SC

DO YOUR JOB. REPRESENT THE PEOPLE. OR YOU WON'T HAVE A JOB. I VOTE. I USE SOCIAL MEDIA.

—Eric Herget, Cary, NC

KEEP THE INTERNET FREE/OPENED FOR THE PUBLIC...THIS IS ANOTHER MONEY MAKER FOR THOSE WHO PASS IT...HAND OUT AND PUTTING MONEY IN DEEP POCKETS...NOT FAIR...

—ROSE McMAHIN, Forked River, NJ

STOP WHORING TO CORPORATE GREED. WORK FOR ALL AMERICANS OR GET THE HELL OUT OF CONGRESS.

—Jan Lindner, Columbus, OH

Legislation like this will turn over the Internet to oligopolistic interests who are only interested in charging more for less. Our nation's Internet access speed and quality is among the lowest in the developed world. Do not encourage it to be even worse!

—Peter C. Gravelle, Brooklyn, NY

The underlying motives behind this reckless, short-term strategy will be exposed for what they are... and what you are and will bring many, many repercussions that will shame the U.S. and all of its fellow travellers while lawsuit after lawsuit will bring down the innocent families of all greedy shills while retroactive World Wide litigation patiently corrects the wrongs committed by this ill-conceived and vindictive attempt to hijack the WWW for profit alone. The WWW was not your creation to start with. Legal, properly established protocols already exist, and with the help of honest politicians (yes, there are one or two!) and an international network of honest lawyers, let us see the END of this damaging proposal that will, IF put into effect, ration the Internet's resources ONLY to those who cannot afford the ££££££Ms to obtain what is everymans right, from day one of the Internets creation. KILL THE BILL

—Robert Hooper, stamford,

Protect the open Internet by saying "Nay!" to Rep. Bob Latta's H.R. 4752 bill.

—Rosanne Catalano-Umland, Middle Village, NY

Once again what's good for the People is being plowed under for the good of corporations. When is Congress going to do what's right instead of what's politically expedient and profitable?

—Karen Jones, Venice, CA

We already pay a lot just to have the service in the first place. We should not have to pay again, and we all should be treated equally on the internet. Keep it neutral, no favoritism or more charges. The internet belongs to the people, not the government.

—Barbara Kantola, Niles, MI

As an interactive media artist, I know first hand how an open internet supports an open and decent society. Do NOT put the internet on the open market. It will create bigger divides than we already see in wealth, in education, and will prevent us from making a strong future.

—Vanessa Gilbert, Providence, RI

An open Internet is the key factor in ensuring we can innovate effectively in the future!

—Ron Turner, North Vancouver,

Please keep internet neutral.

—Fred tal, Morris Plains, NJ

WORK FOR THE PEOPLE! DO WHAT IS BEST FOR US AND NOT BEST FOR YOU!!!

—Nathan Sterling, Mansfield, AR

Please stop screwing over the citizens of this country to give even more Massive Wealth to corporations who are simply GREEDY. They do NOT deserve more since they already give poor value and lousy service already. They should be PENALIZED for doing a bad job. NOT given the opportunity to do EVEN WORSE

—Jane Chischilly, Bisbee, AZ

This issue affects everyone who uses the internet. Access should remain equal to all, not just big corporations who can purchase the outcomes they favor.

—Deborah Dowling, St. Petersburg, FL

No smoke and mirrors--no tricks. Keep it free and neutral!

—Stephanie Zappa, Oakland, CA

Now why would Bob Latta ever want to do that...?

—Geoff Duton, Belmont, MA

Corporations are not people. They did not elect you, although they likely are lining your pockets. I trust you will do the right thing, and act in the best interest of the PEOPLE who you are charged with representing.

—Dr. John Paul Greenwood, Overland Park, KS

Any bill which restricts the ability of the FCC to protect net neutrality is a bill which ignores the will of the American people.

—Phil Sevetson, Alpha, NJ

This is an extremely important issue. The imbalance in wealth in this country has been widely noted, with apt concern. DO NOT let it happen with information!

—Cynthia Heiden, Seattle, WA

Please protect the open internet and democracy itself.

—Anne Fogarty, Seattle, WA

Nothing wrong with internet. Why change? To satisfy insatiable greed? There is so much to fix on this globe, let's not break anything else.

—Gerson Tendler, Manchester, NH

Please, please vote in the interests of millions of regular American citizens because it is the right thing to do.

—Paul Bartos, Gary, IN

Clearly Rep. Latta is a puppet of telecom lobbyists. Don't listen to the vile greed he preaches. It will destroy the internet.

—Zach Goist, Seattle, WA

Show the people who elected you that corporations don't own you.

—Spencer Torene, Boston, MA

Rep. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752 would put control of the Internet in the hands of a small group of companies, who would then be free to discriminate between Internet users. Such discrimination would be a disaster for technological innovation.

—Gord Tomlin, Scarborough,

Give the FCC power to oversee and enforce which Congress themselves are not qualified for.

—Anthony Pedretti, Downers Grove, IL

This will not be tolerated!

—Zane G. Graham, Royal, AR

I wrote head of FCC and he replied wanted and supported open internet. BS!!! Many reports he is saying one thing and doing another!!!

—William Keeting, Miami bch, FL

As a teacher this issue is very important to me.....

—Steven Patarini, Old Saybrook, CT

Lets not take ANOTHER step backward!

—Martin Kilmer, Cotttage Grove, OR

The FCC has it's role for a purpose, do not take away the ability to do the job it needs to be able to do.

—Katie Farrell, Richland, WA

if I could sign twice I would

—Nicholas Nowak, ,

This nation needs unfettered access to the Internet, and this bill benefits none but those who would act as gatekeepers. Say no to H.R. 4752.

—Jared Counts, Houston, TX

Enough is enough. Telecoms are squeezing every last drop of common sense from the services they're providing. They are constantly double (triple, etc.) dipping. Customers, content creators, everybody! While their services are declining.

—Alex Bulychev, Watertown, MA

Congress has already given ownership and control of our nation to Corporate America. There is no need to give them ownership of the Internet.

—Charles B. Mullen, Canton, OH

Comcast is already a monopoly

—Anita Nelson, New Baltimore, MI

We need you to stand up for real Net Neutrality, not prohibit it. Rep. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752, would prevent the Federal Communications Commission from putting broadband Internet service providers back under Title II of the Communications Act, but that's the only way to protect Net Neutrality. I urge you not to support this dangerous bill. A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet.

—Chad Preslar, Garland, TX

Please do not support this toxic bill - it represents everything that is wrong with the US right now - whereas an Open Internet represents the BEST of what the US should be.

—Dr. Clark A. Dobbs, Minneapolis, MN

Members of Congress, Please reject Rep. Bob Latta's Bill H.R. 4752 that would effectively destroy net neutrality. As a professor, teacher, mentor, researcher and citizen, I value the resources that the internet offers. To set up a two tier system based on the priorities of major corporations would be to diminish the educational and democratic value of the internet. Please exert yourselves to benefit the people who use the internet, including those teaching the next generation of leaders. Dr. Margaret Cullen

—Margaret Cullen, Ada, OH

Why is it that the bribes from lobbyist keep our government from doing what us right

—Carson J Heldmann Jr, Catonsville, MD

AGAIN AND AGAIN AND AGAIN, DO NOT HELP TO DESTROY OUR DEMOCRACY AND THE ABILITY OF THE WORLD TO FREE ITSELF VIA HAVING THIS WONDERFUL INTERNET AVAILABLE TO THEM ON A FAIR BASIS. WHAT ON EARTH ARE PEOPLE THINKING?

—Ms. Roslyn E. Walker, Marina del Rey,, CA

This is a first amendment issue. We have the Constitutional right to communicate, and the government should be supporting its citizens in obtaining information via the internet

—Laurel Facey, Millers Falls, MA

The speed limit on our interstate highway system applies equally to everyone.

—Frank Hample, Somerville, ME

"If net neutrality was to be dropped now it would most probably inhibit internet investment, significantly increase consumer broadband prices and enable the established IT giants to more-or-less lock the gates to new competitors by choking their access." -- <http://rt.com/op-edge/171780-internet-neutrality-us-censorship/>

—Sam Andujar, New York City, NY

Stop this Bill 4752

—David, ,

And a friendly reminder - you work for us, we the people.

—Mark Peterson, Rochester, MN

Please don't vote for this bill!!

—Scott King, Minneapolis, MN

Don't Let Congress Ruin Net Neutrality.

—, Chicago, IL

DO NOT support the act!

—Vladimir Kostriukov, ,

Please support this bill!

—Kyle Stephens, Logan, UT

It's obvious that people don't want this, only the telecommunications corporations do. Please respect what they, your constituents, want to see done about this issue. To enact this bill will bound to have the sort of "business at the expense of people" repercussions that all other overreaching business empowering actions have had in the past.

—Richard Scarle, Chicago, IL

Look we pay more and have slower broadband service than anywhere else on the planet. The World Economic Forum ranked the United States 35th out of 148 countries in Internet bandwidth, a measure of available capacity in a country. The results showed that, in comparison to their international peers, Americans in major cities such as New York, Los Angeles, and Washington, DC are paying higher prices for slower Internet service. Don't make it worse oppose this bill. Thank you

—Gerald wise, santa fe, NM

We shouldn't have to defend net neutrality like this. It's been a core part of the internet's infrastructure for a couple decades now, and a few bad legal definitions have stripped that away. The internet is run by telecom companies, and should be subject to the Telecommunications Act. It isn't passive entertainment like cable TV, it's a sprawling platform for communication, and should be reclassified as such.

—Mr. Caleb Niederer, Seattle, WA

Please, please PLEASE... work for the people and not the corporations! This will destroy so much of what makes us great as a nation. The internet is only going to grow and this will impede it drastically.

—Matt Stratton, Charlestown, RI

My online service bill has more than doubled in the last two years, and I have absolutely no choice to switch to another provider. These companies are detested by their CUSTOMERS, but instead of improving service and customer relations, they are working to provide even less and charge more. And as we as nation slip behind in technology, these companies make more profit by forcing the populace to buy their obsolete services at even higher prices. This bill continues that, and will only merge the disgust for them and the belief that congress is their wholly owned subsidiary. Patriotism is looking out for the nation's people. Something sorely lacking in this bill.

—Nicholas Scott, Studio City, CA

Why does the government do this to us?

—Colton James Staley, Keller, TX

Congress, particularly the House of Representatives, is almost universally despised as a cesspool of corruption, with approval ratings in the single digits. But, like slow children unable to connect the dots in a coloring book, Teabaggers in blood-red states screech themselves hoarse about "FREEDOM," even as they persist in electing the very people responsible for the egregious assaults on those freedoms that get the 'Baggers' britches in a bunch in the first place. Go figure. Mrs. Latta's little boy, Bobby, is meaner than a snake, but he's not a blithering idiot, like Louie Gohmert. He knows who he serves, and it sure as hell ain't the American people. He licks the boots of the corporatists running the Big Telecom companies, and genuflects at the mere mention of the Koch brothers. Whose father, Fred, was a sadistic monster and a Nazi sympathizer, just like Dubya's Grampa Prescott was. Denounce H.R. 4752 for the malicious, back-alley assault on the First Amendment that it really is. It is not just an attack on net neutrality, it is an attack on the freedom of speech, and everything that once made this country great.

—Gregory Crawford, Stockbridge, VT

I've worked at Level 3 Communications, an Internet backbone provider. The thought of limiting speeds based on content is wrong, and should not be allowed.

—Matthew Reiner, Bloomfield, NY

Congress can kiss its seats goodbye if they do this. I'm not afraid to put my vote towards kicking them out of office.

—Chris, Macon, GA

This ill-advised Bill will have negative long term consequences far beyond the borders of the USA.

—Richard Fahlman, Gillies Bay,

Stop this madness. Greedy telco's trying to influence politics with massive amounts of money.

—Charles Bremer, Fredericksburg, TX

I work in a hotel, and when our wifi is slow or goes down, it's a freaking nightmare. It takes literally all of ten seconds of waiting for a page to load and they're calling and yelling at me. Try this on an entire country, and friends, you will have a torches and pitchforks situation pretty damn fast. Pretty much every person in this country relies on the internet for just about everything. If you start messing with that, you are essentially screwing up about 300 million people's day, and if you think there will be no backlash, then spend half an hour in a Starbucks that's having wifi trouble, and see how quickly half a dozen hipsters can make a barista's life temporarily unbearable (it's all the old-timey swear words they use, I think). So by all means, sell the internet to the highest bidder. But if you do, and DC ends up burned to the ground, don't say you weren't warned. People will not sit down and shut up if you start messing with their interwebs. After all, the only thing keeping the crazy cat people from rising up against the rest of us is cute kitten videos on YouTube. DO YOU REALLY WANT TO TEMPT FATE???

—Devon Cooper, Bartlesville, OK

This has to do with the future of the internet - and its future needs to be FREEEEEEEEEEEEEEEE

—Starr Sheppard-Decker, West Linn, OR

The Internet is a intangible utility, just like electricity. It is our "well spring" to this nation's democracy and thus makes it a utility like water. To deny U S citizens the right to Net Neutrality is interfering with our First Amendment right to Free Speech. You simply must not do anything to encumber that right. PLEASE do Not support this bill. Thank you.

—Pat Palmer, Indianola, IA

Anyone who supports H.R. 4752 is nothing but a corporate lackey and doesn't deserve to represent the people.

—Chuck Davis, York, PA

stop serving your corrupt masters and do your job and the right thing.. Reclassify and maintain a level playing field and democracy. Sincerely, db

—Dee Black, westcliffe, CO

More from the advancing Tale of Two Cities...

—Dr. Albert Dussault, charlestown, r.i., RI

Neutrality is an essential part of a platform for innovation and democracy.

—Luis Alejandro Acosta, Seattle, WA

Internet should be classified as a utility in our modern age, equal access for all.

—Ashley C Mullen, Essex Junction, VT

I should have you on my side on this

—James L Sellers, St.Louis, MO

Latta has clearly been bought off by the cable and telecom industry. This measure serves no one but the industry monopolists. It is anti-people. It's anti-consumer. It's anti-competitive for America. IT CANNOT PASS.

—Ronald Rauscher, Austin, TX

You should not be deciding for the rest of the world.

—Bess Edwards, TIMMINS, ON

Please follow the voters desires not the biggest cash cows!

—Richard Pascual, Astoria, NY

This is an issue of democracy v. oligarchy.

—Andrew C. Twaddle Ph.D., Columbia, MO

This cannot happen to America. If we allow net nuetrality to die, we give the internet and our creative freedoms to big business who only care about their profits, not the product the provide. We the people created the internet, and it's audience, now congress and providers like Comcast, and AT&T want to charge us for what we created. Please stand tall against this.

—Troy, Milwaukee, WI

NO!

—V Vitale, hanover park, IL

A free internet is what makes us different from China. Why would you take the right to information and creation that the internet gives freely in its natural form and let it be hacked to pieces for profit? This bill will destroy the pioneering American spirit that was so essential in the creation of an information super highway that it even being on three table is a disgrace. Defeat this bill, and keep the internet for the people.
—Chelsea Goodman, Dorchester, MA

This bill will harm the small business person and especially those of us who serve rural communities.
—Gaynelle Bloh, Blandon, PA

The Internet is not a luxury; it's a necessity for everyday living. We must maintain an open and free Internet, with reasonable costs and a level playing field for maximum competition and innovation for all. Please, we implore you, do not give in to big cable here. Literally, our lives and livelihoods are on the line here. Thank you.
—Marcy Rauer Wagman, San Diego, CA

You need to find a way to keep the playing field level. I pay $110 a month just for Internet access. No phone, no TV, just Internet access! The idea that providers cnd also charge content providers is double dipping!!!
—Claude Hayn, Frederick, MD

Net neutrality is healthy commerce; restricted access is constipated commerce.
—Linda Chamberlin, Los Alamos, NM

Further, I would ask that you introduce legislation that would require net neutrality and subject companies like Comcast to common carrier rules. In the final analysis, that is what they do.
—Michael Berman, Frederick, MD

Net neutrality should be a right! Not a privilege that can be taken away. Many people rely on the internet every day to work on school projects and to work their full time jobs! Everybody needs full access to the internet to love their daily lives.
—Brandon Kost, Champlin, MN

As a consumer, I have already been affected by the erosion of the foundations in Net Neutrality. The rates for my services are increasing so that I can simply 'continue' to enjoy mediocre service. As a consumer, I am looking at any way I can to improve my experience and lower my costs to do so, but without a free and open network, it will be impossible. I am considering going dark and ditching any/all data services from the companies that collude with the government to stifle competition and under server the people who make their existence possible.
—Todd Hayward, Chicago, IL

Destroying net neutrality destroys small business and innovation. Are you all so bought off that you can't recognize that your names will be the ones scribed in the history books that destroyed this country?
—David Doran-Marshall, Dallas, TX

Sad.
—John Mark Lutzke, Minneapolis, MN

Verizon plays fast and loose with the rules, claiming to be one thing when it suits it and another thing when it suits it. This is just one more reason for fixing things.
—Jerald Vinikoff, Mechanicville, NY

Internet is a utility - period. Exactly like telephone service. Please FOR ONCE do something in the interest of the American people and American INNOVATION and do the right thing.
—Kristen Palleiko, Rollinsford, NH

This bill exists for no reason other than to please the broadband companies who oppose net neutrality because without it they'd be able to direct more money into their own pockets rather than improving the services they provide. This is an especially dangerous game given the lack of competition in the broadband market nationwide. Common carrier classification is arguable where internet services should have been from day 1, why artificially prevent the FCC from considering this option? The strongest interests opposing net neutrality recently ranked as the lowest companies in the nation for customer satisfaction, and in fact other leading network infrastructure companies such as Level3 have called them out for artificially handicapping the services they provide. That alone should tell you why they actually want to get rid of net neutrality.

—Trevor Rizzolo, Somerville, MA

Net neutrality must remain intact. Keep the Internet open!

—Michael L. Dellger, Sheboygan, WI

The impact of the free reign of creative activity brought about by the free Internet has helped make the US economy stronger. If you want to kill jobs, do nothing to stop the FCC from destroying that. It's the economy, stupid!

—Eric West, Port Orange, FL

Do you work for American Citizens or do you work for greedy capitalists, LLC?

—Robert McMinn, Oxford, PA

Shameful. I can't believe that this is the same country I grew up in. Absolutely shameful what "members of congress, inc." have done and are doing to this country. It appears that our government is run by fascists...

—Christian McCarty, Seattle, WA

Please don't think that we are not listening. I'm 20 and this is the most involved in politics that I've ever been, but this has been a rude awakening to me about just how much government will do for lobby money. So, from here on out I'll consider myself an independent that votes to put people who do the right thing (killing this bill and protecting the internet the way those of us who actually make a living off of it intend) in power. Please, protect the rights of the people you represent.

—Tyler Walker, Kingwood, TX

I wonder who some of Latta's big campaign contributors are...

—Richard Davy, Kensington, CT

Our constitutional freedom is at stake.

—Gail Yborra, Wilmington, DE

The interest of the people is best served by preserving net neutrality. I oppose H.R. 4752!

—Garret Wong, Beaverton, OR

Without common carrier status, it would be akin to the car manufacturers owning the roads too. You would only be allowed to drive as fast as the car owner determines, and if you have a different manufacturer's car, you would have to drive slower. Does that make sense? These companies already charge according to bandwidth, it shouldn't matter what is the content. Don't let them funnel traffic onto preferred roads.

—Eric Greenbaum, San Diego, CA

I get my internet service through the exact same phone lines as I used to get telephone service from. How is the telephone service a common carrier and my DSL is not? When there is a single set of wires and abundant reason not to be installing five redundant sets of wires, regulation is an absolute must. It was obvious for telephone services and nothing is different about my Internet service. It is long past time to acknowledge the obvious.

—William Jacobs, Olney, MD

Protect our Internet and protect our right to openly connect with our own species!

—Joe Buczek, East Aurora, NY

Completely unfettered communication is necessary for a healthy democracy. Ours is teetering on the brink and will not stand the insult of this bill. Strongly and firmly reject this bill and its brethren.

—Daryl J Shute, Littleton, CO

Let's keep an open internet, one that makes it so one man with a great idea can become an overnight success, not one where corporations can pull all the strings.

—Chris Cookson, Stamford, CT

Average Americans are getting really weary of these continuous efforts to promote an aristocracy in the US. Giving preferential speed/access to the top 1% who can pay will have a chilling effect on the need of the general population to get information and services that our daily lives require. Reclassify broadband to what it should have been originally.

—Teresa Manzella, Maplewood, MN

I work in Tech, most skilled tech workers work for small companies made up of a handful of passionate, skilled, innovative entrepreneurs blazing a trail of innovation that has made the US the epicenter of the Information Age. Without true net neutrality companies like mine would not flourish, innovation would ground to a halt.

—Mr. Aquiles La Grave, Louisville, CO

Please vote against this bill!!

—Paul Heagerty, Eureka, CA

Start working for the people instead of the cable companies and cell carriers. Vote against this bill.

—Bruce Bishop, Jacksonville, FL

Our future generation needs to learn and communicate through the internet. So much knowledge is out there, but unequal access could interfere with innovation and learning.

—Diana L. Owens, Sublette, IL

I hope Congress supports real Net Neutrality, because ruining the internet as it is will have a huge NEGATIVE impact on America's Economic growth. You WILL hurt and even destroy small business, start ups and anyone trying to innovate the next big industry. A open internet gives us the chance to level the playing field a little bit and allow the middle class to have a greater POSITIVE impact on our economy. Do you want America to stay ahead of the curve? Then classify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act, it is the only way to really safe guard our economic future.

—Dustin d'Arnault, Dallas, TX

Keep the internet free. Do not give the internet solely to the cable companies.

—Christopher Yustin, Brooklyn, NY

Internet neutrality is an important issue that concerns the nation and the world. By allowing equal footing for small and upcoming businesses and large well established businesses, it allows people with ideas to grow. Allowing tiered access to this crucial tool makes the internet a monopolistic source that is closed or restricted to those who need it the most. Please consider your constituents your first priority. Vote against this bill. Vote for net neutrality.

—Niels van Hecke, Santa Fe, NM

I already pay a significant portion of my low income for internet access... I can't afford more. these shenanigans will just pass the cost on to the consumer, me. Many others are in the same boat.

—Amber Boettcher, Duluth, MN

Please prevent this happening...it's another example of corporations running roughshod over "we the people." When will we become a democracy?

—Dr. Arthur G. Swedlow, Ayer, MA

An open internet is one of our last remaining pillars of a free and vibrant democracy, free speech and capitalism. Get busy stopping this bill and pass legislation that would permanently protect the Open Internet.

—Bruce Monnier, Durham, NC

It seems a time to stand up to lobbyists. Seems to me like the Internet needs to be protected somehow. It was not paid for or designed by those who would now control it. It was funded by the very folks who will get hurt by following the bidding of the lobbyists.

—Charles Bealke, Dallas, TX

Please do the right thing!

—Clark Anderson, Hopland, CA

This is a CRIME and if you move to do this you should be considered for TREASON!!!

—Matthew, Orlando, FL

Net neutrality is as important as free speech. It is the basis of free speech. Please preserve net neutrality.

—Frank J. Reashore, ,

At this point Latta has become a talking head for the TIA. There is only one thing to keep in mind. Money. Net Neutrality will NOT cause any innovations from being created. On the contrary, I see it making the Internet MORE useful! This is simply yet another attempt to get regulation removed so higher prices can be forced onto the general public! Of course, if you own Stock in some of these corporations, you want to see increases in prices!

—Randy Juras, Homer Glen, IL

Will you please not support the big money, just this once?

—Mr. Gene Imhoff, Huntsville, TX

The unholy trinity of Comcast, AT&T and Verizon want to control what we see and hear via internet. If you're tired of being hammered by the pay-to-play oligarchs, you'll want to tell Rep. Bob Latta that you're not buying his H.R. 4752 baloney bill. It's designed to reduce not only the content of information you get via ineternet, but the speed at which you get it. Oh, sure, he'll give corporations all the top-tier access they want while you sit at your computer trying to find out who the real enemies of the state are. Corporations are not your friend. They're selling entertainment, not information.

—Taylor Teegarden, Martinez, CA

Please allow the internet to stay open with choice.

—Rebecca Haynes, North Vancouver,

What could be a possible sound reason to rescind net neutrality?

—Martha Marcom, Columbus, OH

voting for this bill proves that you are against the american public and for corporate control of Americans.

—Vivian Donahue, Charlottesville, VA

A vote for this bill is an attack on americans and should be viewed as treason.

—Grant Wilson, salt lake city, UT

The internet belongs to ALL the people!! Don't let "BIG greedy" corporations have control of OUR internet. WE the people have spoken....

—Sherrie Munday, Boulder, CO

This bill is toxic.

—Susan Chapman, Seattle, WA

A closed internet would allow internet connection providers to decide which websites load quickly and which sites people will have to wait longer to load. Many usage studies show that as people are accustomed to the same speeds across the net, they will quickly leave a site if it loads slowly. This will kill free trade on the internet as sites who aren't on the fast lane will not be able to compete with sites who are approved for faster connections by providers. This could put many small business out of business as people forsake the slow sites for the big business fast sites.

—Eric Sutter, Oklahoma City, OK

Internet providers are common carriers!

—Jason Woofenden, Northampton, MA

I am an electrical engineer who works in telecom - so I'm speaking not only from a consumer end-user point of view but as one who produces and creates the next generation of technology.

—Lawrence Yang, Parsippany, NJ

PLEASE R E J E C T HR 4752, UNEQUIVOCALLY!

—Jl Keith, Providence, RI

Community is what is needed here, not greed for profit. The internet is in the common realm.

—Deborah L Born, Ocala, FL

Please refer to Senator Al Franken for additional information.

—Shervin Fazel, Los Angeles, CA

the internet needs to be open and free for citizens.

—Mrs. Donnasue Jacobi, san andreas, CA

This bill (HR 4752) is an outrage. The internet has become a utility as surely as telephone service is a utility. Why would anyone want to preclude its classification as a Title II service, except to guarantee broadband providers the right to squeeze every penny possible from the public in this increasingly monopolized business sector and pave the way for even more abuse in the future. Do not let HR 4752 pass!

—Walter Wilde, Missoula, MT

This is as bad as Citizens United, set up by the same people with the same mindset.

—Mike Walter, San Diego, CA

I guess the government and those in charge won't be happy until they can tell me how to live my life? But so long as I am aware of the B/S you are attempting to pull I will fight for my right to freedom...chumps can you so called leaders grow up!-keep you money hungry fingers off the NET! and STOP trying to let the NET be controlled by ANY one group! this childish fight to rob us of a little more money,and freedom grows old!

—Daryl St Jean, Philadelphia, PA

—Thomas A. Guaraldi, Houston, TX

don't let this stupid bill go through!!

—Deb Doolittle, wakefield, RI

The internet should be considered a utility simply due to the fact that it is necessary for applying for everything, completing school assignments as well as research and checking email (everything comes in email). To limit this greatly reduces the ability to do almost everything.

—Gina Ronyak, Warren, OH

No more. The AT&T and DirecTV merger must be stopped to avoid increases in cost for customers.

—Armand Marzan, Miami, FL

H.R. 4752 would be another nail in the coffin of freedom. The concept of "America" is dying.

—Ginger Mira, Los Angeles, CA

RECLASSIFICATION of internet service providers as common carriers is now, in my view, ESSENTIAL for protecting net neutrality -- please work towards achieving this.

—Christopher Fleck, Huntington, NY

I know that Comcast and similar corporations are major political donors, thus making resistance to their demands difficult... but there are times when what is right is far more important than what is simply expedient. Please resist this latest move to restrict free speech and exchange of information among "We the People."

—George G. Stradtman Jr., Elkins Park, PA

The internet should be left alone

—Ron Thomas, Cleveland, OH

Will you stand with your constituents?Or with coporate lobbyists and rich sponsors who buy your vote?

—John Mahoney, Wasilla, AK

STOP SIDING WITH BIG BRIBE-GIVING CORPORATIONS... YOU BRIBE-TAKERS ARE SCUM!

—John M Dierig, Loveland, OH

Net Neutrality is more than a concept about freedom and the internet. It's an import part in making sure the next generation of technology and consumer products are able to be developed. We all know what a cable modem is these days but have you ever heard of a company called Lan City? Lan City basically invented and produced the first cable modem. Without Lan City you would not have the internet you know today. Lan City was able to thrive because the internet was the level playing field that allowed a small company to develop an incredible new product that changed the shopping habits of millions of Americans. It's chilling to think of the future commerce that will be killed by not protecting the the internet as an open resource, equal for all. Especially when these horrid changes are being done in the name of a few media mega-giants looking to maximize profits.

—Adam signore, Medway, MA

The large ISPs have received billions of dollars of taxpayer subsidy over the years - in the form on monopolies, tax breaks and other handouts. Having received such largesse, these companies owe a duty to the public to treat internet traffic in a completely unbiased way. To pass a law preventing the FCC from regulating these companies in an appropriate way is the most odious form of corporate welfare!

—Rob OConnor, New York, NY

Please protect the people!

—Doug A Larsen, Orem, UT

This affects the whole world. Therefore, your course ought to be clear - keep the internet neutral!

—Lambert Muis, ,

Giving preferential priority to specific information is not what the internet should be.

—John Shek, san mateo, CA

If there's one thing that remains a constant with the Republican Party, it's that whatever they're in favor of, it will be the option that allows big business to molest your wallet the most. It IS a good thing if the FCC gets some regulatory authority over the Internet after all.

—Michael F Hirsch, Parsonsburg, MD

We the people paid for the founding of the internet through block grants so WE THE PEOPLE OWEN IT. It has now become part of our Commons and infrastructure and we are NOT going to allow these parasites and their water bearers take it from us.

—N Welch, Satellite Beach, FL

I don't want to see the US government take action against something and have that daisy chain slowly to the rest of the world. The government is only thinking of business and what it wants rather than the consumers and it's citizens. We are being pushed back with less control over everything while we get bullied by businesses and told what to do. It is wrong and I vote against this bill.

—Kyle Guest, ,

The information superhighway should let all websites use data at the same speed. Big companies with their large sums of money for lobbying in order to have faster data speeds should be stopped. This gives them an unfavorable advantage. Small websites such as <http://www.rottentomatoes.com/> helped pioneer the Internet. Rotten Tomatoes is a movie news & review website. It was created by Harry Knowles, when he was sick in bed in the mid-90s'. Rotten Tomatoes has made such a huge impact that Hollywood actually care what this website says about their movies. Another example of a small business success story is the horror movie news website <http://www.upcominghorrormovie s.com/>. These small business websites help pay rent, put food on the table, pay for college tuition & provide for one's family. Please make sure that every politician out there receives this message. Sincerely, Abrar Qureshi

—Abrar Qureshi, Willowbrook, IL

The free internet is as important in a democracy as a free press! Do not give corporations any control of this medium!

—Susan L. Rogers, Pearce, AZ

A vote for this bill is also a vote for the special interests of the big telecom oligopolies and is in direct opposition to the best interests of consumers.

—Jeanine Center, Ann Arbor, MI

If the middle class has to pay for what the 2% uses on the net, than Congress has clearly stated that they only care about their payoffs from the super rich, as they do in letting them off the hook for paying taxes. Don't forget, we are voters and more and more of us are starting to see the light.

—Mary f Brady, Dubuque, IA

I support Net Neutrality. Please do not separate the internet between fast and slow lanes.

—Miroslav Gorchakov, ,

Please don't vote this bill, because bad to everybody too! I want to keep free open internet forever!! Sign Melissa Maddox

—Melissa Maddox, Frankfort, KY

Net Neutrality protects innovation and our increasingly internet based economy. Being against Net Neutrality means supporting the cable companies myopic business decisions more than the public's best interest.

—Alex Milton, San Diego, CA

do you guys not get it, or are you paid to not get it?

—Michael Langlais, west warwick, RI

So whom do you represent? The citizens who elected you, or the big telcom companies that want to buy you? Your vote on this will answer that question.

—James M. Lyles, Holly, MI

the net is one of the few things in America that's available to all, equally. It must remain so.

—Janet Tice, Chapel Hill, NC

We all know that all the republicans are bought and paid for already by big business ... we can only hope that their numbers will be greatly diminished by the next election !!!

—Cliff Jordan, Jeffersontown, KY

KEEP THE INTERNET OPEN!

—Ron Munden, Scottsville, TX

Net neutrality has become a major asset to the economy. Computer communication should be treated like electric power.

—William Handley, Edgewater, CO, CO

Americans have had enough of their corrupt Congress critters. Pull your heads out and leave the Internet alone.

—Bill Lindner, Greenbrae, CA

Public interest? Anybody?

—Allan King, Duiluth, MN

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Robert Wical, Culpeper, VA

Open and neutral internet is essential to our Democracy, at least what's left of it.

—Tom Clinton, Crete, IL

Net neutrality is essential for a functioning democracy. When access to all information is controlled by big business the American people suffer.

—Geoffrey Marsh, Santa Rosa, CA

The internet was not created by these corporations. Why would you cede them ownership over the public's wishes?

—Lisa Kazmier, Manville, NJ

If this isn't a crystal clear example of the corruption of our Congress members being bribed by big business, then I have no idea what is. This bill cannot pass. It will ruin America, all because politicians want to line their wallet. Half of them will die in the next decade because they're so old, why should they dictate this aspect of communication and business in our lives?

—Dylan Austin Young, Cape Coral, FL

The reason for FCC's existence is that it should be apolitical and not behave according to whims of people in congress who can create laws for their benefactors. This proposed bill would take away's FCC's powers. I'm not in favor of that.

—Rikesh Chouhan, malden, MA

ABSOLUTELY!!! Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality

—Ellen Bryant, Eureka, CA

Please stand up against these huge company's which only have their bottom line at heart.

—David Clinansmith, Grand Haven, MI

This is what Hitler would have done.

—Sean O'Hara, Madison, WI

As a researcher and one who's wife is a small business owner, net neutrality is a must for our daily lives. If we are not able to have net neutrality, our entire vocations are in danger of not being viable any longer. Please vote against bill H.R. 4752 and advocate to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers. You not only contribute to us, but to everyone who uses the internet as a viable source of livelihood and existence.

—Brett Stine, Denton, TX

We need an open Internet.

—Ron Munden, Marshall, TX

This is a serious breach of democracy.

—Regine Bohar, ,

Companies impacted by Title II oppose it on the platform that it will stifle innovation and yet 2 companies have chosen to grow their size, and control over the Internet, by acquiring other companies instead of using those same funds to provide fiber networks to every home in the US. Creating an ultra fast network for the entire country is innovation. Growing for the sake of control is a play to monopolize their industries and most definitely not innovation. Their actions in the face of their arguments speak volumes if take some time to listen. Do what's right for all the citizens who elected you to represent them.

—Brian Fuller, Portland, OR

PLEASE===PLEASE===PLEASE

—George Hague, Moreno Valley, CA

And as a user of the Open Internet, and proud supporter of Mozilla and other initiatives for an open Web, voting for this bill will destroy the Web as we all know it. If you, Congress member, use any company that will gain advantage from a closed internet like the one being proposed, you will face the same problems we all are. The only way for anyone to win this battle is to reclassify ISPs to be exactly the same as Phone companies.

—, Kennewick, WA

The Internet is the greatest symbol of democracy in the world, which is likely the very reason people who write bills like this are against it.
—Sam DeLeo, Denver, CO

Stop the Corporate Raiding of the private sector and the erosion of the middle class. This just has to stop..
—Timothy J. Larkin, San Francisco, CA

Don't break what's not broken. The Do nothing Congress that y'all are have done nothing for the people y'all cater to the corporations and continue to screw the working families, seniors and veteran's. I find most of your ideologies twisted or flat out lies and daily I loose hope for our country that y'all are taking down this inevitable path of doom. I thank God I have no children to raise in this tortured society what damage you've done will end with me. Unfortunately my nieces and nephews will have to pay for the decisions y'all have made for your own Personal Gains!!!!
—Jenny Williams, Lincoln, NE

The Internet belongs to the public without discrimination. More than any other time in history it is important to protect this vital form of communication - the life of the planet depends on it.
—Susan Brennan, Brooklyn, NY

The internet should be considered a public utility.
—Nancy Mueller, Chapel Hill, NC

Please keep the internet open for free speech.
—Christian Olsen, Raleigh, NC

An open Internet is crucial for the growth of Internet business. Providers should not be in the business of telling me what I can and cannot access.
—Parker Smith, Zionsville, IN

Congressman Lata, being a Republican, obviously want his bill to fly thru Congress...he's probably taking thousands of dollars from the corporations that would benefit from passage. However, no matter what he says about his bill enhancing and protecting the internet, it will only accomplish that for the giant telecoms. Allowing the internet to be cut up into fast lanes for those who can pay, the giant telecoms, and those who can't, everyone else, would ruin the internet...period!
—Thomas Moore, Tucson, AZ

Please do not vote for this Bill
—John Gustafson, Mooresville, NC

pls no
—Ek, Irvington, NY

I honestly don't have much to say that the form letter up there doesn't already cover, but I will add that the simple fact that this came up at all should serve as a damn good, pardon the language, indicator of why it shouldn't be at all. The fact that the reclassification issue freaks these companies out to the extent that they bang out a bill to directly counter a growing movement that's actively against something THEY, the cable companies, want seems to suggest that it's probably the case that it's not good for Everyone, Just them.
—Mr. Christopher F. Kennard, Dover, DE

This matter is about keeping alive democracy.
—John Nichols, East Orleans, MA

KEEP THE INTERNET FREE AND OPEN!!! I DEFEND AND PROTECT NET NEUTRALITY !!

—Theresa Manfreda, San Diego, CA

The net belongs to People, not corporations. Real People, not 'artificial people', otherwise known as corporations. (Corporations are aka scarecrows stuffed with money.)

—Susan Lehrer, city, WA

Openness is critical to the innovative and ever-changing nature of the Internet. We cannot foresee how the next generation of users will shape the Internet, but limiting their ability to do so will stifle one of the great human innovations. Consumers have been under the thumb of media companies for too long when it comes to cable service options. We don't really have a choice when it comes to how we can access the Internet. Now the little option we have is being threatened. What is to stop this movement once it is allowed? How are the costs of these fast lanes going to trickle down to the consumer? Are we going to be doubly impacted by our ISPs and the companies forced to make fast lane deals? How is this going to exacerbate the socioeconomic divide in access? Internet use has become as fundamental to daily life as the newspaper and landline phone were in their prime. ISPs should be considered utilities and bound to provide equal and unfettered access.

—Theresa McDermott, Gaithersburg, MD

they're only allowing carriers to run the country.

—Erick Herring, Miami Gardens, FL

No fast lanes for the well-off businesses and individuals. This is an essential utility that has to be neutral.

—Ron Haglind, Chanhassen, MN

Freedom of speech should be protected. This goes to that.

—Jennifer Jeffrey, Calgary,

The internet is a great tool. Please keep it open and free. We already pay these companies to use it, theres no need to move us to the slow lane.

—Kyle C Bracken, Los Angeles, CA

Congress must support the people not large corporations.

—Dennis T Cook, Lansdale, PA

We look to the US Congress to show leadership in protecting Net Neutrality as an example to all nations.

—Chris Wood, BURRUM HEADS, NY

We know that corporations don't have a pulse or any other vital sign to call their own...why have we allowed them even close to positions of power? Why do 'our' public servants do their bidding instead of ours so consistently? Why haven't we run this whole crowd out of town, cancelled their checks, and frozen their assets? I want answers, and so do lots of others.

—Rick Weddle, Honokaa, HI

If you vote against net neutrality, you will not get my vote in the future.

—Brett Cothren, Metairie, LA

Classify ISPs as common carrier; if we fall behind in information access and allow it to be further privatized and commercialized, we will be at a distinct disadvantage versus other technologically advanced nations with better access to the information on the web.

—Nathan Lough, Bellingham, WA

don't support this bill , it will turn out to just cost more money to get what we have now

—J Digiandomenico, PLANTSVILLE, CT

Please save our Internet!

—Catharine Lund, Falmouth, ME

The internet and it's isp's are absolutely no different than MaBell and need to be subjected to the same anti-trust treatment as any utility would be. Net Neutrality is a requirement for continued broad based economic growth. Even the right has to be able to see that.

—Jonathan Pazer, Gardiner, NY

Thank you for your no vote.

—Martha White, Chicago, IL

People don't realize this, but net neutrality is one of the strongest pillars against tyranny. The moment internet providers are allowed to discriminate traffic based on content is the moment they can take control.

—Michael Dryden, Seattle, WA

International Democracy requires the USA to act in an open and fair manner on this issue. Net neutrality is essential to protect democracy, fair and free trade. Net neutrality mitigates against monopolies vested interests.

—Jo Bayly, ,

The Internet should not be handed over to big-money interests -- it needs to be preserved as a democratic and open resource for the benefit of all users, not just those seeking to make larger profits from it. Support continued net neutrality.

—R Shandor, San Diego, CA

I never cease to be amazed by the obtuseness of some of our elected officials. Go ahead: keep stacking the cards in favor of big business, until there are no more customers left from whom they can make profits.

—Lisa Piner, Costa Mesa, CA

It is clear that the biggest supporters of this bill large telecommunications companies. Their justification: being classified as a common carrier will make it more difficult to innovate. The problem with this logic is that they have had every opportunity to innovate for decades now and still every meaningful bit of information we have as to why we have fallen so far behind the rest of the first world in internet speed is because of the last mile connectivity which is the link in the chain that these corporations are responsible for. Is it not more plausible that our innovation has been stifled because we have a few corporations who know that their profits are much greater when they don't have to spend money innovating while collecting premium rates because there is just no other option? These are corporations seeking an uneven playing field because they cannot compete. Please do not give them power they do not deserve and do not earn. America not only deserves a better internet it needs it to compete with the rest of the world and this legislation will set us back a decade.

—Stephen Hunter, Dublin, OH

I am fed up with CORPORATIONS attempting to run my Country. They do not have any rights governing me and my life. Put a stop to this attempt of ending "net neutrality".

—Rue' Myles, Detroit, MI

FCC; YOU MUST "RECLASSIFY BROADBAND PROVIDERS AS COMMON CARRIERS," NO FAST AND SLOW LANES, EVER. STOP THIS NOW, FOR EVERYONE.

—Elaine Balgemann, Mesa, AZ

The are all _obviously_ common carriers!

—Manor Askenazi, Arlington, MA

Free Internet is essential to a Free People.

—James Peloquen MD, NY, NY

Get busy and DO something right!

—Lyn Z Page, Vancouver, WA

A vote for this bill is a vote against the will of the people and an insult to America

—Steven Gauthier, Cincinnati, OH don

—Donald Paden, Loveland, CO

Wanna see an exodus of businesses and individuals dependent on an open internet leave the U.S. en masse in order to prevent their work product from being discriminated against? As a web developer and Graphic Designer, if my work is relegated to a 'slow lane', I promise you I will not tolerate it.

—Michael Phillips, Cottontown, TN

DO NOT let this happen. The open and free internet is the only thing we have left that is really good in this country.

—Beerly Foster, Wayne, PA

As an american citezen living outside of the US I still believe in neutrality stop this noscense.

—James Wyatt, Rodgau,

This is a bad bill for the American people.

—Nancy Oliver, Los Angeles, CA

This is not in line with my will or morals. Please represent the people not the lobbyist.

—Justin white, Aberdeen, MD

Don't fix what isn't broken.

—Linda Cameron, Richland, WA

Congress: Isn't this country about freedom? Since I was a little kid, I have been indoctrinated into believing that America is the "freest country in the world" and that we are a "perfect melting pot." Recently, at only 16 years old, I have been completely dissoluted to these statements. An attack on net neutrality is an attack on freedom; a normal person can't compete with big companies like Comcast and AT&T and in their non-competition their freedom is limited by their inability to act against what are becoming tyrannical organizations. An organization becomes tyrannical when the freedom of their country's citizens has been limited, and in limiting net neutrality you are creating tyranny. Stop the ban on reclassification of telecommunications companies, and keep net neutrality alive. Signed: a Concerned Citizen

—Tommy Ory, Tulsa, OK

This is a major concern for me. I work online and support my family through it. Your stance on this will effect how I vote. Thanks.

—Sean Hodge, Mount Dora, FL

Please keep the internet open so we can continue to take advantage of current and forthcoming innovation.

—Duane Eckholm, Fargo, ND

The Internet is a utility. It's a staple of the lives of many Americans. It needs to remain open and neutral, END OF STORY.

—Adam Lutz, Scottsdale, AZ

I AM TELLING YOU CONGRESS TO STEP DOWN AND VOTE AGAINST THIS TOXIC BILL!!!! PROTECT NET NEUTRALITY AND KEEP THE INTERNET FREE AND OPEN!!!!!!

—Jonathan Apone, San Diego, CA

I want the FCC to reclassifying broadband providers under Title II of the Communications Act, as it is the only way to protect real net neutrality.

—Josh Peichoto, Austin, TX

This would be a BIG mistake. Please stand up for net neutrality. Our democracy and freedom depend on an open source way to communicate, not one controlled by corporate interests and sold to the highest bidder.

—Marilyn Parsons, Urban, IL

Be courageous and stand to what is right!

—Ken M Moffett, Knoxville, TN

We must take back our country from the corporations.

—Douglas P Dolstad, Vashon, WA

This bill is not going to help anyone but corporations.

—Dylan Hadfield, Jefferson, MD

you guys have to stop working for Verizon,comcast and AT&T..and start working for the people

—William D. Gaskill, punta gorda, FL

We the people demand to be represented and we demand an open, neutral internet. Corporate greed must not be used to userp an open internet.

—Marvin Bronstein, South Plainfield, NJ

if given the opportunity, i would gladly defecate all over mister latta's chest.

—Garrett G Acree, atlantic beach, NC

if ain't broke, don't not fix...

—Mr. Pedro Estrada, Cochabamba,

Congress needs to prove to the american people that our country is not up for sale to the highest bidder. This would be a good start in raising those poll numbers above a 11% approval rating.

—Adrian Nedelcu, Decatur, GA

Quit selling yourself short. You do have the ability to represent the people of America instead of corporate greed.

—George Loveday, GRASS VALLEY, CA

I already pay for high speed internet. Allowing large ISP's to restrict these speeds because someone on the other end hasn't paid their ransom demands is ludicrous. I have been an independent business owner for over 30 years in a small town in rural Oklahoma and my success has depended on a reliable internet connection. This is much more than an issue of I want to watch movies over the internet. Joe Cook Cook's Computer & Software Service 119 N. Broadway Broken Bow, OK 74728

—Joe Cook, Broken Bow, OK

THE INTERNET BELONGS TO THE PEOPLE NOT CORP., AMERICA!! FREE INTERNET...

—Mrs. & Terry Cadwallader, St. Louis, MO

The internet is meant to be open and free and equal for all regardless if you are a startup or a big controlling corporation. Please Protect Net Neutrality

—Ivan Totchev, Chicago, IL

An open and emergent Internet is what has made so much of the modern world possible. Please don't hamper that for our future.

—Michael Flyger, Maple Falls, WA

Passing this bill will increase the inequality and decrease opportunities of small businesses and private people. Net neutrality is one of the core pillars the internet is based upon. Who does not understand this, does not understand the greatness of the internet. It is our common good which has to be protected.

—Sebastian Loh, Austin, TX

We want to keep our freedoms! Please stop trying to control us.

—Vilda Carol Olsen, Saint Clair Shores, MI

Please do NOT vote against Net Neutrality. Internet Service Providers are, in fact, common carriers. I do not want some company prioritizing my internet traffic.

—Kurt Schwind, Saint Louis, MO

Bob Latta clearly doesn't understand the repercussions for America and the global Internet if Net Neutrality is defeated.

—Justin Cates, Painted Post, NY

Net Neutrality is an important component of our democracy, which is already under assault from Citizen's United. Please protect it by not supporting this bill.

—Mahala Frye, Poulsbo, WA

Stop bending over to grant rights and privileges to Corporate America.

—Lewis Redding, Arcadia, CA

OPEN, PUBLIC, ACCESSIBLE EQUALLY FOR ALL. FCC is to protect access for all citizens. Do your job. Net Neutral.

—Lynne Hadley, Tunbridge, VT

Our nation's ability to innovate and compete economically depends on Net Neutrality remaining in place. Please don't sell off America's future to the highest bidder!

—Geary Yelton, Asheville, NC

To Who It Concerns: It is of utmost importance that all data be treated equally on the Internet. CHOICE - If we allow the purchase of preferential treatment for Internet traffic, we are essentially a captive audience. Personal liberty includes our right to choose--we must keep the Internet neutral and cultivate disparate sources of online information. Without proper access to all of the data sources, we will be confined to the ideas and information deemed important to those with the deepest pockets. VOICE - The Internet is a virtual extension of our society--if we allow some members of the virtual space to pay for better access to Internet audiences, the voice of the individual will be lost. Our freedom of speech is at stake. Please support net neutrality. Sincerely, Shannon Grothaus

—Shannon Grothaus, Cooper City, FL

We can all understand the fear of those who loathe democracy. A free Internet would spoil their river of lies. A free Internet means Truth can prevail. No wonder the corporate world loathes and fears a free Internet. Stand up to the corpies. BE AMERICAN, not a purchased item.
—Richard Asmus, Lees Summit, MO

This bill (HR 4752) is insanity by any other name! What is WRONG in DC?
—Mona Locke, Napa, CA

Voting for HR 4752 is a vote against democracy and civil liberty - it would in fact be a treasonous move in the direction of oligarchy and fascism.
—Greg Collins, Coopersville, MI

If I am paying for an expensive service that is already the slowest it can possibly be, why should I have to give more money to go onto a website that was created for EVERYONE TO SEE. If I don't have the money to barely pay my internet now how do you expect me to pay it when there will be fees for me wanting to find RESARCH for my school projects or to just enjoy the little bit of time that I do have that is off from work and school. That's like going to a restaurant and just because you wanted a little more barbecue sauce on your ribs they charge you for how much you use. No. That would be outrageous. These Internet companies make millions already with horrible Internet speeds. They don't even have enough workers to fix the problems that their equipment has. You have to wait several weeks even sometimes MONTHS to be able to get your service working properly and they usually never give any compensation for their own mess ups and you end up having to pay for everything since the Internet is so important. I'm sorry but if I have kids in the future and they have to use the Internet to do their school projects and I have to pay a fee for them doing research I'd rather just let them get the F. If they do this to the internet I will never use it again and I'm sure millions of people are willing to stop paying all together if this happens.
—Lorraine Jacomino, Miami, FL

why is it taking so long to come to such a simple solution???
—Therese de Vet, Tucson, AZ

Vote AGAINST this bill, please!
—John Paul, St. Augustine, FL

If Thomas Paine were alive today he would not print the Federalist Papers and pass them out on street corners, he would put his thoughts on the Internet. Without Net Neutrality, his ideas would be superseded by commercial messages. Please vote against H.R. 4752. Thank you.
—James Powell, Eugene, OR

The internet is today's press. It must be free.
—Joel Trupin PhD, Marshfield, VT

The loss to education and small business would be a tragedy.
—Ken Tower, Boise, ID

The internet is a commons which should be shared equally by all its users. If it is turned into a commodity to be bought and sold to highest (richest) bidder, we will have lost yet another way to be in touch regarding the 'little' person's needs. Please vote no on H.R. 4752.
—Eva Simonsen, Cranford, NJ

More sneak attacks on the American public?? Is all of Washington owned by Comcast, AT & T, and Verizon?? Quit screwing the consumer and represent OUR best interests, please!!!
—Maureen Bennett, Aurora, OH

This bill is nonsense.
—J Duncan, San Francisco, CA

Stop Latta's bill. The internet doesn't belong to Comcast and Verizon like their lobbyists would like you to believe —Robert Cohen, Montclair, NJ

I urge you to oppose this legislation which would tie the FCC's hands and prevent it from protecting consumers online from ISP discrimination. Support real lasting Net Neutrality rules that can survive judicial scrutiny by supporting Title II reclassification of broadband. Broadband was a Title II service in the Clinton Gore years and should be considered such again.
—Maneesh Pangasa, Yuma, AZ

A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet.
—Diana Skill, Kansas City, MO

Please protect our right to free speech and free access to information.
—Jay Treat, King of Prussia, PA

Face it: the attack on net neutrality is an attack on democracy!
—Philip Shepard, East Lansing, MI

Rep. Latta you are part of the problem. Please remove your bill for consideration and stop trying to move the discussion further to the right of reality.
—Houmeh Aghabozorgi, Falls Church, VA

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality
—Kranti Mailliard, Watsonville, CA

Please don't let the FCC limit access to the full power of the internet. The internet needs to be defined as a common carrier. Please. Thank you.
—Craig Taylor, Salt Lake City, UT

Many of us are VERY weary of money/corporations controlling votes in congress. This is just one more attempt to do the same. I urge you in the strongest possible way to NOT support this bill.
—Mr Jack R Smith, Ashland City, TN

Once again, corporations looking out for only themselves. Do your job by looking out for your fellow citizens!
—Ginny Griffin, Breckenridge, CO

As a software engineer my job as well as many more depend on an open internet. Support net neutrality and don't support HR4752
—Kevin Peroni, Jupiter, FL

Reclassification is a must in order to protect the Internet from big money interests.
—Stephen Weber, Wentzville, MO

If there's one thing that remains a constant with the Republican Party, it's that whatever they're in favor of, it will be the option that allows big business to molest your wallet the most. It IS a good thing if the FCC gets some regulatory authority over the Internet after all.
—Michael Hirsch, Parsonsburg, MD

My GOD at some point we the 99% have to matter. Sooner or later even your less knowledgeable voters will realize your in the tank with these corporate freedom killers

—James Joseph Feliccia, Philadelphia, PA

This bill is an underhanded tactic that is against the very spirit of a representative democracy. No matter how they try to prevent net neutrality, we the people will push back.

—Juan Gutierrez, Glendale, CA

We already have cable tv.

—Thomas Moore, Philadelphia, PA

Free & Open communication!

—Leslie Fowler, Cupertino, CA

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality. A vote for this bill is a vote AGAINST the open Internet.

—Mrs. Randy Russell, Fremont, CA

The internet needs to be open and free, to help preserve our Democracy! Stop caving in to craven business interests that don't give a damn about our nation's health.

—Kevin B Havener, Chicago, IL

Protect our free and open internet. Don't destroy it.

—Andrea Bonnett, Altadena, CA

Protect net neutrality .

—Mrs L Leon Trumpp, Seedalia, MO

I'm a 59 year old man that was displaced from a software engineering job during the recession. I now run my own web based service company and can't afford another set back because of new internet fees from greedy companies.

—Dale Southard, Salt Lake City, UT

We need net neutrality. The internet is too slow for my family already.

—John Comella Comella, Philadelphia, PA

Representative Latta's bill is exactly what we the people have NOT been asking for. Please stop his proposal from becoming law. Stand up for ordinary citizens and consumers.

—Lynn Fox, Dallas Center, IA where do they find assholes like latta, under rocks?

—andy tomsky, san marcos, CA

For once, let's have Congress represent the interests of the American people for the free and open flow of information, and not cave in to corporate bribery. Your approval ratings are what -- 6 percent? Acts like attacking net neutrality for your corporate pupeteers are exactly why. Do your job. Represent us.

—MP Nunan, New York, NY

ISPs must be reclassified as common carriers.

—DH Higgins, Fairfax, CA

The Web is the ultimate epitome of American Ingenuity, creativity and Entrepreneurial spirit. It is an equal place where the market determines who has a good product to consume. Allowing the media monopolies to have control over that freedom is to squelch the american spirit.

PLEASE keep the net neutral!

—Eric Semmelmayr, Pleasanton, CA

How can anyone in congress even consider a law telling a federal department NOT to do its job? Just because congress never does its job, doesn't mean that no other body in the country should do any work!

—Toni Rorapough, Vestal, NY

Definitely will never vote for a candidate who does not vote to protect Net Neutrality

—Jamie Bothen, Florence, KY

'Land of the free' my ass

—Bec Ash, ,

Once more! Please no more "Sloppy Logic" about the internet! The facts is the net need to be equal for all or it defeats the true propose of having free flow of information. The net is much like "justice", it must work for all or it really does not work well for anyone!...

—Steve Walsh, Gresham, OR

The Internet need be classified as a public utility. Period.

—Donald Di Di Russo, Hyde Park, MA

Voting against the will of the people will result in your loss of seat. Believe it.

—, Binghamton, NY

Don't push us. The average American, still has enough fire in them to take a stand.

—Keith Schneider, Coos Bay, OR

Keep the net free and open and equally accessible for everyone regardless of their finances!

—J Z, Pittsburgh, PA

Whatever you can do to stop this obvious purchase of a corporate Internet would be appreciated.

—Brian Herwood, Tyler, TX

Listen to the American People, the public!!!

—Judy, Oshkosh, WI

This is blatantly ignoring the fact of what the public has been asking for. The FCC controls the rules for phone, TV and radio, why should there be a bill to limit the FCC's control over the internet other than to stop the reclassification of ISPs under Title II carriers. Clearly this bill was introduced by someone who is getting a kickback from a large telecom or ISPs, and anyone voting Yes on this bill might as well be the same; please don't be one of those people. If telephone companies are classified as Title II carriers and they carry our phone calls, they why aren't ISPs who carry our internet seen as the same. ISPs are afraid of profits falling due to the possible reclassification, but they should be innovating and aspiring to be companies. The US is so far behind the world standard when it comes to internet service options and speed. Most ISPs are also television providers using a broken business model, but don't want to change because of their lovely profits. The US needs technology leaders that innovate, expand and thrive on competition, not hide behind profits and create monopolies. Do something about this bill, stand up for the people you represent and do the right thing, vote against this bill and start making a move to reclassify ISPs as Title II carriers.

—Brandon Scharf, Saint Charles, MO

Don't fuck the internet you greedy bureaucratic niggers

—Frank Timoney, Phoenix, AZ

"Pay to play always leads to total demise of any system, except for the greedy and stupid."

—Jim Phillips, Los Banos, CA

ISPs ARE common carriers... H.R. 4752 is toxic to the base of an open internet.

—Martin Allen, Seattle, WA

Keep it open and free

—Faith Freeman, Lampeter,

People before Business !!! How do we fight Corporate Money ?? Put the American People First !!!

—Carole Smith, Brooksville, FL

Net Neutrality is an essential component to our freedoms as Americans. Protect it.

—Sharon Chastain, Maple Valley, WA

The "last mile" of the broadband internet network is currently a local monopoly in most of the US, and should be regulated as a common carrier. Fobidding this regulation as HR 4752 would do returns the commercial landscape to the gilded age where railroad and shipping trusts (monopolies) extracted huge rents by restraining trade and local competition. Don't roll back the clock. Vote against HR 4752.

—Jesse Shumway, New Bern, NC

The Internet is a telecommunications Utility. Do NOT support H. R. 4752; it is horrible legislation.

—Joseph Bly, Gardnerville, NV

To: U.S. Congress: STOP The Monopolistic Practice from Internet Corporations like AT&T, Comcast and Verizon . Protect the Net Neutrality!

—William G Gonzalez, Suffern, NY

Think like Americans and vote for Americans NOT the Oligarchs!!!

—Kristina Peterson, Edmonds, WA

This Bill caters only inequality!!!

—Sander Elias, Prinsenbeek,

PLEASE....Do NOT hobble access for the people for information.

—Cathy Spalding, Olympia, WA

Normally I do not propose additional legislation/oversight because I it prohibits company growth and stifles innovation. However in this case, the Internet Service Provider Oligopoly has shown themselves not to care about the integrity of the internet or their customer's desires, they only care about being able to double charge their customers in order to increases their profits and protect their control. Please oppose bill H.R. 4752.

—Nicholas Coronado, Tucson, AZ

This is a no brainer. The internet should be open and free for all to use on an equal basis.

—John Luchsinger, Madison, WI

Stop supporting Greedy Big Business and stand up for the American people.

—Roger & Heidi Crawford, Stony Run, PA

Please mock and shame these GOP corporate shills who govern, not for the good of their constituents, the American People, or the country, but only for the corporate donors that fill their campaign coffers. This is the kind of CRAP that keeps approval ratings for Congress in the toilet.

—James Suthers, Burbank, CA

A vote for this bill will assure you that I will not be voting you in the coming elections. Do what's right, listen to the people that you are supposed to represent.

—David Christensen, ripon, CA

Congress must keep net neutrality or face the consequences. Remember the people of this country do not want an internet that favors the rich.

—Darrell Schmidt, Rose Hill, KS

Bob Latta is a fascist enemy of free speech,civil and consumer rights,and ultimately the American people.Are you?

—Paul R Albrecht, Phila., PA

Don't let greed stifle creativity.

—Brian Furby, Lincoln, NE

I trust my representatives in the House and Senate to do the right thing when it comes to preserving Net Neutrality. Please know I am staunchly against Rep. Latta's bill.

—Paul Hanna, Somerville, MA

Who is this Bob Latta? Did people VOTE for him?

—David Taylor, ,

Had predators like Verizon, Comcast, and AT&T had their way there would not be an Internet. Innovative ideas and technologies like Facebook, Google, Amazon, etc. would not have had the opportunity to evolve into the services that many real live people, consider next to essential today.

—Ken Gunderson, Boise, ID

Please vote NO on H.R. 4752!

—Karen Edson, De Forest, WI

The idea of choking the internet, treating it like cable or telephone service; usage fees, packages, time constraints, is appalling. The internet is an open source place where everyone can gain access to information, and people without a voice can find a way to be heard. Companies like Verizon, Comcast, and AT&T don't own the internet, so what right do they have to strangle it? Save net neutrality, if you truly believe in freedom.

—Travis Neal, Baytown, TX

Let's have something that's not totally under the control of large corporations!

—Scott Hertel, laurel park, NC

Quit jacking around for a chance to steal more money. You have more than enough.

—Ed Hallman, Thomaston, GA

Come on guys! Leave the Internet alone!

—Caitlinn Stoltz, Landenberg, PA

Please respond by stating your position for or against this bill.

—W Craig Wilson, Lake Hiawatha, NJ

One for all.

—Catalina Gutierrez, Moorpark, CA

A vote for this gutless anti-net neutrality is a vote to end your political career. Think carefully before you vote.

—David Schonberger, West Hills, CA

Help protect access to the internet without having to pay more for what we already have. Protect the consumer and not the corporations.

—Randall Patton, Battle Creek, MI

Why would stripping away power from the FCC to do its job be something anyone but the giant cable companies would want? By having this title II ability, the FCC is able to hold it above any of those giant cable companies not playing fair. The people want an open and free internet, this bill is an insult to the American people's intelligence.

—Jason G, North Ridgeville, OH

STOP THIS NOW!!!! DEMOCRACY IS NOT FOR SALE, NOR IS FREE SPEECH AND THAT IS WHAT THE INTERNET IS.
STAY ON THE RIGHT SIDE OF HISTORY NET NEUTRALITY NOW AND FOREVER.

—P Welland, Florence, MA

Do what is right for WE THE PEOPLE, not the communication corporations & the rich who own & run them.

—Vickie M Fouts, Coarsegold, CA

The internet _already is_ a common carrier -- my phone is an internet phone ... prohibiting the FCC from declaring it so and destroying net neutrality is anti-competitive, anti-entrepreneurial, anti-democratic, and a really damaging, dumb idea. Don't do it.

—Barbara Muehlhausen, Schaumburg, IL

I am sad that such nonsense is coming from an Ohioan. Net Neutrality is a huge power struggle for power, money and the ability to freely communicate. Please don't vote for this bill.

—Dale Janus, warren, OH information is democracy. it does not come at a price

—Ian Murray, Lindsay,

Keep the internet equal and free for everyone.

—Laura Wilder, Garland, TX

Rep. Latta and Sen. Cruz have echoed their sentiments before. Both are worried that Title II reclassification of the broadband providers would subject the Internet to "nanny-state regulation from Washington," and innovation would be "stifled" as a result. I implore you all to realize that this represents a fundamental misunderstanding of the situation. The anti-competitive behavior and tacit coordination of the ISPs against consumer interests, not government regulation, represent the greatest threat to the greatness of the Internet industry. We need these providers to treat all data and web content equally in order to preserve the innovative capacity of our startups and online businesses. And if the ISPs won't do it willingly, as they have every incentive not to, we need our Congressional representatives to protect our consumer interests as their constituents. Do not support bill H.R. 4752. Support Title II reclassification of ISPs as common carriers. Save the Internet.

—Ryan Cunningham, Houston, TX

I am a disabled VET. I fought for freedom. Please do not this bill pass for it would be a slap in the face of all the men who fought for freedom all over the world.

—Jesse Torres, East Lansing, MI

The US already lags behind other first-world countries in access to broadband internet. We should be working toward greater access and an open internet, not against Net Neutrality.

—Rebecca Stuurwold, KALAMAZOO, MI

I vote and I will not vote for ANYONE who supports this bill.

—Douglas Tubach, Canton, CT

What possible purpose that would be to the advantage of the American people could be served by preventing the FCC from properly reclassifying broadband as a common carrier. That reclassification is common sense. Shame on Bob Latta for attempting to undercut American Citizens for the benefit of monopolistic corporations.

—Genie Maples, Asheville, NC

An Open Internet promotes Freedom.

—Marvin Feil, Newton, NJ

There is no rational reason to allow this bill to pass.

—William Randolph Pearce, Beaverdam, VA

Please put this bill in the circular file; I can think of more graphic things to say, but you should get the idea.

—Ronald Drahos, Bloomington, IN

Please preserve net neutrality. The public paid for the Internet's development and it must remain in service to the greater good, not corporate interests. Vote no on HR 4752

—Mr. Jess Morton, San Pedro, CA

KEEP BIG BUSINESS'S GREEDY PAWS OUT OF OUR INTERNET!

—Elyse Stewart, Salem, OR

This is absurd. America already lags behind most of the rest of the World in terms of internet speed and reliability. Now they're trying to do this? Absolutely unacceptable.

—Jade Angela, Memphis, TN

Please support Net Neutrality. Our economy and the survival of so many small businesses depends on it.

—Lauren Russell, Eugene, OR

Living in a rural area we only have the net on our mobile phone. Our computer sits idle because anything other than dial up is too expensive. We must keep the internet as is. Anything else could literally put our lives in danger.

—Glenna Shenan, Whitewright, TX

Make 'em common carriers for the common man (and woman) to have a level playing field!

—Doug Simmer, Austin, TX

With all their wealth and available tech, can't they build another internet channel for this high speed traffic, like the way we have tollways to expedite traffic when people want/need a means for faster travel than a current expressway would be too crowded to provide? In this country of innovation and invention, let's not go retrograde. Thank you, Gordon.

—Gordon Heavern, Boulder, CO

Patrick Leahey from VT is a strong supporter of Net Neutrality. Thank you Senator Leahey for serving the People here & the World!

—Joseph Froton, Salem, NH

This is how other countries lost their freedoms.

—Winnifred S rich, Hansville, WA

Kill H.R. 4752 now. The neutral internet is one of the best things that has happened to our democracy in my life time. I don't want a few telecom executives determining who gets to go first and how they get to go -- and eventually who gets their content on at all and that's exactly what H.R. 4752 will lead to. Kill it now.

—Diane Pobol, Kent, WA

Why is USA 31st in the world in internet speed? AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, Cable monopoly's. We need real competition to lower rates and improve service.

—Dale McCart, Irvine, CA

DON'T KILL INTERNET NEUTRALITY

—Dany Alejandro Arevalo Pinzon, ,

A vote for this bill is a strike against American democracy.

—Robert Arumdale, Fairbanks, AK

The Internet is becoming more vital to our economy and development as a nation every day. Please don't let Net Neutrality die.

—Joshua Christiansen, Portland, OR

Customer of these providers (comcast, att, verizon, etc) already pay for the bandwidth they are using to access content on the internet. There is no reason that the providers should also be able to charge content providers for the same bandwidth. It is important to many small-business and independent business owners that their traffic is treated fairly , and they would be unable to compete with large corporations that would be able to pay for preferential treatment.

—Rick Mogstad, Vancouver, WA

H.R. 4752 is bad for Georgia, and bad for Americans. Do not support H.R. 4752!

—Alexander Bryant, Atlanta, GA

As I trust you already know, an open Internet is crucial to having any semblance of a democracy. Please vote NO on this bill which I feel is a bald-faced attack on the American public's access to vital information and which would essentially put hand-cuffs on the FCC. Instead, please work for a bill which would reclassify broadband Internet service as a common carrier.

—Nancy Rice, Randolph Ctr., VT

Enough is enough how big do these companies want to be, Comcast nearly rules the world now.

—Frank J Cunningham Jr, Doylestown, PA

Do not take the neutrality of the Net, and place free information below greedy hands. It should remain free for all Peoples. Our Founding Fathers worked through blood and tears for years to give Freedom to the People. Do not destroy a country that have you your riches.

—James, Anderson, SC

How many times do we need to go through this? Stop bowing to your corporate overlords and KILL THIS BILL !!!!!!!!!

—Jeff Edeker, Los Angeles, CA

Continued colsolidation in the telecom space is bad for consumers! In addition to denying support for H.R. 4752, I urge you to use your influence to ensure that the SEC takes a hard look at these mergers, and that the FCC moves to guarantee net neutrality.

—Ben Madison, Plano, TX

Leave the internet alone.

—Mr. Regg Williams, Walkerton, IN

For the PEOPLE.. you all will be voted out.. If I have to vote for Mickey Mouse I will do so. You all are PATHETIC. Glad many more are waking up... Your free ride on easy street is about to end. We the people will demand reform and we will get it. Internet should be free and open... I PAY alot for it.

—Dave Jaeger, Frisco, TX

This is a serious issue for me and will determine where I place my support.

—Karen Asher, Wetmore, CO

This is not a joke. The Internet is serious business. Treating it as a public telecommunications utility is our only hope.

—Michael Weisdorf, PORTLAND, OR

Vote for this bill, and we'll vote you out!

—Chris Snyder, Northridge, CA

Quit trying to mess up net neutrality. You work for the PEOPLE not special interests or lobbyists

—Edwin Britt, mount washington, KY

It's a public utility, make the laws to protect it as such.

—Jennifer Wells, Cartersville, GA

Allowing the large providers to control content would make it almost impossible for startups and small business.

—Larraine Formica, Abingdon, MD

PLEASE support Net Neutrality and an internet available to all!

—Charlotte Trolinger, Boulder, MT

The Internet is the all-encompassing medium subsuming radio, television, and print. To permit it to be transformed into a purely commercial platform, spewing advertising and propaganda for the highest bidders, is a betrayal of our imperiled democracy and the surrender of a public trust. Internet service providers must be designated common carriers.

—Lance Williams, Toluca Lake, CA

It just doesn't seem right not to keep net neutrality.

—Helen Edwards, White Hall, IL

Egads people, don't be idiots...

—Michael Hasse, Lynnwood, WA

Stand up, Congress!

—Lori Wimberley, Garland, TX

Don't weaken the FCC and don't let the oligopoly lock down the rights and opportunities to America's digital highway.

—Victor Tang, Cupertino, CA

Go along to get along and go straight to Hell: Dig in your heels and fight for what's right and your reward is in Heaven: The choice is yours, and a lot of us depend on your integrity and conscientiousness.

—Jerit Adamson Fourman, Talent, OR

Net Neutrality is important to me, and is one of the primary positions I consider when thinking about candidates in elections.

—Matthew Runo, Henderson, NV

A government should listen to the people not big businesses.

—Aaron Zacharkiw, Ironwood, MI

Keep the net equally open to all for the sake of supporting free press and democracy!

—John Rockwell, Barnet, VT

Keep the net free

—Doug Orchard, Lakewood, WA

This is something that is very important to me, and to everyone I know. This is as important as the topic of abortion or gun rights to us. Please take into consideration the issues this bill could cause both your constituents, as well as people from all over. Thank you for your time.

—Lucy Hillman, Knoxville, TN

The Internet must remain open to all, no changes are reasonable, wanted, or needed.

—Donald Cox, Chelan, WA

Don't let corporate oligarchy inhibit communicative freedom.

—Benjamin van Loon, Chicago, IL

Mr. Lewis, I am sure that as a man of the "real" people and not the corporations you will vote against this noxious bill.

—Dennis Ivy, Atlanta, GA

Why just why

—Andres Pola, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Please, don't let the internet be ruined!

—Barry Evans, Dayton, TX

The FCC failed to make the obvious case that the internet is a form of telecommunication and should therefore be under its regulation. Please don't compound former commissioner Michael Powell's error by voting for H.R. 4752.

—David Bandfield, Oradell, NJ

I am unable to afford the poor service I already have on the coast of Oregon. All my utilities are costly. I am 97 and need to be able to communicate with others.

—Carol Povey, Nehalem, OR

This is important!

—Bethany Versoy, Cambridge, MA

YET AGAIN THE CORPORATIONS SAY DANCE AND MY GOVT SAYS "YES MASTER, PLEASE MAKE US DANCE LIKE PATHETIC LITTLE PUPPETS!" TIME TO CUT DOWN THE PUPPET STRINGS ONCE AND FOR ALL!!

—Paul Palla, Waynesboro, PA

As a citizen of this wonderful country who enjoys the freedoms and liberties provided by the Constitution, PLEASE don't let this happen to my internet. Equal access to the internet should be a freedom provided to all, just like we hold the freedom to speech, religion, etc. now. Don't let the corporate machine dictate what freedoms we have. Stand up for what is right, please. Respectfully, Alexandra Snyder

—Alexandra C Snyder, Atlanta, GA

The power of the Internet and what it means for small businesses like mine is exactly the same as the electrification of rural areas of the United States and bringing telephone service to rural areas of America. Without Net Neutrality my business and many thousands of others will be impoverished and unable to grow in a domestic or global economy. This bill would not allow businesses like mine to flourish and thrive in our economy. Please vote against against H.R. 4752 and any other bills that would make the Internet and Net Neutrality a toll road on the way to personal and small business oblivion in the world 21st Century.

—Patrick Williams, Sunnyvale, CA

This is the most scandalous, outrageous violation of democratic principles I have ever seen. Latta is a lapdog for lobbying interests. The fact that he even has the temerity to put this bill forward is an indication of how rotten Washington politics and the Republican party have become.

—Richard Unanue, Asheville, NC

The freedom of information is the freedom of our nation.

—Michael Chung, ,

Don't give support to the jackass who filed that bill to kill Net Neutrality. It's a stark indication of just who fills his pockets and coffers!

—Anthony Pasco, Spring Hill, FL

This is not just a matter between American internet users and their providers: the internet is a global forum of information, opinion and media. As such anything that threatens Net neutrality is a threat to freedom of information, speech and press all over the world. This is just as much about Canada, Mexico, Sweden. Turkey, Japan, Kenya, Uruguay, Jordan, Oman, etc. as it is about the USA.

—Benjamin de Groot, ,

Freedom WORLDWIDE depends on a free and unimpeded internet.

—Richard Schwager, Santa Barbara, CA

The internet has always been an equalizing factor for people regardless of socioeconomic class or race. Please keep it this way!

—Benjamin D Caine, Naperville, IL

I absolutely will vote against any representative which supports a restricted and walled internet.

—Michael Givan, Murray, KY

Don't do this.

—Carl Thuringer, Chicago, IL

Please save all American's from MONOPOLISTIC behavior on internet availability and pricing.

—Mr. Jerrold Whaley, Lone Tree, CO

PLEASE DEFEAT THIS BILL!!

—Mary F Lasley, Ashland, OR

This Congress keeps getting worse.

—Tish Yarborough, Wilmington, NC

This issue is really about freedom of speech! The government and all it's institutions and officials, are put in place to protect the rights of the average citizen, not sell them out to the highest bidder. ISPs need to be classified as common carriers because they have been given immense monopolies and there are no other options for people to turn to. In today's networked world, this is the reality. Not only is a vote for this bill a vote against the open internet, but it's a vote against freedom of speech and communication. Don't sell us out to those bastards, and I'll continue to pretend that I'm not already living in a corporate oligarchy that you're actively helping to make possible.

—Gregory Tczap, Littleton, CO

Seriously, please leave the internet alone and stop being so beholden to corporate interests especially in this bill, but in others as well.

—Joshua L Hupp, Philadelphia, PA

Shouldn't your loyalty be to the people who are paying your salary?

—Jon Genova, Wheat Ridge, CO

I am really getting tired of this. We had a decent government that was well intentioned; but now it has become a pawn of the landed gentry, the mogols and the "haves" who want to take it all and leave the rest of us in peonage. The rich have the money and the militias have the guns. We better get the willingness to recover our Nation by whatever means necessary or die trying. If we are returning to the Dark Ages, then we must be sure that nobody has light.

—David Black, Tucson, AZ

A law is not needed here to protect the companies.

—Lincoln W. Kliman, Smithtown, NY

DO NOT DESTROY NET NEUTRALITY

—Rachel H. Girshick, Hampton, CT

If we lose net neutrality, our children will ask, "how could you have let that happen?"

—Carol Furchner, Los Alamos, NM

The internet has become and IS a utility -- one that has become both beneficial to and ESSENTIAL to numerous aspects of our daily lives. Protecting net neutrality by reclassifying it under Title II of the Communication Act to ensure equal access -- ensuring all users reap the rewards of this taxpayer investment in modern communication technology and its future innovation equally -- is also essential, specifically including but not limited to that net neutrality is essential nothing less than the very protection our constitutionally guaranteed freedoms, beginning with our equal right of freedom of speech.

—LW Dodd, Mount Airy, GA

I already pay my internet provider for the faster internet package. I don't want to have to pay more to video providers like Netflix to keep from people like Comcast from slowing down the videos I pay watch. That's like paying twice! Bring Back Net Neutrality!!!

—Kay Garriott, New Market, AL

Please help defeat this attempt at corporate control of the internet. Thanks.

—Robert C Rand, Pepperell, MA

It's about the people, not about the corporations. Please remember that.

—Daniel Boudrot, Carrollton, TX

open internet free from censorship or international Corp fast lanes is the only hope for a free and thinking population

—Mr. Patrick Bellemare, San Francisco, CA

Kill Bill H.R. 4752!

—A W. Cynor, Anaheim, CA

I stand for net neutrality

—Jeff Beesley, NORTH FOND DU LAC, WI

4 realz yo

—Pavel Suheena, Overland Park, KS

ALL data from ANY source should be provided without prejudice or bias at ALL times. We need to ensure equal ease of access of data and services for the sake of competition, collaboration, innovation and freedom of speech and information. ISPs, or ANY other entity, should not be allowed to limit, throttle, censor, compromise, discriminate or interfere with, to ANY degree, our access to information, people and services. The internet is the single greatest technology of our time and is a cornerstone of freedom and opportunity and access should forever remain neutral. This issue is of utmost importance and I strongly urge you to side with the people and the greater good, instead of considering the manipulations of corporate entities. The internet, all that is in it and all that it stands for, belongs to ALL OF US and we have the right to all of it, equally.

—Kris Nilsson, Rocky Point, NC

Stop special interest groups from marginalizing US Citizens, and your constituents. They make enough money off the backs of us without mutual benefit. No more!

—Sheri Kam, Grosse Pointe, MI

You did not build the internet. Don't destroy it.

—Alexandre Emelianov, Campbell, CA

Keep the internet open to all

—Rick Henry, carlsbad, CA

The internet WAS our intellectual commons. The GOP is attempting to make it reflect the oligarchic country they are constructing, where freedom and equality are quaint laws that were found in that quaint document, the Constitution, but no longer apply.

—Jeffrey Panciera, Seattle, WA

Shame on Bob Latta's bill HR 4752 as it caters to the rich and greedy. That is no way to protect the citizens much less his constituents. KEEP THE INTERNET OPEN! Vote NO to this evil bill.

—Barbara Haener, Chesterfield, VA

A vote for Rep. Latta's poisonous bill is a vote against your constituents. I have yet to meet anyone in person or online who doesn't shudder at the thought of ISPs lording it over the average American while slavishly catering to the very rich.

—Dianne Faucher, New York, NY

With this bill IF it is pass will enrage most of the world. It's not only a violation to the right of privacy but also a violation to the peoples will. The people are supposed to run this country not you or any other government official. So please remember this when you vote on this bill.

—Shad freze, Thurmont, MD

My (and millions of others as well) career depends on a free and open Internet. Don't screw it up, please.

—Robert S Hutchings, New Preston Marble Dale, CT

It is your job to work for the 99% NOT the 1%. Please do it!

—Jill Timm, Wenatchee, WA

It's a shameful abuse of oligopolistic power that "last-mile" ISPs want to control priority of content over the internet. Please do not give in to their lobbying power and money at the expense of the constituents who voted you into office.

—Lloyd R. Prentice, Marshfield, MA

The federal govt is an evil monster...thankyou for waking us up. Death to DC and all its supporters!

—Lawrence Kitay, phoenix, AZ

This is very important to we the people. We could really use a victory at this juncture. My support for you is tied to this issue. Not that anyone counts votes anymore, just sayin'.

—Chris Luster, Floyd, VA

There cannot be an internet fast lane without internet slow lanes. We need broad band infrastructure that works for all.

—Jeffrey Tischler, Monterey, CA

The only reason this bill could have been created would be to effectively stop efforts to maintain net neutrality- bowing to money rather than the will of the majority of your constituents. Thanks for considering voting NO.

—Kelly Boerder, Denver, CO

Limits and restrictions on the Internet prevent the free flow of information and slows progress. This bill would allow internet providers to charge more for frequently visited sites. Students, professors, research companies, retail, all would be affected in a negative way. Internet providers are not in danger of going bankrupt, why would support a bill that would increase their profits with absolutely no benefit to the people you represent. Please do what is right and do not support this bill.

—Joshua James Johnson, Newalla, OK

Don't do this!

—Katie Schenkel, Indianapolis, IN

No fast and slow lanes. Keep the Internet as it is! Ignore the corporations and listen to the People.

—Mark A. Gardner, Las Vegas, NV

Protect all American's from the communications industry as it will result in poorer, slower, more expensive service!

—Jerry Whaley, Lone Tree, CO

Do not make the internet an oligarchic and monopolistic property like the rest of our economy; let there be one last frontier of freedom and equal-footing. Do not vote for this bill. Instead, consider collaborating with other representatives to more closely regulate the anti-competitive practices of combined telecom/media companies. The First Amendment is threatened when the channels of communication are controlled by a few wealthy companies, because free speech is only as free as the means to deliver that speech to a wide audience.

—Caleb Cullen, Houston, TX

The Internet can be an engine of innovation, but only if it remains an equal and fair marketplace, i.e. with rules protecting Net Neutrality.

—Alessandro Fabbri, Atlanta, GA

Restriction of freedom = oppression = revolt = unrest. Please don't strip me of a freedom I appreciate and love. Please don't give into the money. Do please reclassify broadband service providers back under title II of the communications act. Net neutrality is what protects the consumers from abusive isp's and communication services. I urge you and beg you as a fresh 18 year old adult that this matters.

—Jake Bye, Livermore, CA

Monopolies are bad for business. Don't let big money stifle creativity and innovation.

—Elizabeth Strawn, APO, NY

As an experimental filmmaker I need an open and neutral internet to distribute my films. Please don't limit our culture. - Diana McKenzie

—Diana Mckenzie, Berkeley, CA

I am signing this for myself and many HUNDREDS of VOTERS & CITIZENS that I know who agree but haven't seen this petition! Please count me X 100s!

—K Rudin, Westport, CA

Stop this insanity. SAME internet for everyone.

—James Custer, Bakersfield, CA for an open internet

—Jesús Adolfo Valencia Pérez, ,

Please defend Democracy. An open Internet is its last bastion.

—Jesse Bernstein, Philadelphia, PA

They are ruining the net. I don't know why I bother to vote anymore.

—Ivan Womboldt, Palm Springs, CA

This is really becoming embarrassing for the country as a whole. Where are the politicians who are supposed to act as the check for this kind of crime?

—Rod Azar, Antelope, CA

this will kill start ups and small business essential to economic recovery

—Carole Stern, Niwot, CO

We the people demand the internet be protected from the profiteers who have already driven our costs sky high!

—John Pizzulo, Kernersville, NC

Equality.

—John David Welsh, Bowie, MD

Do any of you actually represent the people? Because it really seems like you are helping the extreme few (broadband internet service providers) over millions of Americans.

—Wade, Saint Charles, IA

Net Neutrality is very important. The Internet should be considered a Public Utility, owned by the people.

—Mr. Steven Dean, TOPTON, NC

Tired of defending the internet every couple of months - can we get some legislation on the books to keep corporate greed of the information highway once and for all? Thank you for doing your job

—John W Lawler, Magalia, CA

Let's act like a free country as long as we can.

—Sarah Preston Tiers, Crestone, CO

Please did not sign this bill

—Jeffrey Usher, Brooklyn, NY

It is trivially obvious to anyone who's actually used the Internet that the Internet has become a public utility and ought to be regulated that way. A bill like this serves no purpose but to put money in the pockets of the already-too-small handful of corporations that stand to make money off the backs of the innocent Americans it would cripple. Please vote no.

—Matthew Sawyer, North Hills, CA

Please oppose Rep. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752 because it will extend the nation's enormous economic inequalities of opportunity to inequalities of speech and access to information. Our government should not be playing favorites for corporations and the wealthy, thereby disadvantaging the vast majority of the citizens.

—Dennis Welch, Cary, NC

A vote against Net Neutrality is a vote for a corporate dictatorship.

—Ronald Marshall, Sunnyvale, TX

Work for the people and not a few big corporations !

—Rushabh gandhi, SUNNYVALE, CA

Reclassifying broadband internet under Title II is the only way to ensure the internet remains a level playing field for everyone, and the engine of progress and innovation that it has been. Please protect the open internet for everyone.

—Yulia Gurevich, New Haven, CT

Please make good decisions.

—Josh Pucci, RICHMOND, VA

I fully agree with the statements made in this petition.

—Mr. David Baldinger, Greensburg, PA

This is a liberals vs. conservatives issue. Strangling the internet would hurt everyone.

—Mary peralta Railing, Bloomington, IN

The Internet belongs to the people, not corporations!

—Jan Harrison, Tucson, AZ

Will this be just one more thing where the wealthy get everything they want while the rest of us perhaps get to chew on the bones?

—Joan Hamilton, Omaha, NE

Please...

—Ellis Woodward, Baltimore, MD

We need an anarchic internet and we don't need politicians telling us with scare stories that what they are doing is for our good. It's not if you force us you will be repelled at the next election.

—Mr. Jeff Goodwin, colwinston,

FCC Chairman Wheeler is the fox guarding the hen house.

—Anne george, Puttsburgh, PA

Net neutrality = freedom of speech!

—Thomas Peterson, Windham, ME

A vote for this bill is yet another give-away to corporations and another act against the public interest.

—Frieda A. Stahl, Pasadena, CA

Creating a bill that prevents exactly what those that support Net Neutrality are pushing for is nothing more than an obvious attempt to block opposition. Such a bill should NEVER be supported!

—Nathan Compher, North East, MD

The lobbyists are out of control. The internet is a public utility and not for sale. Stop this madness.

—Ellen Barron, Santa Cruz, CA

We are sick of corporations taking EVERYTHING.

—Michael J Fowler, Glendale, AZ

—Dale Wood, Fairhope, AL

—Robert Hyer II, Lillian, AL

—Isaac Bull, Chesham,

—Michael May, San Pablo, CA

—Barbara Thorne, Idaho Falls, ID

—Jeremy Liaw, Fresh Meadows, NY

—Michelle Benes, Sylmar, CA

—Daniel Menefee, chestertown, MD

—Thomas Rippolon, putnam valley, NY

—Don Calderwood, Clifton Park, NY

—Brian Biggs, Lovettsville, VA

—Russell Stein, Cocoa, FL

—María Carmen Santana del Gil, .

—Robert J. Roth, shaker hts., OH

Net Neutrality is critical to our country's economic development. Without it, companies like Google and Facebook could never have grown.
—Ira Chayut, Los Gatos, CA

Its very important, critical, to keep the internet open. It is the responsibility of our elected officials to keep clear of bills that damage our democracy; and we elected you for that reason. Thank you.
—Susan Beers, Saint Paul, MN

We need Internet service providers to be regulated as common carriers, like telcom companies. We also need better faster cheaper Internet , as in Korea or France. These cable companies are virtual monopolies and impede our infrastructure development .
—Nancy Cadet, Brooklyn, NY

The Internet is the greatest resource that has evolved since the New England town meeting to create and preserve democracy as the founders of teachers of democracy conceived it and thought it through.
—Jean Atthowe, Stevensville, MT

A vote for this bill is your choice to lose a voter.
—Jordan Renz, Gilboa, NY

A vote for this bill will be remembered come election time. Guaranteed.
—Joshua Hulkan, Valley Head, AL

This bill shows that corporate collusion and corruption is alive and well and that Latta is bought and paid for thanks to the many donations from various telecom companies for just $10,000 a pop. Prostitution is alive and we'll in Ohio and apparently it doesn't even cost that much to buy a representative.
—Kevin Gracey, Satellite Beach, FL

someone keep there promise. I am disappointed again that President Obama appointed Mr Wheeler and he broke his campaign promise to keep the internet open
—James D McCarthy, Whitestone, NY

Along with millions of other Americans, I am appalled that the FCC wants to crush a free and open Internet. It's a cruel irony that the nation who developed the most innovative communication medium in world history, now wants to destroy it. Clearly, Tom Wheeler is not the only one beholden to the Big Telecoms, as Rep. Latta's bill H.R. 4752 seeks to codify a terrible, misguided decision. It's time that lawmakers and government officials - clearly, middle-aged and older white guys who are completely clueless about the Internet - listen to the vehement opposition to destroying Internet neutrality. Listen to the millions of citizens who have voiced their disapproval of this terrible plan. And listen to the tech companies and businesses, large and small, who know better than you do how the FCC's failure to protect Net Neutrality will ruin the Internet for everyone. Everyone, except Big Telecoms who will make out like bandits. America already has terribly over-priced and underperforming Internet service compared to Europe and Japan; don't make things exponentially worse. Reject Rep. Latta's foolish bill, and pressure the FCC to maintain Net Neutrality.
—Oleh Sydor, Glen Ellyn, IL

What part of "communication" doesn't Rep Latta understand? I guess it's only campaign contributions from corporations that matter to him.
—Walker Bennett, Sedona, AZ

Your actions will be noted in the upcoming elections and I will vote accordingly.
—Mel Solomon, Roseville, CA

Nobody wants this to happen, don't let it.

—Adam Shanahan, Amherst, MA

Why do some of our Congress members keep selling out to Big Corporations? Do the people who voted for them not count at all? We do have rights and they shouldn't be voted away from us by the dollars of the 1% rich. Please vote against this terrible bill. Thank you.

—Alice Green, Wheat Ridge, CO

Bring back the US Constitution and the Republic from the Plutocracy, NOW!

—David A Peterson, San Jose, CA

Freedom and free consciousness on the net!

—Christian Strijbos, Venlo,

The idiots at the FCC misclassified the Internet it is your job to fix it not endorse it!

—Clay G. Colson, Land O' Lakes, FL

Allowing internet service providers to create internet “fast lanes” and “slow lanes” would do nothing more than allow them to extort payments from companies like Netflix. It's time to admit that the internet is a public utility, not a private “service.”

—Chris Dragon, Crestline, CA

Internet democracy is only possible when Net Neutrality is enforced, otherwise the voices of the people are not equal. Net Neutrality is democracy. If you support Democracy, stop this bill.

—Kalli Kerr, Chicago, IL

The only people benefiting from yet another corporate takeover are the politicians, the corporations but I hope not the FCC. I pay $49/mo for SLOW internet. If you vacate net neutrality, my price for the minimum will be out of affordability. It's time for the FCC to do their job and protect the people - not the corporations.

—Marcy Donaldson, Denver, CO

If you look at the supporters of this bill, you find those that would benefit, that is, the cable and telecommunications industry. What our Congressional representatives will see if they look at those opposed are their constituents. You should vote wisely, because we will also. To be more clear vote no on H.R. 4752. The public is watching.

—Alan Truly, Golden Valley, AZ

If you think that plutocracy solves all problems, think again! Vote no on H.R. 4752.

—Axel Meier, Oakland, CA

That such a message needs to be sent to congress members is insulting to the American people; that such a bill is even being proposed is blatant corruption. And if you already stand with me on this issue, thank you! And if not, get it together. Please encourage your peers to do the same.

—Bryant Ferguson, Fairfax, VA

I know that AT&T is guilty of pick-pocket capitalism already. When I moved last year, there was a proprietary block on the phone lines at my new address that blocked out my preferred third party DSL vendor (which was not the case at my old address). AT&T forces me to pay more because of this.

—David M. Brown, Ypsilanti, MI

This bill would be a disaster if it became law. We need net neutrality. That was the reason that the internet have been such a source of innovation.

—Charlotte Lister, Chester, NH

Protecting net neutrality is protecting free speech. Remember that little item in the Constitution? Net neutrality also fosters free trade. Denying that access could have dire consequences to businesses worldwide.

—Karen Kirchdoerfer, Orefield, PA

Keep the little freedom we have FREE! Leave Internet alone. Please.... Ken Minor

—Ken D. Minor, North Port, FL

Bottom line for me is how a two-tiered plan for the Internet will put small businesses, the back bone of our economy, at a competitive disadvantage. The Internet should be re-classified as a common carrier.

—Amelia Kroeger, Bloomington, MN

Keep the Net neutral and accessible to all.

—Cara Beckenstein, Brooklyn, NY

The only reason to oppose net neutrality is to enable telecom corporations to make more money. I WANT INNOVATION, NOT HIGHER CORPORATE PROFITS. Thank you. --gw

—Gregg Williams, San Jose, CA

please keep the Internet n-e-u-t-r-a-l

—Marilyn Sutton Loos, Haverford, PA

another attempt to keep the rich rich & poor poor. goodbye middle class.

—Susan Duchossois, Solon, OH

NO, NO, NO. What does it take to get our legislators to hear that we WANT AN OPEN INTERNET? Vote NO on HR 4752. We're paying attention to what you do and will vote accordingly when election time comes.

—Carol Holaday, San Diego, CA

Net neutrality is vital to keeping small businesses like me in business.

—Rebecca H. Walding, Cerrillos, NM

This bill will prevent forever an open Internet. It is a direct attack on the American people.

—Paulianne Ann Balch-Rancourt, Port Orford, OR

Congress: Don't ruin Net Neutrality! Let the FCC reclassify broadband internet service as a common carrier under Title II of the Communications Act!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Victoria Dickinson, Portland, ME

Please don't vote for H.R. 4752 as it would destroy the Internet as we know it. Vote against this bill and protect the Internet.

—Gayle B. Rosenberry, Baltimore, MD

Stop the corporate giveaway of the internet!

—Casey Hawley, Phoenix, AZ

You might know that the fat cats want to comprise every possible asset belonging to the people in order to make a profit!

—Midge O'Brien, Savoy, IL

You have already taken most of our rights in the name of national security, leave this one for us and not big business

—Sarah I Noebels, New Florence, MO

Please listen to US for once and not the big money entities that are taking your souls away - Please protect net neutrality !!!

—Steve and Roberta Raps, Eaton, OH

Hands off the Internet. It is not broken, and doesn't need fixing, particularly when the fixing seems to be in the service of meeting the profit interests of rich stakeholders like AT&T, Verizon, and ComCast.

—Conway Redding, La Mesa, CA

There is no democratic reason for this bill. It serves the purposes of large businesses. It will hurt technical production and creativity and democratic communication among the people whom you serve.

—Brad Biggs, Minneapolis, MN

When will the US Congress start protecting the interests of People, not corporations?

—Mr. Christopher Kerth Boyer, Morgantown, WV

This would ruin my chances of achieving my goal of being a freelance artist and would be detrimental to so many careers. Please do not do this!

—Jacob Duncan, Holly Springs, NC

With telecoms already having an effective monopoly in many areas, by virtue of being the sole service provider of access to the Internet, they can already charge outrageous prices for their service, with general impunity. If this succeeds and net neutrality falls by the wayside, these same companies, who already have terrible track records regarding customer service and consumer rights, will gain the right to charge us again depending on what content we choose to view on the Internet. The only group who could possibly benefit from this throttling and sterilization of the Internet would be the telecom's shareholders. Meanwhile, the American people would be forced to suffer the destruction of the most important tool for the advancement of humanity that has ever been created, all while paying through the nose for the most basic services that can afford to remain.

—Jason Halter, Valdosta, GA

People over corporations!

—Rich Moser, Santa Barbara, CA

And it's a vote against the American people.

—Steve Reden, Fernandina Beach, FL

Please do the right thing.

—Kenneth D. Patterson, Alton, IL

We're such a corrupt nation that I think all hope is lost. I'm sure you'll do whatever the corporate monsters want.

—Brian Brian St. John, Spicewood, TX

I think this plan must be totally undemocratic and against the wishes of all who use the Internet on their computer for the following services and information: work, job hunting, posting resumes, dates of theatre and museum openings, maps and directions to places, art, music, writing, research, language translation, students, games, school, University, legal work, architecture, graphic arts, bids, purchasing, sales, student loans, reading, sharing, communicating, video, streaming TV, movies, You Tube, advertising at all levels, business, professional and entrepreneur, birthday cards, weather updates, emergency updates, genealogical, personal websites, company websites, blogging, planting tips, astrology, recipes, pet health, health tips, history of art, Google Earth, maps, driving hazards, music lessons, date of performances. Did I leave anything out and should we obliterate all of that except for corporate server websites?

—Suzanne Cerny, El Cerrito, CA

Like tens of thousands of other Americans, I make my living on the net. Open and equal access to the Internet is the basis for my business and foundation of innovation and commerce nationally. The telecommunications companies – AT&T, Comcast, Cox, Verizon – that are currently lobbying the FCC were granted local monopoly status to facilitate the growth of the network and to support commerce. Now they want to throw out the common carriage rules to create a national monopoly? That's bad for business. But this is not just an economic issue. It is a question of free speech. If Comcast can deny or delay information traveling over its network, what's to prevent it from throttling content it disagrees with? Does a network provider like AT&T or Verizon have the right to block content from a source it deems distasteful? What happens to the public debate if a few corporations control the transmission of information? The FCC was established by an act of Congress in 1934 to regulate the radio spectrum. It has since come to oversee television and telecommunications because these are public utilities that serve the common good. The Internet -- which has incorporated telephone transmission and most broadcast content -- has become the greatest public utility in the world. Why would the FCC vote to make a few companies a lot richer at the expense of the many? Why would the FCC deny its mandate to maintain the common carriage rules? And why would an agency devoted to the highest and best use of communications support cash-based censorship? Please don't let the lobbyists win on this one; vote No on HR 4752.

—Rob Cummings, Brooklyn, NY

Free information is the corner stone of a good democracy.

—Rafi Mankassarian, Ottawa,

Anything that the Corporate Republics want the Republican House will not pass a bill .

—Joe Conn, Spring Hill, FL

Corporate whore

—Stan Zaske, Bartonville, IL

The hypocrisy of using freedom as a carrot to have people walk themselves into submission is absolutely sickening. People who espouse the sort of twisted ideology that Rep. Latta is pushing here are the epitome of what is wrong with this country. Strong, practical (not ideological) regulation is the only thing that can prevent monopolies from implementing and enforcing draconian policies. Choosing to not buy internet from the only provider in town, despite their exorbitant prices and restrictive services, is not an option if you live in the modern world, where well over 50% of all vital correspondence, communication, and learning (government, employers, schools, universities, private services, etc) is conducted online. Businesses do not do things out of the kindness of their hearts. Their imperative is to make money. I do not hold that against them. What does astound me is that Rep. Latta can construe allowing these massively powerful companies to do and abuse whatever and whoever they want as some sort of freedom for the consumer. That's not freedom, that's tyranny dressed up in fancy clothes.

—Ryan Alber, Gainesville, FL

PLEASE stop this bill.

—Kathryn Willoughby, Dewitt, MI

Net neutrality is essential for small business growth and the rebalancing of our economy. It is very important that broadband be reclassified as it is the common carrier of our time.

—Patricia Vadasy, Seattle, WA

Too often you have voted for bills that restricted American freedoms and used some justification that it was "necessary". Any "necessary" legislation can be written without un-Constitutional clauses and would be if you did your job correctly.

—Gary L. Wade, Bellingham, WA

Please, the internet should be considered a public Title II utility. I'm counting on your support of a free and equal internet.

—John Hrabar, Pittsburgh, PA

The United States is poised on the brink of losing the initiative in the Information Age because of profiteers that have contrived a situation in which the originator of the Internet has some of the most expensive and slowest Internet in the developed world. H.R. 1472 is an outrage; the large ISPs should have their corporate charters revoked and their assets seized to build a high-speed network for America!

—Robert Chase, Denver, CO

Another attempt at controlling the people.

—Ernest Jones, Losantville, IN

Come on folks. PROTECT YOUR CITIZENS, not YOUR CORPORATE FUNDERS!!!!

—Peter Listino, Media, PA

Please Stop The Corporate Oligarchy. The US government is run by We The People. NOT 'We The Corporations' OR 'We With The Most Ca$h'. No more murdering Net Neutrality please!

—Derek Currie, Syracuse, NY

It makes far more sense to force Internet companies to separate their media producing divisions from their Internet providing services than this bill that is being proposed. Let me break it down via analogy: Let's say the highway services in a major city are privately owned. Then, let's say they get into the billboard business. Now, let's imagine a world where people who pay a monthly fee get to drive on the highway in a special lane at up to 85mph while those who don't are stuck in a lane that has bottlenecks, construction, detours, oh, and let's not forget, 5x more billboards! Someone needs to slap Rep. Latta in the face for demonstrating such stupidity on the taxpayer's dime.

—Marc DeLateur, Spokane, WA

Stop ruining the internet for greed!

—Collin I, Stillwater, MN

Tell those greedy %@#%&*#! at the telecom companies to keep their grasping paws off of OUR internet. Stand up for the people, not these corporate donors! (Corporations are not people BTW.)

—Jonathan P Decker, Baton Rouge, LA

And a vote against the citizens who pay your salary.

—Roland Pandolfi, Oberlin, OH

It's pretty obvious that Rep. Latta is bought and paid for. Do not give his toxic bill the time of day.

—Al Bonowitz, Huntington Beach, CA

Save the internet,,

—Mr. Eloy Perez, eules, TX

If you pass this I hope every single one of you loses every dime and ends up living in a box under a bridge. Together.

—Clarence Dustin Moore, Union, MS

The internet has become important in every American's life. Our students cannot compete in this world without it. No one should have to expect worse service with a tiered internet.

—Kristina Turechek, Otego, NY

Thank you. The internet is important to all of us.

—Carolyn Villanova, Pittsfield, MA

Do we have to spend so much time and energy in our lives to prevent being taken over by greedy corporations who ought to be ashamed if themselves!?!

—Karen Peterson, Chicago, IL

The internet should be classified a common carrier. It was invented using public funds so it should stay open to all people

—Joan Stephenson, Windsor, CO

corporatocracy

—Herb Campbell, Framingham, MA

So who do represent, the people or big business? Voting for this bill will prove to be your answer, won't it.... F Belt

—Fred Belt, Sunland, CA

As the co-founder of a tech startup in Chattanooga, TN, I am keenly aware that the loss of net neutrality will NOT be a boon for business-- it will help the large carriers while hampering everyone else. Let the internet remain a level playing field where innovation won't be stifled.

Thanks!

—Allen Reed Tomlinson, Chattanooga, TN

Sick of your shit ISP's.

—Jordan Lemon, Daytona Beach, FL

Save Net Neutrality

—Franky Vandenborre, ,

Please keep the internet open and protected from the onslaught of private interests.

—Michael Klein, Santa Monica, CA

remember the power of the political internet. don't mess with a good thing...

—Jaimey Perham, Fairfield, CT

Do the right thing

—Brian Sheehan, West Roxbury, MA

FAIR FOR ALL 100%, NOT JUST 1%.

—Michael Reed, Plainfield, IL

Rep. Latta is obviously under some ones control! Bet he looks for employment after the mid-terms!

—Ron Maynard, Melbourne, FL

I urge you not to support this dangerous bill.

—Abraham Masri, Calgary,

The Internet backbone is de facto a common carrier. Do not block the FCC from doing its work in regulating this service as it ought to.

—James McKenna, Loveland, OH

ZEIG HEIL

—Brian Laddy, Fort Mill, SC

Net Neutrality in the digital age is not dead, it's almost in a coma. It's up to all of us to do everything we can to revive it before it's too late. The first order of business is to keep the Internet neutral and open for everyone.

—Edwin Pagan, New York, NY

Communication is key in a democracy, and keeping the populace able to use the internet freely and fairly, and democratically is the most important tool to keep communication available to all. We are not Iran or China, thank God, so our citizens should not have big corporations or our government limiting our access or our internet speed.

—Joan Jones, Milan, MI

You represent the people, they voted for you. Do not vote for H.R. 4752

—Manda Heron, Livingston,, MT

This bill does not protect the internet, it leaves it to the large telecoms to monetize it as they wish. Stop pretending to serve the people's interest with this bill!

—Sam gambino, Carmel, NY

HR 4752 takes away our virtual free market place and our forum to express our opinions and gives it the large corporations, not the people as expressed to the Constitution. HR does not protect the peoples rights it takes them away.

—Robert Friedman, Orlando, FL

ISP's must be common carriers.

—Judith Salzman, Tucson, AZ

A vote for this bill also indicates a politician in the pocket of these companies.

—Melissa B Peters, Henrico, VA

If you don't do your job and stop the treason and corruption, you will be considered a part of and documented for future prosecution. The people are watching you.

—Rod Souza, Lafayette, OR

Keeo it free and neutral.

—Eric Nisonger, San Tan Valley, AZ

Vote for an internet the citizens need, not an internet for corporations' greed.

—Mr. D-B Hudson, Sparks, NV

Rep. Latta's bill is ill-advised and almost certainly generated by political partisanship and the moneyed interests of the network providers and their lobbying efforts.

—Donald W. Henderson PhD, Ithaca, NY

"The truth is that broadband internet service IS a utility, the "robust productivity and economic growth" seen in the "internet" is not coming from the carriers, who do the bare minimum to provide a quality of service that their customers are willing to stomach (and often times lower quality than that) and then aggressively over charge for the same services in markets where they have been granted local monopolies. The true growth is coming from the companies and services who build their products based on the assumption that any customer will be able to reach THEIR site/service just as quickly as a competitor's service, even if that competitor is Amazon. That fact, that a startup in a garage could serve up their product to customers just as quickly as a major established company is what has made the "internet" the Internet. The major ISPs that exist in this country have already begun proving that they desire to get rid of the very model that has led to the current state where the "Internet economy is thriving" as Representative Latta himself put it. With mergers consolidating the power of the major ISPs, they have started allowing service quality to degrade for certain sites/services demanding additional payments to improve them. They have also openly campaigned for the ability to charge more for a "faster lane" of service. These actions are already having a chilling impact on investment in tech startups and the formation of new companies, who knows if the next Amazon, Google, or even Facebook which generate thousands of jobs and millions in tax revenue has already been snuffed out, and that is even BEFORE a law like this has been passed. Additionally broadband internet is NOT a market with a number of competitors vying for the consumer's money, thus leading to competition which ultimately drives innovation forward and costs to consumers down. Rather in most markets across the entire country consumers have only one viable high-speed (real high speed, not the VERY low standard that ISPs use to describe a service as being 'high-speed') option. This allows companies like Cox, AT&T, and Comcast to charge dramatically more for significantly less in those markets that don't have real choices. The ISPs and their lobbyists don't want broadband to be considered a utility because then they can continue to pretend that their service isn't a dumb pipe but that they actually add some value on TOP of providing you access to the rest of the world. The problem is that they're wrong, an Internet Service Provider is just that, providing access to the Internet. If they are forced to ACTUALLY compete for customers their profit margins would go down, and they would be required to ACTUALLY invest in REAL innovation, and maybe find a way to provide real value. As it is if you compare the average quality of internet service we have in this country and the average amount that we pay for it to most places in Europe where there a number of competing companies, it becomes VERY clear that we're being sold horse manure and told its good for our health..." https://www.facebook.com/steph.enwashburn/posts/1010029664272_2663

—Stephen Washburn, Elk Grove, CA

The Internet needs to remain a bastion for free and open information for all.

—Kevin Vadeboncoeur, Cathedral City, CA

We must have Net Neutrality. Period.

—Mr. Spencer Beard, Seattle, WA

The FCC should recognize reality and classify ISPs as common carriers. This bill is the antithesis of what is good for consumers and national security.

—Joey Baker, San Francisco, CA

An open internet is essential in a free society. It should be treated like a public utilities.

—Ellen Baumgartner, Worthington, OH

As an older, disabled vet who worked in telecommunications for the military and government all my life, I feel I have a fairly accurate viewpoint of the internet ISPs. Recognizing that they are not and have never been non-profit organizations, I understand their legitimate efforts to maximize their profits. I also understand [especially since most were cable companies initially] that they had an expensive initial cost in building out their lines, etc. in their first few years. But that period is over and those early expenses no longer really exist. Yet their costs to their customers have only continued to grow! If they could afford to buy TV networks and horizontally integrate so that there are now only a relatively few big ISPs that have little if any competition why is our internet service so expensive and slow compared to other free world countries, big and small? I believe they don't want to be fairly regulated like the utilities they obviously are because they want to keep maximizing their profits at the expense of their customers, big and small, who have little real choice in providers. The ISPs have the power to influence many, please don't believe their arguments and instead support us and our children who need a fair priced internet just as we need water and electricity; our future depends on it!

—Joseph K. Williams, Quincy, MA

This delivery of the Internet to a select few is outrageous. The only thing that makes sense is to reclassify broadband under Title II.

—Karen Smith, Aripeka, FL

The Internet should be considered a common commodity, as it is essential to our everyday lives just as water and electricity. Allowing corporations to limit the Internet (against the very principles that the Internet was founded upon) is against the American way.

—, Concord, NH

Is this a democracy, or not!

—Mary A. Keeler, Seattle, WA

Please you can not even argue that the internet is not a communications tool. It was first created for the purpose of sharing and communicating data between universities, news flash it is still and more then ever still a communication tool take Comcast's check out of your pocket and stand up for the citizens as you promised to do when you were elected.

—Ben C Bourgeois, Latonia, KY

I'm Richard Berg, the author of "The Greater Universal System." I advocate for working "United States citizens," not judicial, political, pentagon, Washington, Wall Street, media, and corporate criminals!

—Richard Berg, Valley City, ND

The Internet is basically a giant library, not a bookstore -- why is Latta so afraid of free knowledge?

—William Anton Rohm, Portland, OR

The Peaceful Revolution is arising.

—Dr. Jacob Sabat, New York, NY

Has Washington completely lost its collective mind?

—Neil Balthaser, Redwood City, CA

This bill will help guarantee that the Internet will become what TV and radio have become, neither of which are open mediums.

—Jonathan, Chicago, IL

The American people will not stand for this capitulation to corporate interests at our expense.

—Rosalind Bresnahan Ph.D., San Bernardino, CA

I pay $50 a month for faster internet. I shouldn't have to pay more. Somebody should stand up for the common man.

—Paul Kruse III, Merritt Island, FL

SUPPORT NET NEUTRALITY!

—John Sodrel, New Albany, IN

To what depths will Congress go ?to satisfy their taste for the green stuff?

—Pat Chefalo, Rochester, NY

the internet was developed for all , NOT specifically for profit and the wealthy. It is a tool developed with tax dollars that the wealthy get too many breaks with and allowing them to further control its speed tp their benefit is unconsonable.....

—Peter Weil, Oakland, CA

Remember, those who are against net neutrality are not in favor of INCREASING someone's speed, they're in favor of DECREASING everyone else's speed. Demand that each packet be treated equally.

—Mike Barrett, Astoria, NY

Really ?? I can't believe that an elected official in the worlds premier democracy would take this kind of action. This puts him in the same "control" state that Iran exerts over Twitter, or Chinese control over Google. Are we really heading in that direction?

—Steven Dan Salisbury, Las Vegas, NV

Does no one on The Hill understand what the future ramifications are by letting this industry rule this modern mode of communication? One of the reasons we have a representational government is to have protection for The People, especially when it comes to freedom of speech and its exercise thereof. To allow less than a handful of companies to control how that speech and information is disseminated. Please protect our communication by blocking H.R. 4752. Thank you, Nick Chaput

—Nick Chaput, Menlo Park, CA

Do not let companies control and strangle the one thing that has brought our world endless knowledge, the ability to grow independently, and awareness of what is going on in the world. If we are smart and strong, it is because the freedom of the internet allowed us to see anything, learn anything, do anything. Less control gives us more freedom to grow into better people.

—Douglas Morgan, Bothell, WA

To vote for this bill would be a nail in the coffin of the little Democracy we have left. Please do everything in your power to "DEMAND" the re-classification enabling a true Net Neutrality.

—Helmut Zitzwitz, Ponte Vedra Beach, FL

The internet should remain a common carrier

—Marie Baermann, Ventura, CA

All hope for the future has always been from the little man, never the large companies. The logic of this is the large companies continue what they've done in order to keep the large sum of money they've gathered.

—David Charles Johnson Jr., Palm Coast, FL

If you want my vote next time you run, you will reject this awful bill.

—Patricia McRae Baley, Las Vegas, NV

Trust me. You don't want to know what the businesses will ask for next.

—Jacob Stai, Brule, WI

We've seen what a lack of regulation creates: a stifled and monopolistic marketplace. We NEED Net Neutrality and the reclassification of ISPs to keep the market fair.

—Drew Huscher, Northridge, CA

If you all are truly unable to see what this would do, not only on a small scale but overall, and in the long run. Then perhaps you should hand your titles to someone more qualified to protect the whole of the human race rather than their own pockets.

—Timothy K Owen, Sneads ferry, NC

To Him we shall all return.

—Sybille Dubois, ,

Internet access is more like electricity or phone lines. It is a vital part of most Americans' life. ISPs have too much power as it is. They should not be able to create fast speeds for those who can pay and throttle back those who can't.

—Knut Snortum, Portland, OR

The Internet began as an interchange between scholars about their research (BITNET, USENET, ARPANET and others, historically). It still can be a vehicle for an interchange of ideas, but only if it is allowed by BIG MONEY to remain so. Please, don't fall victim to propaganda and remain strong for the value of the Internet as a vehicle for the free and open interchange of ideas.

—Faulder Colby, Clinton, WA

Support people not profiteers..

—Lyman Michael, COLVILLE, WA

Please do not support this bill which limits free speech on the Internet only for those who can pay big bucks.

—Martin Iseri, Fair Oaks, CA

Do the right thing; be the people's voice on this issue. The people want net neutrality.

—Eileen Grant, Tempe, AZ

FIGURES IT WOULD BE ANOTHER REPUBLIKLAN PROMTING REPUBLIKLAN "FREEDOM". KEEP ELECTING CORPORATE WHORES AND THIS IS WHAT YOU GET!

—James Norgrove, Winter Park, FL

Democrats and moderate Republicans should know that the best way to elect a "conservative" or "radical" Republican (corporate-supported) candidate in 2016 is to pass this Bill! By doing so, you would be permitting private interests to control the one remaining open communications system in our Country. If passed, it would be one more nail in the coffin of our Republic.

—Tim O'Hanlon, Waimanalo, HI

Net neutrality is a vital constituent of America's success and the American way of life. Please protect net neutrality.

—Lloyd Rezler, Carmel, CA

as an educator of 30 years , I am hopeful that you will not change the internet for our students- net neutrality is a must!

—Helen Goldman, Claremont, CA

Well, Bob's got a Latta nerve, doesn't he?!

—Jim LaRegina, Westfield, NJ

Go ahead and pretend that the FCC's proposed rules support net neutrality. We, the people, long ago stopped expecting our Congress to represent our best interests in the face of all those corporate campaign contributions.

—Susan Hathaway, Pico Rivera, CA

I am completely against this bill. Please stop it now!

—Shannon Noble, South Pasadena, CA

A vote for H.R. 4752 is one more giveaway to support oligarchy and destroy democracy.

—Wendy Fast, Dansville, NY

Why do you keep trying to fuck our internet?

—Iliescu Cosmin-Adrian, ,

Holy crap. Not only do you people not listen to your constituents; you actually do the exact opposite of the majority position? You people deserve to be voted out of office. Your high dollar friends cannot seriously think they can perpetrate this hijacking of democracy indefinitely. Cease and desist already and get back to representing your People.

—Kae Bender, Lancaster, CA

Lobbying undermines our democracy, the democracy we fight wars to push on other countries. Listen to the pw

—Crystal Roe Hawkins, Portland, TN

Our Government's efforts in this regard have been more than disappointing so far. There is no legitimate reason for the Internet to not be open as it has been. Greed has taken over in our once great Country - it needs to stop.

—Mr. Paul Black, Evergreen, CO

The internet is more than just a money-making device for corporations. It is the greatest source of free information for our society. At the present time, I am teaching myself how to become a computer programmer using entirely videos and other tutorials found online. For other students, and for our future generations, I ask you to secure Net Neutrality. Otherwise, the internet will become a commodity only for those who can afford it. And that will not bode well for the future of this country.

—Ben Goldman, Louisville, KY

Let's not kid ourselves about this alleged "free market" we have in this country when regional monopolies exist everywhere. This bill is the exact opposite of what we need to keep this country competitive with other countries.

—Mr. Brian Hilmers, San Diego, CA

You will engender HATRED if you allow the corporate take-over of the internet.

—William James Miller, Paradise, TX

If civil public discourse is hindered by corporate/government control of the Internet, then the only alternative will be rebellion, and no one seriously wants that.

—Richard Blumberg, Cincinnati, OH

Please google and read "Fourteen Defining Characteristics of Fascism" by Lawrence Britt. 2 pages. We're 14 of 14.

—Steve V Eklund, Sallinas, CA

Don't blame me Bob Latta if this bill ends up destroying your career and reputation as a Republican. i'm not responsible for what you do.

—Christopher Bosak, Seaside, CA

Please oppose this dangerous and misinformed bill.

—Chad Brown, Renton, WA

I am a software engineer. If this bill passes and you voted for it, you are participating in the destruction of the open internet. That would make my and that of those in my industry ability to create new services and companies and thus jobs far more restricted. You would be fucking over so many existing and potential small businesses. Don't vote for it.

—Brandon Schlueter, Jackson Heights, NY

It's not only a vote against open internet, it is a vote against the wishes, and rights, of millions of people. Please show the people that you are truly a government for the people, by the people. Please support net Neutrality/Open Internet. Vote NO against bill H.R. 4752.

—Eirene Zolotas, ,

Stop the Plutocrats from taking the last vestige of free speech.

—Sherrylee Felger, Port Orford, OR

Many in your district like myself are building businesses using the Internet. Rep. Latta's bill will harm these crucial efforts.

—Mildred Lewis, Inglewood, CA

The Re. Bob Latta bill is a bill to kill Net Neutrality. Please stay away from this bill. Tom Madden your constituent.

—Thomas Madden, Springfield, VA

This anti net neutrality seems to me unethical and maybe illegal , as the airwaves do belong to the people, not corporations.

—Ann Stockdale, Gig Harbor, WA

The FCC was created to make these decisions. Please don't pass bills restricting the FCC from doing its job.

—Richard Kiskis, Salinas, CA

Time to actually get something done please. Do the right thing.

—Margaret Redus, Denver, CO

The preservation of net neutrality is imperative. Most Americans support net neutrality. It is safe to assume that those that don't support net neutrality are not sure what it is or the issue have been misrepresented. As a representative of Texas, it is incumbent on you to respond to the concerns of the citizens you represent.

—Thomas Costello, Pearland, TX

Life was so much simpler and enjoyable when honesty ruled before our greed controlled our government and economy. Lets make the transition back to that lifestyle.

—Michael Gallardo, Wellington, FL

Rep. Latta has taken $51,000 of donations from the telecom industry. He should recuse himself from proposing things related to net neutrality on grounds of conflict of interest.

—Abigail Welborn, Redmond, WA

If we lose Net Neutrality we've lost a key support for democracy! NO on HR 4752!

—Theodora B. Crawford, Berkeley, CA

Manipulating and suppressing communication of information will eventually cause an explosion.

—John Joseph Fortier, Redondo Beach, CA

REAL net neutrality please

—Mathijs Moonen, ,

I'm blind, and the internet has changed my life! Please don't give me an internet I can't use, and that's what h.r.4752 would do. If I lose the internet, I'll be back to sitting in my apartment, doing nothing, but reading talking books, and being depressed, like I was before the internet and my talking computer changed my life. I have learned more about things in the last 16 years, than I have read and learned in the previous 34 years before that. Harry Brown

—Harry Brown, Port Huron, MI

Long live net neutrality!!!!!!

—Carlos R Rodriguez, Vero Beach, FL

As a web developer I can see clearly how hard it will be for small new companies to compete larger players. It's setting up a system that favors the established companies that can pay for special privileges and negotiate large contracts with providers. It seems designed to prevent innovation and hurt small businesses.

—Ben Brophy, Cambridge, MA

Please make the internet a common carrier. Protect it from those who would seek to break it apart into tiers.

—Katherine Richert, San Francisco, CA

Please stop. Free speech and competition is required.

—Zane Whitney, Roxbury Crossing, MA

You took an oath to represent the American people, not the corporations. These corporations are just common carriers and deserve no privilege over the people. We the people have had enough. Elections are coming.

—Janet Gaudiello, Plantation, FL

Is this what America fought for in Endless Wars? The rights to be ignored when it comes to a "Free Press?" Why do my representatives keep fighting for oligarchs to control the media when they want "The People" to supposedly fight for our freedoms the world over?

—Dan Freeman, Clinton, WA

You claim yourself to be an american, senator? What rights do you have to that, when what you propose and support will set the country back even further when compared to every single other developed country in the world? How dare you be so hypocritical as to support something that will bring this country down further and support your personal interests after being selected by this nation's people to make IT better?

—Egor A. Palchyk, Greensboro, NC

As usual a bill to protect big corporations against the small business and the people.

—Anne Wolf, Santa Rosa, CA

The vested interests are squirming under the spotlight of public fury; this proposal, as well as the current one offered by the FCC head, are unacceptable. Only the real thing will do.

—Susan Williams, Lakewood, CO

Reclassify broadband providers as common carriers. Period.

—Alec James, North Hollywood, CA

keep the internet free and equal for ALL!

—ben Freedman, nashua, NH

Keep the playing field level. Don't support this bill!

—Vincent M. Nicoletti, Littleton, CO

When our job market is still recovery(unlike what you all on capital hill believe it is fixed), this is the worse thing that will stop it right in its tracks. Right now, many people are finally finding there employment through using the internet as their media and mode to get their products out there and bring innovation and businesses back to the US. If you pass this bill and destroy net neutrality in the USA, kiss the new way the job market is shifting for the US goodbye. Don't let what happened to our manufacturing sector happen to the rest of the jobs, or else you won't have any tax payers left with how things are doing now.

—Mandy Milliron, Iowa, LA

This is just as absurd and anti-democratic as Citizens United and the like!

—Franz Kitzberger, New Ulm, MN

Passage of this bill would effectively amount to a license for the current large ISPs to raking in unwarranted profits)at the expense of consumers (charges to content providers will be reflected back to consumers!) and to the detriment of citizen'sfreedom of speech and the access to information that a democracy requires.

—Jeff Gerckens, Hilliard, OH

I work from home for living, remotely connecting to my clients through the internet. As it stands now I have a hard enough time maintaining a solid and consistent connection. Please do not make it worse.

—Jesse Usow, Tucson, AZ

THEY HAVE NO RIGHT TO JUST MAKE MORE MONEY OFF OF ALL OF US THAN THEY ALREADY DO ...

—John E. Robie Sr., ORLANDO, FL

Now is your chance to show that you really have the best interests of your constituents in your heart and mind!

—Marilyn B. Sansoni, Vancouver, WA

Do the right thing!!!!

—Rob Johnson, El Cajon, CA

If you honestly, without a coward's duplicity, believe you deserve your promotion/election, you must believe in democracy and the true 21st Century "Commons." Vote this Rule down!

—John S. Sonin, Juneau, AK

Save the internet.

—Jane Birkenstock, Campbell, CA

please reject h.r. 4752 and stop the assault on the internet .

—Joseph Capshaw, burbank, CA

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality

—Alex Peet, ,

The internet belongs to everyone. It needs to be designated as, and treated as, a public utility, with equal access for everyone.

—Susan Blain, Gardner, MA

As a digital citizen since 1994, I have come to value the freedom of an open internet where all content has the same chance to be seen because all of it can be downloaded at the same speed. The telecoms could support this with modems, but they over-sold themselves on broadband, relying on outdated ratios to determine how much of their own bandwidth to buy. Please don't make the internet a world of haves and have nots simply to save some of the profits of our near monopolistic telcos.

—Todd Gage, San Francisco, CA

Support of this bill is not in the interest of the public.

—Cody Brasier, Farrell, PA

Please take any action necessary to protect net neutrality.

—Allan Orashan, Kent, OH

Since the advent of the internet, the fact that it has been open and free for all as lead to some great innovations. It would be a shame to see this Bill pass that in one swell swoop destroy the progress and creativity that an open internet as provided to so many Americans. Don't vote for the money on the internet vote for the people that you are supposed to represent, us the American people. We don't need any more corporate take over we need net neutrality to remain open and free for all. We don't want toll ways on our broadband, we want it to remain un-owned, opened to all to express their creativity. Please don't vote for this bill.

—Nahchon Guyton, Minneapolis, MN

I also find it troubling that Tom Wheeler is heading up the FCC oversight. How can someone who headed the lobbying effort by the largest ISPs be trusted to now oversee regulation?...Well he cant. We wouldn't have this lousy bill being considered if it wasn't in part to his efforts. I would ask you to find a way for Tom Wheeler to be removed or to recuse himself.

—Andy V, Kirkland, WA

The ECONOMIC Health of the USA is at stake here. We have ALREADY fallen FAR BEHIND many lesser nations of the WORLD because the DELIVERY of fast and reasonably priced BROADBAND has NOT been DELIVERED, as promised. Stop the self-serving political maneuvers and put the NATION's interests before your personal ambitions!!

—Martha Estes, Hempstead, TX

Corporate interest and greed, bought and paid for politicians are what we are up against but we have the power to stop this, rally everyone you know to stop this garbage and we will prevail.

—Rodney Whisenhunt, Roseburg, OR

Please allow the internet to be classified as a Title II Common Carrier. It is too important to be left to the whims and greed of corporations.

—Paul Bodine, Vancouver,

Bill H.R. 4752 is not only bad for protecting a free and open Internet, but it prevents the FCC from acting as a regulatory body which is its entire purpose. Please do not support what is obviously a bill written and designed by corporations looking out only for their own bottom line and not for the interests of the American people.

—Keenan McCardle, Peoria, AZ

We demand a free and open internet!

—William Lafleur, Baton Rouge, LA

Remember this is an election year...I am a registered voter...

—Sheila Dillon, Willmar, MN

Net Neutrality is fair. Please don't kill it. It's very important.

—Karen Keating-Secular, Rego Park, NY

As a web developer, I rely on the open internet in my day to day work. Most websites rely on external third party assets for fonts, functionality, social sharing, etc. - so even if a website is willing to pay for the fast lane, they will suffer. Everybody loses without net neutrality.

—Andrea Luke, Beaverton, OR

This bill is a really, really bad idea. Instead, please fight for a bill that forces the FCC to reclassify broadband under Title II!

—Sara "testing" Longsmith, Brattleboro, VT

Bob Latta, the latest traitor to the American people. No surprise here, he represents whoever will fund his campaign. No principals, doesn't matter if what he supports is right or wrong, as long as the money is rolling in. He is certainly not a representative for the American people as the only ones arguing against real net neutrality and common carrier status are the ISPs that line your pockets. After all, you took $51,000 dollars from ISP related interests in the two year period ending December 31st, 2013 (and likely much more).

—Chris Talbert, Bradford, MA

Not only should this bill be defeated, the FCC should classify internet providers as common carriers.

—Jordan Lewis, Portland, OR

ISP's ARE a public utility. The public utilities govern phone, cable and satellite providers. They are also the ISP's today, therefore they are also public utility services. Stop their abuse of their customers. Vote no on H.R. 4752

—Tim Longwell, Atoka, OK

STOP TRYING TO DO THIS TO THE NETWORK!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Christopher Santen, Denver, CO

We need to maintain fair and equal access to the internet for ALL, no matter what their level of income or education is. This is important as we continue to move more and more services for information and applications online. (government and otherwise)

—Teena Morgalis, Seattle, WA

Please don't vote this bill in!

—Etay Hamenahem, Bethany, CT

Don't let the big media conglomerates buy you out. A media system controlled by elites can just as easily be turned against politicians as it can be used for the daily misleading of the public. You have skin in this fight

—Justin Karter, Angola, NY

Please do not support this bill. Show the American people that you are in office for the betterment of the people and not corporations.

—Nicholas Marinelli, East Stroudsburg, PA

Net Neutrality is freedom of speech. In this day and age, the internet is the same as the press of the times of the framing of the constitution.....So Net neutrality is freedom of press and freedom of press!!!

—Abigail Howes, Berkley, MA

Look at the definition of Common Carrier and I believe you will find the definition of an ISP.

—Hugh Cushing, New York, NY

Please protect Net Neutrality. ISP are giving access to the internet and should be treated like telephone companies. They provide "access" and should not take control of it. Please I urge you not to support this bill as it can negatively affect businesses and new innovations.

—Branden Tolbert, Lexington, NC

Let's don't fix something that is not Broken!

—Bob Walters, Mesquite, NV

Please if you care about your constituency you will vote against this bill!

—Vikram Yalamanchili, Houston, TX

The majority of Americans want (and need) for the Internet to become a public utility. Access to a free and open web is akin to providing public libraries: it's a necessary step to ensuring that every American citizen has open, uncensored access to information. Allowing any private entity to control what has become the most prolific form of communication and collaboration in the world's history would be a crime akin to book burning. OPPOSE H.R. 4752

—Joseph Perrone, Portland, OR

Keep your hands off of OUR Internet

—Randy Swartzbaugh, Vancouver, WA

Please do everything you can to prevent what will be one of the biggest threats to our democracy.

—Sean Dorsey, E Taunton, MA

Please continue to do all you can to protect net neutrality: it's crucial to our democracy.

—Christine Mack Gordon, Minneapolis, MN

"So, the peasants want their Internet redefined as a utility? I guess that means we should do the EXACT OPPOSITE of what they want, because we own the country, not them." It only ever gets worse. It never gets any better.

—Will Shroyer, city, IL

WE WILL NOT QUIT! Net neutrality!

—Nathan stehle, Madison, WI

These proposed changes may mean the end of the internet and all the good it has brought.

—De'Anna Williams, seguin, TX

The guy who introduced this bill should be kicked out of Congress and barred from politics for life.

—Ryan Rardin, Charleston, IL

Please: vote No on H.R. 4752. Thank you.

—Michael Brodie, North Hollywood, CA

Fascists are afraid of the internet. Thats why they want to crush it. A vote for H.R. 4752 is a vote for Fascism. It sure as hell isn't a vote for Democracy or the will of the people.

—Tim Blaes, Hendersonville, NC

If you vote to allow this abomination against We The Peoples access to our last bastion of our un-propagandized media, We Will Remember in every election to come until you are gone!!!!

—David Rigney, Spanaway, WA

Guess all of us have to earn a living, even if it means selling out your congressional office to the highest bidder.

—j Dinkmeyer, Grand Lake, CO

This is an important issue for me.

—Richard Bledsoe, San Diego, CA

Woe to the Congressman who suppirts this bill.

—Gary R Cook, RIO NIDO, CA

Instead pass a bill that ensures net neutrality. It is all about freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom to have a small business... It is essential.

—Tamara Pettinger, Brookings, OR

The internet is functionally a public utility, and it must be strictly governed by the FCC by the principle of net neutrality through a reclassification as "common carrier." No access-provider company has the right to enclose portions of the internet, and give preferential treatment based either on willingness to pay or ideological alignment with the access provider. This principle is far too important to be subject to negotiated agreements by Verizon, Google, or anyone else. The internet is a public commons, and cannot be carved up into fiefdoms governed by access providers for their own financial or ideological goals. FCC must use its full statutory authority, including the accurate reclassification of internet service providers as telecommunications providers, to ensure that net neutrality is enshrined formally in law. The existence of net neutrality in practice is already beginning to erode under the commercial machinations of ISP's, and will collapse entirely soon without FCC action. Please reject any bill that would erode the FCC's ability to make rational internet-governance policy.

—Jim Steitz, Gatlinburg, TN

Clearly Latta only represents the money that got him elected, not the voters!

—John A. Wiles III, Olive Branch, MS

We want net neutrality!!!!

—Failea Bocanegra, Whittier, CA

In addition to everything else you will hear about net neutrality, please remember that the absence of net neutrality is anti-competitive.

—Theodore "Ted" Mayhew, Clovis, CA

I willl be watching your vote

—Nike Stevens Stevens, Bozeman, MT

This is madness! Stop destroying what's left of our democracy.

—Peter Crosby, foster city, CA

A free internet promotes entrepreneurship and the free market! Please leave it alone!

—Robert Miller, Tulsa, OK

Allowing a faster internet to only those willing to pay extra for that faster service, will essentially rig the stock market in favor of those willing to pay extra. Milliseconds difference in stock trades can amount to billions of dollars difference in gains. Or billions in losses to those that can't afford to pay extra for faster internet service.

—Eugene Ekaitis, monongahela, PA

Net Neutrality is an essential piece of innovation. Don't let greed, and that is all that this is, put America even farther behind.

—Daniel Aldrich, Sacramento, CA

My ancestors in the Colonies fought the British to have freedom of speech. Now we must fight the corporate big money to keep that freedom.

—Robert D Finley, Payson, AZ

We need to protect Net Neutrality. Without real Net Neutrality, innovation & education will be stifled. Equal access to the Internet is essential for new technologies to continue to be developed and prosper. Destroying Net Neutrality will harm the future of our economy, so it must be preserved.

—Jessica Taylor, Pawhuska, OK

the rich and the GREEDY Obama MUST GO!!!!

—Andy, Binghamton, NY

Because this is ridiculous, it's reclassification or nothing!

—Gerald Dudley, Austin, TX

Giving away the Farm is what is happening with the U.S. Congress. It has to stop or only the corporations will own what should belong to us...the citizen.

—Mr. Paul T. Jackson, Enumclaw, WA

This bill is unfair to all the people who use the internet. It would make it impossible for the average person to use the internet due to the extra charges the big companies want. SAY NO TO THIS BILL!!!

—Elizabeth Jones, Roanoke, VA

PLEASE help restore my personal faith in the legislature. Don't be bought. The only reason to vote for this bill is to increase already exorbitant profits of Comcast, Verizon, AT&T and the like. Aren't the rich, rich enough? Can't the common fellow get equal access to the internet? Please help WE THE PEOPLE. We're counting on you to really look out for us.

—Bradley LaChance, Euless, TX

This is UNCONSTITUTIONAL! FREE THE NET!

—Kendra Zenteno, Memphis, TN

It's time to make internet providers common carriers.

—Michael Letendre, Portsmouth, NH

How our representatives vote on this issue will be remembered in November. The broadband providers on the Internet should be reclassified as common carriers in order to prevent the Internet from becoming the profit generator of a few select companies, leaving the rest of us to get what's left over and pay more for it. Net Neutrality has worked just fine. Companies in other countries in Europe are enhancing their Internet infrastructure while American companies sit back and wait for the Internet to turn into an even greater revenue generator. The Internet should be there for all of us, with equal access for all. In the face of the growing groundswell in support of Net Neutrality, Rep. Latta's bill that would prevent the FCC from reclassifying broadband service as a common carrier is a slap in the face of the American public. It also is proof enough that he is in the paid service of major communications corporations instead of serving the best interests of his constituents. Voters won't forget representatives who fail to represent the greater common good. We'll make sure they don't forget in Kansas' 1st Congressional District. We will raise hell over this issue.

—Mike Dorsey, Emporia, KS

Education, research, not another way to control and put propaganda out.

—Lisa LeBlanc, Austin, TX

The FCC must reclassify broadband internet as a common carrier (under Title II of the Communications Act), because it is a public utility, plain and simple. Our democracy and economy depend on net neutrality.

—Renee Deljon, Scottsdale, AZ

I DEMAND A FREE AND OPEN INTERNET!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Eliana Christianson, San Diego, CA

You would be limiting your own campaigns by doing this. If an internet provider disagreed with you, your message would never get through. Save Net Neutrality, because the Internet is the last bastion of Free Speech in America.

—Jennifer Cleckley, Meridian, MS

The internet, along with being the best, easiest way for the NSA to watch us, is also an INDISPENSABLE UTILITY to about 70 % of United States citizens. It deserves to be neutral, AND preferably open source code, for safety sake.

—Gary Overby, Madison, WI

Beyond neutrality, the Internet clearly serves as a common carrier of information, necessary for the survival of every American today, and rightfully not interfered with by any larger power, government or corporate. If it quacks like a duck....

—Elizabeth Schrader, Murfreesboro, TN

Please do not allow a corporate takeover of the internet, which belongs to us, the people.

—Dane Ferrell, Olympia, WA

Don't Sell Out The Internet And Free Speech Like Tom Wheeler Did.

—Anthony Morton, Northfield, NJ

My ancestors fought the British to have freedom from control of the Crown. Now we must fight corporate greed to keep the same freedoms.

—Robert D Finley, Payson, AZ

The corporations get on the fast lane but the consumer will pay corporations for corporation fast lane.

—Erik Jirgens, Deming, NM

If we don't take action now, we'll settle for nothing later. If we settle for nothing now, we'll settle for nothing later.

—David W. Newton Jr., Langhorne, PA

Is is complete infringement upon our rights, to an open market place.

—Zac Dudek, Grabill, IN

Support and portect the people (the human ones, not the corporate ones)!

—Karen Hennigan, West Grove, PA

A vote for this bill will be one more indication that your body, perhaps once august and somewhat trustworthy, has completely caved and become simply a club for salary for life, and single payer health care. Something most of us can never count on! Fulfill your commitment and protect OUR interests - not that of the corporate elite!

—Mr. Thomas Lawrence Toscano, Brooklyn, NY

This is key in the fight to not allow big business to completely dominate every facet of human life.

—Pedro Cibavicius, union city, CA

As a small businessman, I rely on a neutral Net to bring clients to my site and to do research on obscure topics of little interest to nonspecialists.

—Ray Williamson, New Port Richey, FL

Please ignore this BAD BAD legislation!!

—Anthony G Franklin, BEDFORD, OH

Thank you for your consideration.

—Dr. Phyllis I. Behrens, Wichita Falls, TX

No monopolies. It's killing our economies and freedoms

—Jill Peacock, Hammond, IN

No monopolies. It's killing our economies and freedoms

—Jill Peacock, Hammond, IN

No Democracy without a free, open Internet.

—Arlene Merryman, Berkeley, CA

These days, the internet has become a vital communication tool for people from every walk of life, it is used in education, businesses, social networking, development and the news, it is used for research sharing (as I did for the UN in desertification between 27 countries) It is used to cross borders in social cultural sharing. I can understand that Comcast, ATT&T and Verizon want to reap profits on this piece of this pie, but enough is enough. They already make enough profits, they do not need more and take away privileges from those who are limited with their resources. It is needed to find jobs, to fill out forms, to file...taxes, which is important for you because that is how you get paid. This proposal to divide the have's from the have not's is absurd and I am surprised that it is even up for vote. Find out who in congress is getting paid for this and put pressure on them to stand up for the American people once and for all.

—Susan Brannon, Sherwood, OR

Don't take the freedom of the disabled to use the Internet to conduct basic transactions. SAVE THE INTERNET!

—Elvie Jester, Silver Spring, MD

GROW A PAIR!

—T Ceravolo, roswell, GA

The corporate idea of freedom is control, and they do not like freedom for the people if costs them any money.

—Sef Magrath, Spokane, WA

The internet is part of free speech. Keep it protected, please.

—A Puck Leonidas, Conover, NC

An open fair access internet is important for the democratic process.

—Kelly McConnell, Portland, OR

Why is this such a hard concept? We the People deserve a free press and easy access to information. Corporations come second. They don't vote. You don't put them in jail or execute them. Healthy competition is fostered by NOT having a two-tiered system of information highways.

—Steve Cooperman, Woodland Hills, CA

Quit trying to make it more expensive for the individual to go where they want without limiting our freedoms as U.S. citizens! We need more Freedom of the internet not less!

—Tom F., Kentfield, CA

The Internet of today is like the printing press in the Renaissance--it allows freedom of expression and dissemination of facts and opinions in a way hardly even conceived of before. It has the importance of a public utility and needs to have the standing of one. Please make it so!

—Susan E Kronenfeld, Somerville, MA

Free Speech and Monopoly control of the Internet cannot work. Please stand up and vote against this bill.

—Lois Wilson, NOVATO, CA

We are at a crossroads. We can either fight for the freedom of this new medium that has allowed so many to revolutionize business and art. Or let it be strangled by the wishes of a stagnant industry that only sees short term profits at the expense of any competition.

—Patrick Cole, Lansing, MI

If Comcast and Verizon get their way, it will put an end to free enterprise.

—Richard Evans, SEATTLE, WA

The internet is one of the only places where free democratic ideas can be discussed. Please do not let democracy disappear.

—Mireya Coronado, SAN JOSE, CA

I not only urge you not to support this bill -- I demand you do not support it.

—P Roberts, Knoxville, TN

The internet is a common carrier. It has always been so. Then Michael Powell was offered a multi-million dollar bribe/job with the cable billionaires' boys club and he changed the definition. Today Tom Wheeler is being offered an identical multi-million dollar job/bribe.

—Mike Michael Kelly, Huntington Beach, CA

Reclassify internet access as a common commodity utility under Title 2!

—Gerald Dudley, Austin, TX

A vote for this bill is a vote against democracy. Democracy is not possible without an informed electorate.

—Susan Cole, Lafayette, LA

I'm a registered voter, and I say don't do this or suffer the consequences.

—Dean Morris, Largo, FL

As a private citizen, I am fed up with our congress molycoddling big industry and business interests to the detriment of citizens, no doubt stimulated by corporate donations. This bill is a prime example of sneaky tactics to get their way with our internet. So do you stand for the people who elected you, or for corporate money and power?

—David Shelton, Casar, NC

Pls. leave the internet alone!

—Cindy Koch, Long Beach, CA

They shouldn't try taking our real last freedom away

—Vincent Challe, West Bend, WI

The internet should be open to all Americans without having to pay tier per access fees.

—Michelle Greenway, Hazelwood, MO

Today's Internet is the great grandchild of the computers and the television and radio and telephone and telegraph and every means humanity has devised to COMMUNICATE openly and freely. It is the direct descendant of why the FCC was created in the first place, to regulate common communication carriers and ensure that all of us can use it without worry of restraint or partisanship. Net neutrality is how the Internet can provide common communication, equally, without favor or prejudice. Do not allow sham tactics like Representative Latta's bill H.R. 4752 to destroy the heart and soul of why the FCC exists: to serve the people, not special interests.

—Tom Cammarata, Middletown, CA

Keep the internet open. The PEOPLE own it, not the leasing corporations. They should not be able to control/limit content/access/make a hierarchy to make more and more money on something that belongs to all of us. Not theirs to co-opt is the internet!

—Conrad Miller, Watermill, NY

Putting restrictions on the internet will slow down innovation.

—Jonathan Skov, ,

Thank you for supporting the American public as opposed to giant corporations.

—Gay Kramer-Dodd, Eugene, OR

A pity some politicians want to make some shady business instead of supporting a communication system as the internet to stay open and neutral.

—Fernando S Rapetti, Hurlingham,

The freedom of information and the exchange of ideas is vital to a functioning democracy. True Net Neutrality is a necessity for a modern democracy that is not a sham.

—Catherine Reid, Albany, NY

Partisan legislators should not be introducing bills that restrict the findings of watchdog agencies. This can be compared to restricting the laws that congress can vote on.

—Howard Shapiro, Portland, OR

Thank you for standing up for real Net Neutrality and protection of freedom of speech through the Internet!

—Brian J Lee, Beaumont,

Enough of this! Stop doing this for your own greedy purposes and let the ENTIRE WORLD HEAR US!!!!

—Spencer Blais, Greenville, RI

You're trying, apparently, to fix something that's not broken, in order to allow big corporations to find a way to make money from something that allows individual users to do that without negotiating the roadblocks and bureaucratic labyrinths they set up to pay themselves. This is the worst thing to come down the electronic pike so far. It is cynical, manipulative, and self-serving of those who wish to do it, and it's time to listen to the voice of the people rather than those of unwieldy, self-serving, & ever avaricious corporations. Thank you.

—Michael Bishop, Pine Mountain, GA

Try to do something that is right for once!

—Jerome Adcock, Tampa, FL

This bill is simply shameful. Don't violate your the principles of you and your constituents for a couple of bucks from Comcast.

—Adam Radamis, Ypsilanti, MI

Say "NO" to this toxic bill please! For the love of mankind!

—David Pierce, Monticello, MS

This bill undermines the principles of a free and open society. Please do not let it advance.

—Gene Hudnall, Little Rock, AR

We dont need big corporation take over of the only free speech we have left..look at what the telecommunications act of 1996 did to media as a prime example.

—Rick Mcpherson, Seahurst, WA

Bring freedom of speech to the Internet.

—Fred Arthur Tenzer, Brooklyn, NY

CONGRESS - WHO THE HELL DO YOU THINK YOU ARE? YOU DID NOT PURCHASE THE INTERNET - WE THE PEOPLE PURCHASED THE INTERNET. WE-THE-PEOPLE OWN THE INTERNET. YOU HAVE NO RIGHT WHATSOEVER TO SLICE AND DICE, CORRAL AND INTERFERE WITH THE BEAUTIFUL SIMPLICITY OF ITS DESIGN. EVERY SINGLE THING THE MILITARY HAS IS ONLY BECAUSE OF THE DOLLARS FROM WE-THE-PEOPLE. EVERY GALLON OF GAS, EVERY FUEL-PIG JET, EVERY SEMI THAT GETS BLOWN UP IN A DESERT CONVEY" BECAUSE SOME NUMB-NUT FORGOT TO FILL THE GAS TANK SO THEY JUST "BLOW IT UP" AND REQUISITION ANOTHER ONE FROM THE TAXPAYERS, EVERY $400 TOILET SET AND THE BILLIONS "MISSING" FROM THE WHOPPING 57% GROSS NAT'L PRODUCT "PIECE OF THE NATIONAL PIE" GOING TO THE DEFENSE BUDGET IS AN OBSCENE TRAVESTY AND A MOCKERY OF WE-THE-PEOPLE. OUR GOV CANNOT "PROTECT" US AS THE FALSE-FLAG 9/11 FIASCO HAS SO WELL PROVEN. OUR GOV WAS TAKEN OVER BY A BUSHBABY COUP D'ETAT WITH PASSAGE OF THE PATRIOT'S ACT, AND ANOTHER HIGHLY TREASONOUS PIECE OF LEGISLATION CALLED THE "federal" Reserve Act in 1913. This attempt to CONTROL THE FLOW OF INFORMATION AROUND THE WORLD IS NEW WORLD ORDER DICTATES, NOT "PROTECTING AMERICA" (WHICH HAS ALREADY BEEN DESTROYED THANKS TO THE ABOVE 2 PIECES OF ABOMINABLE LEGISLATION). CONGRESS - YOU WHORES! YOU ARE THE DESTROYERS OF THIS NATION. YOU! CURSE YOUR VERY SOULS. P.S. My apologies to a handful of Congressional reps who are still Americans in the best sense of the world, but these few women have more balls than a billiard table and I am ashamed by everyone else and the mockery of their positions, their stances and their lack of effort to save this nation. First the Internet - then We-The-People. OUR NATION IS DYING.

—Jeanne Serrano, suffolk, VA

We have something good with the open internet and WE ARE GOING TO KEEP IT. You must understand that if you ignore the people completely and do not even pretend to represent us we will find alternatives, gerrymandering or not. This is the issue you had better stand with the people on. THIS ONE WILL BE THE ONE WHERE EVIL WILL NOT WIN! YOU WILL NOT TAKE THE FREE INTERNET! NO!!!!!!

—Diane Hendricks, Olney, TX

The internet is already used by millions as a phone service through VOIP connections, so it should already be considered a public utility under the law. Net Neutrality is essential to the future growth of all US businesses and a free marketplace.

—Paul Johnson, Long Island City, NY

Why does Bob Latta hate America?

—John Clary, Garland, TX

A vote in favor of this bill is going to be very obvious to all to be a vote in favor of the telecom corporations, and against the people.

—Bruce Quackenbush, Denver, CO

If you don't I'll shut the fucker down go back to listening to a radio and you and the corporations can cram it up your ass!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Richard Johnsen, Hartwick, NY

Please don't let corporations get control of the net. Please stop this.

—Jeanne Shaw, Denver, CO

This is not about broadband internet speeds this is about the free flow of information that made the internet what it is today! If a content provider can not afford the faster speeds then their information may never be heard and if a user can not afford the faster speeds then they may never receive the information. This can not be allowed to happen!

—James F Mulvaney, Franklin, MA

I am not in favor of letting big corporations screw up our internet.

—Gary Gall, Cambria, CA

I'm sadden as a Ohioian that my Representative is not listening to the people. Instead he listens to Corp money. GREED NEVER WINS.

—Dominic Sucietto, cincinnati, OH

Do not stand in the way of innovation and open access. Despite what the big ISPs say, it is the people they aim to block and inhibit that have made the internet what it is today and what it can be tomorrow. If you kill net neutrality, the consequences may indeed be dire. Comcast/time-warner and and other companies are only interested in their bottom line. We, who support an open internet are interested in everyone's bottom line.

—Adam F. Hinterlang, Waltham, MA

please classify the internet as a common carrier.

—Cathy Knapp, Pasadena, CA

There is no reason to ask us for any more money right now. please let things stay the way they are.

—Jonathan Kover, Rome, NY

Please do the right thing for everyone and not your corporate sponsors.

—Debbie Schmidt, Lancaster, CA

Keep corporate tentacles OUT of the Internet.

—Ellen McRae, San Juan Capistrano, CA

Please, don't ruin Net Neutrality.

—Ludmila Manicchio, Topeka, KS

This is neither, the FCC's, yours, or the ISP's right to do ANY of this

—Tyler Sturges, Wooster, OH

Please vote against this terrible bill. Congress and the rest of the government has been taking away our rights and selling them to corporations or just spying on us. When are you going to stand up for the citizen that puts you in office?

—Grant Windes, San Juan Capistrano, CA

I just know that the second this happens in the U.S, it'll be coming to Canada next. Cut this out already. Stop trying to destroy the Internet.

—Amanda Rosko, Ottawa,

Please don't let the big corporations take our Internet away. They already have too much power right now as it is...

—James M. Ferris, Welch, WV

The acting head of FCC is a duplicitous crony of the telecomm industry. He is talking out of both sides of his mouth with an obvious agenda to circumvent the will of the majority of the citizenry. You can prevent this from happening and show that you are actually in favor of true net neutrality. Please! Show us that we are actually favored over the 1%; for once!

—Steve Engle, Jefferson, TX

Please support a truly open internet. Do not allow a fast and slow lane. Keep the internet free. Protect our democracy.

—Linda Greenway, Seattle, WA

Protect our open internet

—Barbara Ann Meurer, Bay Shore, NY

What are we teaching the next generation; money is everything.

—Angelo Jannuzzi, bronxville, NY

We need real net neutrality for the sake of the education of our children. To ensure that our future is protected and that our Bill of Rights is guarded honestly.

—Alex Tinsley, Hardin, KY

They've stolen TV from us, now they want to steal internet. This is a violation of our Freedom of Choice. When do we fight to protect our Freedom of Choice?

—Angelo Mayo, Belleville, IL

This is one of the most important issues of the day. Like it or not, the internet, and unfettered acces to it, is necessary for equality today. Isn't that what America is suppose to be about? All people deserve equal access to the internet, especially since it's become a necessary part of living in the 21st century. All people, not just the rich, deserve the benifits and the opportunities that open access provides. Thank you.

—Brad Wiley, Seattle, WA

Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers!

—Erik Morris, Santa Ana, CA

Pay to play? No way! Keep the Net Neutral.

—Rev Dan, Atglen, PA

Leave the internet neutral. This is so critical to small and medium business. Don't give in to big business. Any legislator that supports internet restrictions, I will vote against and be active against on the internet.

—Mr. Garry Scoville, American Fork, UT

Jesus, is no one in Washington working FOR THE PEOPLE ANYMORE??????

—Cindy Abernathy, Midvale, UT

Please keep the internet open to all of us -

—Dr. Dr. Virginia Jones, Kalamazoo, MI

Demand a bill that provides true Net Neutrality.

—Jay Owens, Chicago, IL

We Must Maintain Net Neutrality

—George Jivelekas, Billings, MT

Please represent the voice and interests of the American people - not the special interests of Verizon, Comcast, and AT&T!

—Amberley Middleton, San Diego, CA

The only thing that needs limiting is the urge to screw everybody who can't afford large bribes.

—William Harris, West Haven, CT

I urge you to do the right thing and protect consumers from large corporate conglomerates. This isn't the first attack on the internet and it won't be the last. Stand with the people and resolve this issue.

—Zachary Musick, Grove City, OH

This bill is nothing short of a blatant attack on free speech/press. Voting for it would be the clearest statement of priorities that put the corporate profits way ahead of the good (and the Constitutional rights) of the citizens of the USA. We already have the slowest and most expensive Internet access in the world - putting Internet accessibility at the mercy of the major ISPs is unconscionable.

—Jeanne Young, Sequim, WA

Another Repug who, under our very noses, announces who he works for.

—Robert Goldberg, Casselberry, FL

The internet IS a public utility, and must remain equally accessible to and open for all.

—Elaine Nonneman, Seattle, WA

One has to begin to wonderIS THIS STILL A FREE COUNTRY.....I have to wonder

—James R Hector, Braidwood, IL

In my subdivision Comcast is the only broadband provider. Their customer service has made it clear they know they have a monopoly in our area and that consumers have no other option. Classifying Comcast as a common carrier would bring competition back to the internet provider space, leading to lower prices, faster speeds and more reliable service. That's capitalism and the American way.

—Kendall Thrapp, Champaign, IL

Please do not give over control of Internet traffic to rapacious mega-ISPs. The US already lags behind much of the developed countries in cost and quality of Internet service. Don't let us slip even further back. The US created the Internet. US citizens should be able to reap the rewards of that investment. Please say NAY to HR 4752.

—Kieren Ladner, Chicago, IL

An open Internet is crucial for commerce, education, political, and cultural life-- KEEP IT NEUTRAL!

—James Hubbard, Northampton, MA

This bill not only hurts small grassroots liberals, but republicans as well. There should be no partisanship on this type of fundamental fairness and right to not be watched. This law requires companies that can be subpoenaed to monitor internet usage. Small government republicans should not want people to monitor people's internet use if they truly believe that people's gun purchases should not be monitored; especially since the internet is not a tool used directly to kill people.

—Jessica Jordan, Cumming, GA

NO MONOPOLIES!!!

—Terri Jones, Seattle, WA

I am a voting U.S. citizen living in Canada.

—Giannina Bottaccini, ,

If you want to really piss off the whole country in a big way and turn yourself into a lame duck then vote for this insane bill. Bye Mr. last term Bob.

—James K. Inkenbrandt, Tennyson, IN

To Whom it May Concern, I'm a web designer & developer. I make a living designing and building websites, mobile apps and more for various companies from small business to major corporations. My career will be majorly impacted by a for sale internet. Not only will my bank account & my smaller clients businesses be largely affected by this...The world as a whole will see a serious drop in the extreme growth and innovation in the tech industry. Net Neutrality represents the new American dream. No longer will a couple of really smart people with a dream be able to see their projects come to life when they can't afford to get the traffic to their site. They may have created the next Facebook in their living room but by giving the power to big players makes it extremely difficult for us to continue to do what we do. I urge you to please rethink this decision. Don't sell out to whoever throws the most money at you like you do with every other industry in this country. Sincerely, Justin Lancaster

—Justin Lancaster, Bridgeport, CT

Keep Your Corporate Hands Off My Internet!

—tomdog Klisuric, Castle Rock, WA

Why do you want to let monopolies grow? Is that really the legacy you wish to leave behind? Known as the folks who allowed the internet to become monopolized? Folks rely on it on a daily basis. Why do you wish to force folks into a single choice for such an important utility?

—Dan Tan, Chicago, IL

The end of internet neutrality is the end of my income plan. There are NO jobs for me. Don't make things worse!

—susan Foster, Tucson, AZ

Where is common sense? The Internet IS a communication platform and needs to be reclassified as a common carrier.

—Jim Siderits, Rialto, CA

Without net neutrality, innovators, small businesses, and ordinary users are going to be totally screwed.

—Char Leverette, Evening Shade, AR

Enough is enough.

—Nathan Smith, Vancouver,

Please save net neutrality for the American people.

—Joan A. Durso, Latham, NY

If it ain't broke, don't fix it!!! It's just another ploy to take away what's rightfully the Peoples and make move money out of it. There will be two internets, one that's fast for the rich, and one that's slow for the poor.

—Stephen Stuczynski, Grafton, MA

Reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act

—John Contos, la palma, CA

We are worth more than money. Even if you pass this we will not stand for it. When people get upset they stand together. They push the wealthy from their pedestals and they change things. You exist only, because we allow it.

—Olivia, Waldorf, MD

Do not allow corporations to monetize and limit the exchange of ideas and information on the internet.

—Linwood Sasser, Simi valley, CA

BIG MONEY IS TALKING AGAIN.....poor middle Class!

—Thomas Hughes, Tucson, AZ

Hey, just rename the FCC the "Corporate Crony Revolving Door Public Victimization Committee," to represent its REAL origins and interests.

—Keith R. Allen, Cedar Grove, NC

The internet is about the free, unrestricted sharing of ideas. Innovation is driven by communication.

—Thomas Hopkins, Ann Arbor, MI

You represent "We the people". We the people want net neutrality. We the people want common carrier status for ISPs.

—Brian Hester, Satellite Beach, FL

History is watching.

—Barbara Whipperman, Richmond, CA

Freedom of the press! Not who owns the press.

—Francis Hall, Duluth, GA

Again, Rep. Bob Latta's bill would prevent the FCC from reclassifying broadband Internet service as a common carrier. This is the exact opposite of what will protect the open Internet.

—Gregory B. Gregory, Milwaukee, WI

If you claim to support small business, which every politician seems to, then you must support Net Neutrality. The internet is a proven platform for innovation and job creation, but it won't stay that way if we don't act to protect it. Listen to the innovators themselves, not the cable companies.

—Alex Sheive, Las Vegas, NV

An open internet is essential to U.S. democracy and for a well working U.S. economy

—Stephen M. Sachs, Albuquerque, NM

Counter to what I thought was a clear mandate by the people to discuss this issue thoroughly and openly this bill represents an all too familiar example of the 'end run around'. Without a better methodology for laws protecting a free and open platform for business and expression (the internet) it may be better to reclassify these companies. Even if temporarily. It smacks already that so many key decision making posts within these bodies are former employees or lobbyists of the very companies they are supposed to watch or regulate. Conflict of interest comes to mind. Competition is good on an even playing field. Do not undertake the task to vote in another bad law. Ross Baker RVC, NY

—Ross Baker, Rockville Centre, NY

Do the right thing, for once. Discard this bill like the rubbish that it is.

—Justin Briscoe, Salida, CO

This is a "free" country. Everyone should have equal access to the net!

—Jeanie Birchall, Bellingham, WA

The FCC SHOULD classify broadband Internet service providers as common carriers. It's that simple.

—Philip A. Cherry, Mandeville, LA

The Internet must be classified as a utility; the public interest demands it.

—Mark Ahlstrom, Jackson, NH

This bill is an insult to the American public.

—Arthur Rosen, Hillside, NJ

DO NOT LET THEM DESTROY THE INTERNET.

—Adam Garfinkel, Canyon Country, CA

Do NOT vote for this bill! If you do, you'll never be elected to any office again.

—Ms. Rosemary Molloy, Little Egg Harbor, NJ

Be a visionary and statesman, not a politician.

—Bill Stokes, St. Petersburg, FL

Any bill that does not classify the internet as part of "the commons" is unacceptable.

—Rev Richard P. Young, Kettering, OH

This is just stopping us from voicing our opinions and receiving a better product. Tell the lobbyists and companies to stop playing games and taking advantage of a growing economic force

—Jeff Carlson, Munster, IN

Keep the Internet free & open!

—Joseph Horowitz, Portsmouth, NH

The Sherman Act ? The Federal Trade Commission Act ?? The Clayton Act ??? "Rule of Law" Anyone !!?

—R Johnson, granada hills, CA

I will not stop until broadband is reclassified under Title II of the Communications Act because it is the ONLY WAY to protect REAL Net Neutrality - Democracy depends on this for a viable future for all of us. I will NOT allow the Internet to be LOCKED DOWN so that the OLIGARCHS can continue raking in OUR money and power, leaving the rest of us, the 99%, AS LOSERS!

—Wilma E Ralls, Rohnert Park, CA

This is so important!

—P Horter, Portland, OR

As a serviceman who protects the rights and freedoms of the people, the internet needs to stay free and neutral without control and breach of our rights.

—Benjamin Freck, fort Walton beach, FL

Please do the right thing. I know of no one that wants this but the big companies and the people who take money from them.

—Sharon Bates, Cleburne, TX

Net neutrality is the backbone of a free and open internet. Allowing ISPs to control the flow of information to internet users is an unprecedented blow to the people of the world. Don't let it happen.

—Ryan Hanson, Albuquerque, NM

As a small nonprofit internet library/archive, we pay a LOT for access to serve up information without charge, and our users, themselves, are paying to get on the internet. It is WRONG to allow broadband providers to charge for 'better' access is WRONG WRONG WRONG!

—Marylin Kraker, Fremont, MI

I, as a youtuber would certainly be affected by this even though I live in Germany. Please dont let these pigs ruin the freedom and keep me from posting my videos to my subscribers.

—SheNGAME, ,

On the other hand, I would support a bill for the inverse - requiring classification of the Internet as a Common Carrier, or following Mozilla's alternate proposal for that matter.

—Benjamin Schreiber, Kirkland, WA

It's election time and we are watching. Consider your actions very, very carefully Representative Smith.

—Michael L McWilliams, Aurora, NE

Everybody knows that people with money are taking over everything in America. Ending New Neutrality will be the beginning of the end of access to people less rich.

—Joel Bowden, New York, NY

My communications to the FCC describes my concern that the mainstream media reports news consistent with that which is beneficial to their advertisers. The only news delivery system that doesn't seem to be compromised, as yet, is the internet. This is a free press in our modern times. Mitigation of equal access by everyone will spend the end of our democracy, which is now under attack by US oligarchs.

—Jean Hricik, McDonough, NY

An open and free internet is essential to our democracy.

—Richard Selleseth, Lodi, CA

Is there more than one reason why any politician would support this bill?

—Chris B. Doob, woodbridge, CT

Will Congress ever be rid of these SHILLS for the telecom industry?

—Carol Anne Ogdin, Placerville, CA

This will detrimentally affect people of low incomes and people living in rural areas and mountain ranges.

—Lorena Garcia, Denver, CO

With the money that Comcast wants to spend on buying Time Warner, and AT&T wants to spend on buying DirectTV, we would have every house in America wired with high speed internet. But instead, we entertain these mega-mergers that stifle competition. Why do I only have one choice for broadband at my home address? Why do I not get the service speed I am paying for? Why does my price continue to increase every 6 months anyway? If I had another option to jump to for internet, I wouldn't have to take it, but because the oligopoly system has agreed to a set of quiet non-competitive agreements not to poach on each others territory, I am stuck with subpar service at exorbitant rates. This is a sad joke on the American consumer. Please stop letting these LOBBYISTS force big business interests through Congress. I am your constituent; I elected you, and their interests are not mine in this case.

—Melissa Saltzman, Coloma, MI

Do not allow the open Internet to become a pay-to-play enterprise.

—M Port, Boynton Beach, FL

When will consumers be advantaged rather than Corp's?!

—Dr. John Modschiedler, Chicago,, IL

Please do not pass this bill! The internet is all we have!

—Ahmet Emir Kara, Farmers Branch, TX

I do believe that ISPs fit the definition of common carrier due to most of them having grown out of the telephone network.

—Ken DAVID, Tucson, AZ

I'm voting independent and tossing my vote. I hate politicians!

—Todd Templeton, Sunland, CA

I can't think of anything "appropriate" to say to the sort of villain who would propose this vile legislation.

—Johann Nutter, Longmont, CO

Just say No!

—Tom Bailey, Concord, MA

This bill is only about the haves having more and more. kill it

—Michael Murdock, Brighton, MI

This is a ridiculously twisted direction for congress to take. It's anti-progressive. We wanted help, not to have things flipped around.

—Mac Repman, Camano Island, WA

Stop putting big business ahead of real people!!

—Susan Donaldson, Honolulu, HI

This bill is the exact opposite of democracy.

—Kristin Kaul, Ann Arbor, MI

People before profits!

—Gerald Houska, ,

STOP THE STAZI!

—H Gray, Hayward, CA

Net neutrality is what makes the internet great. It's a resource for all and as an employee in this industry, I don't want a technological right to be abused by a profit seeking corporate interest. Do the right thing.

—Colin Griffiths, Seattle, WA

I pay for internet service, but without serious net neutrality I won't actually have control over the service I get. Instead, fast access to me will only be available to companies and websites that pay extra to the ISP. If the pages I want to see aren't fast-tracked, the connection will be slower. And "slower" might be so slow as to be unusable. The internet should be an open conduit, like postal service, telephone connections, and highways, which allow citizens and customers through impartially.

—Paul Magnus, Albany, NY

Only by reclassifying ISPs as common carriers can Net Neutrality be preserved. Vote against HR 4752.

—Warren Land, Pensacola, FL

AT&T's 19th century equipment already has me in the slow lane. I'd hate to see a law that mandates that people be forced to join me!

—Stephen Mann, Camino, CA

And NO to this bill. Also: NO See also: NO Stop cow-towing to big money and corporations - the Internet needs to be a level playing field.

—Chris Jeske, Canoga Park, CA

Why are you trying to kill the internet?????

—Charlotte Pirch, Fountain Valley, CA

We make our living on the net. Don't put Americans out of work and take away innovation.

—Kathleen Blavatt, San Diego, CA

This is just plain WRONG.

—Charlene Lauzon, Lynnwood, WA

The internet NEEDS to be regulated like a utility! Companies should not be able to monopolize and control the media. Please save our FREEDOMS please!

—Erica Engquist, SNOWSHOE, WV

Free access to unhindered internet should remain a right for all citizens, and not become the playground of the rich corporations and providers who would limit our access and speed, or charge us even more for a service that can't even compete with Japan's internet speeds! To cut bandwidth on the poor is un-American!

—Jack Spallino, Anaheim, CA

We want pure information untainted by business motives. News used to be carried to us by old fashioned post, then radio, then t.v. and now the internet. Information and access to communication needs to be respected as a human right instead of a commodity to be fought over financially.

—Charity Marchandt, Portland, OR

Please fight for real net neutrality. That is my #1 issue next election. I will be voting on that before anything else, by a good margin.

—Dennis Clayton, Pittsburgh, PA

The Internet was born free. I ask you to uphold it's freedom, for all! Thank you. Michael Robeson

—Michael Robeson, Plainfield, NJ

I need an open internet with equal access to be able to do my job well and safely.

—Kate Kosse, Surprise, AZ

Please do not vote for H.R.4752

—Margaret, Vacaville, CA

Please don't vote to protect personal or corporate interests at the expense of crippling the advance of an entire platform and industry.

—Joe Payne, Rogers, AR

The net should be free and unfettered. OR we will become like China and Iran!!

—D C, Eugene, OR

An end to net neutrality will be a nail in the coffin of democracy.

—J Taylor, ,

This is a re-election deal breaker. So vote NO!

—Gene Durall, Spokane, WA

Either you support and open internet and net neutrality or you will be needing to find another job. We the people have had enough of this crap!

—James McConnell, Glendale, AZ

Democracy depends on a free an open Internet.

—Jonathan Lentz, Makawao, HI

Reject bill H.R. 4752. The internet is increasingly necessary for day to day communications and ISPs should be held responsible for offering the service in a non-discriminatory fashion to both owners/creators and users of online systems.

—Karen Lamb, ,

A fair and open internet for all!! This still should be the American way, and the way of free people everywhere.

—Ron M. Romberger, Royal Oak, MI

No censorship

—Bill Maine-ah, Boulder, CO

Please, let's be the free country we claim that we are.

—Jeremy Lefevre, Silverthorne, CO

Keep the internet free, fast and open! NO PAY TO PLAY, got it?

—Harry Harry Gutshal, Parkville, MO

The internet is to the 21st century as electricity was to the 20th. Protect net neutrality and future American innovation by classifying the net as common carrier.

—Josh W Rosentreter, Plymouth, IN

Bob Latta's comments rely on a fundamental misconception of why the internet is so valuable. He says that regulation will lead to the stagnation of the internet economy. The regulation is not of the content on the internet or who can sell what on it - the regulation would be of the internet providers to prevent them from capturing the vast majority of the economic surplus created in the internet economy. His argument is akin to saying that regulation of the telephone would lead to less phone calls or less business conducted over the phone. This is flawed and blatantly incorrect thinking and he should be ashamed of himself for voicing such an indefensible position on such an important issue. He is betraying the trust of his constituents - the people he represents, not the companies that pay his political bills.

—Zachary Schreiber, New York, NY

Please don't let the net become for hire

—Ray Carter, Boise, ID

This is perhaps the most serious threat to our freedom since the so called patriot act. PLEASE oppose it!!

—Elizabeth R. Hallett, Ashland, OR

The internet is a UTILITY! No different than my phone line. I will cut the high speed cable if and when you screw it up!

—Harold Anderson, seattle, WA

Keep the internet accessible for all. The internet was designed to be neutral and open.

—Thomas Wingard, HOLMES, PA

don't let the power of money interfere with freedom for all

—Sharon Laabs, La Jolla, CA

This bill would further stifle our First Amendment protections and MUST NOT PASS! Please oppose it vigorously! Thank you for all you do for our district and for Oregon and the United States of America. I will be working for your reelection this fall, and I will be watching your position on this very important matter for the survival of our democracy.

—Dr. Christina K. Irwin, Lake Oswego, OR

The Internet is a public utility and those who provide access should be classified and regulated as common carriers of the public trust which is the Internet. Vote no HR 4752!

—Lynne Schrupp, Troy, MI

Save our open internet

—Kathleenseyfried Seyfried, Spring Hill, FL

Discrimination at it's finest. This would block a bill that the FCC would try to protect neutrality. This is what happens when a man has power, he gains too much.

—James, Olathe, KS

Please do not support this bill. This is ridiculous.

—Heather Reetz, Kalamazoo, MI

It seems to be better solution to reclassify it as common carrier, the benefits of that can be seen in the many countries of EU who have done so. Compare what price they pay for their connections, and the speeds they have available (including speed/$ spend). All point to better for both companies and consumers. Well, except the few monopolies who have not invested their profits like they had promised (and lie about it via statistical nonsense - you should not look at cumulative investment but per year investment, which reveals their lie about them putting more and more money on improving the connections when they are actually doing the opposite).

—Lasse Ylinen, Masala,

This is clearly the wrong direction to work toward. People > corporations. That's the direction you want.

—Nathan D. Rice, Ypsilanti, MI

I'm sorry - you want to take the people with the power to stop this out of the way because it disagrees with your paychecks? I don't think so.

—Donnia Reed, Kelso, WA

There are people all across the country who are fighting for the true neutrality of the Internet. There are a wealthy few corporations and lobbyists who are fighting for the false Net Neutrality made by those who wish to limit the freedom of the people online by establishing the need to pay for internet "Fast Lanes" from companies which are basically monopolies in the areas they work in. Falling for this thinly veiled oppression of the people would be a foolish idea, for both acquiring votes for next election and for securing the blessings of freedom for the United States citizens.

—Benjamin Shemeth, Berlin, CT

Rep. Bob Latta is a shill for the corporations! Fuck him and his bill.

—Robert B. DiGiovanni Jr., Monterey, CA

Stop this, you know we do NOT want this.

—Bruce Harris, Springfield, MO

Do what's right, for a change, and don't let Net Partiality become the rule.

—James R. Raposa Jr., Cumberland, RI

Quit trying to mess up something that isn't broken. Keep net neutrality!

—Mike B, Johnstown, PA

Only Title II will fix the problem

—Joseph Bickner, North Las Vegas, NV

The development of the open Internet should be towards the goal of a public utility that serves the People and the Democracy. It should not be privatized or specialized for the few.

—David Hopkins, Willseyville, NY

This MUST NOT pass!

—Jane Engelsiepen, Carpinteria, CA

The internet should be regulated as a public utility because that is what it is! Doing away with the open internet will encourage anti-competitive behavior and stifle innovation. Please do not allow this dangerous bill to become law.

—Tim Dodd, Norcross, GA

I do not want politicians who support the privatization of government to have any say in this. Do not let this bill be passed.

—Gail Mountain, Gloucester, MA

How the hell is the Net NOT a common-carrier utility?

—Cuyler Brooks, Lilburn, GA

Our country has already moved too far in the direction of corporate fascism. Allowing this bill to pass would essentially seal that fate.

PLEASE STAND UP FOR DEMOCRACY: Reject this Dangerous Bill!!!

—Amy Irene Anderson, Kingston, NY

The Internet must not be owned by private interests. It is part of the commonwealth.

—Edward Landler, Los Angeles, CA give the lobbyist's their money back and don't vote for this bill the public demands it not be passed, be a man not a puppet

—Robert Neiner, Cleveland, OH

As you are no doubt aware, internet availability in general and high speed in particular, are big problems in many parts of Maine. Net neutrality is, in my view, essential to assuring that all Mainers are able to receive high quality internet connections.

—Kellon Thames, Union, ME

Only a sleazy retail politician bought and paid for by the greedy corporations that (not who) will benefit from this bill would introduce such a measure so contrary to the public interest. Just another corrupt, rancid Red Party member in action as a puppet.

—Robert Griffin, Reedsville, OH

Please, please do this. Thank you for your time and have a nice day.

—Alora, Staunton, VA

There is no reason on earth to support this proposed bill.

—Lucy Kemp, Bradenton, FL

Don't let this bill go ahead. Say NO.

—EpicWolfOfDarkness, ,

The Internet is the best thing to happen to democracy since the invention of the printing press. Any politician who votes to make it easier for the Internet to be corporatized and ghettoized should be considered a sad oligarchist whore.

—John Walchak, Melbourne, FL

Many small businesses would be hurt if this bill passes.

—Yvonne Segal, Fayetteville, AR

Keep the net free and maintain a level playing field!

—AG Gilmore, Walnut, CA

To support this bill would show yourself as completely influenced by corporate interests and not the best interests of the American people and future generations for a free, innovative Internet. Net Neutrality in its previous incarnations allowed many of the Internet start-ups such as Google, Amazon, and more to get their start. Allowing the major internet service providers to install "slow lanes" and have complete restriction over the Internet will hinder this growth and innovation. Make the right choice.

—Justin Frid, Bel Air, MD

It is incredible how shamelessly corrupt our Congress has become.

—Michael Ward, San Diego, CA

My employment would be dramatically at risk if we don't protect net neutrality. Please do not support the bills that would encourage internet providers to cause further harm to the public and the evolving workforces of America. We are already losing jobs left and right, many aspects of my industry are already leaving the country and eliminating more jobs...the internet has become the thing that still allows a level playing field. It is the game changer for me that allows me to still survive and create my own opportunities where there aren't any. Please don't kill the American spirit by undermining our ability to create opportunity equally and build up healthy equal opportunity competition with other companies.

—Jessie Kate Patterson, Camarillo, CA

OPEN INTERNET FOR ALL, NOT JUST THE RICH FEW!

—D P, Madison, WI

I believe that this bill will allow less competition and higher costs to the consumer. I believe that the higher data usage already increases my bill and allows for the carriers to build infrastructure.

—Mr. W Lim, Prattville, AL

Our district depends on the creation of high tech jobs. This in turn requires an equal internet for new small companies and for employee training. Please vote AGAINST this terrible bill

—Francis Anthony Lux, Tucson, AZ

This bill is as unAmerican as it gets. We NEED to reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act. If the author of this bill has been bought by big money interest groups then he needs to be stopped in his tracks. It is your responsibility to represent us fairly and not be bought off.

—Bill Hamilton, Wichita, KS

Please stop this lunacy now! It is an insult to all the military personnel that have sacrificed so much so that everyone has equal opportunity.

—sylvia richey, Fort Myers, FL

Keep the playing field level and keep the internet open to all.

—Jessica Janecki, Durham, NC

Stop it!

—Samuil Pavlevchev, Sofia, CA

this need to stop now

—ben Livingston, Glasgow, Scotland,

Net Neutrality is what has allowed the internet and all the associated economic prosperity that it has brought to occur.

—Mr. George Harvey, Stockton, CA

The internet should not be controlled like cable television.

—Mark Harrison Jr., Bedford, IN

The US invented the internet and appears damn set on destroying it. In the US.

—Michael Kellner, Culver City, CA

Your vote on this measure will show the American public if you are working for them or if you are working for the special cable and ISP interests. We're watching and will vote you in or out of office accordingly.

—Howard Bornstein, Lake Oswego, OR

The big companies want to change open internet and charge us more money. Please say no to bill H.R. 4752.

—Mary Ann Snellings, Lake Alfred, FL

Keep the internet free and access to all people open.

—Carol Kopsco, Tucson, AZ

Considering how uninformative our anemic American media has become, net neutrality is more important than ever, at least for those of us who rely on web services to remain informed citizens and support real democracy.

—Pamela Allee, Portland,, OR

Without an informed citizenry, we are neither free nor do we live in a democracy. Information and news is not a commodity to be available to only those that can pay for it in real time, and leaving others to find out later because they do not have the resources to pay for high speed. Net neutrality is the key to freedom and a functioning democracy.

—Dana Allen, Corvallis, OR

The internet is the last bastion of true freedom out there, if the corporations get this, you might as well let them run the country.

—Joe Reed, Reisterstown, MD

Do what you were elected to do. Work for the citizens. We will vote!

—T ?Mitchel, Snellville, GA

USA should remain the true land of the free!!!!

—Elise Tak, Brooklyn, NY

Get a grip before we all go down the tube!

—Sandra Holtzmuller, Centerville, OH

Please stand up for the public good, not the CORPORATE GOOD! Vote against this bill!

—Jo Rod, Ames, IA

Big, AMERICAN business has no business controlling what must be free.

—David T. Grove, Bloomington, IL

Please vote against this bill. Protect Net Neutrality!

—Alice L Schafer, Acton, MA

Please recognize "net neutrality " is a form of free speech. Don't take it away in the name of corporate profit. Protect it and all people of the USA.

—Valerie O Cornelius, Tucson, AZ

Broadband is a utility / common carrier. It carries all my communications including VoIP, TV, news - everything.

—Mark Bartosik, Bay Shore, NY

Net neutrality is essential to democracy in a wired world. Don't abandon equal access. Stand up for a free, open Internet!

—Susan Figliulo, Portland, OR

Please do not support Rep. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752. I definitely do not want this bill to be passed into law. Don't restrict the Internet. Do not support H.R. 4752. Thank you!

—Mary Weaver, Rio Rancho, NM

Capitalism is not democracy. Put people first.

—Judy Gray, Wasilla, AK

The original idea was to offer commercial broadcasters free access to our airwaves in exchange for programming that serves the needs of our communities. This is the core of the Federal Communications Commission's public-interest bargain. But over the years broadcast industry lobbyists have trampled this social contract in their rush to maximize profits. NET NEUTRALITY The call for Net Neutrality is immediate and now. This is no time for conventional thinking. Visionaries are looking into the future while stalwarts are holding onto the past and are resistant to change. The internet levels the playing field as content is the currency of the future. Equal access brings about fair play and the needs of the many...outweigh the needs of the few. Big companies work on rules, regulations and its' bureaucracy....it's culture might not work in the new world. To rush headlong into this still totally unexplored global frontier would seemingly to be a mistake that will have devastating affects on generations to come. More study is needed for Title I and Title II. I represent the music industry and have studied and personally witnessed the perpetual tug-of-war between major media complexes and independent music labels too many years. The only subject in America today that is never discussed in national dialogue, the political arena, the judicial system, town hall meetings, job creation, newsrooms and such, is the disparity of airplay between independent music labels on major broadcast radio. The fact that so much money is poured into lobbying for control has more than convinced me that the music industry plays a vital role in these decisions. Although the music industry itself is a microcosm of this entire world of business, it has proven to be a nucleus of power and innovation that even music organizations will not put it on their front burner of topics or agendas. One can only assume that there is some sort of conspirator factor designed to ensure that certain segments or sectors in America are not empowered. An open internet addresses new, emerging and non-traditional industry sectors. This will supply resources to evolve dynamic multi-dimensional music entertainment companies. One would not think that 5000 internet TV stations and 9000 internet radio stations were formed because major broadcasters were doing such a great job. Fact is, satellite and streaming services are pushing out older radio models. Technology and innovation starting with Napster as a music sharing platform has evolved to where a great deal of internet businesses and other revolutionary applications are all revolved around or a good portion of their business is music. These ever expanding and initial music companies are the companies that will create the new jobs and aid in the US share of the global economy. Major broadcasters are not expected to invest into start-ups as they allegedly objectify these new businesses as nuisances. In fact, the opposite is true as their ad revenue and listenership dropped to the point where firing is the new hiring. We cannot keep investing in billionaires who, as Congress has designated is participating in synthetic thinking - producing nothing and creating nothing. We have to invest in the public's interest. Do not expect them to cease in investment of broadband development either as America's economic future depends on continued innovation of broadband infrastructure. This is simply a very bad bluff and distraction to gain as close to a monopoly for more subscribers who will face less choice and a less adaptive and responsive internet. (Huffington Post) The music industry is one of the wealthiest industries in the world with limitless music and talents. The American people, however, are relegated to the same 10 songs over-and-over on radio, those same 10 songs/artists in the news/TV and the same 10 songs on awards shows...all controlled by the companies that have allegedly discriminated against any other content but their own. Our side of the industry calls it entertainment apartheid (organized segregation.) The loss of an open internet allows for an opportunity to discriminate. Based upon the major telecoms alleged pattern of behavior over the past 40+ years should leave no doubt that history will repeat itself. Lobbying efforts by the major telecoms from confusing the public's ownership of the airwaves, consolidation restrictions removed, Public Access obligation and franchise agreements removed, major radio stations' compromise to stop payola practices and give free airtime to independent music all lobbied unenforceable. If the door is left open for them to discriminate, according to their past history they allegedly will. Anyone remember the censorship of Pearl Jam? Worst yet, I have had young soldiers returning from protecting this country who want to get involved in the music industry. After fighting for this country, radio executives and personnel deny their aspiration to at least be heard. The internet is not broken. As the adage goes, if it ain't broke - don't fix it. If it is, let the people (the taxpayers) who paid for it, fix it and keep it. I say this with patriotic fervor as it will take political will and a moral obligation to ensure that we all make a better America. Wealth is not the opposite of poverty. Justice is.

inappropriate_behavior_7F3_512 K_Stream.mp4 <http://youtu.be/16nOFkZ9I8Y> <http://youtu.be/5JQ5fxhhkZo> Jerry King

—Jerry King, Atlanta, GA

keep the internet affordable for all.

—Richard Paul Glass, Eugene, OR

If y'all fall for this outrageously ludicrous bill y'all are idjits. This bill is the stupidest thing Ive heard of. Not only does that idjit seem like he is corrupt(kickbacks anyone?) but it's just wrong to prevent a government agency like the FCC from doing it's damned job. That is wrong on so many levels it ain't funny. Personally I feel it goes against the constitutional rights that we as Americans have. Do you really want to start another revolution cause personally I don't think we can afford one and this idicy is certainly building up to one in my honest opinion. There is only so much abuse that the American people can handle and you have been tiring that line for far too long. Letting this bill go through would just give people another reason to hate this government and more reasons to start a revolution. How much longer must we suffer for your stupidity? How many more people will snap and go in rampages before you realize that you are doing more harm than good and right all of those wrongs? Just nix the damn bill and be done with it. Don't prevent the FCC from doing it's damned job!

—Tanya Hill, Orangeville, PA

The Supreme Court's ruling in McCutcheon v. FEC will allow enormous amounts of money to corrupt our politics and marginalize average Americans. Now more than ever, we need tough new anti-corruption reforms like those outlined in the American Anti-Corruption Act in order to ensure equal representation for every American. We, the people, should not have to buy access to our own government. If you won't make meaningful anti-corruption reform a priority, we will elect new leaders who will.

—Michael E Lewandowski, Scottsville, NY

I don't care how much "free speech cash bribes" are offered to you, I expect you to say no to anything other than declaring the internet a common carrier utility!

—Charles Clements, Las Cruces, NM

I want this fight to reach an end NOW. This isn't a battle we need to fight every week. What with the TPP and now this bill and every other attack on the internet our very democracy is threatened. Do something, please, to stop the attacks and ensure that our internet remains a utility for everyone to use!

—Ann Catherine Keirns, Castro Valley, CA

Please prevent the oligarchs from winning this one, too.

—Charles Rapport, Holliston, MA

This is the #1 hot issue with the most motivated voters. Candidate funding will switch to an all-out war on those who support this abomination!

—BJ AHlen, Los Angeles, CA

I'm sick of the greed in Washington keep the internet open.

—Steve Carroll, Glenpool, OK

Free speech and open communication are under attack. Stand up for the people. Do not place corporate America and their profits in the Fast Lane.

—Jack Smith, Seattle, WA

Bottom line is money. Corporate wants all the benefits..The peasants can eat cake.

—J Benevento, gilroy, CA

It is time to stop the supporting the "Best Government Money Can Buy"! Please support Net Neutrality and not Rep. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752 and the Mega ISP's who want to turn the internet into a monopoly!

—John, Alexandria, VA

Such a bill will not allow the FCC to classify the internet as a utility, which it needs to be in order to not be subject to "fast lanes" (and "slow lanes") hiding behind rate tiers. The future of true net neutrality will be hurt if this law is passed, despite the vague wording of the proposed bill.

—Phil Koch, Greenwood, IN

The vast majority of voters support reclassification. They may not know it yet, but they will when they learn that the USA has much slower and more expensive internet service than most of the developed world, including France and South Korea. When the voters finally learn the truth about our internet providers and true net neutrality, politicians like Rep. Bob Latta will pay the price at the ballot box.

—Matthew Soares, Brookline, MA

The Internet should be classified as a common carrier. The WEB Sites that you go to can get some money. But the drive to the WEB Site should be fast and free after you pay your ISP.

—Steven Alexander, Milwaukee, WI

this is just ridiculous

—Keith Irvingston, ,

And a vote for this bill is AGAINST OUR CONSTITUTION'S BILL OF RIGHTS.

—Elizabeth Zenker, Arcata, CA

STOP THIS STUPIDITY. STOP ALL THE STUPIDITY IN WASHINGTON. YOU'RE A PUBLIC SERVANT. ALL OF YOU START ACTING LIKE IT!

—Stephen M. Douglas, Magna, UT

we have enough monopolies in media as it stands now

—Steve Irwin, Melbourne Beach, FL

Talk about not representing the public interest... If we are going to even consider bills like this, then we should be considering breaking the ISPs into no less than 20 new and different companies so a real free market can work. No consumer choice means regulations are needed.

—D Wilson, Grain Valley, MO

What ever happened to constitutional rights?

—Carla Vidal, Salt Lake City, UT

If we're a "free" country, why do all our decisions get overdid by Congress?

—Kyle R., North hollywood, CA

Only Comcast, Verizon, AT&T, and their ilk could support this bill; in fact, they probably wrote it. They're certainly trying to buy its passage.

—Philip Rubin, Vienna, VA

God is watching.

—Mark Steven Filby, Coffs Harbour,

Note: This communication provides my actual zip code, which is not 34949.

—Susan Chandler, Fort Pierce, FL

It's time that the priv

—Jarrett Barber, Mesa, AZ

ISP's should be reclassified as the de facto telecommunications providers they have become. To try to pass them off as mere Information providers is ludicrous. They should be governed as Common Carriers.

—John Villere, Colchester, VT

How about putting together a bill that classifies ISPs as common carriers.

—Steve Gallo, Brewster, NY

The FCC and Congress; must designate all broadband internet providers as common carriers, and save Net Neutrality. It is the Will of the Majority of the People.

—Shawn Sargent, West Yarmouth, MA

I'm a millennial and I'd like for my voice to count. I'd like for freedom on the internet to continue...as it is now at least and for big companies to stop finding ways to charge the population more. It's all about money and not about equality or security or anything else that's "needed". Are fast and slow lanes needed? No. Don't allow this to happen, the millennial generation IS watching and is waking up.

—Stewart D Gaitan, Wichita, KS

Do Not Give Away Yet Another Piece of the Utility Landscape to those that desire Monopoly Control to create profiteering

—Joseph Podrasky, Plymouth, MI

Shame on Obama

—Nick Grigorenko, buffalo, NY

It's time to bring the U.S. to the same 21st century the rest of the world enjoys.

—Ken Gale, New York, NY

You had all better stop acting against the electors of congress, you work for us, not corps!

—Ken Deehr, Pahoehoe, HI

Equal access to information highways, regardless of one's economic status, is our greatest hope in securing America's highest ideals. Please vote against this bill, and do all that you can to assist the effort to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers.

—Joshua S Levin, Las Vegas, NV

THE INTERNET WAS INITIALLY A GOVERNMENT PROJECT FUNDED WITH PUBLIC TAX DOLLARS, AND THEREFORE BELONGS TO THE PEOPLE, NOT CORPORATION!!!

—Robert Parker Stellato, REDWOOD CITY, CA

Why are you people always trying to destroy as much as you can and muck up something for us AMERICANS.

—Cindy Ragland, Lanett, AL

The internet is more essential to our economy than the telephone. The FCC needs to be able to properly regulate this form of communication and protect our economy. Please do not support any legislation that attempts to undermine the FCC's ability to ensure an open internet.

—Steven Troppoli, Carlisle, MA

Not reclassifying broadband as common carriers hurts the public trust

—Paul Harrison, Edna, TX

In order to reach a bright future we need innovation. In order to have innovation we need an open internet. Please don't support bills of this nature that will cripple a free internet.

—Nathan Little, La Vista, NE

Don't support this bill - there are no positives in it! Broadband needs to be reclassified.

—Randi Smith, Salt Lake City, UT

Don't be evil. Just for once, please, don't be evil.

—Ryan Gaygen, Ithaca, NY

Please support 'Net Neutrality. The Internet is too important to simply sacrifice it for big business profit taking.

—Scott Foust, Phoenix, AZ

The internet lets everyone play on the same field. Please don't give the opportunity for the gatekeepers become bridge trolls. The three largest communications corporations have already made it clear that they don't have their customer's and the people's interests at heart. Their only interest is how to siphon more money out of everyone. If they're allowed to control who can connect and how they connect, it will eventually cripple or destroy the greatest communication network ever created.

—Sean McGuire, San Jose, CA

Please do not accept Tom Wheeler's definition of Net Neutrality. It is not by any means neutral. It is heavily weighted toward the huge communications corporations who want to dominate the internet.

—Liz Gaspar, Shelton, WA

I will help elect new leaders that will support the net neutral and work my but off against the ones that don't

—Tony Hanners, webb, AL

We need to do a much better job of crediting the public investment in science and technology with the currently inordinate profits realized by private companies who, without the socialization of risk, would not exist let alone be making billions of dollars. We need a mechanism (higher marginal tax bracket?) to give a more fair share back to the public for reinvestment in the science and technology that has made technology/health companies possible. The technology/health/other companies are mining the value out of the public sector and directing an inordinate amount of the value into very few hands. Very dangerous!

—Jarrett Barber, Mesa, AZ

The Internet has grown and people depend on the information that is now readily available. Signifying the Internet as a utility would alleviate the problem of corporations trying to manipulate how we can use this tool.

—Betty Ramsey, Las Vegas, NV

The Internet has become the publics information/communication utility and it should be reclassified and treated as such.

—Kelly McConnell, Tigard, OR

The Internet should be OPEN for all - not different speeds for who can ya more etc. Stop this bill right now.

—Judy Fusinaz, Hiawassee, GA

ethernet should be equally accessible to ALL

—Robin Pappas, pocono manor, PA

this bill is bullshit

—Matthew, Torrington, CT

...Let FREEDOM Ring!
—B Maddigan, Middleboro, MA

And a vote against the open Internet is a vote against the people!
—James J. Walsh M.D., Morganton, NC

Ending net neutrality weakens America, and our place in the World.
—Paul Clay, New York, NY

The Internet MUST remain neutral for everyone
—Terry Angelli, Malden, MA

This is a bill only a fascist could love.
—Karl Smiley, Blodgett, OR

I'm ashamed to call myself an American.
—Mark Borys, Alto, MI

Stop this madness. There will be a price to pay.
—Rick Maddocks, Kelowna,

when the baby boomers stop voting, do you want to find yourself on the right side of history?
—Carter Andrew McLaughlin, los gatos, CA

My bill for Internet access is already exorbitant. Passage of hr bill 4752 would only make things worse. DO NOT SUPPORT IT! PLEASE!
—Dr. Jeff Condit Ph.D., Murfreesboro, TN

Please stop proposing and issuing legislation that in any way hinders the ability of an individual person to access the internet in any way.
—Brian Westermann, Trenton, MI

Have you know shame.
—Victor Henry, Marina, CA

Yet another example of Republicans backing money over people. This should be stopped dead.
—Rosemary Williams, Westport, WA

KEEP THE NET FREE !!!
—Ivan Sizemore, bartlett, IL

Like everything else before this do-nothing Congress, Big Money is the reason for this debate. The rich are rich enough, so stop it!
—Eric Jacobs, Boise, ID

Please
—Joshua Ferguson, Klamath Falls, OR

Free country?

—Eino Orlic, ,

Continued opportunity for small businesses...and for the explosion in innovation that the Internet has made possible over the last 25+ years (including Linux and other open source software initiatives) will CEASE TO EXIST IF NET NEUTRALITY IS NOT PERMANENTLY PRESERVED. Is that clear enough??

—Edgar Russell, Glen Burnie, MD

Probably Net Futility to ask Rep. La Malfa to do anything good for the people in general, not his paymasters, Big Comm. Co's..

—Malcolm Moore, Portola, CA

The internet connect people with relatives, schools, work, and social media groups. We have always had an open and net neutral internet. It is now apart of our lives and our rights to free speech. The net should never be under the control of any private company(s). It has always been open and good for all to use. It need to stay that way. It is needed to preserve our democracy.

—Linda O'Connor, Levittown, PA

I'm frankly appalled by the idea of this bill.

—Sue Stolzer, Mt. Prospect, IL

Same internet for all.

—Stephen Nickels, Simpson, IL

Ahh come on! What happened to freedom..usnt that we the people have been fighting for??

—Zoe Delgado Kraeft, Chicago, IL

regardless of what you may chose to do, we are now watching. so it all up to you.

—Keith Harris, ,

The open internet is a vital communications tool to save our democracy and our freedom. A vote against net neutrality is an affirmation of fascism.

—Carlene Louise Petty, Shepherdsville, KY

Please remember why you're in Washington: to represent the best interests of your constituents, not massive telecoms.

—Jason Sylvester, Columbus, OH

Do not let Bob Latta's bill to prevent the FCC from reclassifying broadband Internet service as a common carrier pass Congress when it comes up. The American people want Net Neutrality !!

—Albert Westpy, Brick, NJ

You know the Founding Fathers would have protected the Internet in the First Amendment.. Do the right thing.

—JM Lavassaur, Norristown, PA

It's time that the corrupt elements in government start listening to the will of the people. It's our country, not yours!

—Mr Steven J Olenski, Phoenix, AZ

The internet supplies my news, my tv and my telephone service. The internet is an essential communication tool not a toy.

—Lynn Musgrove, Groton, NY

Please keep internet an equal access information highway!

—Gloria Short, Fair Grove, MO

Please listen to the citizens instead of the lobbyists.

—Andrew Lish, Nashua, NH

Vote no on this bill, please. We want real net neutrality! Thank you

—Matthew C. Simpson, Portland, OR

Whatever happened to people's democratic choices? Whatever happened to freedom of speech?? Maybe Latta should read the Constitution for the first time!

—Anne Ehmann, merrick, NY

Who are you people working for - big business or the American public that voted you in? Some of us are aware of what is going on here.

—Jim Harley, Stuart, FL

The Internet was created with OUR tax money. It belongs equally to ALL of us.

—Thom Fistner, Fountain Hill, PA

The U.S. is the land of the free and net neutrality embodies that freedom by giving everyone the opportunity to contribute their innovative ideas. The end of net neutrality would give power to the cable companies who would then have a media monopoly; running the cable and internet. They would be able to control what we see by making certain sites faster than others. This makes it so the new upcoming competitors cannot compete with existing companies. As a result, we would lack innovation in our country. If it weren't for net neutrality many of the lead companies would not exist today like google. Ending net neutrality would end the next google from being created. You aren't doing your country any service by allowing net neutrality to end.

—Honora Lavelle, Columbus, OH

This will hurt life as we know it.

—Paul George Wilson, Kell, IL

Latta obviously is representing telecom CEOs, not his constituents.

—Margaret Nagel, Evanston, IL

Let's not go backwards!

—Michael & Jan LaBrecque, Amissville, VA

It seems "THEY" want to TAKE OVER our one and only last CHANCE FOR TRUTH!!!

—Beverly Smith, Cottonwood, AZ

You have got to be kidding me. What's next, electricity and water? I use my internet as my phone carrier, Congress. That makes it a COMMON CARRIER whether Congress thinks it is or not. Don't be idiots about this.

—William Cernansky, Portland, OR

Fight the Fascists

—Frank Beran, Worth, IL

for gods sake people dont throw this country to the wolves any more!

—Stephen Siegel, Decatur, MI

It is outrageous that one of our Representatives would so blatantly do the bidding of these big corporations when it is so obviously the will of the people of the United States that Net Neutrality be preserved. We need to keep the Internet open and equally available to all who want to use it. So much innovation has come from a free Internet over the years! Don't allow AT&T, Comcast and Verizon have this kind of power over how the rest of us use this valuable resource. Please, vote against this dangerous bill. Instead, encourage the FCC to reclassify broadband Internet service as a common carrier under Title II of the Communications Act, to protect it from attacks like this.

—Janetha Beck, North Chili, NY

I am disgusted that Rep. Latta's and others like him are so determined to circumvent the will of the people. When will Congress start serving the needs of all its citizens rather than simply pandering to corporate interests?

—Mickey L. Glick, Lancaster, PA

In the 21st century, a free and neutral internet is essential for free speech.

—Thomas Wilson, Colorado Springs, CO

Fuck this bill, and fuck anyone stupid enough to support it!

—Joel Detrow, Lufkin, TX

Please don't support bill H.R. 4752

—Casey, alpheretta, GA

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality. A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet.

—John Hartman, Tulsa, OK

Stop selling the people out. This is likely the single issue that will bring out every rioter with a gun and every progressive with an opinion.

—Cheryl Lawrence, Cloquet, MN

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality. A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet.

—Nicholas Hartman, Tulsa, OK

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality. A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet.

—Roseanne Hartman, Tulsa, OK

I truly need unfettered high speed internet access for my small business. If it gets priced out of my reach, will you give me a job? I'm serious. I am in my late 50s and haven't found anyone who will hire me after I was laid off 5 years ago. I'm barely making it as a freelancer. Please keep the internet open!

—Nancy Michon, Houston, TX

The internet IS now a public utility and needs to be classified as such !!!

—Bruce Sims, Escondido, CA

Please protect the open internet.

—Cindy Thompson, Salina, KS

Keep the internet democratic.

—Sister Honora Kinney, Albany, NY

Rural areas in particular need open net neutrality in order to keep up with the rest of the world. Businesses and students are especially short-changed already, and would be even more if you remove broadband internet service providers being under the Title II of the Communications Act.

—Nancy Littell, Danvers, IL

This is unbelievably important. Please don't think this is just another issue, somewhere in the middle of the pack. It is the most important thing on our national agenda.

—Jerry Cayford, Brunswick, MD

Of course the Internet is a common carrier. You need it too for fundraising if nothing else. Do what is right for the entrepreneurs and all the rest of us using it to make America great and profitable. It's your net too. Linda Steele

—Linda Steele, Boone, NC

Do you believe that the government is MORE important than the citizens that elect them? If you still want the the USA to be FREE then vote against ALL infringements of OUR freedoms. Do it before it is too late. This government is destroying our country.

—Carl Richardson, Purtlear, NC

I know lobbyists have nice shiny things, but please try to resist.

—Adam Stewart, Salem, OR

Many of you ran on the premise that you support small business. This bill will help destroy small businesses ability to compete in the internet arena with large corporations. Please do the right thing for your constituents and vote no.

—Skip Colon, Miami, FL

don't vote for this bill.

—Alexander Baggett, Euless, TX

Obviously Rep. Bob Latta is in the pocket of somebody. This is very much an insult. Do we not have a system of checks and balances in place at all?

—Dan Divirgilio, Pittsburgh, PA

What are we? A nation of the corporation, by the corporation, and for the corporation? Who's buying freedom now? And, more importantly - Who's selling it?

—Richard Armour, Mansfield, MA

Don't take the freedom we have to be on the internet to enjoy communicating with our friends and family and to be able to be on it all. Don't give these big telacommunication companies more reason to get richer. It seems like that is all some of you care about in Congress the richer get richer and we get kicked to the side of the road.

—Doreen Mann, Lisbon, ME

I highly urge you to listen to us! The vast majority of the american citizens want real net neutrality and we will take all of the steps needed to achieve this. Pleas make the right choice and don't approve of Bob Lattas bill. H.R. 4752 is a toxic menace to internet freedom.

—Kenat, San Sebastian,

This issue is very important to me - Chairman Wheeler's reassurance of the FCC's ability to use Title II if his other ideas fail to preserve an open internet would become completely moot (if it's not already) with this bill. This is unacceptable - Internet access is too important to be left in the control of such gigantic corporate greed.

—Levi Dettwyler, Salem, OR

This bill does not represent the communication interests of the American people. We need Congress to support the reclassification of broadband Internet service as a common carrier.

—Mary Keils, Shoreline, WA

The internet is a utility. It is every bit as important to many businesses as power or running water, and has a similar priority for many citizens. While it might be something of a luxury, it is a luxury on which an entire economy worth billions has been built. Taking away Net Neutrality at this point would have the same freezing effect on this economy as turning every road into a toll road would have on traditional, brick and mortar businesses.

—Brandon Allendorf, Columbia, SC

Congress can NOT approve of internet discrimination - allow me and millions of others access our select technological resources the same. And let these resources (Websites and Services) give their viewers what they want to in order to please them: Equally fast access (the very same, not less or more, than their competitors.) Take action against this huge issue.

—Logan Irwin, Greenwood, IN

How can this even be allowed to occur? Why would he even put this in place unless he is being paid off in some way shape or form?

—Dan R Divirgilio, PITTSBURGH, PA

Please, defend net neutrality, it's necessary for free speech. Yours regards.

—Jose M. Latas Latas, Pontevedra,

It's time to think of the people that put you in your positions. Keep in mind, what we gave you, we can take away...just like this terrible bill that aims to take away equality on the net.

—Claud Truax III, Bartonsville, PA

do the right thing!

—Steve Drucker, Sherrars, IL

no compromise on NET NEUTRALITY

—Raymundo Martinez, los angeles, CA

These people need to have a voice once I send this notice.

—Rayce Narrows, Poughkeepsie, NY

No monopolies on line or anywhere in our communications!

—K. Greg Greg Byers, Eugene, OR

Oh wow. Please stop. Can't you see that you are the definition of evil and greed?

—Barbara Thorp, Port Republic, MD

Companies have continued to prove that without regulation, tight regulation, they will do what benefits them and no one else.

—Paul Horne, Boynton Beach, FL

It is limited enough!

—Shana Wyatt, Idyllwild, CA

If net neutrality is sold to the most corrupt telecom bidder in the halls of Congress, the U.S. becomes just like China and Russia, letting a few companies decide who can survive on the internet. Even the simplest simp can understand that's not where we want to go, so I assume that even Republicans and Democrats may possibly understand also.

—Bruce R, Ringwood, NJ

Protect Net Neutrality. Represent the American people, not oligarchs.

—Eric Paul Jacobsen, West Saint Paul, MN

This bill will take educational and career opportunities from many individuals, as well as stymie their access to the most public forum that has ever existed, thus taking their free speech from them. A Title II Common Carrier reclassification is necessary in order to ensure fair and equal access to the internet for all citizens.

—Kenneth Sheckels, Fayetteville, NC

We MUST remain Net Neutral. Don't let Congress ruin Net Neutrality. Please do not support Rep. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752 - this is a bad mistake.

—Judy Epstein, Minneapolis, MN

Who is this putz? Does he think that his timing on this bill will get him some attention?

—Jacqueline m Dias, Las Vegas, NV

Don't let the money win again, please represent the people. Advise the FCC to change the Internet to a utility provision, and put an end to this. Urge President Obama to take the action he promised and change the way politics are run in our nation. BE BOUGHT NO MORE

—Christopher M Dockery, San Antonio, TX

Net Neutrality Now!

—Jon Spitz, Laytonville, CA

Improving the world requires a free and open internet. Making the world a better place can't move at the pace of Tom Wheeler and Bob Latta's Slow Lane.

—Trevor Black, Los Angeles, CA

Please, do not turn the internet into a monopoly. Please do not support this bill.

—Michael Wayne Krause, Houston, TX

Also stop the comcast merger!

—Judah Alt, Watertown, NY

Keep the internet fair and democratic - Oppose H.R. 4752!! Thank you!

—Diane Beeny, Westfield, NJ

Elections are around the corner. I URGE YOU SORRY ASSHOLES TO REMEMBER THIS.

—Seth Williams, Pensacola, FL

Can't stop the signal!

—Christopher Tobias, Pittsburgh, PA

Thank you.

—Zach Westerbeck, Sandy Valley, NV

Support of H.R. 4752 is a stab in the back against your constituents who pay your salary. Support them, and not the greedy big businesses that want to take over the internet for their own GREEDY PROFIT.

—Daniel Hulseapple, Middletown, NY

We must act to protect net neutrality!

—Mrs. Pat Machacek, Boise, ID

Shopping is a leisure activity. The only internet activities that warrant a "fast lane" are Amber alerts and tornado warnings.

—Judith Sanders, fredericksburg, VA

For a democracy to work, we need educated citizens. Free., public access to internet for all/

—Nancy Schraufnagel, Madison, WI

Protect the Constitution, not Marxism!!!

—David Jennings, Cedar Park, TX

The public has spoken and is overwhelmingly in favour of reclassifying the internet as a common carrier, thereby ensuring and protecting real, long-term Net Neutrality. To do anything else would be nothing short of a corporate coup d'etat.

—Luc Bouvier, Moncton,

The people's airwaves, TV and radio, were stolen under Reagan and handed over to the .1% to become the degenerate corporate tools they are today. Since a democratic republic requires communication, a patriotic Congress will not do the same thing to the internet.

—Mabel McElhaney, Hillsborough, NC

During a time that devisive party agenda is tearing this country apart, do not let this legislation be another black eye to the American public!

—Michael Denham, Portland, OR

Latta, bad

—Warren Winter, Norcross, GA

The first amendment was written for people and not corporations. A free and open internet is part of American culture. We do not live in a dictatorship where a few people decide the freedom the rest of can have. We either follow the Constitution or we should get rid of it.

—Keren Duran, South Gate, CA

Rep. Bob Latta stop trying to ruin net neutrality. I'll make sure to tell my parents and family who live in your 5th district of Ohio to do whatever it takes to get you out of office.

—Michael Ramos, Norman, OK

The internet should be free for everyone and not privatized for profit and gains.

—Cesar Rodriguez, Pittsburg, CA

Outrageous! A bill directing a Federal Agency to act against the citizens' best interest and welfare.

—Charles Aylworth, Salem, OR

The American People will not stand for this!!! It is a violation of The Constitution!!!!

—Kaili Ruggiero, Silver Spring, MD

The internet is ours. Don't let it be sold to big corporations, however much they contribute to your campaigns.

—Guy T Baehr, Newton, MA

We need strong protections to prevent the Internet from being carved into the haves and the have nots. Comcast and Verizon's proposed Internet fast lanes will stifle internet innovation in thousands of ways. If we had these fast lanes back in the 90's we would have no google, no facebook, no youtube. Please prevent this disaster from taking place.

—Jesse Faught, Vancouver, WA

Just Do It Dear Member of Congress. Yes, We Can, Together with Net Neutrality. Thanks.

—Mr. Benjamin J Miranda, Los Angeles, CA

This is the exact opposite of what the American people need!

—Lance J Konover, Chelsea, MA seriously, this is important

—David Mays, Columbus, OH

Uphold your oath.

—Steven Fischer, Petaluma, CA

It's time to resolve this - Once And For All! In favor of the people - who you all were sent there to protect!

—Bob Marconi, Santa Clara, CA

Please remember: Your vote determines my vote. Allowing internet providers like Time Warner Cable to throttle bandwidth from certain sites (example Netflix) while allowing full speed for their paid content negates the purpose of buying internet of a set speed. I have a 10gb/s connection currently. I should get the same speed from any site on the web, allowing for traffic and other unavoidable issues. If you support the above bill, you are basically stating that the Internet corporations elected you, instead of me. I would consider that a pretty serious issue, at election time.

—Larry Hanks, Harlingen, TX

dont let ignorance be your higher thinking. internet freedom for all

—Nando A., des moines, WA

Net Neutrality is Free Speech for the 21st century

—Charles Brobst, Binghamton, NY

Return to reasonableness. The Internet is the primary form of communication among Americans. It belongs under the Communications Act, Title II.

—Lynne Kane, Chapel Hill, NC

Don't cripple America's innovation. The internet is vital for the American economy. Do you think other nations will keep trusting us with running their web presence? Not without net neutrality! This would kill our ability to export web services and would thus hurt our GDP. Don't be stupid bu giving a few companies control over this vital part of every American's life and our nation's future.

—Keelan Johns, Salt Lake City, UT

People who discuss Net Neutrality often speak of creating a "fast lane" on the Internet. The problem is that this is a misconception. The Internet Service Providers are not building increased capacity to support this fast lane. What they are actually doing is slowing everyone else down artificially unless you pay them to prioritize your traffic. So what they are actually creating is a "slow lane" and an extortion racket. Extortion is a criminal offense of obtaining money, property, or services from a person, entity, or institution, through coercion. This is exactly what ISPs are trying to do. They are saying we will slow down your traffic unless you pay us. This is a crime. If a citizen tried to do this they would be charged with extortion, tried, convicted, and sentenced to at least a year in prison and significant fines. The Internet became what it is today because it is free and open. It should remain that way.

—Ben Key, Austin, TX

Would you be so eager to pass a bill that would stop the ISP's from regulating our internet?

—Stephen Hawkins, Pensacola, FL

Why this interest in owning - and in the end, censoring - the internet? Are its contents proving too truthful to bear?

—Deirdre Balaam, ,

HR 4752 is extremely ill-conceived and not in our nation's best interests. Handing over one of our nation's most important mediums of free speech, communication, and commerce to corporate oligarchies is very bad. What our nation needs and wants is Internet service providers classed as common carriers. If we lose Net Neutrality, no-one, and I want to be clear that this includes the Federal Government, and our elected representatives, who has a message not approved by Comcast, AT&T et al will be heard. I count on you to support Net Neutrality, and to do whatever is in your power to defeat HR 4752.

—Matthew Harris, Oakland, CA

Internet is common carrier, our free speech like the telephone.

—Val Sanfilippo, San Diego, CA

The internet needs to remain open!

—Laura Goodman, Elizabethtown, NC

Open communications supports and enhances democracy. Let that be.

—Patricia Orlinski, Sun City, AZ

Dear Representative Van Hollen, I know you'll do the right thing. Just lending support.

—Willard Goodman Goodman, Bethesda, MD declare all isp providers as "title 2" common carriers keep the internet open for all

—Allan Carroll, Lake City, FL

I thought the United States stood for freedom of speech. Apparently it will be only for the white moneyed navel-gazing males with vested interests and no conscience. Net neutrality is a concern to all the peoples of the world. You have no moral right to limit the internet or force the introduction of a 2 tier system.

—Debra Bolduc, Saint Hubert,

This is a very terrible bill and any member of Congress is a sell out to the people for supporting it.

—B Jones, El Reno, OK

Is it really any wonder why Americans have no faith in the proper operation of our government? Simply unbelievable.

—Patrick Carpenter, Mandeville, LA

Is this a democracy, or a fcking oligarchy!!??

—Marc Burbank, Spring, TX

Internet carriers MUST be reclassified as common carriers. Americans use the internet daily, it is an essential part of life.

—Leo McDevitt, Vista, CA

The internet is a utility just as our electric and telephone utilities. We pay a monthly fee and have the freedom to use this service. It is undemocratic and potentially censorious of the publics right to free speech and communication to allow this bill to pass. Do Not Support this Bill

—tanya marquette, new paltz, NY

Why should the crappy, inefficient ISPs get even RICHER?!?

—Garry M. Doll, Williamsport, PA

We need a free and open Internet; keep business interests out of it.

—Nancy Hancock, Livermore, CA

This bill certainly doesn't carry forward the will of the people I know and love and talk to. As a regular voter I note who votes for what. Next election I will vote accordingly.

—John Travena, Renton, WA

It is time to choose which side you will be on: the corporations who wish to rule, or the people. WE WILL BE WATCHING, AND WE VOTE!

—David & Judith Laws, Bellingham, WA

We have lost enough of our freedom.

—Phyllis M Riggins, Englewood, CO

BEWARE URGENT WARNING!!! DO NOT BELIEVE TOM WHEELER DIRTY DEALER INTERNET STEALER!!! HE COMES ON WITH HIS LIES ON FCC WEBSITE, REPLIES TO EMAILS WE SEND, VIDEOS AND EVEN STOOD IN FRONT OF FCC BUILDING IN WA,DC TO SAY HE IS FIGHTING TO SAVE OUR REAL OPEN INTERNET NEUTRALITY!!! DO NOT BE FOOLED BY THIS CRIMINAL INSIDER CRONY FOR THE CABLE INDUSTRY WHO HOPES HIS LIES AND SCUM BAG FILTHY DIRTY DEALS FOR MERGERS MONOPOLY MONSTER MADNESS ON STEROIDS TO ILLEGALLY STEAL OUR INTERNET... YES WHEELER HOPES USA CITIZENS SWALLOW HIS BULL SHIT AND HE CAN COMMIT THE CRIMES!!! WE THE PEOPLE PAID FOR THE BUILDING OF OUR INTERNET AND DEMAND TO OWN INTERNET AS A UTILITY COMPANY AS RIGHTFULLY OURS DONE DEAL!!! BUMMER BOMBED OUT OBAMA APPOINTED THIS TRAITOR BECAUSE IT GOES RIGHT ALONG WITH HIS GLOBAL SCAMS SUCH AS TPP SECRET FAST TRACK UNFAIR UNFREE HOSTILE TAKEOVER OF INTERNET CAVING INTO DICTATORSHIPS ABROAD AND NSA ALL ROLLED INTO ONE SUPER SKULL AND BONES GLOBAL WORLD ORDER BY 600 CEOS OF MEGA MULTINATIONAL CORRUPT CORPORATIONS THE 1% SICK ECONOMIC GANGSTERS AGAINST THE PEOPLES OF THE WORLD!!! OF COURSE THEY WANT IT SECRET BECAUSE IT IS HORRIBLE IMMORAL AND ILLEGAL SET UP SECRET COURTS AND THE REPURCUSSIONS ARE GRIM, GROSS, INHUMANE UNAMERICAN!!! YOU JARED KNOW THE DRILL! THE AMERICAN PEOPLE HAVE BEEN UP FRONT IN THE FACE OF FCC FOR NEARLY A DOZEN YEARS AND WE HAVE ORGANIZED VERY ARTICULATE HEARINGS WHICH THE FCC IS REQUIRED BY LAW TO HOLD BUT FAILED TO DO UNTIL WE THE PEOPLE MADE MANIFEST HEARINGS WHICH FCC WAS FORCED TO ATTEND!

—Meaghan Simpson, Fortuna, CA

Please don't allow corporations to rule who gets attention on the internet.

—Lucas Schneider, Arvada, CO

internet access is an essential service, like telephone. Everyone needs it equally.

—Ruth Fishkin, Oklahoma City, OK

Keep the net neutral

—Damond Cerutti, Raleigh, NC

Please don't do this. It will ruin small businesses and disenfranchise low income people.

—Lily Haggerty, Captain Cook, HI

You can't let middle man companies, ISPs, extort money from successful content providers and their customers.

—Michael Kulfan, Newburyport, MA

DO NOT DO THIS

—Joshua Dylan Wood, Mount Juliet, TN

This could be the final straw to launch the Revolution!

—Phoebe Sorgen, Berkeley, CA

This bill is toxic. You are being bought and sold by big companies. That makes you a promoter of greed and unfairness. This will STICK to all of you forever.

—Miriam Mason, Vancouver, WA

Our connection is SO SLOW now I cannot imagine using it at dial-up speeds. ATT is not even close to what we are paying for at the present time.

—Louise Goodman, Soda Springs, CA

How many times must the people speak against this conundrum before we are heard? We are a republic, not a corporatocracy, and we will not be bullied by large corporations who are willing to bribe elected officials into rooting themselves into our government so they can manipulate our society to fill their pockets. We the people oppose this bill and all who favor it.

—Russell Griffin, North Palm Beach, FL

Haven't you given enough to our corporate overlords. I know that you don't listen to the voice of the people or attend to their needs. I know that our representative democracy is a sham but keeping the Internet as it is will keep us entertained with the "bread and circuses" that divert us from the sad state of affairs we are in. It will be in your own self-interest to do so and I know your own self interest is the upper most priority when evaluating any of your actions.

—Robert D Wittman, Lawrence, KS

Hope Bob Latta enjoys being the LAPDOG of the giant TeleCom industries. I am sure there is NO "intellectual content" whatever to his position -- only the satisfactions (whatever they are . . .) of being a GOOD DOGGIE. Please vote this NIGHTMARE away. Thank you.

—Berkeley Fuller-Lewis, Emeryville, CA

The internet has become critical to the lives of U.S. Citizen's. It's too important to put at the whims of private companies.

—Tery Griffin, Wilmington, DE

Don't join the coin operated congressman. Vote against HR 4752. Protect Net Neutrality

—Peter Farley, Saint Paul, MN

I earn my living by working over the internet every day. A free and open internet is critical for all Americans.

—William Thickstun, Clinton, NY

We need one internet for all. We don't need a fast one for big business, and a slow one for the rest of us. End of story.

—Lee Bartell, New York, NY

Keep Net NUETRALITY

—Tom McDonnell, Little Neck, NY

a free and open Internet is vital to our future. ISPs are common carrier utilities and need to be regulated as such to ensure that promise and future.

—Spencer Hunter, Tucson, AZ

This is a threat to any remnants of democracy left in this country. First the horrific SCOTUS decisions giving immense power for the top 1% to control our political process and now this terrible loss of Net Neutrality bill allowing them to control access and suppress information on the internet. Not only is this extremely unfair to small companies, financially-strapped ones, start-ups, blogs, non-profits, etc, but it will discourage innovation, creativity, differing viewpoints, basically, the average citizens will have less of a voice to be seen and heard. China does this with government control/suppression, whereas, in the U.S., the large corporations/top 1% will have the power to do the same. This is unconscionable! This bill must be trashed!

—Pat P., Baltimore, MD

Net Neutrality always

—C J, WOOSTER, OH

A vote for this bill is a vote for the one-percent who wrongly control just about all of the public's assets. This is capitalism at its most corrupt state. Your vote for this dangerous bill would be your support of ongoing, corrupt activities in the United States. The Internet does not belong to too-big-to-jail enterprises.

—John D. Smith, New York, NY

Do the right thing!

—Joe McAneny, Vallejo, CA

I am just appalled at these attacks on Net Neutrality, which amount to nothing short of attacks on our freedom and on the public. I am just stunned.

—Winfield Carson, Poway, CA

The Internet is ours. You give it away to corporate interests and your jobs will be terminated and we will take to the streets.

—Madeleine Fisher Kern, Los Angeles, CA

Net Neutrality is a first amendment issue. If the corporate world takes control of the internet, they will control what we think because they will control what we can know about some thing. We need a free and open internet to survive -- otherwise, we will live in Orwell's Brave New World.

—Margaret Merrill, Blacksburg, VA

ISPs need to be classified as Common Carriers.

—Kenneth Koski, Minneapolis, MN

The internet must be made equal.
—Eric Satterfield, Frederick, MD

Protect Net Neutrality! Keep the net free
—Thom Stewart, Hampton, FL

STOP THE ATTACK! This is WRONG AND YOU KNOW IT!
—Anthony Schmidt, Carrollton, TX

Be careful, we are watching you!
—Carl F Lannquist III, Centerville, MA

We need net neutrality to prevent the widening of the socio-economic gap. Don't pass this bill!
—Doug Chunglo, Prescott, AZ

Government controlled media has been lying to us for decades. Advertisements are not education. We all have the right to access information unhampered rather than the corporate sponsored LIES —Mike Myers, shoemakersville, PA

We want net neutrality
—Random Man, ,

There is absolutely no good reason for this, except self serving, greed, and making playing field un level
—Fredrick Whalum, Richton pk., IL

The reason the Internet has supported a vast economy is its freedom and availability to everyone. If the broadband providers are not placed under Title II, this freedom and this economy will wither and die. Don't let this happen.
—Thomas E. Reed, Orlando, FL

A clear step toward a Dictatorship is controlling communication . Which Direction is the United States headed ??? Let us know President Obama —Melody Chord, Portland, OR

This country was created on principles of freedom and equality. The internet gives equal treatment and opportunities to anybody. I implore you not to take that away.
—Jacob Murphy, Hartforn, CT

Keep the internet free and neutral
—Linda Long, Trinidad, CA

Serve the public interest by helping to provide an Internet fast lane for everyone at the same affordable price.
—Raymond Kalas, Knowlton, NJ

We need to let Congress know that when they do FINALLY perform an action, let it NOT be against the consumer and the American public. Thank you.
—Pv Norton, Boylston, MA

Internet is free speech-why ruin choice , and income for folks ? Government by consent not descent...

—Art Gray, Matawan, NJ

The internet should cost the same for all users and should be the same speed for everyone. I thought our representatives were there to support a democratic philosophy. There should be the same access for citizens and businesses. Why does Congress seem to always be on the side of corporations? They are supposed to get special access and we are supposed to bail them out of every mess. Please try to work for the people for a change.

—Aileen Spillman, Herbster, WI

...and to the Plutocracy for which it stands...

—Mitchell Diamond, Sunnyvale, CA

How about you people learn a little about the underlying architecture of the internet before you go messing with it? Broadband internet NEEDS to be classified as a common carrier like telephone service and cable TV so that it can be regulated in the same ways. You wouldn't like it if your cell phone carrier gave you faster service for some of your apps and slower service for others depending on their corporate alliances, so why should you let that kind of thing be allowed on the internet? You shouldn't! So, let the FCC do its job!

—Karen T, Rochester, MN

This bill is an obvious attempt at lobbying for the protect of privatization of the last true democratic platform in our society. Why would anyone, other than large corporations, support this? This is not what the people want.

—Carla wright, Fort Lauderdale, FL

I do not support this bill. I'm sure the public doesn't support this either. United States is 15th in the world when it comes to internet speed. 16th is Philippines. The internet monopoly in the U.S is ridiculous. Verizon FiOS using title ii in New York to get tax break. This companies don't support title ii unless they only beneficial for them. The government is controlled by lobbyist for money.

—Chino Borja, Niles, IL

These so called lawmakers are not representing the people. They are representing the corporate interests and banks.

—John Lies, Scottsdale, AZ

Don't make FCC give away Net Neutrality. Back FCC in their fight with AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, et. al. FCC members need you to have their backs because they are politically weak. Bob Latta's bill would do the opposite

—John Walling, Seattle, WA

Any understanding of the internet and the uses to which active users put it, recognize that ISPs function as common carriers, and that the appropriate classification for them.

—Kent Wilson, Glenview, IL

Thank you in advance for preserving and ensuring our access to digital technology.

—Al DeVos, Salinas, CA

"Just say NO."

—Reba Stone, St. Simons Island, GA

please preserve net neutrality

—Ronald Bougie, auburn, ME

Do not block free speech!
—Michael Reed, Salem, OR

I know it's a form letter, but I wholeheartedly agree.
—Emily McKee, Rancho Mirage, CA

This issue is as important to the 1st amendment as is the stupid "money-is-speech" issue; the oligarchs want to take away what little voice the rest of us have left to us.
—Larry Bright, Ypsilanti, MI

It's clear that Latta is a servant of the corporations who pay him and not of the people who elected him. Your vote in this matter will clarify where YOUR allegiances lie.
—Thomas Mora, Leander, TX

We don't have a lot of money and this will hurt us in the future, The internet should be fair and even, not better for the people who can afford it. We should reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act. We need Net Neutrality. Sincerely, Gloria and Cliff Nichols
—Gloria Nichols, Idaho Falls, ID

THE INTERNET IS A UTILITY, NOT A PRIVILEGE!!!!
—Dotty Haight, Glendora, CA

Keep the internet open for all.
—Sean Tujaka, ,

In addition, as broadband service providers are in fact in the communications service that the FCC was created to control. By lobbying Congress these companies are trying to demonstrate they are the ones making the laws, not you. Grow a pair and vote this down.
—Truman Fugle, Bandera, TX

CORPORATE AMERICA SHOULD NOT DETERMINE WHOSE VOICE IS HEARD.
—William Christina, Danvers, MA

This law will not stand - we the people will not allow it. Show some moral courage!
—Cecilia Lieder, Duluth, MN

Toxic bills want to forbid changes but helpful bills are looked at as having now power. We are a country to is supposed to hinge on what the majority agree on. Why are we getting legislation forced through and passed by the minority? We The People Want Net Neutrality! That should be the end of the conversation.
—J Boucher, North Adams, MA

stop the media mega corporations from stealing the net which was created at the taxpayers expense. Profit is one thing, but thievery obviously still drives wall street and the banks. Enough is enough.
—Derek Ruell, Fresno, CA

OBVIOUSLY, LATTA HAS SOLD OUT TO THE BIG TELECOMS THAT WANT TO END NET NEUTRALITY - DON'T LET HIM SUCCEED WITH THIS TOXIC BILL...
—Patricia Guthrie, Chalfont, PA

How Slow Do You think non-corporate speech <message timeout. Try again later>

—Brian T Donovan, vancouver, WA

Please ignore the huge donations from the monopolists Verizon and Comcast and ATT. Rather, act in the best interests of US citizens and consumers.] Incidentally, corporations are not people regardless of what the justices say.

—Thomas C Schwartzburg, Oakland, CA

SOMETIMES YOU CAN'T TELL THE SHIT FROM THE SHITTER. WITH BOB LATTA, THE POINT IS MOOT SINCE THERE IS NO DIFFERENCE. DON'T GET HIS SHIT ON YOUR REPUTATIONS.

—Rick Nixon, McCloud, CA

How much does it cost to purchase a legislator?

—Charles M. LaBow, Palmetto Bay, FL

The internet needs to be declared a public utility because we will never be able to complete our on-line applications and forms or our purchase orders because of all the time outs. Especially when we are dealing with the government services such as Social Security, Medicaid, health services or motor vehicle web sites. There will be a log jam the likes of which you have never seen. And it will be frustrating as hell for the government as well as the consumer.

—Kenneth Farrell, Mountainville, NY

Can you please stop trying to divide up and restrict the internet? Thank you.

—Michael Zacka, Recan, VA

Please don't take away the few chances this country has for innovation and progress.

—Meghan C, Lewisville, TX

When is enough enough, how many freedoms that we now enjoy are on the chopping block of big businesses greed?

—Ms. Shirley Pettis, Denver, CO

As a computer science student the free and open internet is the basis of my livelihood. Without it business that would otherwise open in the united states and employ individuals like myself will open in other countries thus weakening and already shaky US economy. Please defend the open internet and the livelihood of your voters.

—Aldo Hernandez, San Angelo, TX

Don't need companies ruining my life and only fun feature.

—Stanislaw Szostak, ,

PLEASE don't sell us out to the telecoms....They are too big as it is and they certainly cannot be trusted.

—Dave Corlew jr, Queensbury, NY

Please do what you were elected to do, and don't do the bidding of the corporations, ok? True Net Neutrality is what the public wants, so please do NOT support H.R. 4752. Thank you.

—Dennis Jackson, Norco, CA

really? who do you serve? Please answer "the people" all other answers are mild treason.

—William Wolf Guenette, Chicago, IL

CLASSIFY THE INTERNET AS A PUBLIC UTILITY.

—Manel Saddique, Los Angeles, CA

There is really no new regulation being proposed, just reinstating what the dc circuit court struck down. You know, the regulation that was present in making the internet great thing it has grown to be today?

—Daniel Guerriero, Nanuet, NY

The internet needs to stay open for the world, not just for Americans, and these classifications will hurt everyone.

—Barbara Piszczek, Oxnard, CA

You have been elected and are paid to support and protect our interests, the people's interests. Why is it so difficult for some of you to understand this simple concept? Vote NO ON H.R.4752. Otherwise you are committing a crime by abetting those who want to steal our Internet from us, the people.

—Graciela Huth, LOS ANGELES, CA

Again, pls. OPPOSE HR 4752.

—A Wolf, Monroe, NY

This is vital to the future of American competativeness.

—Cliff Martinez, DALLAS, TX

Letting the communications companies decide who will get fast service and who will not, will stifle innovation and small business creation as well as the free flow of information. It's basically very undemocratic and not something this country should allow. Net Neutrality is the only way to ensure free and unfettered access to the awesome power of the internet.

—Mrs. Sandra S. Clark, Jacksonville, FL

I mean it!!! Stop Latta!!!! Who's pocket is he in?

—Lesly Van Dame, Houston, TX

The Internet is not for sale to only the richest Americans.

—David Neuendorff, Toledo, OH

We don't want a two tier Internet, with fast lanes for pay, and slow lanes for no pay, which would be the vast majority of people.

—Joel I. Friedman, Davis, CA

This effort is profoundly undemocratic and contrary to our founding principles.

—Lawrence Jasud, Memphis, TN

Please don't support this bill and think about the American people who use the Internet Service for business, school, and work. The world is becoming more reliant for businesses to use the Internet. Even Americans are made to sign up with Obamacare via internet, and to access to other services through there. Eventually, we emails are a requirement, if they are not all ready -- just like having a phone number.

—Tannie Duong, Murrieta, CA

A vote for this bill is against all of us that use the net

—Paula Bourgeois, Woodland Park, CO

Profit uber alles i not always the best policy.

—Alan Lambert, Los Altos, CA

DO NOT SUPPORT H.R. 4752. It will deprive the American Public from the Internet as we know it!!!

—Lawrence A Donohoe, Gordon, TX

it is enough with your FEMA concentration camps, your stealin' resources without payin for around the world, your terrorist wars against humanity! enough with your lies I say! we're free humans and will be that again! If your fascist Lobbyists owned by FED, it is your problem, enough with this bullshit against freedom again! So now we will show you, what REAL DEMOCRACY means! all what you'll eat and earn from now, are your green poisoned frogskins! Bon appetit! I am that, I am!

—man of house Hayn Udo, ,

This bill runs counter to public sentiment. Your vote either sides with lobbyists or with the American people. Please protect the open internet from corporate greed.

—Cory Pendergraft, Richardson, TX

The net was created to encourage the free flow of information. This bill undermines the very core of the internet.

—Laura Horowitz, Pittsburgh, PA

NO I NEED NET NEUTRALITY I HAVE RIGHTS AND FREEDOM

—Tej Dungarani, PLYMOUTH, MI

We do need true net neutrality.

—Emily Willoughby, Tukwila, WA

Millions of people, companies, innovators, artists and organizations have been urging the FCC to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers. Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality.

—C Wilson, Bailey, CO

Net Neutrality, it is very simple. The internet belongs to the people, Tom Wheeler nor Congress has any right to sell off the rights to it! It is how Americans Communicate

—Chris Wludyka, Miami, FL

please don't support this bill. thank you.

—Richard Erb, Cincinnati, OH

Net neutrality is a free exchange of information between people & organizations, please preserve it for the American people. Company's owning the internet will limit, slow or stop this exchange. The free exchange of information is the key to society's well being . Freedom of the net should be equal to freedom of speech or the press technology has created a new form expression that is equal.

—Doreen Hayes, Chula Vista, CA

This is yet another attack on Democracy and only the most heinous would let Net Neutrality be compromised. If you haven't already, dear representative, grow a pair and vote in favor of your constituency!

—Katherine Shekeloff, Lafayette, CA

Quit catering to big business and protect your constituency. Quit being finger puppets for the rich and the elite. Have you forgotten the phrase "For the people, by the people and of the people" in the Constitution? Maybe you should reread it so you understand WHY you were elected! If you are not for the people then YOU are the problem. My solution to end this congressional b. s.: Vote out ALL INCUMBENTS! Reelect NOBODY!!

—Paul Groh, Gulf Breeze, FL

The internet IS a public utility that millions of businesses and citizens depend on daily. It should be classified as a public utility ~!!
—Bruce Sims, ESCONDIDO, CA

Broadband Internet service is a common carrier. Protect the public consumer not the lobbyists and special interests, corporations are not people.
—Ellen Tracy, Ellsworth, ME

Loss of net neutrality means significant curbing of freedom of expression.
—Mr. Edward Costello, Santa Monica, CA

Please stop this. I pay enough money to the internet and to telecommunications, as well. What you are doing is ruining our economic structure. These corporations don't pay their taxes, and they are still trying to get more money out of half-decent, hard working Americans.
—Francis Kelly Sales IV, Pflugerville, TX

If you vote for this bill and support it, when I am allowed to vote for and support you, I WON'T. Don't follow the ex-cable tv lobbyist cronie who is the chair of the FCC making his former friends rich, follow the will of the American people and your constituents!
—Matthew Adam Kreth, Birmingham, AL

You people are shooting yourselves in the foot at the behest of your corporate masters, the Koch brothers. The INTERNET got most of you elected-- the Koch brothers' fortune is NOT going to be able to overcome that fact. When TV, the newspapers, and the Internet are closed to the People, we will meet in the streets, in our churches and our schools, and we WILL throw you OUT of office.
—Suzanne M. Miles, Eagle River, AK

As the next economic crash looms near, monopolies buy the least mindful politicians.
—Joseph A. Mungai, Elgin, IL

Selling out is selling yourself and your humanity.
—Joel Ruoth, RALEIGH, NC

Thank you in advance for preserving and ensuring our access to digital technology.
—Al De Vos, Salinas, CA

The internet has clearly become just as much a utility as gas or electricity and I believe you should be able to access it just as you pay for it without interference or preference.
—Darwin Smith II, Muskegon Heights, MI

i do not allow this —Ryan Lundy, Columbia, IL

If you vote to destroy net neutrality I will boycott all of the service providers. I have boycotted and bad mouthed Sears since 1975 and they are now on their way out of business. I will do the same by boycotting the internet service providers.
—Andrew J. Jacobsen, Apache Junction, AZ

I'm tired of the people's voices being ignored. Stand up for what we want.
—Brad Proctor, Indianola, IA

inter-. prefix. 1. between or among: international ... Definition of NET: : a group of communications stations operating under unified control Put the two together and you get a group of ISP's working amongst the world's people. No one gets to exploit the commons!

—Mr. Paul Ginnetti, Lackawanna, NY

Stop screwing with us on behalf of rich people.

—Joe Hacking, Belmont, MA

we must keep Internet neutrality. Kindly defeat this bill. Thank you.

—Philip G Rich, Albany, NY

Please, work for the people of the U.S.A., not for the big business lobby that only has its own interests in mind. We elected you, not them, and we can unelect you, even with their money, if you don't keep the internet free. Please, don't turn your back on your people!

—Luke Davis, Philadelphia, PA

Can Congress show anymore disdain for the American people, for Justice and Fairness?

—Beth Browne, Fairview, TN

NET NEUTRALITY

—R Clements, Anytown, TX

WE will watch closely your position and vote on this issues. We value the open internet - let's see where your values lie

—Mary MacVicar, Columbus, OH

Please do something for the people.

—Bill Sorem, Minnetonka, MN

As a concerned US citizen I am outraged and disgusted with this bill.

—Dr. Mha Atma S. Khalsa, Los Angeles, CA

The internet IS as critical in this day and age as water and electricity. It should become a common carrier!

—Fred Morrison, Hayward, CA

Do the right thing!

—Cynthia Cynthia Maris Dantzic, Brooklyn, NY

Net Neutrality gives us the security as well as the basic privacy rights we deserve! Please do not take that away!

—Samantha Yigdal, Pittsboro, NC

So we now have to pay to express ourselves?! Free speech?! No more of this BS! We will be watching you.

—Geoff Murphy, Lake Elsinore, CA

Let's reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications act - obey the will of the American people (not that of Big Business), and VOTE AGAINST BILL H.R. 4752!!

—William Jorns, Elmhurst, IL leave our internet alone !

—Rhonda Reichel, San Antonio, TX

The internet is vital to us all. Please don't change from the free internet!

—Carma D. Forgie, Chicago, IL

"We the people"

—Farrel Williams, McAllen, TX

Is there some reason you would prefer internet to be an expensive luxury rather than a utility?

—Mary Armstrong, Philadelphia, PA

Real neutrality is real freedom. This is important!

—Mrs. Valerie Klauscher, Crescent, PA

Give me a break. The internet should be considered as a common carrier.

—Ed Grossheim, Brighton, IL

What a terrible bill. Kill it.

—David Grantham, Shreveport, LA

Congress was created to "protect" the "rights & liberties" of it's CITIZENS... NOT give in to Corporate greed, & it's agendas. The NET is the free information exchange center to further the human existence ... NOT to be stifled by the Corporate Marketing Agenda with ADS, & other retail propaganda !!!

—Paul S, Corpus Christi, TX

The hell with corporate owned idiot Latta, make the net a common carrier, end of damn story.

—Lara DeLuz, Orangevale, CA

Vote NO on HR 4752!

—Lisa Harrison, New York, NY

It's bad enough we have monopolies in New Mexico like CenturyLink and the two cable carriers with a lock on specific markets. Leave the internet otherwise to the true public as it is now, or regulate to prevent the creation of hierarchical access with the rules now proposed and under review by the FCC. Robert Latta has no supporters, which speaks volumes. Thank you.

—Margaret McCarthy, Rio Rancho, NM

Lets make the internet available and open to all. More bandwidth, faster speeds, this is the way to grow american businesses big and small. Please do not micromanage the FCC, Your friend and fellow citizen, Linda

—Linda Vilhena, Eugene, OR

There is NOTHING good about this bill for the people. This is an obvious "big business" buy-out of a Congressman.

—Jonathan Jacobsen, Las Vegas, NV

Please make sure to read this bill before voting. Vote NO

—Linda Ignasiak, Tampa, FL

I run a one-woman business on the Internet. I need a level playing field to survive.

—Jen Funk Weber, Sutton, AK

Keep the internet the way it is.

—Michael Grundt, Fountain Hills, AZ

Stop H.R. 4752 and any other bills that effect the public's communication

—Bonnie Hernandez, Salinas, CA

As a computer scientist this issue is very important to me.

—Robert Drysdale, Hanover, NH

the will of the people versus the will (and money) of a few corporations

—John Kosiorek, Springfield, MA

The Internet is a public utility for the common good of Our Country. Start treating it as such!

—Stephen G Schoggen, Little Silver, NJ

Please Please Please Not like the Beatles but Please Everyone . . . Don't let the Exploiters a.d the Grafters The 1 % 's Yet again wrest control from those who would live free. This is the Last Frontier . . . Rev. Scott St. John ~

—Scott St. John, Saugerties, NY

Stop messing with the internet for your own personal desires!

—OniBee, Athens,

You guys disgust me.

—Braden Wiggins, Catonsville, MD

We will be watching to see who you support, the people who elect you or BIG business.

—Gregory J. McComas, Huntington, WV

We need you to stand up for real Net Neutrality, not prohibit it.

—Christopher Styga, Elmhurst, NY

The internet, with its ability to freely communicate across the world, is a path to human understanding. Keep it as open to all as possible.

—Steve Knutson, Corbett, OR

JUST SAY NO!!!!

—Rebecca Hickey, Portland, OR

Motherfuckin cocksuckers!

—Professor PoopyPants, Nevada City, CA

Oppose H.R. 4752. This is a bill written by a shill for the telecoms. It will cripple the Internet if it is adopted.

—Ronald Kalil, Madison, WI

Listen to the people. We don't want this bill.

—Andres Calderon, Salt Lake City, UT

Rep Latta, I am deeply disappointed with the legislation you introduced. Time and again you prove that you are NOT for the people and what is good for them. I have NEVER voted for you in my district, and at this rate I never WILL.

—Rebecca Wiren, Bryan, OH

Keep the internet a level place for all the world's community.

—Nicolas Palmer, Roswell, GA

Congress with their corrupt corporate priorities, should have nothing to say about the internet. The internet was developed by government people using taxpayer money. Why should we have to pay corporations for the right to use the internet? Congress needs to stand up for the people, even if this is the only time they do. Tell AT&T, Comcast, Time Warner and all the other money suckers of the American people to go away, do the right thing for the people of America!

—Sandra Brady, Pinellas Park, FL

save net neutrality

—K Lucas, Westminster, CA

President Obama, Don't Let Congress Ruin Net Neutrality

—Elsa Collins Collins, ,

Your Actions Justify Belief in Conspiracy Theories of Intended Catastrophes to Benefit Rapine Cosa Nostra Elites. Stop Meddling.

—James Barrington, London,

Please do not allow this bill to get out of ANY committee. Net Neutrality is the only viable information source ON THE PLANET. ALL ... others are severely corrupted. PLEASE do not support this dangerous bill and vote NO when it comes up for a vote... Thanks...

—William Brown, Manhattan Beach, CA

this is a joke. the only reason people like these oppose a truly neutral internet are because they get paid to.

—Thomas Gilroy, college park, MD

The FCC & federal regulators MUST reclassify broadband service as a public utility, which would allow for the requirement of net neutrality rules. We want to reclassify ISPs as Title II common carriers. A common carrier is required to provide service in general terms and indiscriminately.

—Bruce Burns, Santa Cruz, CA

H.R. 4752 Is an attack on the American people.

—Jason Dilling, Acworth, GA

Another way to mess things up so the large companies are taken care of while the rest of us can dish out more dollars for less!

—Florence Portell, Sun City, AZ

Supporting a business in taking away what belongs to the people is anti-civilian. Let the people keep what belongs to them. Net providers are just that, providers. To allow them to control what users do on the net is wrong, and unfair. Support Net Neutrality.

—Lyle A. Chandler, Lorain, OH

This is the United States of America and we do have free speech. This bill is not what America is about.

—Yolanda Markle, Spanaway, WA

Bob Latta has a corrupt/fraudulent financial interest in feathering his own "secret" bank accounts with his involvement in this scam...He must now be investigated by the CIA / NSA, for his own criminal involvement, then face long term prison sentence for involvement in conspiracy charges.

—Trevor Alfred, HOUNSLOW,

Do you want to kill small and medium-sized businesses? Just pass this bill.

—Peter Slavcheff, Royal Oak, MI

The FCC is in charge of how ISPs are handled. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752 is a blatant move by ISPs and their friends to avoid a battle they should not win.

—Kevin Connolly, Blacksburg, VA

VOTE NO!!!

—Donna J Davis, Buda, TX

i am against this change

—W Jude Leblanc, Atlanta, GA

Be nice.

—Jon STOA, San Francisco, CA

Tax the Banksters and Wall Street.

—Larry Anderberg, Newfane, VT

Hello, Please vote NO to this toxic bill and preserve America for the people not for the big corporations. PLEASE. Do the right thing here for the sake of humanity. Thanks.

—alex N., ann arbor, MI

Please do your part in assuring that the internet stays with net neutrality!

—Francis James Roberts, El Cajon, CA

We already get to little and pay too much, we do not need less choices we need the net to be neutral to all!

—James Kuhn, Norfolk, VA

You need to question the motive of Bob Latta -

—Rene Robert, Phoenix, AZ

Please don't turn your back on us.

—Jan Cohen, Boonville, MO

Net neutrality is one of the topmost important issues of our society today, as it enables true free speech and Democratic discussion of the many serious issues that we face. I urge you to take all steps necessary to ensure that all viewpoints, even the most out-on-the-fringe or held by the smallest minority, have equal opportunity to be heard & seen online. I appreciate your attention to this matter and thank you for taking time to hear my thoughts on this matter.

—Caroline Lunsford, Rohnert Park, CA

please dont let this bill pass this mean providers like ATT have free rain. to do what they wont charge us the customers arm and a leg, if you pass thats what going to happen.

—Matt Arnold, Smiths Station, AL

Keep the internet the way it was invented, free and open !

—George Raymond, Palm Springs, CA

Keep the networks open

—Laura Shaine Cunningham, Stone Ridge, NY

If the info above is accurate, you need to not vote for H.R. 4752. Thank you.

—Ann Graham, Wichita, KS

Please make it a common carrier. Thank you.

—David Wolf, Kula, HI

Keep the internet free and open for all citizens.

—Mr. Robert Werden, Glendale, CA

Freedom of information is a hallmark of democracy

—Steve Lyons, rockford, IL

A vote for this bill is an act of treason.

—Charles Paul Becker, LITCHFIELD, CT

the Net should be treated the same as radio and TV...everyone has the same access.

—, Sonora, CA

I want my fast internet!!!!!!!!!!

—Mercy Drake, Mesa, AZ

A bill like this is a violation to our rights as Americans.

—Marquise Reaves, Poplar Grove, IL

Please listen to the people for whom you have a great responsibility. Hopefully you were not elected by the lobbyists & the big business interests that they represent.

—Alesoun Marsden, Sydney,

NO to HR4752. YES to reclassifying broadband Internet service as a common carrier!

—Patricia Hauser, Shorewood, MN

Please do not let congress completely destroy a chance a net neutrality. If anything this bill should be mandating that the FCC does just that.

—Trevor King, Lakewood, CA

What part of don't let this happen don't you understand???

—Mrs. Wendy H, Jax, FL

It's incredibly disappointing to watch the imminent strangulation of the truly open Internet happening in plain sight. Please do your part to defend the Internet and the American people from greed.

—Tyler Parsons, Los Angeles, CA

Comcast has been illegally throttling people's connections already prior to any of this. Do not sell out to them or anyone please!!!!

—Tim Froehlig, Round Lake, IL

No member of Congress should sell out to Corporation Profits and greed. Broadband Internet Service providers should always be under Title II of the Communications Act. Please protect Net Neutrality.

—Marilyn Coleman, windsor, CT

Though I'm canadian, my understanding of what these companies are attempting to do will undoubtedly affect me as well.

—Bill, ,

We need an amendment for neutral internet as a common carrier practice!

—Travis Baron, Long Beach, CA

This bill creates 2nd class citizenship and opens the Internet only to those who can afford it.

—Robert Edwards, Wilkes-Barre, PA

ANY government control of the internet WILL DESTROY the internet for most people that actually depend on it for their jobs, and STUDENTS, and the average citizen.

—Donald McCormick, Portland, OR

I believe that the internet is the greatest invention of mankind, destroying it would result in a broken future.

—Adam K Nickells, Fowler, OH

Please reclassify broadband Internet as a common carrier.

—Kathryn M. Smith, Little Rock, AR

Net Neutrality is a no-brainer for a democracy founded on the high ideals of Free Speech for all! Please keep supporting the high ideals of the Founders for Free Speech for all -- NOT just for those who have the big bucks.

—Tom Huntington, Santa Monica, CA

We need something that makes sense for everyone not just the big cable provider.

—Peter Meyer, Loveland, CO

Please reclassify AS a common carrier.

—Lowell Hart, Edwards, CO

The Internet needs to be open and free from certain laws that prohibit Net Neutrality.

—Jim Cvitkovic, Powder Springs, GA

The internet is the best communications platform since open radio and television, and should be classified as a communications that cannot discriminate. ISPs should not control how fast my favorite streaming service or political action website can go, because then they control my rights to open free speech. If anyone votes to let ISPs do this, they must know they are voting against the American people, and the Constitution itself.

—Logan Overton, Cottage Grove, OR

It is time for Congress to support a free, open, and unrestricted internet. If our founding fathers were here, today, I am confident they would feel the same way. The internet has grown into a fifth estate. I do not want corporations deciding issues about its use. I despair that Congress could be unduly influenced by those whose motivation is profit. Government needs to protect more than money.

—John Clark, Warren, NJ

Please do not inhibit the powers of the FCC to regulate the internet. It needs to have the full ability to do what is right for the American People. Please vote against this bill.

—Eric Abt, Auburn, CA

Please do not do this.

—Grant Janz, ,

Congress is supposed to be there for THE AMERICAN PEOPLE not GREEDY UN-AMERICAN PSYCHOPATHS. Don't let them trash the Internet. (Though most INTELLIGENT REAL Americans know what a bunch of UN-AMERICAN FASCIST TERRORISTS you REALLY ARE.)

—Daniel J. Fontes, Lafayette, IN

Net neutrality is part of "We, the People"s universal commons. Stop the ongoing intrusion by corporations into our space!

—Marjorie Johnson, Espanola, NM

The Internet is as important to 21st century commerce and democracy that it must be protected as an open, common carrier.

—Steve Goldhaber, Boulder, CO

Screw the corporations and their BS. Do the right thing for your constituents and keep the Net Neutral. Your constituents put you in office , not the big money , or am I wrong?

—Brian Robertson, Rush, NY

The ONLY way to protect true internet neutrality is to classify ISPs as Title II Common Carriers. PLEASE VOTE NO ON H.R. 4752!!

—Celeste Rothstein, Lakewood, CA

Net neutrality is crucial for free speech around the world and for unbiased access to knowledge. The internet is currently the most important communication medium in the world and to allow certain parties with vast financial means to hold priority over those with less will be immensely detrimental to the world's population. Business interests can't be given priority over access to knowledge and free speech. Regards, Pierre Gallant.

—Pierre Gallant, Ottawa,

A strong democracy requires informed citizens. This bill would make it difficult to access information that is not backed by moneyed interests. We need you to vote against it, please.

—Sandra L. Uribe, San Antonio, TX

Vote "No" on H.R. 4752. An internet unrestricted is a vehicle for freedom both here and abroad. We begin to move in the direction of those governments who wish to limit internet access when we, in the name of free enterprise, instead give it over to corporations.

—J Clark, Warren, NJ

This bill stinks, it's smoke and mirrors.

—Michelle Ognjanovic, New York, NY

Please stop this bill

—Andre LeBlanc, Maurice, LA

Please defend our right to equality on the internet.

—Forest Burkhart, Parker, CO

A vote for this bill is a vote against economic growth and jobs in Upstate New York.

—Robert Brown, Keuka Park, NY

Congress needs to shut up!

—Clark T. Davis, Los Osos, CA

This is a high-profile issue, and extremely important to me. Thank you for helping to keep big money from reducing our freedom.

—Gary Jones, Fort Collins, CO

A free Internet equals freedom! Do not destroy freedom!

—Jeanne Szczechowski, Bay Saint Louis, MS

"the very word secrecy is repugnant in a free and open society;"

—Shawn M. Mead, WA

Preemptive legislation of this type demonstrates, in the clearest possible way, utter contempt for the peoples' interest and the democratic process.

—Jerrold E. Allen, Falls Church, VA

Thank you, Mr. Latta. How much did you get paid by Big Communication Corporations to introduce your noxious bill?

—Dr. Sandra H Cooper, Wheatland, WY

Screw big business.

—Alec Hachman, Billerica, MA

I don't expect you to respond or care, but still I try.

—CFSabourin Sabourin, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Since my work depends on extensive Internet access, abolishing open and free use would put me out of business.

—Paul Cardwell, Bonham, TX

Bob Latta is trying to undermine Net neutrality, like many other politicians who stand to profit from censoring the internet. What these politicians fail to understand, is that if you censor the net, you end up censoring small businesses, and those small businesses cannot provide jobs for workers, who help stimulate the economy. Censoring the internet, and undermining net neutrality also violates nearly every single amendment in the constitution, especially the first amendment!

—Paul Jackson, Laconia, NH

GREED is destroying our country!

—Patricia McHUGH, SAINT LOUIS, MO

It is readily apparent this bill represents the wishes of private vested interests rather than the public at large.

—John P Lawler, Wilwood, MO

America "the greatest country in the world". Yea, right. When are we going to look ourselves in the face and admit we've screwed it up? We're no longer first or even in the top 5 or top 10 on so many indicators of prosperity. Internet access and speeds are just another one of those indicators. Permitting monopoly (or regional monopoly) control of the Internet and allowing tiered pricing depending on the content of packets delivered is another nail in the coffin of America the great. The Internet didn't become an economic engine for the country because it was regulated. It became one because it was open and unregulated. And the carriers didn't go poor from that model either. Continuing to provide an open service won't make them poor either. Support the open Internet. Don't support H.R. 4752. Thank you.

—Alan Boba, Red Hook, NY

Leave the Internet alone. Thanks —Shirley Slaysman, Eagar, AZ

www.WeAreOne.cc

—Joseph Kohn MD, Wailuku, HI

Stop prostituting the American people and the constitution for the benefit of a few wealthy amoral companies. STOP!

—Robert Muller, Ballston Spa, NY

Please keep the internet equal for all.

—Brennen Power, city, MO

No ! No ! and NO ! Comcast is already charging more than a lot of us can afford and the content just gets worse and worse. Have you not heard of the "digital divide"? My only source of information is the radio and the internet. Fortunately for me the building I live in give's us lifetime WiFi for a one time fee of $72. or I would be reliant on the radio and I suppose 1/2 slots at the local library for internet. Come on. The internet needs to be regulated as a utility because that's what it has become. Most job applications have to be done on line you know.

—Amber Joy, Seattle, WA

Please take a stand with Net Neutrality, to defend the Internet as we've known it for all these years, and fight to oppose this excessively dangerous bill threatening to destroy it.

—Brandon Bundy, Hopewell, VA

Please don't allow the Internet to be ruled by corporations.

—Susan Haywood, Portland, OR

It is still not clear to me why the Republican party has gone so far off the rails for nearly 20 years. This used to be a respectable conservative group that would protect people and their rights and now it seems to be bought and sold and completely unable to do its job because of conflict of interest.

—Katherine Shields, Portland, OR

The U.S is becoming everything we were proud we were not. The current group of politicians will be remembered in history for being the most un-American to date. Really, You are making un-American the new goal. You should be ashamed

—Christopher Southall, Little Rock, AR

DO NOT SUPPORT H.R. 4752!!!

—Shane A. Morrison, Gosport, IN

Wake up and smell the corruption, net neutrality represent the interests of 99.9% of the people in this country.

—Rob Wells, milwaukie, OR

Democracy is at stake

—Gerald Grundstein, Tucson, AZ

Start doing something right!

—Richard Jones, Phoenix, NY

The Internet is a public utility ... even AT&T thinks so. That's why AT&T wants to abandon the POTS phone lines and switch all voice calls to Voice over Internet Protocol.

—Mark Garfinkel, Aliso Viejo, CA

Keep the Net Neutral!

—David Robertson, Drouin,

ep. Bob Latta has introduced a bill that would prevent the FCC from reclassifying broadband Internet. A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet.

—Sergio Villalta, DORAL, FL

We want Net Neutrality. It built the Net, spooned creativity & encouraged new ways of thinking. Without Net Neutrality this would disappear. The internet should not be for sale!

—Ruth Dyke, Foresthill, CA

Please keep the internet neutral . A vote for bill H.R. 4752 is not only a vote against an open Internet but a vote against the very people who you claim to represent . The everyday user of the Internet will be the losers while the ISPs will be given an even stronger monopoly . If you really believe in a free market then do to the ISPs what was done to Bell Telephone decades ago . Doing this as well as returning the ISPs under Title II of the Communications act will guarantee the future of the internet for ALL Americans .

—Keith L. Root, Flushing, MI

Anyone who supports this bill WILL NOT GET MY VOTE. Point understood?

—David W. Stanley, Champaign, IL

What could possibly be more of a "Common Carrier" ? Stay the course!

—Charles Roaste, salt lake city, UT these are such fascist tactics....

—Marina Vrouvlianis, Newton, MA

The Internet has the potential to continue being a driving force in the economic, technological, and cultural development for the human race, much like electricity or plumbing. The internet is a Utility. The proposed fast lane system is unacceptable, it will cripple future technological innovation, cultural expression, and entrepreneurial enterprise. Internet service providers offer a utility and should be bound by the same rules as the other utility services.

—Justin Stone, SOUTH RIVER, NJ

The internet is a a breacon of greater knowledge and a sign that this natioin is devoted to the betterment of the human condition, to allow big business slow or restrict access to this powerful tool for knowledge and equality should be looked on in the same light as slavery and child labor as a disgusting thing that should never be allowrd to happrn . an educated natiokn is a powerful and healthy one, allowing business to block or restrict access will only help to weaken the nation and the image we show ythe worlds people.

—Nathan Laing, ,

The internet uses the common broadband and publicly owned airwaves. The internet is a utility. Regulate it so that everybody in the public sphere has equal access. That is your job!! You represent people, the public, not the bribe givers from lobbyland and corporate communications racketeers. Nix the Bob Latta bill H.R. 4752 and save our equal rights to the communications carrying commons.

—Carol Jackson, New York, NY

H.R. 4752 is only a 'solution' in the eyes of monied interests, and is therefore anti-American rubbish. I urge Bob Latta and Congress to continue to do what they do best: nothing.

—Erik Deerly, Kokomo, IN

If you want fairness for your future family, you will choose to keep the internet open.

—Carol Ann Rittenhouse, Plymouth, WI

An important part of what makes a democracy free is at stake. Please heed We The People and do not vote against an open Internet. Please vote "No" for H.R. bill 4752.

—Ronald E. Kaufman, Spokane, WA

Just say "no."

—Marcia Hutchinson, Sherborn, MA

Corporations are already mingling in the Peoples Commons. Protect net neutrality....reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act...that is the only way to protect Net Neutrality.

—Helen B, Ventura, CA

As a computer scientist, I see every day the innovations that the open internet has brought us. This is a critical resource that has given America many leading companies, jobs, etc. Please don't allow a pack of un-innovative rent-takers shut it down.

—Robert P Goldman, Minneapolis, MN

Do not protect the corporate monopolists against the interests of citizens and consumers. The FCC is OUR watchdog and policeman-on-the-beat protecting our interests. Leave the FCC free to decide within the rules of The Communications Act and in response to citizen action.

—Charles Trebes, Forest City, NC

Fast lanes steal bandwidth from already slow lanes to serve the pigs, not the people.

—Kevin FitzMaurice, Portland, OR

I say yes to Net Neutrality, and no to the incarcerating bill that prohibits it.

—Julienne Chebat, Weston, FL stop already

—Timothy J. Seniff, warren, VT

The internet must remain open. You do not have the right to restrict the access of the American people, or any other people on Earth, to the internet and its facilities. It is a basic human right.

—Jordan Ford, Hinesville, GA

Europe voted to keep Net Neutrality in March of this Year 2014. Why is the FCC being so evasive and secretive about classifying the internet Broadband a utility Service like other public utility services? I am getting worried Chairman Wheeler has too many friends at ISP corporations.

—Murray Pender, San Francisco, CA

Net Neutrality is a MUST in a Democracy! When is Congress doing to do what the EU just did to STOP Google from storing all OUR personal Data? Enough is enough!

—Dr. Carla Davis, Oak Park, CA

please help stop this atrocity, and bring the internet back to the people and away from corporations

—Mike Nace, Red Lion, PA

Voting for this bill should be unconstitutional and un-American —Derek Shea, Burbank, CA

Stop the madness!!!!

—Margaret Goodwin, Ojai, CA

Please.

—Ronald Knarr, Indianapolis, IN

Freedom! Freedom! Freedom!

—John P. Grillo, Orono, ME

a closed internet in America will soon mean a closed internet throughout the world. Net neutrality must be preserved without that preservation democracy is at serious risk.

—John Thompson, manchester,

We need to insure our democracy by preserving net neutrality.

—Joe Faris, Santa Monica, CA

No need to comment as this is a no brainer!

—Daniel Kingma, ,

I truly appreciate your attention to concerns of my family, in regards to Net Neutrality.

—Joe Miranda, Garden Grove, CA

We must keep safe the quality of a strong and open internet. A net neutrality for all to use.

—Ms. Christine Anne Clark, Ashton-under-Lyne, None

Allow the FCC the chance to do its job as it sees fit - not as cable corporations see fit.

—Samuel S Axelrath, Denver, CO

The internet is not currently perfect, but it is a grand breeding ground for ideas. Please maintain the evenhanded use of it.

—Ms. CJ Livingston, Seattle, WA

These practices have world wide consequences , and the decisions you make show the world if you are for the people or the profit hungry ISPs

—Gary Cornelius Burke, ,

The internet is for all.

—Geoff Monot, ,

Do not stop the progress of humanity for yet another awful facet of capitalistic ugliness!!

—Edward Jasiewicz, Pittsburgh, PA

One more example of how you are all bought and paid fpr lackeys to corporations. Good luck with that in the long run.

—Barbara Cohn, Carlsbad, CA

it is long due to stop these hackers such as Comcast, AT&T etc. from usurping our freedom and rights.

—Dinmani Savla, mountain view, CA

Band hogs (consumers) should pay for not "playing nice"; content providers should not have to pay bribes under any name for access to any part of the Internet.

—Mr Charles A Wolfe, Sylmar, CA

Stop pushing The People down! It will come to no good!

—William Robins, Yorktown, VA

It should be no secret by now that thousands of small businesses and millions of individuals, for their own and one another's good, need the Internet to remain open and neutral and are pressing the FCC to reclassify broadband Internet service as a common carrier. If the FCC chooses not to do so--or if Congress passes a bill that would prevent the FCC from doing so, as HR 4752 would--would benefit a very few large telecommunications companies and no one else. Small businesses and startups, operating on much slimmer margins than large corporations, would be left to conduct their operations and continue their very existence entirely at the mercy of those large telecommunications companies, bringing real innovation in a variety of fields to a crashing halt. Individual users would find their access to news, entertainment, and commerce, at least at decent speeds and in convenient forms, subjected to the whims of those same large telecommunications companies. Too large a percentage of American media ownership is already in too few hands, stifling the free inquiry and open debate that should mark, and indeed are a necessary prerequisite for, a healthy and functioning democracy. Please oppose HR 4752, and please do anything else that may be in your power to encourage the FCC to reclassify broadband Internet service as a common carrier. Thank you.

—Andrew Cole, Pittsburgh, PA

Internet service providers NEED to be treated as common carriers like the mail, trucks, railroads, and telephone networks. They should NEVER have been allowed to own any content providers in the first place. This is the same as when Anton Strowger's competitor in the funeral business got his wife a job with the phone company as the town's operator, and she rerouted calls away from Strowger to her husband.

—Allan Richardson, Marietta, GA

World domination brought to you by your government!

—Stella Yfantidis, Singapore, WV

billionaires already make a million times more than average people they do not need to take more money from us.

—Shirley Hope, Bessemer, AL

Keep my internet open!!!
—Ryan McMillan, Gold Coast,

What ever happened to Freedom of Speech? With every passing day, this country is becoming less of a democracy and more like a feudal system.
—Bernadette Belcastro, Floral Park, NY

Net Neutrality MUST be maintained and protected
—Helga Spector, Somerset, NJ

We must have the FCC reclassify broadband providers as common carriers.
—Peter Tomasek, Powell, OH

Traditional press is totally controlled by just a few people and we need freedom on the internet to allow more views. If you stop this I fear it will lead to a violent revolution. That helps no one. Stopping net neutrality helps only a few and only for a relatively short time.
—Robert E. Godes, Berkeley, CA

Common carrier status for ISPs is an absolute must for the future success of United States internet startups. Any attempt to block Net Neutrality will drive innovation off our shores. Stop trying to kill the golden goose of American prosperity.
—Charles Capko, Charlotte, NC

It is absolutely unconscionable that in 2014 citizens of the United States of American must seek redress from our elected officials to ensure the Internet remains FREE and OPEN. It should be your first responsibility to ENSURE it remains such.
—Albert Lopez, Blue Bell, PA

I'm tired of these monopolies thinking that they can run and control the Internet! And so should you!
—Jim Wittenbrock, Coeur d' Alene, ID

The industry needs regulation to separate content providers from service providers.
—Ronald Swager, Glenarm, IL

The net is like a public library everyone & thing is served when we all are allowed access.
—Sandi Sain, Atlanta, GA

I will never vote for any candidate, of any party, who supports the gutting of the free and open internet. I WILL vote for candidates, of any party, who represent me, and support net neutrality.
—Joseph F Reynolds, Fairfield, OH

A truly open, neutral Internet is absolutely essential to our democracy, just as neutral mail and telephone service have always been. Rep. Latta's bill is an affront to our American values.
—Fred Nothnagel, North Andover, MA

We need Net Neutrality.
—Daryl Spafford, Hidden Hills, CA

please!
—Elizabeth Panus, Buffalo, NY

Without true Net Neutrality we could be well on our way to becoming like Iran, etc with Internet censorship not far behind!

—Jeanne Sipahigil, Liberty, IN

This is a no-brainer==broadband internet should be under Title II of the Communications Act. It is the foundation of democracy!

—Laura Lorenzetti, Yarmouth, ME

This must be stopped to even attempt keeping the Internet a just, free, cooperative, competitive, open environment where everyone's ideas can flourish in equality.

—Lucas Endres, Chippewa Falls, WI

This is obviously a ploy by Telecom-funded representatives to intervene against public opinion. Do not let this stand!

—Craig Apfelbeck, Poulsbo, WA

Stop this blatant grab for internet control by the communications oligarchs.

—Joe Breech, Traverse City, MI

How much money did Latta take from the Lobbyists?

—Patsy Lowe, Simi Valley, CA

We all want an open and fair internet. It's one of the few things that we can rely on, do not take it away from us.

—Hirad Parvizi, ,

Stop this assault against the internet. Keep it neutral

—Rod Cassidy, Magalia, CA

The Internet has the ability to allow all the world's people to practice unity. For the first time in our species written history on a truly global scale. This ability needs promotion and encouragement not restriction, domination and private ownership. It is the property of all mankind and the tendency to connect and share.

—Damien Hopper, ,

Are you the sheep? No way, we are the customers!

—Herp Derp, Gettysburg, NY

its time to elect Bob Latta out of office

—Alfred Alarcon, Pelham, NY

Please do not adopt HR 5752 which will remove parity to small Internet providers to provide wide and independent access to ALL customers. Do not allow privileged access to tiered layers of information transmission. Do not allow a small handful of media giants determine and limit what is been an open source of knowledge to all.

—Mack Green, Austin, TX

Net neutrality is not only an essential component in today's modern society that allows people from all walks of life all over the globe to collaborate on tomorrow's great ideas but an open and neutral internet is especially essential to someone like me as both a musician who depends on the internet to get my material out there and who works in IT as a day job. Please vote no on this one.

—David E. lay, El Cerrito, CA

It is my belief that any representative who votes for this truly awful, citizen hostile bill is unfit to serve.

—Jason Werpy, Brookings, SD

You owe THE PEOPLE true net neutrality!!!!!!!!!!

—Vivian Capritto, decautr, GA

My last name is also "Latta," and I absolutely do not support your efforts!!!

—Stan Latta, CARY, NC

There are other ways to make sure there is no pirating.

—R Beaupre, Green Bay, WI

Protect net neutrality!!

—Gale Simplicio, Morgantown, WV

Unacceptable.

—Ashley Carr, Cumberland, MD

Please don't let the FCC throw out what makes the internet great. That any start up and company has a chance with the same internet as everyone else. If people can pay to get fast internet then a lot of people and start ups who don't have the cash will fall to the set or won't be able to make it in the pay to play fast internet world. The internet should not be handicap like that

—John Swanson, Philadelphia, PA

What are you folks doing even considering such a bill? It should be quashed!

—Ned Quistorff, Fox Island, WA

Elizabeth Esty, Richard Blumenthal and Chris Murphy should support net neutrality to prove they are not owned by Cable Interests (aka Comcast, Charter, Time Warner).

—Deb Allen, West Simsbury, CT

Broadband internet service providers are common carriers and should be reclassified as such. Please protect the open internet!

—David Gardner, Bentleigh East,

What happen to American freedom? It hasn't existed since the Patriot Act was passed in Congress - but you can do something positive now...

—William D. Prystauk, Easton, PA

Please the keep the internet a free-flowing place of communication!

—Frederick J. Mackey, DENVER, CO

If you put control of information in the hands of just three to five people, not even you will be able to get your message out....

—James W. Nelson, Roulette, PA

The internet does not need to be changed

—Christopher Minich, Lewis Run, PA

The telecommunications corporate bigwigs are sitting in their ivory towers and laughing at us right now - "we the people" - as they try to steal our Internet freedom permanently. Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers and protect our Internet freedom. Slow lanes on the Internet are a bad thing. Please stand up for net neutrality. The end of net neutrality will mean the beginning of slow lanes on the Internet for all but those who can afford to pay the extortion fees of the monopolies. Net neutrality is the free speech issue of our time. And Americans are passionate about their Internet freedom. Please help us! Thank you.

—Cynthia Creswell, Vista, CA

PLEASE support this bill. Thank you!

—Kay Becker, Sacramento, CA

Please listen to people who aren't out to just give you tons of money for your decisions. I don't know if that's really how it is where you work, but that's the impression a lot of americans get. That congress and the house work for lobbyists who pay them to make decisions in favor of the lobbies. Please prove us wrong by keeping the internet the same price for everybody. Thank you!

—Chris Woods, Beaverton, OR

On a limited budget as are the majority of Americans, don't do this, there will be repurcussions!!!!

—Joanne M McIntyre, Pipe Creek, TX

Protecting net neutrality affects the entire globe. Is it fair for our FCC to make rules that will affect the planet?

—Kathleen Beavin, Bothell, WA

Corporations have no right to destroy Net Neutrality. Only the ones who invented the internet itself should have the right to make that decision - its their invention.

—Rocknrobert06@hotmailcom, Anchorage, AK

A vote for this is also a vote against the best interests of your constituents -- it only benefits big money.

—Jeanne Moenk, Chardon, OH

It's also a vote against yourself come November.

—Christopher E Douglass, Saint Petersburg, FL

Stop this madness. We have too many greedy people trying to take over our internet that was designed to be free access to all.

—Gogian Yee, MONTEBELLO, CA

The internet is the leading cause of globalization and the spread of information. To threaten Net Neutrality is to threaten these concepts themselves. Please keep the internet neutral.

—Zane Dean, Lincoln, CA

I vote for Representatives who adhere to the will and interest of the PEOPLE. I do NOT vote for any politician that panders to big business. Bob Latta has turned his back on the Citizens of this country and should be voted from office and shunned in public.

—Marc Page, Norwich, CT

Open Internet is such an incredibly important resource for our world today. Please keep it open!

—Johanna Conver, Kent, WA

Stand up for people and not corporations.

—William DiAntonio, Mantua, NJ

This is insane --- we are harvesting golden eggs every day and this would kill the goose. Stupid! NO NO NO!!!

—Kenny Otwell, Columbia, MD

Get real....

—Eric Andresen, Olney, MD

This ridiculous bill shows a clear lack of understanding of the Internet. We need to plan now for a future that is not controlled by a few corporations.

—Deirdre O'Shea, San Diego, CA

This bill should not be legal. There are many things congress has been doing even worse than this.... this is just the icing on the cake. We are turning into something worse than communism... a place where people THINK their voice matters but everything is manipulated from behind the scenes. The idea of net neutrality disappearing~ in my mind as a control tactic that is disgusting. Suuuure... no one wants to use it for that... no one wants to sensor information... no one wants to stamp out opportunity for smaller companies or startups.... right....

—Rachael Kelly, Edgewater, MD

I pay my internet bill to build and maintain infrastructure that's available evenly to everyone. I don't want any big company adding money to the pot for preferential treatment. That will certainly distort the representation of individuals, small businesses, and certain ideas. Allowing businesses to pay for bandwidth is a terrible idea, morally wrong, and anticompetitive. Keep it illegal. Internet service providers are common carriers by definition. Stop saying otherwise.

—John Burak, Fort Collins, CO

This bill is not what America wants.

—Brian Stumpp, Stockton, CA

Don't make the internet for the rich only! Keep Net Neutrality. Do Not pass this bill.

—Walter Thompson, Santa Rosa, CA

Net neutrality is one of the most important issues to me. Any move to undermine it threatens freedom of speech and commerce both in the US and internationally.

—Laura Hague, Austin, TX

I am a voter and I fully support freepress.net with net neutrality Let the people be heard!!!

—Victor Sager, Baltimore, MD

This bill will kill innovation, lead to poor content, slower speeds for everything but a narrow slice of content like Disney, more advertising and of course higher profits for a couple of companies until people walk away like they are doing with cable TV. Don't let that happen again. We need real competition not monopolies.

—James Bradley, Media, PA

This is not a bill "For the People" but rather for big business to control what we can access on the internet. This march to control what is allowed and to whom gets it is subversive and has to stop. The internet needs to remain open.

—Nancy Files, Blue Hill, ME

Please don't allow legislation allowing Corporations to profit from what should be classified as a public utility

—Patrick Kelly, Roselle, IL

Our country's economy depends on the Internet. Allowing ISPs to pick winners and losers online effectively places our economy in their hands. The Internet is a public utility, just like telephones and electricity. It needs to be protected like a utility so that everyone has fair and equal access. We need an economy that doesn't depend on a small handful of billionaires. We need a reliable, fair democratic forum that isn't pay-for-play. We need Net Neutrality. If you care about small and medium-sized businesses in your state, you will oppose H.R. 4752 and instead pressure the FCC to do what's right for our economy: reclassify broadband as a public utility.

—Heather Owen, Champaign, IL

The Republicans prove time and again they don't represent anyone but themselves. They'll screw the taxpayer any way they can. It's time to dump the BUMS. We need people who care about WE the PEOPLE.

—Kathryn H. Regan, Hayward, CA

This is nothing more than another attempt at spying on American citizens and controlling their natural freedoms.. Stay out of our private lives and do your job of "Protecting us " against this type of "Nazi" tactics. This is the United States of America or have you forgotten??

—Richard, San Luis Obispo, CA

The internet is for everyone, not just the big teles, like at&t, Verizon, and Comcast. Reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act for REAL net neutrality.

—Ruth-Ann Radcliff, Penn Valley, CA

The loss of the neutral net will affect almost everybody, As one of your voters I urge you to not support this dangerous bill. Bill Keith

—William N. Keith Jr., Pontiac, MO

Is it not bad enough that the countries economic divide has grown so much and disproportionately? SO now the gigantic rich companies need even more money and squish one of the few possibilities tiny companies could try and make a go at life? Please help the world.... the ultra rich don't need yet another sports car or boat... but families do need to put food on the table..... PLEASE stand up for Net Neutrality!!! Please!!!

—Ann B Rendon, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Equal access to the communication infrastructure is crucial for the competitiveness of small businesses.

—Darrell Crick, Pembroke, VA

If you turn the internet into another television, I will not watch it!!!!

—Rebecca Darchuk, Granada Hills, CA

I am a Veteran, Active Voter and TaxPayer. I voted for you in your last election. As a Veteran I put my life on the line for Democracy. Please help stop the plutocratic take over and save American Democracy and the middle class. It is a proven fact that a strong Middle Class creates a strong economy. It is a proven fact that people spend more when they make more and that creates a stronger economy.

—James K Hadcroft, N. Falmouth, MA

I believe ISPs should be regulated as common carriers. Thanks

—Pat Dallas, Fayetteville, AR

A,T&T, Comcast, Verizon...I ask you, how much money is ENOUGH for these megacorps to keep their tentacles off of our Internet?

—Renny Reep, Seattle, WA

The world is watching to see if, by your votes on this critical issue, America is still the beacon of true freedom or just another enabler of multi-national corporate greed . Your votes matter and WILL be scrutinized. Please do the right thing, save net neutrality, ensure America's continued leadership, innovation and competetivness and vote NO on H.R. 4752. Thank you.

—Curtis Crabbe, Philipsburg, MT

leave it alone

—Jason Trentlyon, New York, NY

staph it just because they're going paying you to do it doesn't you have to do it, and arent you guys supposed to be for the people,not just for money?

—Kevin, Germantown, MD

NET NEUTRALITY . NOW AND FOREVER.

—Mark Koppel, Greenacres, FL

on-line power to the people.

—Bob Pitchalonis, holland, PA

Is it time for Madame Guillotine?

—Joe Tocci, Fort Wayne, IN

Perhaps it's time for the people to rise up and throw out the plutocrats and oligarchs

—Robert Vargas, Bothell, WA

An open internet is vital to a thriving global economy in this century. Please don't dampen that potential

—Dustin Simeone, Lehigh, PA

We need to keep an open Internet. Please vote no on this Bill.

—Kathy O'Brien, Redway, CA

Democracy means no censorship & yes to net neutrality.

—Mohsen Shenass, whitewright, TX

Do the right thing.

—Kevin Grebinski, Rochester, MI

Classify ISP's as common carriers. Protect net neutrality.

—Chris Pitzel, Simi Valley, CA

Dear Members of Congress I know you will be getting a lot of emails so I do hope mine is read. I am a 60 year old grandmother in Australia and my grand-kids are in the UK.I have always valued the internet both it's good and bad points but what I value most is it's freedom...we have so little these days... we pretend we have democracy in western cultures but little by little it is being eroded by corrupt politicians (not you!...unless the caps fits?) and greedy corporations. The internet allows us freedom to be who we are and to connect in so many ways...I love to Skype my grand-kids if fact it would be hard to have a relationship with them if I didn't. I run a woman's friendship group on the net. All these things are who I am and I am one of thousands around the world PLEASE PLEASE do not allow the internet to fall into the hands of corporations they are already undermining the democracy I hold so dear...don't make it only usable for the rich we need the internet to be FREE

—Stef Hayward, ,

PLEASE SAVE THE INTERNET AS IT IS. PLEASE say NO to H.R. 4752. PLEASE have a HEART. SAVE NET NEUTRALITY Thank You Joan

—Joan Downey, Portland, OR

PLEASE do not vote with this bill and leave the internet as it is! Thank you.

—Josh Aiman, Moscow, ID

PLEASE DONT RUIN THE INTERNET

—Carl Green, ,

I live in a country, Canada, that is killing children with allergies.. and no human right to stop it! The internet total freedom is my only hope, and the hope of billions around the world.

—Trudi Trahan-upchan, Sudbury,

STOP!...and think about the ramifications of the supposed bill.

—Robert Smith, ,

qw've got to be equal to big money SOMEWHERE!

—Barbara Hosmer, Mission Viejo, CA

Everyone needs an open internet. This is necessary for all people many who are poor and/or students or just regular people. Large corporations should not benefit more.

—Deborah Peterson, Indianapolis, IN

No more votes against our free & open internet please.

—Jerren Reid, Cleveland, OH

Maintaining net neutrality is probably Americas best hope for financial prosperity.

—Timothy Shenk, Aberdeen, MD

Leave the Internet neutral

—, San Antonio, TX

Common carriers not a neoliberal hosejob!

—T Hatch, Grinnell, IA

NO on H.R.4752 NO

—Joan Downey, milwaukie, OR

Stand up for the little guy, like you are supposed to. We know Rep. Bob Latta is owned by the telecom companies and does not care about making the right decision.

—Andrew R., Cumberland, MD

Bob Latta.....Would you have expected less. He doesn't work FOR THE PEOPLE.

—Thomas L. Wells, Findlay, OH

NET NEUTRALITY NOW!

—Bradley Krupsaw, CABA,

PLEASE TAKE THE RIGHT, FAIR, JUST, HUMANE AND HEALTHY ACTION AND PROTECT NET NEUTRALITY AND OPPOSE REP.LATTA'S BILL HR 4752.

—Mr. Mary Ann Graffagnino, Tucson, AZ

If I want the pre-screened propaganda garbage spewed by corporate crap factories, and only that, I'll turn on the TV. Internet access is internet access. Leave it that way. While you're at it, break up the massive Comcast cow, and tell them to knock off the censorship and network management. If I want to run my own web server, it's part of the internet. If I pay for the internet connection, that's part of it.

—Michael Majewski, Troy, MI

This bill is an absolute outrage. The only group it will protect is the internet providers who are desperate to get this through because it means more money for them. Please do NOT give this bill your support. Pam Meredith

—Pam Meredith, Perth, Western Australia,

Do the right thing for all american and not just the super wealthy.

—Steven Hibshman, Foster City, CA

Fascism is the problem not the solution.

—Rolf Radicke, Bristol, PA

Do the right #*!%# thing, already

—John Steenson, seattle, WA

Please don't BS me about carriers needing more money to improve the internet. The U.S. pays more for access than any other first world country and gets the slowest access. Look at Japan, France, U.K., Canada. What they don't have is people who are already unimaginably wealthy who still feel the need to bribe legislators.

—Robert Cruder, Elizabeth, CO

Please do your duty to protect US citizens' interests and not the corporations'.

—Johnny W Spears, Allen Park, MI

I and millions of other rural poof can only afford dial-up modem internet. At present it take anywhere from 5 min -20min to get one webpage (just one webpage that is fully operational...). last week it took me 3 hours to get the proper webpages to order a lawnmower without the webpages messing up due to being in the existing "slow lane". The "Talking heads"(who probably own stock in the relevant companies) keep proclaiming "Dial-up" is deadsure will be if they talk up neglect of dial-up equality. These companies don't care about providing better services or even connecting more people to the Internet. For them it's all about eliminating the last shred of competition in a communications market that just a few big players dominate and where they can going forward continually raise the price on consumers of reasonable internet...or make the internet a "Huckster's democracy" available to those who pay the most.....While they're running around proposing mega-mergers with mammoth price tags, we're stuck with poor service, slow speeds and ever increasing sky-high prices.... Please block this and more mergers that create yet more "to big to fail" companies

—John Fix, QUINCY, WA

How about we pass a law FOR net neutrality ? Isn't congress supposed to be for the people, not corporations?

—James Barnes, plattsburg, MO

Stop corporate fascism!

—Mike Raymond, Shelby Township, MI

this is American's freedom to the world & information

—R Paige, ,

Reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act.

—James N Davis II, Columbia, MD

You can't let these money sucking scum to deregulate net neutrality. This means so much to me, I spoke in front of my 600 student school about this topic. You CANT let this happen.

—Adam Dempster, Bowral,

Please don't allow big companies like AT&T, Comcast, Verizon, and Time Warner decide what people here in the U.S. can view and read online. What if I was trying to visit your website and one of these providers didn't like your politics? They could actually STOP me from visiting your website! Please vote NO on H.R. 4752.

—Grant W. Levy, Costa Mesa, CA

This could determine the future.

—Becky Erickson, Elk Mound, WI

The question is: Why not Net Neutrality?

—Ry Moran, Salt Lake City, UT

I want the internet to be regulated like any other utility because that is what it is.

—Laura Pretto, Seattle, WA

Please do everything you can to maintain net neutrality. It is much needed to maintain free speech and democracy.

—Michelle Hughes, Philadelphia, PA

One would like to know just how much cash was donated to Latta's campaign coffers (or directly?) from Big Media. He certainly isn't representing those who elected him nor the other citizens of this country. Despite the position of the Republican Party, corporations are NOT citizens!

—David Ross, San Francisco, CA

I will not vote for anyone who votes for this bill.

—Jason Melo Hall, Gilroy, CA

I'm a 27-year-old graphic designer, and a net neutral internet is the most important resource for my business and my generation's chance at a successful future. Please vote against this bill, and help defend a free and open internet.

—Jared Norby, Los Angeles, CA

Do not vote for this bill. It is anti-American and anti-democratic. It is another instance in which money is attempting to overrule the will of the people.

—Dennis P Kelly, Aurora, IL

This must be stopped. The Internet belongs to ALL of us, NOT to a few greedy telecoms! Save our Net Neutrality!!!

—Regenia G Johnson, Wentzville, MO

I think all our senators and congress men should wear uniforms like NASCAR drivers so we can tell their corporate sponsors.

—Todd Stewart, San Diego, CA

TYRANNY, BRUTALITY, MILITARIZATION, VIOLENCE IN OUR LAW ENFORCEMENT AND SUPPRESSION OF TRUTH, PANDEMIC SECRECY AND GAGGING OUR ABILITY TO COMMUNICATE IS MORE TERRIFYING TAT 1984!

—Carol A. Russell, Saratoga Springs, NY

Protect the middle and lower class businesses!

—Alberto Rodriguez, MIAMI, FL

Ill fucking murder you all stop fucking with the Internet

—Kevin, ,

Big Brother must not take away our freedom

—Anna Harpley, Sydney,

Doubt if I need to send this to you, my VT reps, but taking no chances.

—Connie Godin, Barre, VT

Stop attacking my internet!

—Ryan Gene Schablowsky, East Carondelet, IL

comunication is a civil and human right

—Bernardo Alayza Mujica, Sioux City, IA

Do what's best for the people, not corporations. Corporations are not people!

—Jeff Loiland, Tacoma, WA

Act Justly: our Tax Dollar$ paid for the internet, Keep the in the Public Domain!!

—Peter Hawxhurst, houston, TX

Net neutrality equals freedom of information. Please help preserve it.

—James K. Dotson, Half Moon Bay, CA

I will vote against anyone who supports this bill. The bill is designed to prevent the FCC from protecting Net Neutrality. Since the promise of equal representation on the Internet is a cornerstone of democracy, I believe supporters of this bill are against democracy. And no one who is against democracy has any business serving in the US government. You vote for this bill - I vote you out.

—Aimee Polekoff, Lansdale, PA

Anyone who believes in democracy believes in net neutrality. It's that simple.

—Lindy Anderson, Madison, WI

The rotten survive I get is inexcusable. When I complain I am told to upgrade. I can't imagine how much worse it could get if this bill passes.

—Garry Spencer, Tampa, FL

Do not support this bill: the world will thank you.

—Nancy Belmore, Victoria, BC

A vot for this bill is a vote against both your, and my best interest.

—Paul Krumm, Kanopolis, KS

Congress must stop serving the greedy desires of multinational corporations. This obvious behavior by congress is easily observed by the People. Attacking net neutrality or inhibiting the "free" Internet in any way may be the last straw for the People. I certainly will not vote to return the current congress to office unless profound changes are made poste haste.

—Billie Wolf, Skyland, NC

Congress should not make a habit of micromanaging federal organizations.

—Brian Hildebrandt, Mercer Island, WA

Stay away! But i know know you ass hole will not hear me for a buck

—Tim Thompson, FT.WORTH, TX

This is absolutely astounding! It's such a clear case of a grab for greed... well... MORE greed! It's also makes a clear case for why we need to get money out of politics, because of the obvious corrupting influence it has, clearly as we see with such a bill as this. Whose paying you really? OMG!

—Thomas Keenan, Coeur d' Alene, ID

Do NOT support this bill! The internet needs to be treated like what it is - a telecommunications service - just like telephone lines.

—Luke Asbury, San Buenaventura, CA

Support public interests, not special interests!

—James Kellett, Springfield, MO

Stop this runaround attack on the open internet. Allow the FCC to classify internet service as a common carrier. Stop this attack on free speech now. Stop all these laws that are designed to stop government from doing their jobs in the interests of the PEOPLE not big business. Be fair.

—Bridget Burke, Bisbee, AZ

stop this bill Please

—Paula Morris, fenton, MO

This is a transparent attempt to end run around what so many people want. People you allege to represent.

—Michael Parry, Escondido, CA

A free and open internet is critically important to all Americans now and even more in the coming decades. I hope you will support a free and open internet and vote against this and any other legislation that would impede an open internet.

—Jonathan H. Brown, Louisville, KY

The FCC must reclassify the internet as a common carrier. We cannot permit the internet to become corrupted by favoritism for the few over the needs of the majority.

—Sharon Crane, Thermopolis, WY

Do not give what does not belong to big corperations but to the people to big corperations. voting for this bill is theft.

—Robert Wolfe, Mantua, OH

Don't let the companies take away a free internet!

—Danette Sheron, Pueblo, CO

You're going to have a choice soon. Support Net Neutrality or clean floors in McDonald's.

—Mr. Chris Hulford, Napa, CA

Don't let the media oligopoly grab even more of the Internet!

—Klaus Fechner, Los Altos, CA

The Information Age can either liberate people and cause an enlightenment, or be used to deceive people and make a few individuals very rich.

—Aaron Swanson, New York, NY

1.2 trillion in risk capital (our money from inflated fees) is utterly irrelevant and insignificant relative to the public's interest in speech. They cannot pay to censor the public or whine about reclassification undermining a tradition of censorship. Without working speech mechanisms we don't have a society. These firms cannot pay to silence the public. Silence means a loss of our rights because rights that don't get exercised due to silence will be lost. If this isn't a war on free speech and a war on the internet its a war on the public. We don't want sponsored media and resultant captured government leading to captive society. Let sponsorship and sponsored media die. Its ridiculous that with all this automation we work 2x as much as we did in the bush prior to language and tools and are being told we have to go without retirement and further that basic supports and infrastructure must go unfunded because of austerity nonsense. Yes, the continued trajectory of net enabled free speech will lead to transparent governments and corporations vice the secrecy and censorship that capital needs but capital has been extractive and obsolete for a long time. The net is its replacement. Consider the public interest and vote according to it. Also bring back progressive taxation (95% tax on wealth if they don't use proper loop holes)- its certainly not charity, its what checks the abuse of power through money and prevents fraud like austerity from being able to take place in the first place.

—Randy Bremer, riverside, CA

Don't let them have their way with the internet , keep it free.

—Josh Eubanks, Roseburg, OR

Democracy needs Net Neutrality!!

—Susan M Smith, Coon Rapids, MN

Please do not let big business change the internet. Small start up businesses need this to be equal to all.

—Kathleen Stewart, Valley, WA

We need to classify broadband as a Title II service and Wireless as a Title III. AT&T and Veriozn have non-compete deals with Comcast and the other big cable companies ho also need to be broken up.

—Gerald Robinson, Divide, CO

Rep. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752, would prevent the Federal Communications Commission from putting broadband Internet service providers back under Title II of the Communications Act, but that's the only way to protect Net Neutrality.

—Lisa Whalen, Kettering, OH

Leave Internet open,you've already violated our Freedom for TV. :-(

—Andria May, Fairview Heights, IL

Okay, Congress, I know I'm not an American citizen, but here us out in the rest of the world. If any of the bills that are not being accepted by the public and the entire free world, then the passing of that bill will not be in the interest of protecting the freedoms and liberties of the people that you swear to uphold and protect. Only when the people, not the people whom are the 1% and will actually gain fortune from the rest of the world's suffering and misery, mind you. Please vote against this bill and continue to vote against any future bills that have not garnered the people's support and approval. It is your duty to make decisions that benefit the people, Bob Latta does not speak for the entire world, we do! And we will always defend our right to a world where one person does not equate to the rest of the world. Vote no and reject this bill, it is not in the people's best interest.

—Austin Ross, Sherwood Park,

PLEASE VOTE 'NO' on HR4752!!! SAVE the INTERNET!!!

—Katherine Miller, San Diego, CA

The internet is a common carrier and should be reclassified as such.

—Mercedes R Lackey, CLAREMORE, OK

We demand a level playing field, which H.R.4752 doesn't provide, so please do NOT support it

—Eva Millette Coombs, Camano Island, WA

We have a wonderful internet that under net neutrality fosters innovation and education. Please do all that is possible to protect internet neutrality.

—William Cline, Strongsville, OH

An open internet is crucial to freedom of speech and to provide a level field for innovators.

—Stephen Vandivere, Centreville, VA

Killing net neutrality would only benefit one select group of individuals, while obliterating jobs and overall creativity within the U.S., especially for small businesses and internet start-ups. We also cannot let our media be censored by who can pay the most to get into the "fast lane".

—Toni Porter, Spring Lake Park, MN

What are we, Communist China? Seriously, hands off. This is one pie that the government doesn't get to stick its fingers and calls dibs on. The Internet is a broad domain with many denizens; don't presume to make laws to roundaboutly dictate what is and is not for us to access.

—Justine, Washington Court House, OH

I read the synopsis of Rep. Latta's bill. I've discussed it with my son's, one of whom is a professor in computer science. I believe the FCC should regulate internet service as a common carrier. Please do not support this bill. Thank you, Bernard Bindel

—Bernard R Bindel, Forest Hill, MD

This bill is a slap to the face of the American people, standing contrary to everything we have been screaming for the past several weeks.

—Craig, Lake Oswego, OR

We need to keep the open Internet!!!

—Gary Osland, Laurel, IA

The Internet is there for all of us. Don't let it fall into the hands of a small group of providers!

—Richard Guernsey, So Wellfleet, MA

Latta is being payed enormously by telecom companies - he does not care about what is best for the people or for the country, but for his pockets.

—Jake Inkrote, Apex, NC

Give us a Free and OPEN internet

—Michael Pennington, West Palm Beach, FL

I think we need to tell Rep. Latta & other Republicans to demand that the bill gets opposed to take net neutrality off the table. Everyone supports a open internet & Rep. Latta's bill would make it much harder for us to stand up for net neutrality, not a pay for play service. That's we need to tell congress to oppose Rep. Latta's bill so that we reclassify broadband under Title II in the Communications Act & net neutrality itself needs to be protected for our good, not destroying it. Thanks!

—Derek Gendvil, Las Vegas, NV

net neutrality is for all people.. not for business who want to make a profit at our expense.

—David Pearson, Marysville, WA

Do the right thing please. The internet needs to stay neutral for fairness of small business and accessibility to information for the people. Thank you.

—Evan Jones, Forest Falls, CA

Please vote against this bill. Protect Net Neutrality. We are counting on you to do the right thing and save the Internet as we know it.

—Ann Kinsinger, Columbia, SC

I can't believe that anyone would vote for this bill. It's against our freedom, our liberty. Time to stop treating us as uneducated slaves. We see, we know, and we won't give up our liberty without a fight. Please vote against this bill.

—Hugh McFadden, Bozeman, MT

Do you people have any idea of what you are doing or who are supost to be working? Read the US CONSTITUTION.

—Michael N Sexton, Bolivar, NY

I will not support this bill it is unfair

—Zuriel ortiz, Anaheim, CA

This bill forces the micro-managememt of the FCC by Congress. I thought Republicans wanted smaller government.

—Bruce O'Brien, Altoona, WI

I do not see how any elected official that really believes an informed voting public is necessary to our future could support this bill. I refuse to be a tool of Wall Street and I expect the entire Massachusetts congressional delegation to vote against HR4572

—Darrell Marley, Haverhill, MA

Please do what the people want and keep the internet free and open. This is a space to create and new blogger with new ideas can't compete with big business - and they shouldn't have to compete. Net neutrality is so important.

—Chelsea, Charlestown, MA

Please do not allow this bill to progress. The internet should be open to everyone, for the same cost. We can not allow corporations to corner the market in internet connection speeds.

—Nancy Kaye Holcomb, Seattle, WA

Only the two scariest words in all democracy. BALLOT BOX

—Nathan Sullenberger, Greensburg, PA

The open internet is the best thing to happen for a long long time. Please protect Net Neutrality.

—Robert and Janice Gailfus, Puyallup, WA

At my home, the only provider is Comcast. And while comcast.net always loads instantly, all other web pages either load slowly, or not at all. Including Google. What a great way to make sure the comcast.net home page is the most popular. Which leaves me with fewer choices. Preventing the FCC from classifying ISPs as common carriers is squarely against the benefit of all US citizens.

—John Biederstedt, brooklyn park, MN

THIS BILL IS INAPPROPRIATE. YOU WANT TO DO SOMETHING WITH THE NET? TAKE DOWN ALL THE HATE SITES! TAKE DOWN ALL THE PORNO SITES! DO SOMETHING USEFULL AND LIFE SUPPORTING FOR A CHANGE!

—Jann Thomas, Newburgh, IN

Allowing this sort of thing would obviously put more money and power into the hands of a small number of corporations who already have a vast majority of it. I believe that at this time in our country there is a larger financial gap between the rich and the poor than ever before. The United States Government is supposed to represent and serve the majority of Americans not the ideals of a small number of extraordinarily wealthy powerful corporations. Thanks for your time.

—Mark Arrington, Fredericktown, OH

This is a corporate attack on digital free speech. Keep in mind that these same greedy corporations manipulated the supreme court into believe that money is free speech and corporations are people.

—William Harold Hinkson II, Youngstown, OH

Keep net neutrality !

—Loyd Benetti, portland, OR

Save our Internet as we know it.

—Barbara Dahms, Flint, TX

Net Neutrality is the last bastion of freedom of speech. Take it away and we've become communist Russia.

—Ms. Catherine Clement, Kilauea, HI

do your job represent me

—James Mc Daniel, New Castle, VA

Stop the bullshit.

—Simon Tremblay, ,

Net neutrality is essential to the economic future of the nation.

—Paul Batteiger, Tulsa, OK

If we believe in free markets then we must protect the free internet. Net Neutrality is essential.

—Gina Clemens, Panama City, FL

The internet is crucial to US's economy. Giving control over it to ISPs has already proven a disaster. It is a communication service, NOT simply a data service!

—David Sellick, Dothan, AL

Please do the right thing, we want the internet the way it is!

—Jon J Blake, Hemet, CA

Congress is supposed to represent THE PEOPLE, not special interests. The internet should treat all citizens the same, and all internet traffic equally.

—Jake Poysti, Charlotte, NC

you can't let those big name companies force you to do this. i know they are offering money, but think of the people, the common person who can't afford the "fast lanes" they will implement. please protect Real Net Neutrality and the people who see it will remember the good thing you have done.

—Dylan Rule, Cape Coral, FL

Reclassifying broadband internet as a common carrier is the best way to save the internet from this disastrous bill HR4752

—Philip Arnold, GLASSPORT, PA

Why is it that you people just cannot do what the people want???????

—Gary Burdick, Daytona Beach, FL

P.S. As an alternative, you can always introduce a bill that would FORCE the FCC to classify Internet service providers under Title II of the Communications Act.

—Alexander Utter, Hawthorne, CA

It's bad enough that they don't want to do anything, don't give them excuse to not do anything and make them do their job.

—Jason Carlisle, Indianapolis, IN

Please do not support this bill! Everyone deserves free and open internet!

—Mk, Fremont, CA

freedom, liberty and the pursuit of happiness demand it.

—Elizabeth Elizabeth Teal, OP, FL

Please protect us, the consumers and voters the ones that elected you, from the greed of these companies.

—Roberto Toscano, Las Vegas, NV

It is obvious; congress does not give a damn about (working) Americans. Their ear goes towards the coins.

—Janice Barnes, Jacksonville, FL

Please don't take our right away to find out information or commerce for up and coming businesses that provide jobs for American citizens . Please Help our economy for those who want to create jobs on American soil. We need access to the internet it is the right of every American to find jobs and entertainment and information about the world we live in.

—Alex scott, Detroit, MI

DOES CONGRESS WORK FOR THE AMERICAN PUBLIC.....OR JUST BIG BUSINESS AND SCREW THE AMERICAN PUBLIC.....LOOKING TOO MUCH LIKE SCREW THE PUBLIC!!!!!! WHY WOULD CONGRESS GIVE CONTROL OF THE INTERNET TO BIG BUSINESS??? THE INTERNET WILL BE DESTROYED!!!!
—Deborah Smith, OKLAHOMA CITY, OK

This is beyond absurd, and certainly shows that this particular Representative is not even remotely representing his district or the interest of the citizens of this country, shame on him and anyone who supports such atrocity.
—Fred Coplin, Saint Petersburg, FL

Got to stop this
—Ron Mercer, Syracuse, NY

I DO NOT support this bill. I vote FOR THE RECLASSIFICATION OF ISP's TO COMMON CARRIERS.
—Bruno Anghene, st-lambert,

Whoever votes for this bill votes against the Americans People We'll be watching, so please represent the will of the People .
—Brenda Bailey, eastsound, WA

Please do the right thing!
—David Rogg, Oakton, VA

If net neutrality goes, everyone's bill goes up, including yours!
—Matthew C, Garden City, ID

Congress, keep y;our hands out of net Neutrality unless it helps its users. Vote against H>R> 4752.
—Gerald Lorenz, Salem, OR

Pleaase support a free and open internet! Don't ruin one of the best things in America!
—Matthew Ng, Mendota Heights, MN

Please keep the internet free, and not let big business take over.
—Evelyn Bishop, Grizzly Flats, CA

I am a small business owner who relies on the internet to pay my mortgage and bills. Due to cost of living rocketing faster than my income, I cannot afford to pay additional fees for my business website to be in a fast lane. Please do not let this unethical bill pass. The internet should be treated as a free utility.
—Miss Aubrey Motoyama, California City, CA

Loosing Net Neutrality would hurt millinon of small businesses that rely on the internet to make a living. This is a craven power grab and needs to be stopped.
—Gerrie DeVoe, Alpharetta, GA

C,mon congress..... show us you aren't completely corrupt!!!!
—Dave Howe, Denver, CO

The Internet is a fundamental part of American - hell, Global life - it MUST be protected as a public utility.
—M S. Epstein, Los Angeles, CA

Who the hell is Representative Bob Latta really working for???? Certainly not the people who voted for him.

—Jim Fering, Eau Claire, WI

Congress should be protecting Internet users from profiteers--not giving them the keys!

—Carrie Santulli Schudda, Oregon, WI

Protect our democracy -- keep the internet neutral!

—John Catherine, New York, NY

Really? Bob Latta wants to take away the FCC's authority to allow corporate control of our communication? Is this guy really an American?

—Ross S. Heitkamp, Mountain View, CA

Please do not let this bill take root. I believe that this bill is very harmful to innovation and does nothing but harm for artists, companies and many individuals who rely on the internet. This will be harmful to the real net neutrality we are fighting so much to get back and in fact, will permanently kill any chance for net neutrality to ever see the light of day again. This bill is evil and we must stop it. Do not betray democracy and do not betray your fellow American people. Do the right thing and strike down this bill.

—Jesse Chenoweth, Medford, OR

If we lose net neutrality, we lose another piece of America. Part of what it means to be American is knowing that you have the freedom to exchange information with others and also the right to access information. Otherwise, we might as well be China or North Korea.

—Amy Orlauski, Los Osos, CA

A vote for this bill is a vote against the economic future of the United States.

—James Fowler, Mesa, AZ

A vote for this bill is a vote against the constituents who vote . . .

—Joseph Burgess, Frankfort, KY

Why does it not surprise me that Mr. Latta, a REPUBLICAN, came up with this despicable idea? Like all REPUBLICANS, his raison d'être is to suck every last scintilla of power from the American citizenry, in this case, to let the richest of the rich determine who will rule the Internet (it isn't us, that's for sure...).

—Meredith Sheane, Missoula, MT

Net neutrality is now the major source of free speech - required by the 1st amendment. The internet must be regulated as an utility.

—Ed Lizewski, EUGENE, OR

We need to keep the internet open. Rep. Latta's bill is a partisan effort to end the net neutrality

—Marianne Flanagan, Des Plaines, IL

I am a real person, not a corporation. I am similar to millions of other real people. We have the right to participate on the Internet just as corporations do. It should be a level playing field. Not allowing discrimination between people and corporations with deep who use money to destroy the Internet game for the majority of users.

—Janis Ihrig, Burbank, CA

An open internet is tantamount to freedom of speech, circa 21st century. I urge you to protect our civil rights as American citizens. I can't continue to run my business without it; I wouldn't have a prayer. Thank you.

—Michelle Gale, Coconut Creek, FL

Members of Congress. Weeks ago there was a huge rally movement to ask the FCC to make rules to encourage net Neutrality. This bill is something against what was being fought so please vote NO to this bill. Thank you.

—Luis, ,

The freedom of expression is being stripped away everyday due to political correctness and shaming of free thoughts. The internet needs to remain a place where any thought or expression is allowed. No matter how offensive it may be to some, there should always be freedom.

—Jim Hoffman, Fairfax, VA

Don't support this bill! Thank you!!

—Daniel tejeda-lamas, San Diego, CA

A vote for this bill is a vote against Free Speech.

—Wendy Battle, Dallas, TX

Loss of net neutrality anywhere is a threat to the open internet everywhere.

—Brian Jack, ,

Say no, absolutely not to this bill, and fight against it!

—Gene Hull, Gresham, OR

The Internet is a public utility, a telecommunications tool, and a common carrier and should be regulated as such!

—Carol Claus, Marietta, GA

Only a very select few will benefit from this, but rather handsomely. Overall hurtful for US economy(not to mention democracy) Please read OECDs reports once in a while...

—Gorm Hansen, trondheim,

In addition to this, absolute support Wolf-Pac, to get money out of politics, and let the people's representatives actually represent the people.

—Daniel Lyons, St. Ives Chase,

The internet was developed using taxpayer money. Therefore, it should remain neutral for all commercial purposes so that taxpayers get the benefit of their investment.

—Cat Ransom, Cottonwood, AZ

the neutral net is key to humanity's future

—Rolf Truhitte, Sacramento, CA

Net neutrality can contribute to a politically active citizenry. Anything less could muffle your constituency.

—T C. Browntt, Oklahoma City, OK

Rep. Latta, how about disclosing how much you've received in "campaign contributions" from the large broadband providers in return for introducing such a bill?

—Robin Cook, Arlington, VA

Very important.

—Sharon Teresa Louisell, El Cerrito, CA

Your vote will be noted, and you will be judged accordingly, for all time. Think about that.

—Bob Haddard, Springfield, TN

Apparently we now know who is a complete corporate lackey.

—Jerry K F Chilson, Enumclaw, WA

Don't stand with Rep. Latta! We need REAL Net Neutrality rather than a broken version that will create a tiered system that gives the big ISPs the opportunity to get even bigger!

—Dave Kalata, Seattle, WA

None of us want to lose our freedom of speech! None of us really want huge corporations or Congress to act like a wicked Godmother to us! Let's fight the good fight and stop those who would hinder us and our freedom of speech!

—Vivien Britton, Bandon, OR

I think hiring a former cable lobbyist as a head chairman for the FCC was a less than smart move. Now we have to take action to stop this lobbyist from giving at&t, comcast, and verizon what they want.

—Edgar Robert, Hialeah, FL

Big business cannot run the internet. It should be open to anyone in the country and this world to visit at their own speed.

—Andrew Baxley, Cortez, CO

Please help us keep a "level playing field". The internet is for everyone. Please, please keep the internet open!

—Genevieve Cormia-Foster, Portland, OR

You or the FCC does Not own the Internet !

—Barbara Wyatt, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Keep the internet open and free to roam.

—Nancie evoniuk, woodland hills, CA

I would ask that that bill that Representative Bob Latta has proposed be rejected, as it favors no body, but only a few, who have at mind only selfish and destructive interests. A vast majority of people will once again have to suffer at the hands of a few. We are all aware that this bill is once again the workings of the oligarchy and new world order extending its ugly tentacles. Listening to a so called informed person recently, he talked of "if you can't beat them, join them", this person being Robert Anton Wilson. This was the key I was looking for from this person, a person who also reveals that he is a freemason. The problem with this person and his pride with his own intellect, is that he will have to pay. Yes he is now dead but I am sure that the universe will demand balance, payment i.e. karma or the judgement of God. Yes my perspective is that the universe is looking for the diamonds in the rough, that it is looking for those who stand against evil, to whatever cost. This life being so short in reality, I see it as the mark of ignorance and stupidity, to constantly give in to evil, to side with evil, to beguile oneself all for the sake of selfish short lived ideals and interests. A stand against evil is a addition to ones very soul, an input into the bank of God, something of which God instantly takes note of, the blessings of God verses damnation.

—Andrew Jacobs, Ronkonkoma, NY

Stop this bill! Let the internet be free.

—Nicholas Garwolinski, ,

If you underestimate the importance of a free web we all will pay for it, one way or the other.

—Tony Sippl, ,

How you vote on net neutrality tells voters all they need to know about whether you should keep your job.

—James C. Fuller, Minneapolis, MN

This is an anti-trust issue and a communications issue. We cannot allow them to hamper open access.

—Claudia A. Gibson, Fx, CA

Vote NO on H.R. 4752 and tell Tom Wheeler to protect NET NEUTRALITY by reclassifying ISPs as common carriers. Don't let Obama's telecom Lobbyists in the FCC take away more of our freedom of speech, privacy, commerce and information essential to promote liberty in the USA

—Ms. Carol Ortiz, Montgomery, TX

Tom Wheeler also needs to be fired. He has proven that despite being a tax-paid federal employee as the Chairman of the FCC, he is still more concerned about his employment from the telecom/wireless companies he once lobbied for; this is the epitome of corporate-based corruption.

—Ril'riia Kil'urden, Lewiston, ME

Save us from the cable companies,

—Steve Treegoob, Portland, OR

The Internet is a PUBLIC UTILITY for information that must be kept free, open, and neutral. Do not let the Big Telecoms corrupt the Internet; in fact, the Big Telecoms need to be broken up.

—Stephanie Stout, Houston, TX

We are Anonymous, we are legion. Do not forgive, do not forget.

—Flannan Sheehan, ,

This affects more than just US citizens. The decisions and actions taken on net neutrality will affect everyone using the Internet. If only politicians would stop listening to money from large corporations, and start listening to the people they are supposed to be serving...

—Chris Downs, ,

You need to declare all ISP's as CLASS 2 carriers and also start looking into their throttling our internet!!!

—Scott Cutler, Tustin, CA

The Internet is not a toll road.

—Alyson Creider, Richardson, TX

Internet belongs to the whole world!

—Samo Blatnik, Žužemberk,

Keep Net neutrality! !!!

—Carolina Vazquez, Rancho Palos Verdes, CA

In Europe the Net is twice as fast for half the price. Why not here??

—Martin Zuniga., Brookings, OR

The Internet is part of the commons. It belongs to we the people, NOT the corporations. The Internet exists to facilitate communications, creativity, research, learning, education, and business. As the means to facilitate these activities for we the people, it should be available for no cost or a very minimal affordable cost to all people. The only way to achieve this is for the Internet to be reclassified as a common carrier. That is what must be done.

—David Garrett, Dolan Springs, AZ

keep the internet open, the way it was meant to be.

—Kyle Lawler, walnut creek, CA

I WONDER WHAT MR LATTA WOULD SAY IF THIS KIND OF CENSORSHIP WAS BEING PROPOSED BY SOME FOREIGN DICTATOR?

—Ron Wilson, BIRMINGHAM,

H.R. 4752 is the exact opposite of what will protect the open Internet.

—Ms. Janet Moran, Grand Terrace, CA

The loss of net neutrality would be a major threat to our democratic process. Please prevent that loss.

—Eugene S.Treadwell, Baltimore, MD

Please abstain from voting for the proposed bill of Rep. Bob Latta. It is a direct vote against the open Internet!

—Carolyn Radcliff, Sacramento, CA

Dear Sir, Madam;- It is imperative that the Internet remain a neutral sphere, with equal speeds for all carriers and users. The internet is the single biggest communication device and network humanity has ever constructed. Thanks to it, ideas of democracy have spread out to everyone in every nation who has even a dial-up connection. Artists, Musicians, Engineers and Mathematicians have collaborated in forums to solve problems, advance their crafts and drive their local economies. With the click of a mouse button, someone in the US can chat live with someone in Australia! This is an incredible thing, and at this juncture in time, on the stage of History, all of You in Congress are gate-keeper watching over this. Please, please, please do not underestimate the importance of this issue, but move to protect this valuable and fantastical thing, and keep it open for all of us. Yours Faithfully, Alexander Cellmer

—Alexander Cellmer, ,

Keep the internet free!!!

—Jeanne Stewart, Green Springs, OH

it's wrong and you know it is

—Andrew Parris, Brooklyn, NY

Thank you, Congressman Issa, for your attention to this matter.

—William E. Miller, Solana Beach, CA

We need to protect smaller websites that educate and inform. Some are run on a very low budget.

—Julie Woodman, ,

Reclassification is the only way to stop companies like AT&T, Comcast and Verizon from creating fast and slow lanes online. If the FCC fails to take this simple step — or if it's restricted from doing so — the Internet as we know it could be lost. That's exactly what AT&T, Comcast and Verizon want. These companies are paying good money to make sure Congress does their bidding.

—Alfred Denny, Oak Ridge, TN

DON'T SELL OUT.

—zzzn Bonnell, Austin, TX

I already pay for my internet access and I see no reason for my ISP to be able to decide what parts of the internet I could visit or which sites may load faster than others. My cable company may be able to decide what networks it will carry and I may then decide what service offers the selection I desire but they do not then select what shows I am allowed to watch. Does the phone company get to decide which calls I am allowed to make or receive? No. When I pay for my service, I should be allowed to go where I please and do what I want, uninhibited by corporate wishes.

—Phillip Jensen, Minneapolis, MN

THE KYOTO PROTOCOL???

—Dimitar Dolnooryahov, village of strelets, IA

Are you kidding me? Since when does the US Congress have the right to rule on something the entire WORLD owns?

—Corbin Stack, Reinheim,

Without guaranteed net-neutrality I have another unknown - and potentially expensive - affecting my start up. Those of us who start business take responsibility for driving the economy, please don't put another hurdle in our way in order to favor massive corporations.

—Pamela J Blignaut, Longmont, CO

By disallowing net-neutrality our start-up, which depends of high speed broadband at a reason price to our selves and clients may immediately be derailed. The amount of power the FCC and Bob Latta would give to a few large corporations control of the data flow - and effectively control over whether I can run an internet based business. Please vote against this bill and act to restore net-neutrality.

—Lois Kamrath, Longmont, CO

For dissemination of information, there is no greater tool.

—Adem Boeckmann, Anchorage, AK

I support net neutrality as a vibrant part of our civilization.

—Mark Homer, Maryville, TN

Please don't abolish one of our country's basic freedoms - that one obtaining information. Please vote against this bill.

—Kevin S O'Donnell, Chapel Hill, NC for a better world

—Uwe Thomas, berlin,

I will be voting for those who protect net neutrality. Those who's names are listed on Reddit as not voting against this I will vote against.

—Marcus A. Werner, Anderson, IN

We need the internet to communicate advice to friends to vote for good representatives LIKE YOU!!! THANK YOU for your work.

—Barbara Burns, Santa Cruz, CA

Net Neutrality is VERY IMPORTANT for innovation from small entrepreneurs. ----- A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet Do NOT sell out the American people. ----- CenturyLink and Comcast, already, slows down (to snail's pace) info not sponsored by Google (big Payers). Google blocks information on Search Engines. This will only increase if Broadband is not classified under Title II of the Communications Act.

—Simon Carvalho, St Paul, MN

this bill is not in the best interest of the greater good.

—Elizabeth Jenness, Tampa, FL

This bill is toxic for the future!

—Roar Lundbeck Andersen, ,

Congress needs to start representing the people that elected them and not the corporations and their lackeys.

—James Hand, Columbus, IN

Net neutrality is fundamental to preserving free speech and maintaining our democracy.

—John Ruhl, Flemington, NJ

The above comment is really all that need be said. I absolutely abhor the idea that someone could theoretically control the internet. Stop this bill now. PLEASE.

—Lizz B., Breaks, VA

Regulate these industries and make internet providers common carriers.

—Clayton James Conway, Seattle, WA

We must maintain an open Internet.

—James L Carns III, LATROBE, PA

Keep money out of the internet, it should be equally available to all.

—James M. Loughrey, Grand Island, NY

The American people REALLY need net neutrality to have free and open access to the internet! Please protect it now.

—Patrice Martin, Wilmot, NH

We are ALL equal according to our history and constitution. This awful bill would allow those with money to become an oligarchy and destroy equality of our citizens.

—David and Susanne S. S., Houston, TX

Don't betray us.

—Gary Walsh, Hackensack, NJ

Your constituents who pay you to represent us insist that you vote against Rep. Latta's bill. Your constituents want to keep an open Internet. There is no question that aside from greed, the mafia running our government wants the average person to not have access to what is really happening and how corrupt our system is.

—Annette Saint John Lawrence, Sherman Oaks, CA

Internet is human right, it needs to be open to all, equally.

—Mr. Ain Tohvri, Tartu, IA

Stop this dangerous trend now!

—Kristine Gardner, Leesburg, VA

Toxic Bill!

—Peter Lee, San Francisco, CA

Please do not join Rep. Latta in sucking up to the media vultures like AT&T, Comcast, Verizon, etc.

—Jim Harkins, Casco, MI

This bill would be a disaster for an open and free internet. It would become a monopoly for the chosen few and the rest of us would be shut out by high usage fees. Just because you think that we all depend on the internet that we would pay higher fees is an error on your part. You think that we're not paying attention but we are. Remove this bill from consideration.

—Bonnie J Olivier, Grand Rapids, MI

Please don't let greedy American corporations steal the internet from the people.

—Rand A A. Martin, Denison, TX

Just when we thought we had saved net neutrality some jerk comes up with another assault on our freedom.

—Katherine Galloway, Ava, MO taking this step is like returning to the dark ages ... we have all the medium to make this world a better world by taking out zone restrictions and make a world that it's tolerant to other people

—Christian Gutierrez, ,

We need net neutrality, for the good of democracy and the economy.

—Brian Cheverie, Buffalo, NY

Limiting access to communications and information in any way violates the rights of citizens to learn and grow.

—Jeannette Hanna, Sacramento, CA

This action will have worldwide consequences, please make the right decision and give the FCC the power they need to protect the open and fair to all internet.

—Christopher Finn, , stop the corporate greed.

—Ronnie LoBello, Chicago, IL

Please DO THE OBVIOUS! Do not curb net neutrality in any way!

—Sarah Champlin, Los Angeles, CA

We are a small Internet based business and need to Internet to stay neutral, as it now is, so we have a level playing field. A vote for Bob Latta's bill is a vote against small business, the engine of our economy!

—Linda and Peter Willis, Naples, FL

STOP THIS CORPORATE INSANITY BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE.

—Dennis B, Lackawanna, NY

Hands off our internet!

—Rev Paul J. Bern, Atlanta, GA

I do not want the internet to be killed!

—Jesper Andreasson, Dundee, KY

The Internet is just that. An interconnection of networks. If the carriers are allowed to discriminate against networks who can't/won't pay an additional fee, then we will no longer have "The Internet." We will have a "Divided-net" The power/value of a network is a function of the number of computers connected to it. If this bill goes through, the power/value of what we once called The Internet will be tragically diminished.

—jim Young, Deerfield, WI

Please reclassify broadband Internet as a common carrier now.

—Marie Snavely, Lititz, PA

The government needs to start looking out for the peoples best interests, not theirs. People should have real choices.

—Sameera Walker, Greenville, SC

Stop Mucking Up Everything To Favor Your Wealthy Donors.

—Leland W Griffin Jr, Trumansburg, NY

Please think about the impact on the people instead of the companies.

—David Kramer, Naples, FL

The internet is for everyone, not just mega companies.

—Julie S Viegutz, Parma, OH

Why won't you listen to "the people"??

—Rhonda Lawrence, Magalia, CA

Who do you really serve?

—Tammy Lettieri, Deerfield, FL

Stay out of our communications!

—Eric Schneider, Santa Fe, NM do the right thing, not the the thing that maximizes your campaign contribution

—keith hutchison MD, Belfast, ME

This is one of the few issues where I will research who voted which way and cast my vote at the voting booth accordingly. Compromising on net neutrality is not acceptable.

—Hon Chong Chang, Yardley, PA

Congress needs to do the right thing for once. The internet is vital to our society.

—Paula Cronin, Hooksett, NH

Those working in Congress to defeat the public interest must be weeded out.

—Richard Tarr, Carthage, NY

Really? Come on. Why?

—John Cushman, Wauconda, IL

End this fascist power grab or you are an accomplice.

—Richard Tynan, Utuado, PR

Not everything is revenue necessary!

—Susan M Hoffman, Williamsburg, VA

DO NOT PASS THIS BILL!!! It will be the detriment of ALL business, not just smaller ones.

—Helene Mertz, Houston, TX

this is a no brainer. Do what is right for the country and DO NOT support this bill

—Scott Mooney, newton, NJ

It's a corporate vise. They are taking over TV, cable, the internet--they want to make sure that the voices of truth are never heard--just fear, lies, omission, and distorted information.

—Sharon Sanders, Northbrook, IL

Please let me know where you stand on this issue.

—Ms. Lisa Hamill, Chapel Hill, NC

You lowered the ability of the public to get necessary information in emergencies BY destroying TV broadcasting. SO Corporations could make more MONEY DO Not do the same to the Internet Too many people rely on it

—Richard E Leary, Bedford, MA

<> Keep the internet available and equally open to all <>

—Frederick Hodges, Castle Rock, CO

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality

—Lowell Hart, Centennial, WY

This is just unacceptable, If the internet is not free for my whole life I vow to fight back any way necessary. I will not let this horrendous injustice stand. Bob Latta, you are a vile person.

—Skyler Fly-Wilson, Ward, CO

Freedom of speech does NOT mean only the elite get to be heard!!!! How much are you willing to DESTROY THIS COUNTRY before you're done!!! Vote NO on HR 4752!!!

—Judi Bryan, BARTLETT, IL

The loss of Net Neutrality would kill small businesses, entrepreneurs, and start-up companies - as well as curtailing free speech in America. It would be the final straw that makes America no better than Russia, Iran, or China...countries that also restrict their Internet.

—Jason Dickey, Bellingham, MA

Chairman Powell made a big mistake in thinking he could preserve net neutrality AND avoid classifying ISPs under title II. Please put us back on track.

—Barry Rein, High Falls, NY

Either Allow REAL Competition To Provide Fast Internet Access Or Reclassify The Monopolizing Companies As Common Carriers. It's As Simple As That.

—Jonathan King, Modesto, CA

The Internet is communication, why is it not classified and regulated as such?

—Paul Horne, Boynton Beach, FL

It is imperative that ISPs are reclassified as common carriers to ensure a prosperous Internet for all, small as well as large businesses!

—Christopher Hill, Athens, TX

On a personal note; I understand the need for some sort of "policing" of the net supporting this bill, I believe, would only further the era of a locked down "police state" of the net. In where not only do companies have the ability to restrict access and speed, but monitor in its entirety what all consumers are doing. Again please do not support this bill. Thank you

—Jerrad Heath, Joplin, MO

The Internet must be reclassified as common carriers.

—Nancy Gutierrez, PALM DESERT, CA

Net neutrality is a crucial issue. Please support true net neutrality. The communications companies certainly won't do it on their own.

—Matthew Braun, Champaign, IL

What happened to America and it's meaning of freedom?

—Jason Chapman, Laurel, MD

I've paid income tax for over 50 years to make it possible for the Government to build the internet. And now you are considering giving it to a bunch of jack booted Gordon Geckos to rob us blind. Think again, Rodney!

—M C Kubiak, BMI, IL

Until the bought and paid for republican tea party is out of control this will only get worse for average americans!

—Judy White, Greensboro, NC

WHAT'S GOOD FOR COMCAST's, AT&T, and VERIZON is just BAD FOR ME.

—John R. Storms, Auburn, MA

now

—William V Regan, Hayward, CA

Listen to the people and not Comcast, AT&T, and Verizon. Protect Net Neutrality.

—Colette dumont, Mobile, AL

IT IS OF THE GREATEST IMPORTANCE TO PRESERVE TOTAL AND COMPLETE NET NEUTRALITY!!!!

—Howard Miller, Ventura, CA

Please keep it Neutral.

—Vincent Yanuchi, Middleburg, FL

Too many can not afford education, but can afford a prepaid smartphone bill, and self-educate through the power of internet. We know the oligarchy is afraid of educated citizens; but even the most ignorant are waking. Mitigate the damage, keep the internet open!

—DB Pope, Varnville, SC

The corporate sellouts in Congress are ruining our democracy. They make sure that the public can't have anything of it's own without private profiteers taking it over and from the public commons. We need a NATIONAL BROADBAND PROJECT like the WPA that belongs to and will be run by public servants NOT greedy middlemen ISPs with no right to mess with content / speeds - none!

—Leilani M. M.Torres, Brooklyn, NY

This bill is insulting to our intelligence. You've got the people who pay you to look out for them in congress sleeping on the streets trying to save a little bit of our freedom trying to force Tom Wheeler and the FCC to classify the internet as a telecommunications service. Finally they consider doing what so many Americans have demanded, and then congress tries to pass a bill that doesn't allow them to do so? Anyone who supports this bill should be arrested for treason.

—X, Wilmington, NC

This bill result in slow Internet an I don't want that!

—Anasty, Kemah, TX

Do the right thing, please, by voting against this H.R. 4752. Thank you, Rachel Jacobsohn

—Rachel W Jacobsohn, Chicago, IL

Stop selling the American people out. Do your job & represent the people that elected you, not the corporations that pay you.

—Rick Mickaels, ,

Please do not vote for this bill. It benefits the few (Large Internet providers, over the many, Make the information highway equal for all players.

—Scott Zucker, Wellington, FL

Do not destroy the network we have built up in the last few decades.

—Armin Weiß, ,

This would be a violation of the contitution

—Daniel Cherry, batavia, NY

We are watching / paying attention.

—Don Hawkins, Portland, OR

Fight tyranny. Keep the Internet FREE!

—Paul Pokorny, Lombard, IL

No more hostile corporate takeovers. We've had enough of them already.

—Dan Wicht, Fridley, MN

Let The FCC do their job. The internet is the last "Free Press" without $$ motivated corporate interest.

—Jeff Treanor-Brown, Eugene, OR

No one will benefit from a tiered Internet, except those seeking to make money through preferential treatments and "subscription" packages. That is unthinkable. The consumer pays his or her ISP to provide an Internet connection, nothing more. Carriers must be classified as service providers or utilities. Anything less threatens the existence of the Internet as we know it. The Internet has become a very necessary part of everyday life, from email, social net-working, banking and shopping to videos, music, and movies. We have integrated the Net into our daily lives to the point that it is hard to imagine doing without it, just like electricity or running water. It's high time to recognize the fact that the Internet is indeed a utility, and must be treated as such.

—Adam H Higgins, Columbia, SC

We need an Internet to be free and open.

—Kirk Preston, Glen Allen, VA

Keep the INTERNET FREE AND OPEN!!! It is basic. It is a utility.

—Daniel A Pratte, Anchorage, KY

it would be great if politicians represented the american people, instead of their corporate owners.

—Savvas Spyridopoulos, Boston, MA

Please help keep Broadband under Title II of the Communications Act, vote NO on HR 4752 (the rep Bob Latta bill)

—William Rudge III, Clinton, NY

the internet was given to the people of the world by a Brit. to try and steal it in this way would mark the US Gov't as piratical scum.

—John Shale, wigan,

No support should come to this bill which is against the consumer's right to a free internet

—Dr. Damaur Quander, Washington, DC

So many businesses - including my own - depend on an open Internet where all traffic is handled equally. Letting broadband providers sell privileged access to big customers with deep pockets could really hurt small businesses like mine. Please support Net Neutrality, and vote against H.R. 4752. We need to put Internet service providers back under Title II of the communications Act.

—Daniel Mann, Tallahassee, FL

Please vote no on this bill it will destroy our internet as we know it. PLEASE VOTE NO!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Robert Lingerfelt, Madison, GA

Please do not support this bill, I urge you to stay away from this bill. PLEASE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Marie Lingerfelt, Madison, GA

Too many slick willies in the mix.

—Jose Rosario, Jersey City, NJ

Don't vote against the American people!

—Esther Allman, Frankfort, IL

Sad days when corporations rule! Do we have even one free thinking Congressperson? Or are they all beholden to corporations' money? No wonder Congress is no longer functioning in the people's interest, and is held in contempt. Ida Hurt

—Ida Hurt, Northridge, CA

A free and open Internet is essential for our democracy! If you vote for bill H.R. 4752, you are voting against an open Internet! This would be unconscionable! Please help keep an open Internet and vote against this bill! Please vote FOR net neutrality! Thank you!

—Patricia Amazorso, Cortlandt Manor, NY

Your priority: People over companies.

—Doug Williams, Wheeling, IL

I do not want to see a medium that has driven much of the innovation we have seen recently be hampered by the "editorial discretion" that Verizon claims is its right.

—John Tyler, Culpeper, VA

Reclassify broadband as a common carrier. Don't let the cable companies turn the Internet into their own platform. It was built by the people for the people. It's no different than the public roadways. Corporations can and should use them but they cannot impose their own toll system or take control of them.

—Mr. Rich Levin, Schwenksville, PA

Keep your paws off of it.

—Jason Newcomb, Southport, NC

A congress of baboons would accomplish something, anything or they would starve.

—Bob Blackmoore, Kelseyville, CA

I urge the United States Congress to scrap this bill (H.R. 4752) These rules would destroy Net Neutrality. We need you to stand up for real Net Neutrality, not prohibit it. The Internet is a great economy stimulant that will only continue to be more and more important as technology advances, and becomes more and more part of our daily lives. Please do not hinder its progress.

—Trevor Demelo, D'iberville, MS

We cannot let corporations seize control of the internet, which has become a primary conduit of communication for ALL people. Internet bandwidth is as much a utility as phone cables, electric power, or running water, and it must be treated as such.

—Nick Perry, New York, NY

This may be the defining issue of our time. Don't get this wrong!

—Conrad Moore, San Francisco, CA

Net neutrality might be the last hope this 'Democracy' of ours has.

—Peter Jump, Palatine, IL

The net is one place people of all nations can come together, voice opinions, and work things out. Protect free speech on the internet by protecting net neutrality!

—Jackie Connet, Wichita, KS

Why grant big corporations more power to control thoughts? The internet should not be controlled by anyone but should remain open.

—Willow Feigum, Glenwood, MN

Can we stop letting corporation control our government? Please!

—Rory O'Donoghue, Greenlawn, NY

I am really angry about the way big corporations have been able to muscle their way into the internet and make it more and more expensive for the regular user to be connected.

—Gisela Koestner, Poway, CA

gosh darn when wil this friggin nutrality war be over

—Matthew Krossschell, barrington, RI

The free exchange of information is essential to democracy.

—Diana Somerville, Port Angeles, WA

Why are they being allowed to even consider regulating the average person by raping his or her's income by charging the big internet companies which will in turn be charged to the consumer? It is sad to see greed being the only driving force for big business instead of true customer service!

—George J Kalata, Everett, WA

The internet has become a "public utility" and should be regulated WELL so that huge companies can not slow down MY internet traffic. Please!

—Marian Archibald, Lansdale, PA

Vote for the bill and you'll lose office.

—David Duncan, Holly Springs, NC

Why would you even think this is a good idea? How much more will YOU and CONGRESS pay in order to get your websites delivered to the people at a reasonable speed? And what will you tell your constituents when your vote to prevent Net Neutrality costs them millions of dollars when their websites are no longer feasible means of doing business? Where do you think you'll be sitting the following January after elections?

—Craig Simons, Nooksack, WA

The internet MUST remain open. Stop with this offensive intrusion and keep the net neutral.

—James G Whitehead, Mount Clemens, MI

Please don't let the corporations create a "Corporate Internet." We already have "Corporate News" which distorts vital news.

—Asher Golden, Annandale, VA

please keep the internet free.

—Joseph C Pianta, Erie, PA

Please don't let this happen! Protect net neutrality. The average family won't be able to afford the internet if we lose this battle.

—Don Sodrel, New Albany, IN

Between work and school it's nearly impossible for me to go a day without using the internet...which is why it's so important to me that it stays free and open for all. Many free services like Wikipedia and Mozilla will struggle to operate under this bill. You probably didn't grow up with the internet; I did. It's vital in today's society. Do not fix what isn't broken, and do not let anyone convince you that the internet is broken. With every bill like this we are one step closer to living in a nation analogous to Soviet Russia. That's not how I want to live. I hope that's not how you want to live either. Stay neutral...really neutral, not the fake version of neutrality circulating around Washington.

—Meredith Beck, milton, GA

Save net neutrality

—David Khalil, ,

Please do not vote for this bill. As a student I understand how vital the internet is these days. That's why it's so important to protect it. It's your job to protect it, and make no mistake--this bill would NOT protect it.

—Meredith Beck, Milton, GA

Verizon has me & is gouging me on my data plan. As I reach my limit I'm forced to upgrade my data plan, which means less dollars for me to live on. I'm retired & on a fixed income..There`s got to be a better way for Americans to access the Internet affordably... Verizon is like a drug lord the more you need the more they charge for thier drugs...Stop this please thankyou, Doug Sera

—Douglas Sera, Portland, OR

I strongly support Net Neutrality.

—Steven Cartwright, Kalamazoo, MI

Don't pander to the ISP's! They need to be considered a common carrier for the exact same reason that we classify Ma Bell as one...

—David S Greenberg, Highland Park, IL

"Slippery slope" isn't even an understatement for what this bill will do. This bill will cause an avalanche, burying the voices of almost -- almost -- everyone! The only voices which will remain will be those of snake oil salesmen representing huge corporations, shilling for profits by selling crap to consumers! Please, don't let this happen!

—Lesley Shure, Boerne, TX

Why can't you just leave the Internet alone?

—Kevin Riley, Nashville, TN

Please keep the net free. It is an ideal tool of worldwide education, which will lead to more understanding and better chance at peace.

—Karla Schmiedlin, Columbia Station, OH

The internet should be open for everyone.

—Jacqueline Genzman, Alpharetta, GA

This upcoming bill is dangerous in not allowing the FCC to reclassify the Internet to keep it open. Please vote against this bill to keep the medium of the Internet free and open for all and not just a few. Thank you.

—Rosemary Wolf, Inman, SC

Don't pass the bill! I vote for you!

—Carmen, Agawam, MA

This is all we have left. We don't want it regulated by and for corporate power. Put it back under Title II.

—James Brummer, Salina, KS

Just another way for something great and fair to be taken over by corporations.

—Max Evans, Shawnee, KS

This bill is opposed to the interests of the majority of citizens

—Dorothy Bruce, Tucson, AZ

A vote for this bill is against the expressed interests of the American people. Against an informed electorate, a prerequisite of democracy and an open field for economic innovation and participation. If enacted, HR-4752 will quell our populations free access to creative interaction, art and education and will hinder the cultural evolution and the many concerted local actions required to sustain life on our planet. It will do this by unfairly advantaging the status quo, a race to profit a very few at the expense potentially of all life. The internet is a utility paid for by US taxpayers. It must remain an un-tiered, universally and equally accessible commons for the good of the people.

—Shoshannah Benmosché, New York, NY

No person would ever vote for this bill against Net Neutrality unless they were making money off of it. And those that would make money off of it would not be the majority but a few greedy individuals or corporate heads "screwing" the middle class (again). A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet.

—Sue Biederman, Everly, IA

Here in Columbia County we already pay a significant sum for poor DSL service from a third rate provider. What would happen without Net Neutrality? Price gouging and even worse service, leading to fewer home purchases, business startups, and JOBS!

—Karen Carney, Spencertown, NY

This is wrong, wrong, WRONG. And you know it. Please do not allow this to go through.

—Joy Breese, Park Forest, IL

At least for the decades since its beginning, the rate of growth in speed and capacity exceeded demand for web services. The enormous overcapacity which was the result of speculation before the web bubble popped around 2000 has kept the cost of physical data distribution low. ("Dark wire" is a useful concept to ponder, because there's still some.) Alternative technologies (like using the electricity distribution network up to the last mile, for example) hover waiting for the end of net neutrality. The legal model of common carriers is much more appropriate than the alternatives being proposed.

—Daniel Eaves, Round Rock, TX

When are you Congress Critters going to take the action FCC is avoiding and declare ISP's as Common Carriers?

—Kiwibob Glanzman, Seattle, WA

Just stop you greedy assholes

—Raynaldo Rodriguez, grand prairie, TX

Let's leave a little something for us little guys, for Christ's sake.

—Richard Burrows, Bonney Lake, WA

The Internet has become a critical piece of infrastructure (just like telephones became for us decades ago). It's long past time that Internet Service Providers followed the "Common Carrier" rules as well. Strike H.R. 4752 down and give the FCC the power it needs to fulfill the job it was made to perform.

—Lance Trahan, Baton Rouge, LA

H.R. 4752 is a blatant attempt to destroy net neutrality The internet should properly be classified as a common carrier by the FCC. I am unaffiliated with any political party and I vote.

—Bruce Baker, Hazelwood, NC

Please oppose this bill in order to protect net neutrality and free speech on the internet.

—Rachel Story, Cape Girardeau, MO

The US already suffers a competitive disadvantage because of the sorry state of the oligarchy in the telecomm industry, please don't let it get worse.

—David Donovan, Louisville, KY

No way Jose!

—Timothy F. Havel, Boston, MA

This is an direct, underhanded attack against letting the FCC do what it's supposed to do -- regulate communications in the United States. The bottom line is that the internet is no longer a luxury is this day and age; Like electricity or running water, it has become a utility that citizens need fair, equal access to if our country wants any hope of keeping/regaining it's greatness. Our internet speeds aren't even in the TOP 20 (!) in the world. We can't crack the Top 20! What an embarrassment. Big Business is spoiling our competitive edge to make profits for themselves. Don't let them. Keep the internet open, and shut down damaging (and usurping) legislation like this proposed bill. Thank you.

—Justin Long, Los Angeles, CA

The bill promotes discrimination, and is against the Constitution. The Federal Government has no actual right to regulate the access of the general public to the internet, as the internet is worldwide. Furthermore, the United States has fallen severely behind in internet speeds compared to competing countries, and passing this bill will just end up making that gap larger. Please do not pass this bill. It is the exact opposite thing from what the internet really needs.

—Bhaven Toprani, Cupertino, CA

The Whole World needs net neutrality. I depend upon our law makers to protect it with their lives.

—Julie Cain, Sturgis, MS

Why is it always the average citizen who is put under the bus? Please stand up for "everyman" to have equal access not the huge corporations because that is what this is all about. Money vs. fair access. Who do you stand for?

—Debra and Mark Thurlo, Mound, MN

Why are you taking away the power of the FCC to do the right thing, and protecting the unique treasure the internet is? Is that telco money doing the talking for you? What's the point in making the 'net as dull as broadcasting and cable? Keeping the sheep in line so they don't complain or are even aware their fate is to be converted into mutton? Absolutely revolting and cynical. Sorry, but business doesn't run things "better" than government. They run things as cheaply, shoddily and charge as much for it as possible. They care only about profit, people be damned. And Congress be damned as well for being business' happy servants (instead of the peoples').

—Jason Brose, Shawnee Mission, KS

Please protect the open internet, not destroy it with H.R. 4752. Thank you.

—Gladys M. Bransford, Cobb, CA

The internet must remain open.

—Glenn Kramer, Madison, WI

Don't mute our, the Peoples, voice/access!

—Ron Peterson, Gasquet, CA

As an employee at a startup, I can confidently say that net neutrality is the worst thing for startups and hence economic innovation.

—Brant Buchika, Flagstaff, AZ

Please do NOT allow this bill to pass.

—S Rogers, Lynnwood, WA

Dear Hearts, How do we CHANGE OUR GOVT FOR THE 99% to a REAL POPULIST GOVT.? Will you help with manifesting OUR NEW EARTH COMMUNITY SERVICES/JOBS BILL @ 2,600.00/Month for the 99% to get back to work ??? TIME TO UNITE HUMANITY ...We can use www.freeandequalelections.org and www.occupytelevision.com and other online alternative news, social media and connections. 1. ALL MILITARY STAND DOWN WORLD WIDE AND WORK TOGETHER ON THE WAR ON CLIMATE CHANGE 2.OUR VETERANS, WOMEN. MEN AND YOUTH NEED REAL HEALING FOR PTSD AND OTHER MENTAL and Physical HEALTH ISSUES.. Dear Hearts, Time to shift the old paradigm systems set up by the top 1% on this entire planet. Time to unite the USA to lead the way to change and move this planet forward! NEW EARTH COMMUNITY SERVICES /JOBS BILL @2,600.00/MONTH Time for massive recruitment for our YOUTH for NEW EARTH COMMUNITY SERVICES @ $2,600.00 month to focus intentions on co-creating our new earth education & training for all the jobs needed in every community: Green jobs, edible landscaping crews, green renewable energy jobs, infrastructure, massive hydroponics, Hemp farms, recycling, housing for homeless (1/2-2/3 of homeless are veterans). The homeless housing areas can be attached to the new earth lightworkers, Body, mind and spirit healing arts centers with light chambers, Oxygen chambers and all the transformational healing arts we now have with all the health care alternative methods that heal and bring JOY,Light, Inner peace programs and LOVE BEYOND any DRUGS! These NEW EARTH COMMUNITY HEALING ARTS CENTERS will help the homeless heal and find their true Soul purpose; so that, they can re-integrate into fulfilling New Earth Community Service Men and Women jobs. Every Healing Arts Centers will need virtual interactive communication arts using various social media to integrate the virtual local and global webinars, green groups, Teachers,lightworkers and Body, Mind, Spirit Healer groups with mufti-cultural arts and global language apps. All the people in prison for drug and alcohol related offenses and all the returning veterans will need REAL HEALING that can be offered by the new earth Community Healing Arts centers! Also, we need new earth animal care taker jobs, recycling jobs,pollution clean up jobs, MORE Teachers and more Waldorf schools & Montessori schools are needed, more coaching jobs for aggressive youth, universal avatar training programs, teachers of universal laws with Soul purpose networking for REAL CIVIL RIGHTS/HUMAN RIGHTS jobs and future HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES AND SOCIAL SERVICE JOBS that are needed in every community. Time to PAY ALL COMMUNITY VOLUNTEERS (including all churches and spiritual centers) at $2,600.00/month TO BECOME PART OF THE NEW EARTH HELPING, HEALING, LOVING COMMUNITY SERVICE MEN AND SERVICE WOMEN working together locally and globally on community- to- world healing projects, Green PROJECTS, teachers, healers, lightworker projects, clean water, natural foods, Industrial Hemp farms, and Peacemaker projects that will re-focus HUMANITY TO UNITE ALL RACES AND RELIGIONS with intentions on new earth FREE Community education and training for OUR NEW EARTH HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES and social services in every community to work in co-operation for co-creating the Golden Age of Gaia. This NEW EARTH COMMUNITY SERVICES & Jobs bill @2,600.00/month will help replace the old paradigm systems set up by the top 1%. Time for humanity's real democracy by populism that works for the 99% and MOTHER EARTH! We are all connected on this little planet that is home to all of us. Nameste, Lynn Mystic-Healer —Lynn Mystic-Healer, North Bend, OR

Internet that should not be run by big companies that are more interested in profit than interactions necessary for our democratic way of life. Letting companies having unfair resources to influence who is elected to office is bad enough, but interfering with the people way of communicating would be devastating.
—carolyn Dunn, Louisville, KY

WORK TO BE DONE; SOCIAL JUSTICE IN GREAT DANGER! PROMOTE FAIRNESS, FREEDOM, JUSTICE, PEACE, HUMANITY, PRODUCTIVITY, WELL-BEING OF GENERAL PUBLIC. RESOLVE SOCIO- POLITICAL ISSUES, BALANCING BUDGET. OPPOSE SO CALLED "FAIR ELECTION ACT" PUBLIC FINANCE MATCHING SMALL DONORS FUND- DO MORE HARM THAN GOOD, RESOURCES BENEFIT "BAD GUYS" AS USUAL. TASKS: TOP PRIORITIES: Society in vicious cycles as in need of revolution, we MUST act: (1). Prosecute, eliminate "MURDER- fraud- crime- injustice networks" = cruel tyranny = robbery machine = ROBBER- ISM; destroying essences of democracy, capitalism; continuing, on-going; relaying, penetrating every segment of our lives (inc. civic non- profit organizations); expanding here domestically to overseas- foreign countries; with threat, coercion, victimization, deprivation, discrimination; unjust practices, manipulation, influence; bad legislative bills; unjust hidden agenda with false/ misleading excuses (inc. private- public partnership, economic development, housing, school construction, transportation, abandonment of properties, maintenance of "paper roads", nonsense grants, programs; ..., whatever) to benefit/ facilitate "MURDER-fraud- crime- injustice networks" (inc. officials, judges, developers, lawyers, employees, etc.); expand further unjust operation; endless unlawful- immoral acts; rob/destroy resources (rights, land, properties, home, buildings, assets, accounts, income, pension, documents, evidences; public, private; business, civic, political); frivolous litigation, levies, foreclosures, garnishment, guardianship, power of attorney; improper processing of complaints, procedures, proceedings, docketing, bookkeeping, accounting; cause vicious cycles: socio- political- election-media- budget- legislative- system problems; civil-human rights backwards; people-slave. Examples of problems are provided below:  (2). Restore: principle, fairness, cost-effectiveness, accountability, reliability, capability; fair election, justice, peace (including civic, non-profit organizations), "check and balance"; Restore: TRUE essence of democracy, fair election process; easy access to government, files, records, transcripts; not unjustly manipulated, influenced, misled by wrong person, information, or "official misconduct- government gang- fraud- crime- injustice networks" = serious causes of socio-political – election –media- budget- legislative problems, which destroy people, families, society, peace, justice, democracy. Based on merits, justification; NO double standards, improper processing of complaints, procedures, proceedings; falsification, false records, tampering of evidence, data; harassment, intimidation (complainant, witnesses); false charges, citation, bond, imprisonment; disparities and improper treatments, etc.; abuse of laws, power, authorities. (3). Promote democracy, fair election, quality, competition, people input (policies, issues, officials, judges); televise public hearings, citizen/candidate forum/debate; maintain, disseminate meaningful accurate information, records, capability, reasoning, good sense of justice, public interest, endurance. Objective screening by meaningful rigorous examinations, evaluations for quality, capability, endurance and public interest. * To capture extended serious problems of "MURDER-fraud- crime- injustice networks" with official misconduct- government gang, please incorporate the following: (A). complaints/ cases: administrative and judicial levels; (B) frequent testimonies before government bodies, official, legislators, law enforcement, committees, public hearings; local – federal; (C) spin-off complaints, improper processing of complaints, procedures, proceedings, accounting, bookkeeping, docketing, etc.; (D) Candidate statements, see Webs and archives. Urge to re-open and investigate Congress.org, DNet (by League of Women Voters), links, etc.; (E) complaints and reports to police, law enforcement, consumer affairs, other authorities/agencies against "fraud- crime- injustice networks"; (F). Numerous TV programs on social issues (Dr. Lih Young: producer, host, speaker). (G). Frequent recommendations/petitions to officials, agencies, law enforcement, local - federal; as individuals or with civic organizations.  EXAMPLES OF PROBLEMS - "MURDER- FRAUD- CRIME- INJUSTICE NETWORKS"- with official misconduct, government gang- endless unlawful immoral acts: (A): OPM, IRS, DHHS, SSA, DOJ, FBI, DOD, USDA, DOC, USCIS (US citizens/ neutralization services), custom services, various agencies, law enforcement; 3 branches, local – federal- global; National Park Service (Prettyman?), Library of Congress (Neil Gladd); many financial/brokerage/ accounting/ bill-payment processing/ collection institutions/agencies; insurance, car related businesses, utilities..., more; dealers Lakeforest Oldsmobile; phone/utilities/cable, judges, legal/court personnel, detective/ process server/ impersonators, with phony names, or would not provide names even in the court cases (Complainant could not get access to court files; could not even make copies); Leslie Gradet, Tamera Jones, William D Roessler; Offices of Treasury, Comptroller, Attorney General: Joel Jacob/Jacobson, Gail Malle-Davis, Sylvia J. Brokos, Mary Hawse, Linda Tanton, Gerald Langbaum, John Barry, Pamela Porter, Leo F. Partridge, Mark Vulcan, Jamis Riley, James Britt, Audrey Thomas, Jeanne Lippy, Jesse Rosenburger, Ralph Lepson; transcribers Margaret Bauer, Senators: Walter Baker, Barbara Hoffman, Thomas Middleton, Trooper: Marty Sealey, Vincent Mass, State Election Board Ross Goldstein; Maryland DOEd Susan Page, Barbara Smith(?), SSA employees and supervisors (especially in Rockville, Md), and Bullivant (? , probably in N. J.; or other states). Lobbyists/ municipal attorneys/lawyers/affiliates, Paul Glasgow, David Venable, Joseph Stoltz, Jr., Barry Gordon, Stephen Perouka, David Steinberg, Wolpoff & Abramson, Richard D. Mirsky, Poppleton, Garrett & Polott, P.C., accountant Hilda K. Matijevic; Marc Sliffman (Silver Spring, Wheaton area), Samuel White and his law firm and lawyers Shawn Bartley, Daniel Pesachowitz, Laura Jolly (phony person, named as "substitute trustee", but can never be found or contacted even through official agencies); many court personnel and judges (District Court – Court of Special Appeals). Court Auditor Robert Romero. State, county health services organizations/ agencies, Department of Health and Human Services, Montgomery County Crisis Center, Jean Burgess (white, female), Marsha Aaron; Department of Aging; Adult Protective Services, Sherry Davis, Suzanne Lord (?), Odick Esq., Bonnie Klem, etc.; Suburban Hospital, physicians, emergency staff; social worker Jody Crecensi (?), case manager Patricia Grafferty (?), Robert Rothstein, M. D. (?), Tipp Woodward; Manor- Care in Potomac Maryland: Cheryl Paulson (? , administrator) and nurses, etc.; forensic services, Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene: Jolie Smith; numerous psychologists, psychiatrists, social workers, etc.: Potomac Ridge Steven Israel, Collin, Gabriel (?); social worker Tracy Lewit; Springfield Hospital Center:

forensic services, Kevin Knight, Dr. Valadez (refused to give full name, despite repeated requests); Carla Craville, Francoise Reynolds, Roxanne Heyman, Amy True; Judges James Sasfield, Gary Crawford, Cheryl McCally, etc., prosecutors/government attorneys, e.g., John McCarthy, Nunylny (?), Peter Mitchell (Montgomery County Office of Human Rights); District Court Commission (Rockville, Md) M. Dickerson; Court Personnel T.M. (only initials, no full name available); many judges, clerk of the courts (Jeffrey Ward, Loretta Knight, Bettie Skelton, Molly Rhul, etc.), other court personnel, various counties, states; local – federal; law enforcement, FBI; police e.g., in Rockville, Md. Sgt. Cowell (first name not available), C.P. Sadleson; officer Davis (MCPD); Denis Lewis (Baltimore County); sheriff: R. Lewis (Female, White, Montgomery Countym Md.), K. Naff (white, male, Montgomery County, Md); fire and rescues (abuse, even no fire; conspiracy). (B): The problems are interrelated horizontally and vertically, among all issues, local- global. Clerks of the Circuit Court (Montgomery County, Md.) Loretta Knight, Bettie Skelton, Molly Rhul; District Court Clerk Jeffrey Ward, Administrative Judge Cornelius Vaughey, Sheriff Elliot Tolbert, etc. government attorney John McCarthy, Kristen Bender, court personnel, attorneys (public, private), law enforcement (FBI, sheriff, police, fire/rescue, etc., contractors) are part of the “fraud- crime- networks: with spying, surveillance, harassment, unlawful search, stealing, robbery, injuries; false arrest, imprisonment, citation, trespass, testimony; withholding witnesses; destroy information, documents, evidence, etc. (C). False/ unjust/ frivolous levies, liens, garnishment, guardianship, power of attorneys, foreclosure, tenant-hold-over- eviction, etc. Thousands of cases are pending in the court systems for years or even decades; believed to be filed by “fraud- crime- networks” to victimize people; without due process, proper services, proceedings; cause homelessness, poverty; not because of the problems of homeowners/citizens, but because of unjust judicial/court/legal personnel, court auditor Robert Romero as part of “official misconduct- government gang- fraud- crime- injustice networks”. Judges (unjust, irresponsible, judicially disabled) include Warren Donohue, John Debelius, Durk Thumpson, Ann Harrington, Louise Scrivener, Lawrence De Beard, Eric Johnson, James McKenna; District Judge Gary Everngam, Judge Gary Crawford; court personnel/ sheriff, attorneys, affiliated law firms; Sheriffs Earnest Turner, R. Lewis, K. Naff, etc. (E). Problems of privatization, irresponsibility, disabilities of government attorneys and judicial/legal/court personnel are very serious, expanding, local- nationwide- global; exporting injustice overseas; Rockville city, Montgomery County, Maryland state; New Jersey Monmouth County, Judge Robert McLeod (private attorney), Judge Patricia Bueno Cleary, Prosecutor (private attorney) Patrick Healy, police David D’Arcy. (F) Other people committed, conspired with police and fraud- crime- networks: Private attorneys: Robert McCarthy (Bethesda, Md.), Olivia Cammack (Silver Spring, Md.), David Slacker (Bethesda Md.); Ria Rochvarg (assigned as legal assistance provider to certain counties by Md. Department of Health and Mental Highgiene, but she went around the state for various abuses with Sherry Davis, Police Davis, etc. attorneys (public and private), Timonthy Adelman, Esq., (?) and law firms Adelman, Sheff and Smith(? in Annapolis, Md), Robert McCarthy, Suburban Hospital, etc. Landlord/ landladies e.g., Jiewen Tan (Rockville, Md.) and Chia Yao (Gaithersburg, Md.) had been unjustly influenced/ conspired. (G). MURDER-FRAUD- CRIME- INJUSTICE NETWORKS inc. Montgomery County Council, Md, Nancy Floreen, Roger Berliner, Valerie Ervin; Sonya E. Healy, Esq. Legal counsel/Chief of staff (any relation to Patrick Healy, esq. in New Jersey??), Jackie Steward, council hearing coordinators/substitute; Md General Assembly, Jamie Raskin; U. S. Congress, Senate, legal staff; American U, administrative staff, security guard, students (4801 Massachusetts Ave., NW, DC); Catholic U; US Institute of Peace, conference organizers/ speakers.

—Dr Lih Young, Rockville, MD

what is going on? we did not vote you in to bend us over. kill this bill!

—Diane Di Vittorio, Oakland, CA

Now is the time for America to show world class leadership. PLEASE don't allow Bob Latta's Bill through!! Best Regards Rodney Watts

—Dr Rodney Watts, Bishop Auckland,

I am offended about what Rep Bob Latta is suggesting. Put protections in place for us.

—Betsy Wilcox, Madison, WI

An open internet continues the American practice of communication available to all as was local phone service priced so all Americans could afford the same local phone service.

—, weat orange, NJ

Please prevent the internet not get contaminated here in the USA like just about every other corporate rip offs, Banking, Gasoline,etc.

—Thomas J Weeks, Loganville, GA

Stop the madness now!
—Sorin Moroianu, Deal,

Preventing the FCC from reclassifying broadband Internet service as a common carrier is the exact opposite of what will protect the open Internet.
—Mark H. Sullivan, Indian Trail, NC

Stop the elitism of the internet! Stop corporate control of every little thing.
—Jessica Brown, Westbrook, ME

Stop this shit!
—Kevin C. Stockwell, Pascoag, RI

The FCC chairman's trope about "open" internet is a subterfuge. Don't be dishonest! Support Net Neutrality. Internet is a natural monopoly that should be declared a public utility. The profits are enormous. Only government regulation can ensure fair service to all.
—Ms. Jo Ann Duman, Texarkana, TX

All you-white racists-do is Scare and Lie to get what you want. Aren't you-white racists-tired of hating?? Aren't you tired?? (from the movie The Help)
—Sonia Noemi Cross, North Highlands, CA

As a registered voter I strongly oppose bill H.R. 4752.
—Rafael Alexander, Bellingham, WA

First of all going against net neutrality is going against our first amendment . You all have sworn and taken oath to protect our constitutional rights . I urge you not to vote for this heinous and unconstitutional bill . Please do the right thing .
—Chris Trigg, Manchester, NH

Its "for the people, by the people", not "for the money, by the rich".
—Daniel Hooke, Rowville,

The commons are being chewed up by big business to the detriment of "We the People". Don't let the FCC take another public forum as in the internet Net Neutrality.
—John Vieira, Mount Vernon, WA

Instead of forbidding the FCC from declaring internet a telecommunications service, require them to do it.
—Peter Chines, Silver Spring, MD

Net Neutrality = EVERYTHING If you take away net neutrality, you can also take away the Human Rights.
—Zack, ,

Please do not support this bill which is one more brick in the wall of a society of haves and have nots. This bill does not support the fundamental principles of democracy. It is a bad bill.
—Pamela Walker, Oakland, CA

Rep. Bob Latta is obviously a man who does not support Americans' right for broadband Internet service as a common carrier; therefore, I believe this bill does not represent the American people.
—Ruth Sandefur, Parkton, NC hope you do not vote for this bill and if you do vote for for this bill and you will lose my vote!

—Robert Williams, Placerville, CA

You are a people, a person, who temporarily is in congress. Speak for your OWN freedom. For your future FREEDOM, and your progeny, by saying NO to this toxic idea.

—Sasha Breitag, Vancouver, WA

The Internet has revolutionized the way the world does business. Loss of net neutrality will severely damage e-commerce, an ever-growing part of our economy.

—Greg Pearson, Boise, ID

I am tired of our elected leaders taking away my freedoms and taxing me for everything.

—Ethrage Haggard, Lexington Park, MD

The internet was funded by tax payers. The internet belongs to the people not corporations. I'm on a fixed income and am having a hard time making ends meet. Not fair to those in my situation. Its pimple, the internet belongs to the commons.

—Michael Bourke, Butler, KS

When and if the NWO shuts this truth telling source, where will the citizens go to know what is going on any where in the world, let alone our country?

—Mary Pishney, Denver, CO

As a small business owner, I need Net Neutrality to make sure that my customers get information in a timely manner. Thank you.

—Debra Burrell, Norfolk, VA

Progress, not Congress. Stay away from this insane bill.

—David G, Kailua Kona, HI

Mr. Latta is a lap dog for big cable. Do what you know is right and DON'T SUPPORT THIS BILL.

—Kevin York, Sherman Oaks, CA

THE INTERNET MUST BE CLASSIFIED A UTILITY TO PROTECT IT AS A PUBLIC SPACE. OTHERWISE THIS BILL LITERALLY AND PHYSICALLY KILLS THE LIFE NECESSITY THAT IS THE INTERNET. DO NOT PASS THIS BILL!

—Lorna Immel, Otley, IA

I value a free internet. So do millions of other people. A free internet is essential for educating the world.

—Charles Mitchell, Farnham Common,

I need you to stand up for real Net Neutrality, not prohibit it, do not support this bill!

—Bonnie Breckenridge, San Diego, CA

Net neutrality is akin to freedom of the press. Vote down Rep. Bob Lattas reprehensible bill. Rep. Bob Lattas would have you gag freedom!

—Bryan R. Ward, Bloomington, IN

A free and open Internet now and for ever!

—Jim Laybourn, Jackson, WY

Please stop this! Among many other egregious effects, higher speed folks would be able to time purchases on the stock market!

—Camilla Tezza, Sullivans Island, SC

I think the net is already being artificially managed regarding speed. The money of the American People paid for all the research to create this thriving new industry. We certainly deserve to be the beneficiaries of it, not Wall Street uber billionaires.

—Zk Kastl, sf, CA

The internet is a major platform for world wide communication and collaboration. Please do not limit the progress that could be made by altering the way it functions best.

—Bella, West Hartford, CT

u politicians are taking the people's hard earned money for your wages, but u have not been working for us. u have been working for the big oil companies and franken corporations like monsanto. this is criminnality of the highest order. if u did not want to work for us, we thepeople, u had no business taking those sacred sworm oaths. u must snap out of it, it's not too latebut will be if u don't tale decisive action against this insideious nazi evil.s

—Vee Hitchcock, Ronan, MT

Currently there area increasing attempts to gain unequal access to the public—either by claiming that money is speech or by granting special advantages to one member of the media and not to another. Democracy depends on equality not just freedom.

—Guy Hollyday, Baltimore, MD

Geachte leden van het Congres: We hebben je nodig om op te komen voor de echte Net Neutraliteit, niet verbieden. Rep Bob Latta's wetsvoorstel HR 4752, zou de Federal Communications Commission voorkomen van het zetten van breedband internet service providers weer onder titel II van de Communications Act, maar dat is de enige manier om te beschermen Net Neutraliteit. Ik verzoek u deze gevaarlijke wetsvoorstel niet te steunen. Een stem voor dit wetsvoorstel is een stem tegen het open internet.

—Walter Botteldoorne, Kortrijk-Heule, NJ

This bill is spitting in the face of the inventors of the internet. They wanted net neutrality, and that's the way it should stay. Don't let the major corporations control the government. America is a free country, if you vote for this bill you will show the people we are a corrupted country controlled by major corporations and all of big business.

—Tyler Burt, Warren, PA

I would have to guess you are already up to date on this. Keep up the good work. Tom

—Tom Northrop, Huntington, VT

This bill is a blatant attack on taxpayers who funded the development of the web-and thus a Transparent attack on the notion of Democracy itself-It proves we no longer have any true democracy-only Oligarchs

—Clarice Klepadlo, Rome, NY

This is an insult to every Congressman and citizen in this great country. Please remember that the internet is not to be owned by anyone. It has grown to be an effective social and entrepreneur connection between all people in this nation. Vote against any bill that threatens or encroaches in any manner upon Net Neutrality. Thank you.

—Robert Clark, Wichita, KS

An open and free internet is critical and needs protection in every way possible.

—Joan Davis, Palm Bay, FL

Stay true to your voters. Stop this bill!

—Aidan Zingler, Des Moines, IA

Freedom of ideas is universal. Do not kill the medium of globalization.

—Kyle Sandstrom, Marysville, OH

Since we started building the original fiber-optic routes a few decades ago, I've been of the opinion that the availability of bandwidth should be comparable to the way power was done: A joint corporate-governmental project to build a digital grid. Verizon and AT&T have absolutely no interest in insuring everyone has equal access because they're cherry-picking their customer base, and H.R.4752 confirms that.

—Victor Kordish, Mattawan, MI

You guys cant be serious ,that we are less Brazilians.This has to stop once and for all,our time on this earth is limited.we cant go backwards , leave a legacy that WE THE PEOPLE WANT !

—Bulent Kucukozcan, Panorama city, CA

If I've entered the right zip code into this form on freepress.com, this email should go to Representative Lois Capps. Mrs. Capps, if you're the one reading this email, I would like to state that I know you probably have a lot on your plate since the recent tragedy in Isla Vista. Nevertheless, I view net neutrality as an important issue that is worth mentioning considering recent events. Aside from being used for entertainment, the internet is an omnipresent necessity in today's society in terms of starting a business, gathering support for a cause, or simply communicating with others. For these reasons I believe it should, at the very least, be viewed a utility. Unfortunately, Rep. Latta's bill would forbid the FCC from doing this, and thus nullify the thousands of people that are demanding that broadband internet be reclassified. You've stated on your website that you believe in continued investment in broadband infrastructure to keep America competitive on the world's stage. I believe that if the internet isn't considered a utility these sorts of investment won't be possible anytime soon. As one of your constituents, I humbly request that you do not vote for this bill and do whatever is possible to keep it from gaining traction in the House.

Sincerely, Ganesh Rajasekar

—Ganesh Rajasekar, Goleta, CA

Taxpayer dollars and public institutions were responsible for the creation of the Internet. Let's not even think about uprooting this utility from the commons, where it has branched out and bloomed into a worldwide phenomenon thanks to a devoted public tending its growth these many years. To allow the privatization of a public creation used by all, well, it's highway robbery.

—Mary Ann Gardner, Visalia, CA

the net is ours

—Annette Bailey, syracuse, NY

Net neutrality is important to me because it creates a level playing field for small businesses in terms of the services and choices they have and want. It also gives consumers a lot of freedom on the internet and doesn't allow big telecom companies to make decisions for consumers when using the internet by skewing them towards choices that favor their business. Right now, the internet is in a pretty poor state where big telecom companies block all innovation and development of future based infrastructure for their own greed! But at that time we had at least some form of net neutrality. But with net neutrality gone, this is a completely one sided bad deal for consumers and of course cable companies are going to tout their horn saying that this is for the good of the consumer but they are not fooling anyone at least me. So, please revoke this garbage proposal that you have conjured up and reinstate cable companies as under title 2 common carriers and set the record straight that the FCC serves the people and not cable companies. It is getting too old for that!!!!

—Akschith Bhagavatula, Vestal, NY

Our country was founded on free speach let us continue to have it!

—Brenda Galey, Whitney, NE

bob latta's foolish bill is a political third rail. touch it and we'll sweep the lot of you out of office so quickly the republican and democrat presence on Capitol Hill will vaporize.

—Andrew May, Emmitsburg, MD

Keep the internet open. Please!

—William Kirke, Lewis Center, OH

The internet and our economy need more innovation, more voices, not more corporate dominance.

—Thomas Cloud, Tonasket, WA

ISP's are utilities, there is no question about this.

—Michael Oplinger, Canton, OH

The internet has been an incredible tool for grassroots organizing such as electing Barack Obama. As an officer of a non-profit organization that uses the internet daily to stay in touch with other members and like minded organizations, I urge you to do all you can to protect this invaluable resource.

—Sandy Bell, Chesapeake Beach, MD

This bill is a step away from sedition.

—Todd Mikosh, Katy, TX

The internet can only work if it is kept as an open Internet so please vote against this bill and protect net neutrality.

—Diane Marlo, Wren., MI

It is essential that the FCC rightfully recognize, and be allowed to classify, the Internet as an essential utility in our infrastructure and economy. The people who live today surrounded by all modern forms of data exchange rightly see this Internet as one shadow of the same basic utility: Telecommunications. Is a text message truly that different from a telegram? Is a FAX message truly different from a document that is emailed? Is a video downloaded over copper phone wires truly different than the one downloaded over copper coaxial cable? Please make the right decision by supporting the classification of all Internet connectivity providers the same, that is to classify them as a common carrier. The natural monopolies are no longer justified. Best Regards, Travis Rosenbaum

—Travis Rosenbaum, Kennesaw, GA

Have a backbone and stand up for freedom for the internet. Do not let Mega-Corporations Take It Over! Standup for the little guy for a change!

—Yanah G Cook, Roy, WA or else ...

—Elias Gonzalez, Houston, TX

If you don't defend US against this, we won't be voting for you ! Simple as that.

—Michael Molder, Newberry, SC

the internet is a basic requirement in the 21st century, it is our telephone of yesterday. Is our Government really representing the people?

—Jack Fudge, Broomfield, CO

Please protect our internet! This is a real free speech issue...money is not speech.

—Cheryl Croci, Clinton Township, MI

We used to live in Bob Latta's district and he is NOT a friend of common people's interests!!!

—Karen Laakaniemi RNC MSN CNM, Pensacola, FL

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet Reclassify broadband internet service as a common carrier now!

—Joyce Hansen, Ferryville, WI

PLEASE, Do NOT sell out the American public.

—Simon Carvalho, St Paul, MN

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet Reclassify broadband internet service as a common carrier now!

—Jerry Hansen, Ferryville, WI

A free and open exchange of ideas and information is vital to a healthy and free society. The FCC needs to classify broadband internet as a common carrier under Title II of the Communications Act to protect a free and open internet. I urge you to vote NO to HR 4752. Thank you.

—VL Latta, Millerstown, PA

STOP trying to allow corporate America to rule our every day lives. You work for the American public..not corporations.

—Shalena M Hoffman, Mesa, AZ

Comcast, Verizon, and AT&T should not be buying votes in my government. Do what is right, not what pays the most.

—Geoffrey Horn, Ardmore, OK

Is there no end to sticking it to us?

—M/M Harry Frey, Mechanicsburg, PA

Hey now, this matter impacts so many at so many levels. Please MAINTAIN NET NEUTRALITY!!!

—Christopher Loftis, Durham, NC

Stop letting big companies push us (and you) around!

—Wesley Atkinson, Dixon, CA

It belongs to all not the few. So just work for all citizens of the usa and everywhere else. No monopolies allowed! No to this bill. Thanks, we are trying to give you our trust. Make the correct moves, ok! Ok!

—Charmaine Scott, Salinas, CA

I urge you not to support this dangerous bill. A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet.

—Lynn Blaylock, South Lake Tahoe, CA

Rep. Bob Latta's Bill H.R. 4752 is killing net neutrality and U.S. citizens rights to have freedom of speech and open communication!!!

—Kathleen Kerner, Valencia, CA

We cannot allow our service providers in our nation to determine the evolution of networking. Networking should be defined by the people who use the networks. The people want an open Internet, a free Internet, and a Neutral Internet.

—Ryan Strait, Gettysburg, PA

Ohio is ashamed of you, greedy and corrupt
—Nicole, Loudonville, OH

Without net neutrality, websites will end up paying protection fees. Nice connection you've got here, shame if something happened to it.
—Khalil Sheehan-Miles, South Hadley, MA

Please
—Herald, San Antonio, TX

stop with the crap, and don't ruin the future of the internet!!
—Jose hernandez, Phoenix, AZ

Net neutrality is essential for the common good and will aid in the growth of the economy. The Internet must stay open and not be used to widen the class divide.
—Kathleen McHugh, Freeville, NY

controls of the internet WILL ONLY restrict the usage of the internet. Like controls on travel reduces productivity because people get STAGNET if you limit travel, the same thing will happen if you put ANY kind of LIMIT on any portion of internet usage.
—Donald McCormick, Fairview, OR

preventing start ups and good business isn't how the net should work.
—Matthew Lawliss, Dannemora, NY

I vote, my wife votes, our friends vote and we all use the internet
—Richard Kenealy, Rex, GA

Comcast,et al, have enough power already!
—Jan Sando, Mesquite, NV

Ley freedom ring, and lobbyists rot, just for once!
—KJ Nelson, Port Charlotte, FL

Please allow for a truly foundational space for enhancing democracy to remain free and open. Please protect net neutrality!
—Thomas Fiori, Miami Beach, FL

I am a New Yorker from the Midwood section of Brooklyn.
—Dr. George Brieger, BROOKLYN, NY

This is Sparta! Oh, and don't sign this bill. You won't get cookies.
—Dave Smith, Blaine, ME

Freedom is not something that those seeking power grant willingly to others. One must be vigilant to know what they are signing if they do not wish to sell out the rights and assurances of the common citizens they represent.
—Brian Ashman, Saint Paul, MN

Keep the internet free and accessible. Do not let it be run by big giant corporations!
—Annette Quintero, Miami, FL

Please do not support this dangerous bill! Everyone deserves free and open internet!

—Mk, Fremont, CA

Net Neutrality is good for the American economy.

—Ken Osburn, Shelburn, IN

Protect net neutrality!!!

—Sandy Sobanski, New York, NY

Would you have tiered service for water or gas? Internet is a utility we all need keep it fair

—Eric pallocat, Ridgewood, NJ

The internet has spawned tremendous innovation over the last two decades. Putting control of the internet in the hands of a few big companies will dramatically stifle future in

—Joe Settles, Nashville, TN

The idea that the Internet is like a highway is a poor analogy. Data is not anything like automobiles on a highway. Automobiles are heavy, come in a variety of shapes and sizes with a myriad of configurations that physically impact the highway; spilt fluids, different wheels, parts that fall off, passengers that litter, traffic accidents and so on. All these things have a direct impact that wear down the highway requiring road crews to clean up and repair damage. So, tolls on highways makes sense in order to pay for repairs. However this analogy make no sense when you are talking about the Internet. Data is energy flowing through wires. The data has nothing that can degrade the wires. There are no "traffic" accidents with data. Data is sent in packets (short bursts of data). The packets insure that the content being transmitted gets to the destination intact. The first sent of commands establishes that content will follow, after the data is sent a command asks if the data arrived and if not the cycle repeats. Finally a command is sent to say that the packet has been sent and the next can be transmitted. It all happens so fast that data seems to stream like water, rather than like a series of organized commands. Data packets can crash, however that is a hardware issue with the services that provide the pathways by which the data flows. It makes no sense for a highway to charge drivers for tolls for the incompetence of those who oversee the performance of highways. Especially when those who maintain the Internet are already being paid by customers & through government funding to not only maintain their equipment & the lines they are using, but also expand the network to reach everyone in the nation. The main difference between the roadways of the nation and the "Net" is that those who oversee roads make sure that every home in the nation has access and that the roads are expanded routinely to handle not only current traffic volume, but also future growth. The money allocated to expansion and upkeep of roads, goes to that function and is overseen by state and federal agencies that ensure that the job gets done, and is done right. The Internet doesn't work that way. Customers pay to use the "roads". The Telcoms over-sell the "roads" such that traffic jams are the norm. How would you like it if you were traveling in your car and the road sign instead of saying "Speed Limiting 60 mph" said "Speed Limit Up To 60 mph"...and there is a traffic jam ahead. In the US where ArpaNet exploded into the Internet and we claim control of the Net, compared to other nations we're ranked 31st in download speed (that's the potential "Up to" speed we're told we could get), 42nd in upload speed (access to the onramp, lane changing) and globally we play the highest rates for broadband due to lack of deregulation in 1996. Lack of competition and government oversight has lead to massive monopolies that have divided the nation into sections where there is no real competition. The only tangible competition in decades is Google's "demonstration" of fiber speeds, which is in very limited locations. Monopolies responded to Google by lowering prices & increasing speeds...in other words it was the first real competition they'd seen in years. The problem is that most fell back on their old ways and only promised higher speeds and better rates because no one in Office is making sure that they follow through with their promises. I think I've expanded more on the topic than I should have. Point is that if you vote for any bill that favors monopolies over the people of the nation, not only are you doing the people of the nation a disfavor you are contributing to the national collapse that is coming. The economy is lousy and stifling innovation is not helping. Net Neutrality may seem like a simple toll booth on a highway, but it's not and over-simplifying the issue just so folks who have a limited grasp of technology have enough "idea" to cast a vote, is just wrong. If you and the rest of folks in Congress are not well versed in the issues or lack perspective from the point of view that we the populous view, please find time to visit the following news sites. Techdirt covers issues that impact the net, mostly legislation & law. Dslreports covers legislation and Telcom news. <https://www.techdirt.com/> <https://secure.dslreports.com/>

—Douglas Howell, Bar Harbor, ME

Legislation which protects mediocrity is bad for the nation. Good regulation protects markets and Rep. Latta's bill will promote harm to quality and consumers.

—Thomas Dixon, Casper, WY

Those Cable companies just never give up do they? Dollars against the American Public wishes..

—Joseph M Furst, rocky hill, CT

HR 4752 is an affront to the democratic internet.

—David Lindenbach, Binghamton, NY

It would be interesting to see the interests of the average citizen take precedence over the corporate sector interests occasionally. I know, what an absurd idea to suggest anything that democratic could happen in the land of the free.

—Mr. Jim Whitworth, Ucluelet, BC

The internet IS a public utility and should be classified as such. Stop this bill now!

—Linda Kade, Berkeley, CA

This is not okay! I like my internet open and free like it has been for years.

—Christina Lee, Maryland Heights, MO

Keep the Internet open and free.

—Leonard Kamman, Austin, TX

What are you all thinking???

—Bianca May, Rohnert Park, CA

Defend the last bastion of Free Speech in America and stand up for Real Net Neutrality, do not prohibit it. DO NOT vote for Rep. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752. A vote for H.R. 4752 is a vote against the open Internet. Thank you for working for the Best Interests of We The People instead of for the Best Interests of 'We The Globalist Corporatists'.

—Rodolfo Bahr, Ortonville, MI

The large Internet providers are telecommunications providers and cannot be allowed to dictate. Our phone services are being provided by VOIP, including AT&T. I have Comcast with 57 MBs of download speed and I couldn't stream Netflix until Netflix paid Comcast's ransom demands. I can't even get Amazon or Redbox to load, while my Mother can stream them smoothly on her 10 MB AT&T service. This blatant abuse by Comcast will be soon emulated by all of the carriers if it is allowed to continue. This talk of creating fast streams for those who wish to pay for it is a total lie. There is not going to be any expedited roll out of fiber optic or improved server equipment. What there will be is the justification of charging for a premium service by throttling those who refuse to pay or can't afford it. Comcast is already refusing to uphold it's responsibility to provide equal services despite the lack of profitability. Sanilac county and parts of adjoining St. Clair county in Michigan are serviced exclusively by Comcast and these people are still suffering with analog television and Comcast is refusing to upgrade the system. Cherry picking by these large obscenely profitable communications companies can not be tolerated in this period of necessary digital access. Not classifying the companies as telecommunications companies and having them be subjected to federal rules and practices will be a total rejection of the right of the average citizens right to receive fair and acceptable entertainment and digital data rights. Please don't forsake my, and all of the other common citizens rights to fair and affordable digital services. Frank Mezo 1643 Prairie r Pontiac, Mi 48340

—Frank Mezo, Pontiac, MI

Please stop trying to kill our generation and our communication tools. Thanks!

—Denica De Foy, Prunedale, CA

Do what is right for all of us.
—Joyce Read, Middletown, NJ

Please protect the open internet
—Steve Thomas, Salt Lake City, UT

Let's keep the Internet free and fair to all for future generations.
—Philip A. Dale, Herndon, VA

Don't let the big companies monopolize and control everything! Keep the net neutral!!!!
—Barbara White, Zanesville, OH

Can you please just stop these greedy bastards from ruining the Internet? Please?
—Ludwig Lundström Rova, Umeå,

If you believe in our constitution, DO NOT vote for this bill! It is a matter of the death of free press.
—Leslie Cox, Medford, OR

This is important to everyone who uses the internet.
—Becky Scott, Madison, WI

How have Republicans become so unyieldingly unreasonable?
—James Hubbard, Los Angeles, CA

The Internet is the most open, valuable and democratic tool for political and social action that the world has yet known. DO NOT let a few thieves ruin our temple. Keep net neutrality, and reject the misconceived Latta bill for the turkey that it is.
—Troy Daniel Baugh, Mobile, AL

Today the internet is an absolute necessity not only for commerce, but everyday communication as well as entertainment. It is not a luxury or optional form of communication. As such it needs to be treated like a public utility... regulated and controlled for the good of the general public. Allowing it to become a "legalized" monopoly does not serve the general public interest.
—Richard E Smith Sr., Palmdale, CA

How you vote on this is how I shall vote on you. IN or OUT.
—Connor, Macclenny, FL

Preserve Net Neutrality
—R Litke, Hanna,

The Internet should be public and free. It is not a commodity to be sold to the highest bidder, manipulated by corporations or limited by governmental agencies. The Internet belongs to the people.
—Dawn Morse, Anchorage, AK

Stop big business and vote "NO" to this Bill. Do what is right so the internet stays open to all.
—Addison Reeder III, Girard, PA

Net Neutrality is one of the most important ideas that needs to be upheld in the United States. The Internet has become an all-too-necessary resource, and to limit the people's access to it more so than it already has been (which is evident through other countries' citizens paying far less money for significantly faster internet) would be stifling the progress of the society of the United states even more so. Do not let these internet service providers take malicious advantage of the people, and do not vote for H.R. 4752. Thank you for your time.

—Antonio Diaz, St. Cloud, FL

Obviously Rep. Latta is receiving extra "dark money" from those monied interests that want to control OUR internet! Call your representatives, even repubs!!

—Tom and Sandy Ahlstrom, Excelsior, MN

I demand a conduit to flow freely information... NOT a damn FILTER!

—James P Parzino, Surf City, NC

AS a congressman you are intrusted to protect the public at large from the avaricious demands of corporate entities. I urge you to make good on the trust. I have nothing against people making a profit but, where I draw the line, as should you, is when our free will and choice ("choice" being the prime concern here) are removed from the equation eliminating any real competition.

—Peter Nelson, Lakeside, CA

Must I?

—Robin Lerios, Santa Cruz, CA

This bill will limit consumers access to valuable content that is provided by smaller businesses and cultural institutions. It's intentions truly move away from the democratic principles that this country was founded upon.

—Daniel Davis, Washington, DC

This is not a good bill.....a lot one sided!.

—Melvin Taylor, Sacramento, CA

Vote NO on H.R. 4752

—Elaine Jefferson, New York, NY

How many times will they try the same bull in a slightly different way. Protect Me and I'll vote for You, if not...

—Todd Fundaro, Royal Oak, MI

WHAT IF THERE WAS A TAX ON WATER, YA, THE MORE MONEY YOU MAKE THE HIGHER THE TAX! LETS SAY $01 PER GALLON. WOULD YOU FEEL THAT YOU WERE BEING DISCRIMINATED AGAINST UNFAIRLY, WELL DO THE MATH! IN ORDER FOR THIS COUNTRY TO BE STRONG AGAIN WE NEED OUR OVERBURDENED LOWER CLASS TO BE ABLE TO REACH FOR THE AMERICAN DREAM. SURE WE COULD STAY ALIVE WITH WATER, PAYING SIGNIFICANTLY LOWER WATER TAXES, BUT IN THESE TIMES IT IS NOT ENOUGH. OUR ECONOMY IS CRUMBLING, OUR CHILDREN DO NOT SEE HOPE IN OUR EYES OFTEN, AS WE DID GROWING UP POST WW2. SO LETS JUST KNOCK THEM DOWN ANOTHER PEG OR THREE. WE SHOULD BE SUBSIDIZING OUR LOWER CLASS, TO GET THE TOOLS AT ANY COST TO REBUILD THE MIDDLE CLASS. YOU KNOW THAT WATER I REVERED TO, WELL WE WHO ARE AT THE BOTTOM ARE DROWNING! THANKS FOR THE WATER.

—Nickilee Greenwalt, st paul, MN

Net neutrality will keep the home of the brave free.

—Chris Croke, Baltimore, MD

I don't understand how this isn't common sense. Way to go big business, trying to screw over the entire country.

—Patrick Norris, Austin, TX

The internet was made to be open for everyone. That's the way it should stay.

—Kyle French, Santa Fe, NM

Slowly and inexorably our freedoms are being sold out from under us. While I support the free enterprise system, I don't support the fact that it appears we must purchase additions that which we already pay for.

—Linda Walker, Willard, OH

The internet is a very important freedom.

—Carol Lieb, Scituate, MA

ISP's act like a utility, with a limited choice of providers. So they need to be regulated like utilities.

—Phil Shephard, Round Rock, TX

Rep. Latta's office says the bill would prevent "government interference" in the internet, but he's dead wrong -- his bill would prevent our government from preventing corporations from interfering with the internet. Anyway, when Rep. Latta talks about "government interference," he forgets to mention that this is our government. It's enough to make you think that what he really fears is "interference" from the people.

—Alec Mento, Philadelphia, PA

This attack on freedom of speech is unacceptable/

—Susan-Rose Slatkoff, VICTORIA,

Shame on you Mr. Latta, my home state representative, for this bill to prevent the FCC from putting broadband Internet service providers under Title II of the Communications Act. This is NOT legislation that is in the interest of the public at-large that you have been elected to serve. This is SPECIAL INTEREST legislation. Supporting the corporate interests in this matter does NOT benefit the people at-large. Whose pockets are you in? Who is your puppet master? How can you expect the people to trust you when you INTRODUCE legislation like this, let alone support it? Talk about an issue that is central to the public's interest - - this is it! Do your handlers really think you are THAT politically invulnerable? You sure won't be now. You just put yourself square in the middle of the political cross-hairs of a much greater number of voting Americans than ever, not only in your own jurisdiction, but nation-wide. You're best course of action now? Obviously - withdraw the bill.

—Craig Schuster, Holland, OH

I am totally sickened by the bent the republican Congress seems to be taking to screw the American Public. There is no doubt that "Joe Blow" and all other Americans want to move the Net into designation as a public service. To find that even one congressman would try to thwart these efforts and try to legislate a new bill forbidding any changes the FCC may find of service to the public (its true constituency) is not only abhorrent to me but seems to suggest treason.

—Shirley Sharan, Fort Wayne, IN

Stand WITH the PEOPLE and not against them. Do NOT vote for H.R. 4752.

—Willowbei Eversole, Bloomington, IN

Stay out of things you don't understand! Ah, that explains the year's of do-nothing GOPathic actions. Got it now. Sorry for bothering you with an action to be taken.

—Msgt Larry E Arenas Usaf, Retired, Mesa, AZ

I am just as important as any corporation. Stop downgrading me as unimportant. This is suppose to be a government of, by and for the people.
—Karen Owens, Gainesville, FL

I don't expect members of congress to understand the implications of this bill, but I do expect them to learn about the technology involved, particularly packet switching. Additionally, I do expect them to learn that the end users pay the ISPs for providing a fixed bandwidth, call it connection speed.
—J F Renish, San Jose, CA

WA State owes it's innovation to net-neutrality!
—David Dalton, Puyallup, WA

I would like to continue voting for you. Please don't let President Ovmit further degrade our quality of life by allowing corporate greed STEAL another way of communicating with other humans easily. Thank you for listening.
—Douglas Rice, Cincinnati, OH

This bill will make it even harder to bring America back on top. Our liberties with respect to the internet are very behind those of other nations and it's hurting tremendously.
—Chris Peterson, Lincoln, CA

Please stop corporate leaders from buying American law and making a mockery of our country.
—Jonathan P Leone, San Antonio, TX

Do not support this bill the internet is a great thing because of its unrestricted state but this bill could destroy that —Michael Sardo, Warwick, NY

Stop being greedy and don't let these shitty fast and slow lanes pads
—Joseph Yenkelun, Paramount, CA

My first vote for office was because of the need for a neutral inernet 6-7 years long ago and its sad to see where its headed.
—Michelangelo Halliwell, Groton, CT

SAVE NET NEUTRALITY!!!
—Jennifer Robbins, Aubrey, TX

We urge upu to take action to halt this action. We WANT true network neutrality. Please vote no! Carol and Wayne
—Carol Wayne Brooks and Bigelow, Madison, WI

Please consider Rep Gob Latta's bill in Congress to reclassify broadband to protect real Net Neutrality.
—Barbara Church, Caledonia, MI

Keep the Internet open to everyone on the planet!
—Sharon Fummerton, ,

I anticipate hearing from you regarding how you will vote on this important issue.
—Richard Rockey, Ada, OK enough fascist bull shit. If you keep fucking with the internet you won't like the results....

—Randall Dollins, Kansas City, MO

Blocking Net Neutrality will damage our economy in a way that is irreparable. With so much of our economy now based on the internet, it would be foolish to curb its vast potential.

—Sean Hackett, Brooklyn, NY

Please beware of burying this issue in confusion--please protect the net's neutrality. This is a time to be a real statesman, or stateswoman -- rather than a mere politician. Yours sincerely, Susan Parker

—Susan Parker, Medford, MA

The U.S.A. is on the cusp to becoming an oligarchic Banana Republic -- let Comcast and AT&T and the other greedmeisters and you'll push us over the edge.

—Glenn Munson, Pawlet, VT

Big corporations already own our politics and our media; please don't allow them to own the internet, too. Vote to keep net neutrality by voting against this bill.

—Barb Shillinger, Aberdeen, WA

If you care one ounce about the public good, you will not vote for this heinous bill

—Sandy Neumann, Corte Madera, CA

Please don't take away what has been for the common man/woman the biggest revolution since the Industrial Revolution. Please don't hand big business one more way to hurt small businesses and entrepreneurs.

—Pat Supplee, Ocean Grove, NJ

A vote for this bill is a vote against Americans and Democracy.

—Maris Keller, Columbus, OH

Net Neutrality facilitates new ontrabenuer business. Denying Net Neutrality would only increase the profits of the already very profitable Network providers - Comcast, Verizon, etc. Why would any legislature attempt to stop startup businesses from getting their start and adding employment to our Economy? Why????

—Steve Sears, Hatboro, PA

Please vote no.

—Rebecca Stewart, Tok, AK

I was able to complete my Master of Social Work thesis by having unfettered access to the internet, and I am able to invoke my rights as a citizen by the political information that I have access to on net neutrality. Beverly Dir, MSW, ASW

—Beverly Dir, Valley Springs, CA

stand up for real Net Neutrality

—Joe Molesky, West Palm Beach, FL

We elect governments to protect the rights of the public -- not malfeasors of great wealth. This ill-considered legislation must be repudiated with great force.

—Peter Rogan, Royal Oak, MI

Net Neutrality was part of the deal when the US Government gave the developed Internet to the world. Why let the private cable companies profit obscenely profit for public government internet development?

—Peter F Brazitis, Hansville, WA

The Internet was founded as a method of FREE & OPEN EXCHANGE of IDEAS & INFORMATION for ALL PEOPLE WORLDWIDE. It WAS BUILT by PEOPLE for PEOPLE - NOT by CORPORATIONS Internet access companies like Comcast, AT&T, & Verizon should NOT have free reign to LIMIT or BLOCK our Access to any specific web sites, applications, or services at their own whims. The Internet belongs to EVERYONE - not just a few giant corporations! PLEASE ASSERT YOUR AUTHORITY to RESTORE "TOTAL NET NEUTRALITY" & KEEP THE INTERNET AS FREE AS IT WAS ORIGINALLY INTENDED! DON'T LET THE U.S. END UP LIKE CHINA WHERE THEY CONTROL EVERYTHING & CENSOR ANYTHING THEY DON'T LIKE!!! RE-CLASSIFY ALL INTERNET ACCESS PROVIDERS the SAME WAY AS OTHER PUBLIC UTILITY & TELECOMMUNICATIONS BUSINESSES so that the FCC HAS TOTAL CONTROL of their OPERATIONS, RULES, ACCESS CONTROL/LIMITATIONS, etc... this is LONNNNNG OVERDUE!!

—Gary Morris, Manchester, NH

A vote against Net Neutrality is a vote which limits the freedom of speech. The free thinking environment of creativity which is the internet is one of the final stages on Earth where ideas and philosophies can be expressed and debated without economic or political inhibition. The internet must remain open and free.

—Robert Wilt, Greenville, PA

please classify internet providers as title II providers. they should not be able to dictate how our internet is used and when and what we can connect to.

—Cody Jackson, Fremont, IN give them Hell!

—Lyle Watne, Alexandria, MN

We, The People, deserve a free and open internet. You were elected by The People to represent The People - not to Ass-Kiss Big Business.

—Max Sped, Austin, TX

If you let this happen, there will be repercussions. We will take your seat!

—Vanessa Hooper, Dallas, TX

Let's just tax the little guy more and let big companies grow bigger. I struggle to keep internet in my house for my kids so let's just make it harder by taxing us more!!!

—Nicole Lounder, Stafford, TX

Protect the public interest in net access and speed neutrality.

—Liz Merry, ,

Don't take away our open internet!!!

—Diana Barcenas, Osceola, IN stop,we live in a free country...Ibelive in America...and America is free...

—Ramiro, North Hollywood, CA stop the rush to oligarchy and move back to the peoples democracy.

—Jerry Brucaya, Belleville, WI

I'm old enough to have paid for online connectivity via my income taxes--DO NOT allow the "new" internet masters to charge TWICE for the cost of research, development and implementation, PLEASE!!

—Ms. Carroll Gunnigle, Montclair, NJ

We pay taxes please listen to your people and not to your pockets.

—Matthew Mckenny, Saint Petersburg, FL

Enough is enough

—Cherelle Boyce, Odenton, MD

If I can't depend on help from my representative that I voted for then I will have to vote for the other party next time. I may even be voting for a non-traditional candidate. I'm counting on you, Thornberry, don't let them screw up the internet with this new bill!

—Zack Holmes, Canyon, TX

Vote with the people and what is in our best interest not what will profit Verizon Comcast, Time Warner and other big businesses who stand to profit by 'we the people's' loss and expense.

—Janet Dardess Saavedra, Waveland, MS

Broadband internet needs to be under full FCC control, put them under title II

—Sergey Katalichenka, Ashland, MA

Do not let this bill take away the people's right to determine how Net Neutrality be achieved. This bill is a cheap and transparent trick to hand the people's internet over to the highest bidder. Do not support this bill.

—Ian Reid, Lake Oswego, OR

This sort of Draconian take over of our infrastructure is not just damaging to the citizens of the united states it set's a dangerous precedent for private small interests over public welfare please stand up for your constituents and vote against this bill

—Eli Brown, Johnson City, TN

Comment I strongly oppose to any discrimination on Internet traffic based on sectarian interest supported for any group, specially large corporations. The internet has become the beacon for freedom of speech and free commerce of our era and it does not to be "fixed" at all. Keep the net neutrality as it is today.

—Ricardo Cazes, Miami, FL

FREE COMUNICATION IS A CIVIL AND HUMAN RIGHT

—Bernardo Alayza Mujica, Chatsworth, IA

I am a member or supporter of the following organizations: American Center for Law and Justice American Civil Liberties Union American Radio Relay League Association for Computing Machinery Center for Democracy and Technology Corporate Accountability International Earth Justice Electronic Frontier Foundation Electronic Privacy Information Center Environmental Action Environmental Defense Fund Fight For The Future Free Press and the Free Press Action Fund Gun Owners of America IEEE IEEE Communications Society IEEE Computer Society League of Conservation Voters Mercy For Animals National Association for Gun Rights National Rifle Association Natural Resources Defense Council People For the American Way Rainforest Action Network Sierra Club Students for Concealed Carry US Concealed Carry Association Virginia Citizen Defense League Virginia Gun Owners Coalition

—Sherman Michael Whittaker, Chesapeake, VA

STOP FASCISM !!!!!!!

—Billy Daniels, c.b., IA

The best chance we have at maintaining Net Neutrality is by classifying broadband Internet Service Providers like we do general telecommunications companies, please do not allow this to happen.

—Ofek Inbar, Redmond, WA

Bad congress! Bad! Also, shame on you, God Oppressor Party!

—David, New Brighton, PA

Don't allow this to happen!!!!

—Bryant Melvin, Ashland, KY

Like many other rural residents, I cannot get even mediocre internet access at my home. In order to have mediocre internet access I have an account at a neighbor's residence and beam the signal half a mile with my own equipment. There is a fibre optic cable across the road from my business/residence yet AT&T will not connect me to it. In south LA tiny Earthlink is giving fibre optic service to the doorstep of most of its customers while AT&T stays in the Dark Ages using copper. Only by giving the FCC a mandate to regulate internet strongly will companies like AT&T respond to the public needs. My business like many others is suffering from shoddy service. Instead of this bill you should be forcing the FCC to recognise the Internet as the new communication method. It is time.

—Kenneth Reiszner, Lecompte, LA

Net Neutrality is too important to the common person!

—Cole Jorgensen, White rock,

Please support Alaskans and not lobbyists. I am interested to know what your position on this issue is. Thank you, Kristen Gilbert
Anchorage, AK

—Kristen Gilbert, Anchorage, AK

Please stop, big business from ruining the internet!

—Tim Smith, Chickasha, OK

We Do Not Need A Corporate Take Over Of The Internet, This Is Total Bullshit

—Henry F Balgemann, Mesa, AZ

The American people are not stupid. We all know that this attack on net neutrality is actually an attack on our democracy.

—Sara Kathleen Ogden, Hohenwald, TN

Keep the internet open to ALL of us.....don't make this issue about money and limited access!

—Richard Snook, Vancouver, WA

Andrew Snider 1483/4888

—Andrew Snider, Monterey, CA

Freedom is not free as my representatives I expect you to fight for my freedom please do not support HR 4752

—Dru Sorenson, Hope, AK

Everyone (including you and your family) will be affected by a fast lane/slow lane Internet. We must reclassify the Internet now as a "common carrier" to protect Net Neutrality. DO NOT support H.R. 4752, as it is the exact opposite of what needs to be done. If you give the Internet away to greedy corporations - your constituents are sure to notice and will blame you at election time as they VOTE ACCORDINGLY.

—Carol Claus, Marietta, GA

Net neutrality is one of the most effective tools for Democracy, not only on a local scale but on a global scale. Letting a few individuals dictate who can access what and when and how fast they can do it would be a far greater threat to democracy and freedom than any terrorist organisation like Al-Quida will ever be. So you truly have to ask yourselves if it is more important to protect democracy and freedom or to help a few, already very rich, individuals becoming even richer at the expense of the vast majority of humanity. It is really that simple: Do you support democracy and the liberty of all or do you support oligarchy. An individual with any moral wouldn't hesitate to fight the oligarchy. No one who claim to follow the profet Jesus Christ could support such an act that benefits the few and rich at the expence of the many that are less fortunate.

—Linus Österberg Nilsson, ,

Integrity is to do what we have to do, and to take the decisions that we must take, even when no one can see us. Please vote freely with your heart focused on love. Thank you..

—Juan Antonio Antonio, Guadarrama,

Please don't let telecom companies monopolize. I for one do not wish to be ramshackled any further for services that are necessary for success in today's arena. They already don't compete, allowing them to hike prices up without providing decent tech to the people. Now they are allowed to gang up and extort content providers, which will result in higher prices for the consumer. How can we be a nation of progress if we can't give our citizens the best tools for change and mind expansion?

—Brandon Martin, Birmingham, AL

Please put the people ahead of corporate interests and vote against bill H.R. 4752. - Thank you.

—Harry Glover, Monroe, LA

We keep loosing freedoms because of the power of big money. I have signed numerous petitions in support of Net Neutrality. When is enough enough? Do not let free access be taken away.

—Judy Pigg Behrendt, Kalamazoo, MI

KEEP THE INTERNET OPEN. Keep net neutrality

—Hoshun, Eden Prairie, MN

Next we need to strengthen out antitrust laws and apply them in reference to these "communications" corporations which are out of control.

—Steve Davis, Louisville, KY

Many of us have been fighting for over a decade for internet freedom and neutrality. The American public needs a neutral, open internet, not one that gives priority to those who pay for a prime position. From its inception, the internet was intended to be a computer-based information source - a common carrier rather than a commercial outlet for content providers. Brazil has recently taken the correct approach with their Internet Bill of Rights. I urge you to emulate Brazil and take the CORRECT approach, not the RADICAL RIGHT approach. Thank you for considering this input. Frank Albe

—Frank Albe, Houston, TX

Down with the Mr. Burns's of the world

—Owen Pearce, ,

A vote for this bill is once again blatant support of big business with no regard for the good of the common citizen.

—Donna Monahan, Chester, VT

Please keep the internet neutral.

—Gary Albright, s, WA

Let's not let corporations decide what information we have access to.

—Eric Johnson, Oak Park, IL

The internet is and has been a de facto common carrier and it is mature enough to be classified as such. - David Rossi, Harrisville, RI

—david rossi, Harrisville, RI

Leave the internet as it is, a free and open platform.

—Nate Dailey, Platteville, WI

Try to do the right thing. Don't be a whore. Your mother raised you better.

—Reginald Barnes, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Yea This whole thing wrecks and it's in danger of coming over to the UK. So I would urge you not to do this otherwise there could be a significant and damaging change to how the Internet is used.

—Peter Fodor, ,

open internet puts everyone on a level playing field

—Kimberly L. Lairson, Richmond, IN

It would be proper for Mississippi's congressmen to start actually representing their constituents rather than large corporations who have NO interest in the welfare of private citizens. Do your job or get booted out (this means you, Palazzo). Start representing citizens for a change.

—Kevin Freeman, Gulfport, MS

"Yes, Your Internet Is Getting Slower" by David Auerback http://www.slate.com/articles/technology/technology/2014/05/network_neutrality_dinosaurs_i_like_time_warner_and_at_t_have_nothing_to_worry.html Deregulation of the internet utility in this fashion is akin to what happened in California with the public utility deregulation that Enron preyed upon and will lead to similar negative results. The inherent conflict of interest for private industry in the public utility sphere: private companies seek profit first and foremost (i.e. monetary surplus, or waste), whereas public utilities seek what is in the best interests of the commonwealth (i.e. maximizing the impact of every dollar spent). When we deregulate commerce which participates as a public utility, we are shifting from the latter to the former in terms of interests--that is, from public to private. If we have learned nothing from the past two decades, it is that the private interests do not align sufficiently with public interests to remove the rules which enforce public interests. If we fail to learn from the mistakes of history, we are doomed to repeat it ad nauseam. The United States of America cannot afford to pretend that these things no longer matter. We must practice salient policy-making now if we are to stand a chance in the future as any sort of global competitor or technologically relevant society. If we do not start taking a stand, we will not be given the chance to make up for it later. With most sincere regards, Joseph H. Gorse, IV

—Joseph Gorse, Columbia Station, OH

This is an obvious move from the lobby that's attempting to sway congress to do their bidding instead of what's best for the American people.

—Nate Henry, TAYLORS, SC

I support net neutrality and I vote.

—Steven Gutman, Rockville, MD

I am so sick of this government cow-towing to the rich corporations instead of working to protect the rights of the people.

—Carol Baker, Watseka, IL

The future is in your hands dont destroy our posterity's future.

—Justin McLain, Woodbridge, VA

It is my vote to declare ISPs, including all cable TV providers as "common carriers." I further urge the President of the United States to direct the FCC to classify ISPs as "common carriers"

—Larry Smith, New York, NY

Net neutrality is the bedrock of a free, fair, competitive, and open Internet. It should be preserved for the benefit of all, not scrapped to line the pockets of a few.

—Dawn Rohner, Fort Lee, NJ

This country has been taken over by greedy corporate America from sea to shinning sea. The last bastion of real freedom and rights lie on the internet. DO NOT LET THEM TAKE THIS AWAY TO..... SUPPORT NET NEUTRALITY NOW AND FOREVER. We do not need anyone controlling any more of our lives. Enough is enough. 95% of America is owned by 1% of the population and we will not TOLERATE THEM TAKING ANYMORE.

—Tracy j Tabor, queensbury, NY

Universal Net Neutrality is the "Public Square" of the 21st century. "We The People" paid for the development and the infrastructure of the internet and we the people own it.

—Josep Bridy, Phila., PA

PLEASE STOP PANDERING TO MEDIA MOGULS and think about the public instead.

—Michael D. Polad, Minnetonka, MN

All Internet Providers should be reclassified as Common Carriers under Title II

—Nolis R Cezair, Ridgewood, NJ

FUCKING SCUMBAGS YOUR DAYS GONNA COME!!!!

—Christopher Sharrett, Alfred Station, NY

We need you to stand up for real Net Neutrality, not prohibit it. Please do not let the fcc sell off our open internet for a quick buck from the cable companies.

—Michael Rothberg, Oakland, CA

We need net neutrality and an open internet in order to have democracy!

—Mrs. Nakia Lilly, Fort Collins, CO

it is time to break up both the cable companies and the telephone-communication companies. why has the fcc not allowed fast internet like the European and most countries, include third world?

—Thomas Kozlovsky, madison, WI

Broadband internet providers must be reclassified as common carriers in order to preserve a free and open web.

—Jared Menzies, ,

Please support democracy by keeping the Internet free and equal for all.

—Sara Bhakti, Kirkland, WA

It is outrageous that the FCC would be prevented from assuring net neutrality. That must not happen.

—Len F Powell, st louis park, MN

This will show us if Congress is totally bought. Protect Net Neutrality!

—Bryce Hutchinson, Rogue River, OR

Please save the internet for all users. Granting elitism is not right.

—Victoria Lee, Memphis, TN

This disturbing trend of legislation designed to protect corporations at the expense of the rest of the country and even the world needs to end. Congress, including the republican members, needs to start working for the American people again, not just a few wealthy donors.

—Brett Robert, Pompano Beach, FL

The structure of the internet should not be a commodity, or subject to control by the government or any company. It should be a level playing field. All entities, government and corporate, should be tasked to keeping it as free and fair and open as possible. Allowing proprietors such as Verizon and Comcast to sell of bandwidth is wrong in every way. Do not let it happen, please take the voice of the people, the voice of reason, in your ear and legislate accordingly.

—Aaron Mauldin, Tehachapi, CA

STAY AWAY FROM THIS BILL. THIS DOESNT OPEN THE INTERNET.

—Alex, Gainesville, FL

The only way to prevent unfair business practices and protect consumers is to regulate ISPs as common carriers.

—Eric J. Baker, Landenberg, PA

I want an open Internet!!!

—Brendan Barron, Newport Coast, CA

I wonder if Rep Latta is expecting or has received some big campaign contributions from the cable and telecommunications industries.

—Lorraine H. Sherman, Gainesville, FL

Please let us keep our freedoms!

—Kimberly Super, Hammonton, NJ

WE the people, not we the CORPORATIONS. We hired you via voting to work for us and protect OUR interests, not the Corp. who bribe you.

—Teresa M Robinson, Smithfield, VA

I urge you to do this so that we continue to have access to all information equally, without some being given top priority. Thank you.

—Nancy Lynn, Emeryville, CA

VOTE NO

—Elaine S Kittredge, Chicago, IL

Enough of enormous corporations controlling everything from the food we eat to the medical care available. This bill would prohibit small business from achieving success and limit the unbiased information the American people can access.

—Angela Crout-Mitchell, Erlanger, KY

This is absolutely unacceptable. ISPs are acting solely in pursuit of their profit margins, while ignoring the very real damage they will do to essential developing freedoms and to competition driven by new entrants to the world of electronic business. Vote this bill down.

—Joshua David Williams, Dunbar, WV

This is just more actions to divide the country further into " have" and "have nots"". It's another step towards an oligarchy and farther away from democracy. So shameful and lacking humanity.

—Ronnie Watkins, Merrick, NY

so our government as sold out

—Riswadkar Riswadkar, williamsburg, VA

Change its classification to a public utility, please. Thank you.

—Colin Kay, Tinley Park, IL

Please think about the effects of your actions and how they can help or harm the public

—Justin Ki Ryder, Fort Campbell, TN

If the Net does not maintain real Neutrality, the words of Paddy Chayefsky from "Network" will sadly ring ever truer: There is no America. There is no democracy. There is only IBM and ITT and AT&T and DuPont, Dow, Union Carbide, and Exxon. Those are the nations of the world today. What do you think the Russians talk about in their councils of state - Karl Marx? They get out their linear programming charts, statistical decision theories, minimax solutions, and compute the price-cost probabilities of their transactions and investments, just like we do. We no longer live in a world of nations and ideologies, Mr. Beale. The world is a college of corporations, inexorably determined by the immutable by-laws of business.

—Mr. Craig Byrd, Los Angeles, CA

Go solve real problems

—Elisha Humphery, Houston, TX

The free exchange of ideas is a thing under which humanity can unite. Profit, despite popular belief, does not contribute to the greater good. The wealth of any one person or corporation does not justify the sale of net neutrality.

—Andrew Brown, Henderson, KY

Keep the internet free

—Rachael Cazden, Boulder, CO

Net Neutrality is key. In the same vein that the water, electric and gas companies provide their good/services on what I use, not what I use them for, internet providers should be held to the same standards with internet speed.

—Ashley Wilson, Philadelphia, PA

It is untenable to me that our elected representatives would side with lobbyists and big money corporations instead of the citizens who put them in Congress in the first place! You can bet that a vote for this bill guarantees a vote for someone else in upcoming elections!

—Frank J. Edwards, Land O'Lakes, FL

Please prevent the rise of a two-tiered internet, and regulate telecoms as a utility.

—Matthew Isles, Medford, MA

It would figure that the government is once again under the thumb of corporations. This isn't equal; this is big companies taking advantage of capitalism.

—Markus Knight, Oshkosh, WI

I would "bet" that Mr. Latta belongs to the party of shamelessness.

—Alan R. Brown, New York, NY

I do not support a shill for Verizon & Comcast introducing a bill that will destroy net neutrality faster. And I sincerely hope that you do not support Rep. Latta's bill either. Thank you.

—Lisa Renee Ragsdale, Minneapolis, MN

STOP IT!

—Blake van Valkenburg, Dania, FL

Please do not support H.. 4752. This is a democracy! Virginia Good

—Virginia Good, Saratoga, CA

Net Neutrality is important because it provides for democracy to flourish.

—Pat Kirk, Fremont, CA

I urge you not to support this dangerous bill. Do something right (not conservative right) for a change!

—Patti Durr, Memphis, TN

This is important to us as citizens - please fight hard!

—Cynthia Rand, Jefferson, MA

As a U.S. citizen, I find it appalling that our government persists on supporting bills that continually strip its' citizens of their rights, by means of allowing corporations, lobbyists, and big money to buy our rights, suppress our voices and strip us of choices. In addition, our president, appointing members of the private sector to his cabinet, is a transparent veil of quid pro quo. The president is using his office to further create monopolies, while still touting his support of the American People. I urge you not to support this dangerous bill, as it will only further alienate the populous from supporting politicians who sign on to dangerous bills, such as H.R. 4752.

—Anita M. Garza, Kokomo, IN

I thought America was supposed to be the land of the free? Don't let corporations run America! Keep the Internet free.

—Pia Hulse, APO, AE

This has nothing to do with creating broadband fast lanes - new cables and infrastructure can already achieve this. And if there is demand it'll pay for its own installation. Passing this bill is a step closer to legalising rampant uncontrolled internet snooping by untrustworthy agencies - and it'll be a precedent for other countries to follow suite. In Australia, we have laws and regulations that protect our citizens therefore culturally we trust our governments in general. I wish the same could be said for Homeland Security and the NSA. Don't you realise that you if don't enforce and regulate Net neutrality, ALL your cloud services, Google, Amazon and Microsoft Azure - will NEVER be used internationally AT ALL. Billions of dollars and future US profits will walk away. The world will simply not trust their data is safe on US networks and cloud services. Passing this bill is like becoming China - where NO ONE trusts the government at all.

—Dean Goddard, Winnalee,

Stop the attack on Free Speech

—Eric Dynamic, Oakland, CA

We urge you to stay away from voting yes on this bill! The United States has fallen far behind compared to other countries in technology, and we'll become a third world nation if we say yes to this! Kill this bill!

—Lacey Clark, West Melbourne, FL

Please take the "Title II route" and make a strong stand FOR REAL NET NEUTRALITY

—Mr. Greg Epstein, Tucson, AZ

Access to the internet, ALL SITES, should be free, not two tiered...No one should have to PAY MORE for what we already have. This should be treated like phone and electric service. PERIOD

—Cheri Langlois, Mendocino, CA

America is supposed to be an endorser of free trade. Show it. Helping oligarchies is not endorsing free trade.

—Kyle Campbell, Parksville,

I urge you not to support H.R. 4752 and do believe that ISPs are common carriers that should be regulated by the FCC under Title II of the Telecommunications Act, thereby protecting the consumer from monopolistic behavior, letting capitalism and competition work for all Americans. Sincerely; Michael Ratter MD Sincerely; Michael Ratter MD

—Michael Ratter, Hemet, CA

Thank you for your attention to this matter. I'll be looking to your vote and help on this matter of Net Neutrality.

—Maria Paba, Holtsville, NY

Do not support or vote for Rep. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752. Sincerely, Mary O. Magazine, Esquire

—Mary Magazine, Miami, FL

LEAVE THE NET ALONE

—Constance Campbell, Ojai, CA

The United States is built upon the concept of free market economy. The Internet is a perfect example of a pure marketplace insofar as competition thrives and strives for our attention. Please do not provide unfair advantage, because free markets must be regulated or they will cease to exist.

—Daniel Paul, Miami, FL

A vote for this Bill is also a vote against the middle class. Please vote against it!

—, Frankfort, MI

Massive corporations should not be controlling something that provides so much public good.

—April, Kokomo, IN

The internet needs to stay neutral, otherwise companies will further try to dictate what we can see or browse online, while charging us increased rates for visiting those sites. We need to protect this otherwise the main ISP's will take control over a medium that has been so beneficial from starting businesses and learning to provide a better future in these trying times.

—Matthew Meitzner, Orlando, FL

WE deserve better !

—Marie Leven, Flushing, MI

It's time to stand up to massive corporations pulling strings in government with their obscene financial influence. Net Neutrality is an issue that will impact all Americans in a society increasingly reliant on fair, affordable internet access. And while our nation's oft-misguided Supreme Court might consider "corporations" have the same rights as "people," I challenge you to stand up for the real people of this country and protect Net Neutrality.

—Peter Schweighofer, Culpeper, VA

Please support the American people over corporate profits.

—Coral Peterson, Morris, IL

In the years that broadband service has been subjected to relatively little regulation, investment and deployment have flourished and broadband competition has increased, all to the benefit of consumers and the American economy... I am concerned that opening the door to subjecting broadband service to a wide array of regulatory burdens and restrictions, including imposing Title II, might halt this progress. I respectfully urge you to consider the effect that regressing to a Title II approach might have on private companies' ability to attract capital and their continued incentives to invest and innovate, as well as the potentially negative impact on job creation that might result from any reduction in funding or investment.

—Casey Stamper, Columbus, OH

I've never seen an issue where corporations and real people were on the same page. Please stop this.

—Jonathan Vazquez, Orlando, FL

All congress has to do is designate this new unregulated industry as a common carrier/public utility. I am sick and tired of lobbyists and corporations taking away my rights and my voice. Mr. Wheeler is a former telecom lobbyist. I find that to be unethical and I'm wondering if congress is now an employer of Comcast, Verizon, and the Koch Bros? What really scares me is the total takeover of corporations under the guise of war and then having Wall Street corrupt everything from bonds, pensions, high frequency trading, insider trading, rate rigging and the list just keeps growing. High frequency trading was one of the ways Wall Street stole from us because of higher broadband access. Congress is actually committing fraud against American citizens and won't even do IT'S JOB by regulating and protecting us against a renegade industry. Has congress been totally captured by Wall Street and the lobbyists?

—Kd Flock, Santa Cruz, CA

Instead do everything in your power to ensure that the Internet is classified as a common carrier.

—Peter Tummino, Wilmington, MA

This is so wrong. What more is there to say.

—Ron Deutsch, Austin, TX

As an employee of a small, high tech company in Montana, I think any limitation of network neutrality will negatively effect our ability to innovate and compete.

—Nicholas Ryhajlo, Bozeman, MT

Undermining the internet will lose you the support of the people extraordinarily quick. You might keep that in mind when you are sleeping on those piles of cash. Even if nobody took action against you, you'd never be supported again.

—David Wood, Socorro, NM

We follow what ever you do. Please be caring.

—Margaret Lorcan, Redcliffe,

Equal access to all info for all people is one of the fundamental aspects of what makes the internet such a powerful tool for innovation and democracy. Don't take that away!

—Sam Walter, Lawrence, KS

Support Net Neutrality. Now and forever.

—Cullen Kappel, Lake Orion, MI

Please protect freedom and openness on the Internet. The internet was designed as an open medium and as such should be equally available to everyone and must be protected from corporate monopolies. Tom Wheeler's proposed plans are bad for consumers, as well as start-ups, non-profits, bloggers, and smaller businesses that can't afford to pay for access to that internet "fast lane". I strongly urge you and your colleagues in Congress to support robust net neutrality legislation that prohibits network operators from blocking, impeding or interfering with any lawful Internet traffic or prioritizing any content or services.

—Leslie Drechsler, Honolulu, HI

Don't sign this bill!

—Tyler Yee, manchester, NH

Do not take away our net neutrality!!!

—Jenn foote, Sunnyvale, TX

Hello, Thank you so much for listening to the public. I should say, I am a professor of sociology who studies culture, media, and technology. But you do not need a PhD in sociology to know that it is not just a bunch of internet utopian-hippies that are concerned, but Google, Facebook, Netflix, and Amazon. I have been following with interest your ongoing proceeding on how best to re-implement the "net neutrality" rules. Like you, I believe it is critical that we maintain a free and open Internet, where consumers are not blocked from accessing the websites of their choice and providers do not use their control over the last mile to stifle competition. As you consider how best to move forward to achieve these goals, I write to share my concerns with reports that the Commission may be considering achieving these goals by reclassifying broadband Internet access service as a "Title II" common carrier service. In the years that broadband service has been subjected to relatively little regulation, investment and deployment have flourished and broadband competition has increased, all to the benefit of consumers and the American economy. As you know, our country pays way more for our internet service and yet get very poor service. While we still have further to go to ensure that the benefits of broadband reach all Americans, I am concerned that opening the door to subjecting broadband service to a wide array of regulatory burdens and restrictions, including imposing Title II, might halt this progress. I respectfully urge you to consider the effect that regressing to a Title II approach might have on private companies' ability to attract capital and their continued incentives to invest and innovate, as well as the potentially negative impact on job creation that might result from any reduction in funding or investment. I share your goals of keeping the Internet open to all. I do not believe that a Title II approach is the best means of achieving this goal for our country. Thank you for your work on this very important issue. Sincerely, Jonathan -- Jonathan R. Wynn Assistant Professor Department of Sociology 726 Thompson Hall University of Massachusetts - Amherst Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-4073

—Jonathan Wynn, Amherst, MA

We need to an open internet to ensure the best companies thrive instead of the richest companies. We need everyone to have the same opportunities on the internet.

—Eric Johnson, Bothell, WA

Don't ruin our internet!

—Alok Adhikari, Santa Fe, NM

No.

—Alex Palma, Chicago, IL

VOTE NOOOO!!!

—M Brennan, Barrie,

There is no good reason to give cable companies another reason to raise prices on consumers while keeping the same standard of service, but lowering service for those who cannot afford to pay a higher premium.

—Jessica Phifer, Franklin, IN

This proves that Congress is bought and paid for and they don't represent the people who vote for them. They are sell out capitalist pigs.
—Grant Slaughter, Livingston, NJ

I am forced to pay TWC over $500 a month for the 100mbps I need. These companies are predatory and ruthless and need to be heavily regulated to prevent them from continuing to abuse their customers.
—Alexander Barber, Los Angeles, CA

The internet is an open medium. Why is it that our government only hears the highest bidder? The internet is where democracy happens. Ending net neutrality will stifle innovation, it will allow a few rich companies to get even richer. The internet is NOT broken. It does NOT need you to fix it. Stay out of regulating something that does NOT need to be regulated. Please protect the internet and keep it as it is.
—Jacqueline fix, San Francisco, CA

I oppose Bob Latta's bill H.R.4752
—Gretchen Hancock, Vashon, WA

Don't ruin the internet!!!
—Martin Bengston, Englewood, CO

I may not be one of your constituents, but decisions made by the US congress regarding the Internet effect every person on the planet who relies on the internet every day. Your choices regarding this bill are vital for the expansion of the Democracy world wide. You have a moral responsibility to protect Net Neutrality.
—Harry Meech, ,

When any company pays more to assure that their content moves faster than someone else's, the neutrality of the Net has been compromised. When all content moves at the same speed, and the only limit is the size of the interchange, that is Net Neutrality. If an ISP wants to keep their customers, they are going to want to insure they have the capacity to handle all their current customers plus a percentage more for growth of the community and the sizes of the files being transferred. They are going to want to have the fastest speeds available. That is net neutrality, the capacity for all users to have equal access to the speeds and access no matter who is doing the accessing, and equal access to all content providers. That is what made the Internet the great business stimulator it had become, a public utility to be monitored as such, like the POTS phone lines of the years before 1980.
—Leon Stark, Largo, FL

Just be fair. We support ISPs with our business, but with the current monopoly, we need the government to protect the people from corporate greed. Don't vote for this bill that goes against the purpose of government in this instance.
—Austin Holt, Brooklyn, NY

Please protect a neutral internet for all
—Trevor Thompson, Scottsdale, AZ

Everything I do and learn involves the internet. Why destroy a place of learning and knowledge?
—Walid, Cordova, TN

Please take heed
—Keith Miller, Cleveland, OH

The Internet was designed as an open medium. The fundamental idea since the Internet's inception has been that every Web site, every feature and every service should be treated without discrimination - not those that paid the most to reach us. Discrimination endangers our basic Internet freedoms. Net Neutrality ensures that innovators can start small and dream big about being the next EBay or Google without facing insurmountable hurdles. Unless we preserve Net Neutrality, startups and entrepreneurs will be muscled out of the marketplace by big corporations that pay for a top spot on the Web. FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler, a lobbyist for the cable and wireless industry along with other members instead of only looking at the interest of service providers like AT&T, Comcast and Verizon etc. should also help the common people. The FCC must reclassify broadband as a telecommunications service.

—Amitrajit Chatterjee, Union City, CA

We must assure that the internet is a level playing field for everyone.

—Elizabeth Byars, Grand Forks, ND

Please stand up for net neutrality. Our nation's economy and competitive advantage depends on it.

—Rahul Agarwal, San Francisco, CA

The UK and everywhere else always take the lead from the USA in Internet engineering and policy. This attack on Net Neutrality in Congress has a Worldwide effect. Please stop it.

—Terence Waites, Stockton-on-Tees,

Keep the internet free and open. Please do not put a stop to future progress.

—Fabian Barajas, Los Angeles, CA

Keep the internet free and open or you will rue the day.

—Michael Evans, Clarkston, WA

DON'T RUIN THE INTERNET

—Nick Cline, Beverly Hills, CA

I am appalled that the US government, the organization that is meant to represent me, believes that this is a bill that anyone would wish to pass. As a resident of Silicon Valley, I believe that everyone should have equal access to the internet, and start up companies should have just as much of an ability to succeed as big names such as Netflix. Our country was founded on this principle. To pass this bill would be simply Un-American.

—Betsy Bauer, Sunnyvale, CA

I support Net Neutrality

—Jason Arnold, Westland, MI

Yo person reading this. Are you really wanting to get on the internet's bad side? Internet freedom my ass. A lot of ignorant people wouldn't care about net neutrality because they dont know jack shit about the internet. But us internet users who are articulate enough to understand this, this monstrosity that's going on is the thing that shouldn't even be considered. Bills like this that we get a wind of, are exactly the kind of things that make us internet people, very unhappy. Instead of thinking of doing a company's bidding for their interests. Why the hell not get our support and perhaps we'll put more money in YOUR pockets than they could. Think about that. - An unsatisfied internet user

—Concerned Citizen, Syracuse, NY

SAVE THE INTERNET!!

—John, ,

The net should be neutral!

—Dan Holman, Sparta, TN

STOP enabling the FCC to benefit the cable companies. Protect consumers!

—Jordan Poole, Philadelphia, PA

Please help stop the spread of socialism in the country. Our founding fathers are turning over in their graves.

—Donald Mullally, Chesterland, OH

I will vote against any politician that supports this bill. Vote NO for this bill!

—Timothy White, Drifting, PA

Time Warner Cable and Comcast are among the least popular companies in America. People hate them more than they hate Bank of America. Supporting these corporations will be ammunition for your opponents to use to discredit your next bid for office.

—Michelle Oyakawa, Columbus, OH

I can't argue about the need to prioritize internet bandwidth in say, medical emergency or other life-safety needs, but there should be strict rules and regulations in place to decide how to go about the selection and prioritization of bandwidth that does not depend simply on who can afford it. Further, those regs should not be tampered with lightly.

—Andy Lafreniere, Claremont, NH

We the People already pay for to much!! Please take a stand for us and protect what we already have!! Thank you for your time and consideration

—Dave Stewart, Proctorville, OH

A neutral Internet, with equal speed for all services, is essential to maintaining freedom of speech and openness of access to information. The Internet, which was built with public support, is fundamentally a public utility and should be regulated to ensure equal and open access.

—Kathryn Tomasek, Providence, RI

Stop.

—Robert O'Connor, Pleasant Gap, PA

This is ridiculous that this is even open to debate.

—Tim Mankowski, New York, NY

It seems simple to me. Don't destroy the internet and stop big money in its tracks. But I'm just a common idiot, not a politician, so I'm sure I have no idea what's involved and I'm just being naive.

—Christian Kunig, Smyrna, DE

Tired of being nickled and dined to death!!!!

—Jeremiah McDaniels, Catlettsburg, KY

Stop trying to make corporations even more powerful. Monopoly is illegal. This kind of control is illegal. The Internet has been claimed to be a human right, so Comcast, Verizon and AT&T should go on trial for trying to control and manipulate a human right.

—Rafael Turgeon, ,

We pay more than we should now for cable services! Do not sell us out to ANOTHER big corporation! Comcast lobbyist as the new communications regulator? REALLY?!

—Kathi Gamble, Venice, FL

Regulating the internet would be like regulating the right to food and water.

—Brent Lamb, Costa Mesa, CA

Stop giving our freedoms away. Block this bill that is against the open internet. Stand up for our rights and stop kowtowing to big business.

—Jeffery Young, Rochester, NY

Don't let this happen!

—Kevin Parkerson, Indianapolis, IN

Net neutrality means transparency that supports freedom and democracy!

—William J. Ashwood, New Brighton, MN

It is time for the government to stop stifling competition by the consolidation of entire industries into one or two players. $18 billion in lobbying by Comcast speaks volumes about its motives and resources. Government is supposed to help maintain a level playing field not sell itself to the highest bidder.

—Alec Pennington, Indianapolis, IN

I am against the voting of this bill.

—Andrea Moore, Tulsa, OK

This against the united constitution. Think about peoples rights not what will get you reelected or more money. You have the duty to serve the peoples needs not big cooperations. THINK!

—Anastasia Taylor, Stonington, CT

save our internet

—Oscar A Arce, Hyattsville, MD

wake people we need to start commercials events fundrasing to wake people up thin about it

—Oscar Romero, Greenbelt, MD

I do not have access to cable so this bill will only hurt me.

—Paul Weston, Lubec, ME

Considering that the champion of this bill (Rep. Bob Latta) has received $320,000 in contributions from the telecom sector since taking office, would it be cynical to suggest that he may be looking after the interests of his lobbyists, rather than that of the voters? Simply put: supporting Rep. Latta's bill to strike down net neutrality is a move towards monopoly - it will benefit only the profit margins of telecom conglomerates, while bleeding customers and content creators dry.

—Alan Bao, ,

Stop this attack on our freedoms

—David Bourinot, Lexington, MA

I realize that these comments are unlikely to be read given the quantity being received, but I would ask that my representatives or their aids please take the time to view the following: <http://www.cnet.com/news/john-oliver-compares-cable-companies-to-drug-cartels/> so they have a better idea of why the average American may favor Net Neutrality. Thank you, Branden
—Branden Ohlinger, Fleetwood, PA

This is genuinely the biggest decision that you can take to protect freedom for individual citizens around the globe. Without hyperbole, voting yes for this bill will give cable companies the ability to promote or bury any website or service they wish to. This will cause a chain reaction not only in the United States but in Canada and all other nations as a large portion of internet infrastructure is housed in the United States and is therefore subject to the whims of the ISPs in your country. I implore you to reject this bill as it is something that affects us all.
—Mr. Jason Bennett, Waverley, NS monopolies are not democratic —Brenda McMillan, Port Townsend, WA

The FCC should reclassify broadband internet as a telecommunications (or "Common carrier") service. Keep the Internet Open.
—Corey Machado, Sloatsburg, NY

A vote for this bill would be undemocratic!
—Ryan Schlegel, Milwaukee, WI

Support net neutrality for the sake of innovation and growth!
—R Samuel Tiedemann, Wayne, NJ

Where to begin? The Internet has been the greatest information resource ever created. Not that the Internet is information in itself but in providing access to information. Never before has information been easier access or more available to most people. There are still barriers to accessing the information especially among the poor where even $25/month is too much to pay. This is exacerbated by the lack of competition. In most markets there are two options, cable or DSL. And these same two companies want more money - it's not as if they aren't already raking it in hand over fist with the fees they're already charging. And what they want is to charge for not blocking information. The devices on the Internet, routers, switches, and accompanying software, will normally treat data on a first in, first out basis. When we talk about Fast Lanes what's really happening is some data is buffered or dropped and other data is allowed to go ahead. Which data goes first? To the ISP it's whoever pays the most (or whoever the ISP wants to go first, think of Comcast's ownership of NBC). The result will be an Internet, the access to all that information, where those who pay will have greater visibility. Already our democracy is threatened by corporatocracy and plutocracy. What is proposed is a furtherance of ownership and control by a few. Instead of equal access for the benefit of everyone.
—Douglas Sherman, San Francisco, CA

This is a very important issue to me. I appreciate you protecting net neutrality. A. Hunter Thomas Norfolk, VA 23517
—A Hunter Thomas, Norfolk, VA

This is absolutely an issue I will be voting on, and will be urging all of my friends to vote on.
—Bobby Debelak, Houston, TX

Here's your chance to show the American People that you are not slaves to corporate donors, and care about people, instead of just donations!
—Russ Carrick, Telford, PA

This bill is a disgusting attack on the first amendment and free speech everywhere. Do not vote for this bill.
—Scummy, Burnet, TX

Net neutrality is vital, and this law would not only work toward preventing that, it would fundamentally cripple a system that was put in place by wise men and has worked for generations. Let the FCC do what it's there for -- regulating telecommunications -- with the Internet!

—Ben Harper, Aurora, CO

A tiered data rate is just another way to give large corporations even more control over our society. they will abuse any power they are given & since they are not elected they should NOT have this influence. Yes to Net Neutrality NO to further empowerment of the powerful!

—Christopher Hines, Farmington Hills, MI

How do you want to be remembered? What would you make of your legacy? When future generations read about you in the history books, do you want to be counted as one who helped do something truly good and truly important?

—Shane, Boulder, CO

Please keep Net Neutrality intact!

—Chad Whitman, Glenside, PA

Please DO NOT SUPPORT this bill!

—Alberto Jose Clavecillas, Fairfax, VA

The web is for everybody, not just the privileged few. Please don't allow greed to kill the web.

—Rick Freeman, louisville, KY

Just say NO to corporatocracy takeover of the Internet!

—Lars K. Morales, Louisville, CO

You are KNOWINGLY AND WILLINGLY letting the cable company's monopolize. THIS WILL NOT PROTECT US!!!! You guys are a bunch of selfish greedy assholes. You shouldn't be allowed to run our government. You only care about yourselves. Keep the internet free!!!!!!

—Allison Summo, Placentia, CA

I want the internet to stay as it is now for all. Do not meddle with our net neutrality!

—, New Caney, TX

Lets continue to support the freedom of information!

—Kaitlin Spangler, Redmond, WA

Make the right choice and support Net Neutrality. Be reminded of your grandchildren and great grandchildren; the ones who have to live with your decisions.

—Kennard Barrow, Norfolk, VA

I'm serious about this. I already pay for high speed internet. Don't make me pay twice.

—Talon D. Hone, Spanish Fork, UT

Open access to communication for citizens is key to maintaining democracy. Broadband internet is a public good.

—, Bethany, CT

The free flow of information on the internet is one of the few things I can rely on to supplement learning opportunities for my low income students in my flat broke school. My text books are old enough that they still list Pluto as a planet with one moon. Unfettered access to internet sites like nasa.gov mean my students can easily locate up to date explanations about what has changed in our understanding of Pluto's status since 2006 - definition of a dwarf planet, Hubble discoveries of that raise the moon count to 5, etc. REAL net neutrality creates equality in too many ways to recount. Pluto is just one snowflake on the tip of the iceberg. If America is in any way committed to the concepts of freedom and opportunity for all then H.R. 4752 is terrible policy that is clearly designed to help service providers line their pockets to the detriment of the rest of the country. Throw your energies behind protecting true Net Neutrality, please!

—Anne McKnight, Honolulu, HI

Freedom Yaya!!!

—Michael Fiedler, Seattle, WA

This bill is a travesty, and should be killed. I urge you and your colleagues to vote against it There is no reason why service providers should be able to control the content and priority of what a person sees on the Internet,

—Steven Waltman, Rochester, NY

The internet should be the same for everyone. We pay enough , we don't need to be charged extra. These providers have enough. This Greediness has to stop. Everyone should have the opportunity to have the same speed, but these companies still charge extra for higher speeds. This rampant discrimination online has to STOP!! To me it seems that this is just about one thing, more MONEY in the PROVIDERS POCKET!!!!

—Pamela Jean Pluta, Cihcago, IL

It is the people's Internet.

—Bruce Odelberg, Kirkwood, CA

No to merger

—Helen Sisk, ,

Congress, you ruin everything.... stop it. Sincerely, someone who wants you to stop it.

—Joshua Anderson, West Mifflin, PA

What I Wrote To Chairman Tom Wheeler and the FCC Commissioners—— We must say NO to Paid Prioritization, and YES to true Net Neutrality! Europe and Brazil just passed true Net Neutrality; why must the US always be an outlier when it comes to prohibiting corporate dominance. This isn't about "free" (paid) speech; rather, it is about protecting a public utility, much in the same way we protect phone and electric lines. The FCC's version is analogous to where, for your electric company, since air conditioners use most of the electricity, the power companies would charge more for your A/C units than for your light bulbs and other appliances. The power companies obviously do not do this, and this makes no sense. An electron is an electron and a kWH is a kWH, in the exact same way that any one internet packet ought to be treated the same as any other internet packet. You pay for your usage of electricity in the same way that we pay for internet on how fast our connection is overall, and not for what purpose the connection is being used. Please regulate the internet under the same Title II rules which govern open carriers like electric, phone and water. The internet is a public utility. We can't live without it and the economy certainly can't function without it. It's time to stop this "fast lanes" and "slow lanes" discussion and move to regulate the internet as a public utility. Don't allow the ISPs to legally extort money from internet startup ventures and Netflix alike. Michael Oatman nn@IllegalKnowledge.com 85702-0304

—Michael Oatman, Tucson, AZ

Keep cable companies from charging for Internet speed. The Internet works just fine as is and is actually now democratic. Please don't let it turn into a cable company dictatorship just because their lobby has spent so much money and the former lobbyist is now head of the FCC. That seems like a clear conflict of interest in this matter.

—Tracey Harley, Spring, TX

Seriously! This is insane garbage. It's obvious who's behind this bill. DO NOT SUPPORT THEM!!!

—Mr. Alan Mason, Portland, OR

Corporations are not people, my friends. Congress is elected to represent constituents (people). It would nice for a change if congress spent less time giving our country away to the highest bidders, and instead actually did some things that will benefit our citizens and our country.

—Jerry Brees, Marysville, WA

Please do not bring yourself down to the level of Rep. Bob Latta. Rep. Bob Latta's bill, H.R. 4752, would prevent the Federal Communications Commission from putting broadband Internet service providers back under Title II of the Communications Act, but that's the only way to protect Net Neutrality.

—Carmon Marshall, Xenia, OH

They already charge US for the bandwidth, why can they charge the places we use? Bill the consumers that USE the bandwidth, not everyone else.

—James Porter, Binghamton, NY

NO

—Scott Simon, Palatine, IL

True net neutrality must be protected. Cables companies and others must not be allowed to usurp the openness of the Internet.

—Andrew Mendelson, Philadelphia, PA

There is no need for this law. It is clearly another case of corporations buying our government and creating legislation that is not in the public interest.

—Seku Brathwaite, Chicago, IL

Vote "NO!!" for H.R. 4752!

—Marshall Ross Winkler, Scotts, MI

Please protect net neutrality. Do not allow the likes of Time Warner and Comcast to ruin the open internet.

—Mark Hurst, Charlotte, NC

As a people and a society, we must move in exactly the opposite direction of H.R. 4752. The FCC must regulate broadband internet like the utility it is, under Title II of the Communications Act.

—Joshua Warner, Hometown, IN

We pay a lot now for poor to mediocre product and terrible customer service, allowing companies like Comcast and Verizon to disrupt the level playing ground will force costs to go up and service quality to plummet.

—Eric Davis, Somerdale, NJ

Please reject this bill. What if water, energy, and medicine were dispensed in this fashion? Data equals access to the world, and it must be left open. Thank you.

—Kenneth Pearl, Glenview, IL

Please save Freedom of Speech and the level playing field which is the beauty and poetic justice of the internet. Save Net Neutrality.

—Emma Whitmore, New York, NY

This is a blatant attempt to subvert the people's decision to uphold Net Neutrality.

—Dan Egolf, Hayward, CA

Reject this bill! There are so many other issues to address that will help the American people, I am appalled that my government is even contemplating

—Rb, Saint Louis, MO

This is crucial to democracy. Don't sell us out to the giant tri-opolistic corporations like Rep. Bob Latta. The internet is a utility now. You can't let a company - or small set of companies - exclusively own crucial elements of the nation's fundamental infrastructure and then treat them as ordinary capitalistic competitors. Please fight this bill by introducing another that does designate them common carriers - it only acknowledges the simple truth.

—Andrea Swift, Astoria, NY

You may have a bigger wallet than I do, but I can't watch you step aside to let these sort of things 'just happen'.

—Kirsten Matlock, Pearl River, LA

I am a quadriplegic on a ventilation machine that breathes for me. I type this to you with a mouth mouse from my bed where I spend just about all of my time. The Internet is very precious to me. It is my connection to the outside world. It's where I socialize. It's how I get to see and talk to my brother who lives over seas. It is how I get work, transferring files for video editing and graphic design. It's where I spend most of my day, chatting with friends and making new ones around the world, reading the news and watching videos, or just browsing places like Imgur and Reddit; sometimes I just take a drive with Google Maps. It is the most important thing in my life because it allows me access to the most important people in my life. Please do not give control of such a powerful and beautiful thing that the Internet is over to some corporations that are only focused on profit margins. These corporations may hinder or even cut off the websites that give me access to my family and friends or work just so they can squeeze every penny from that site's owner. This isn't just about business, this about people and how it affects us. These corporations don't care about people. They care about money. It's up to you to act for the people. This is where my life is, where I have found freedom and where I pursue happiness. Please don't let some company put a price tag on my unalienable rights. John Brewer

—John Brewer, Westlake Village, CA

Save the InterNet which has been a boon to the U.S. economy.

—Devon Sean McCullough, Arlington, MA

Is it your intention to install a POLICE-STATE or an incarnation of the book named 1984 ???? I consider it your duty to safeguard FREE SPEECH, including FREE INTERNET !!!!

—Jaap Meihuizen, Geraardsbergen, None

Net neutrality Now!

—Mr. Randy Knatat, maryville, IL

Doesn't Congress have better and more important things to do. Throw this bill in the garbage.

—Linda Croner, Berlin, PA

It is very disturbing to see elected officials acting on behalf of their campaign contributions rather than serving the people who elected them and America's best interest.

—Joe Samples, Austin, TX

If this passes, its the beginning of the ennnnd!

—Håkon Granheim, ,

If you vote to destroy net neutrality, I will do everything in my power to make sure myself and my loved ones do not vote for you. Other than that, Good Job!

—Raumsin Golani, Livonia, MI

The net is open for all. Do not change what is not broken. Please see John Oliver's "rant" (omitting expletives of course).

—Dorelle Webster, ,

Just another citizen that wants to keep the internet neutral.

—Seth Alifi, Scottsdale, AZ

Internet Neutrality is key to the future our children and to present day innovation. We can not allow for big business to attempt to legally crush possibilities for competition by putting barriers to entry and at the same time increasing profit margins. It is not fair to the consumer it is not right for small business.

—David V. Wilson, Brooklyn, NY

Net Neutrality is very important to the internet and free speech and this bill must be stopped. Passing the bill will force citizens to pay by ISPs like Comcast.

—Ryan Elliott, ,

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!!!

—Eve J. Dymkowski, Clinton, IA

This bill is wrong for the people, currently fees are far too high and continue to rise. Telecom companies are not respecting their stakeholders. Hear the opposition to this bill.

—Michael Piriz, Whitestone, NY

Vote against H.R. 4752!!

—Diane Arena, Plainfield, IL

Net Neutrality is the only way to keep the Internet open, free and democratic - the only way the Internet was meant to be.

—Nancy Kosnar Hartman, Louisville, CO

Do not do this It is not fair and will have many famous YouTubers longer to post a video

—Nick Lam, Bayside, NY

SUPPORT NET NEUTRALITY!

—Michael Sliter, London, KY

Getting really disappointed with you Government :x

—Nicholas DellaRosa, Brandon, FL

We should not be taking steps to protect some of the most influential and wealthy businesses in the country at the expense of consumers and small businesses. Propose something that promotes competition rather than further establishes monopolies and you'll have my support.

—Steven Johnson, Richland, WA

We already pay for slow lanes, why make them slower with this bill.

—Eric Paz, Chicago, IL

The negative changes to the Internet experience that would come about if Net Neutrality is ended will be immense. There is no way that this sort of bill will not result in a backlash from voters. No one who uses the Internet will vote for any legislator who is ant-Net Neutrality.
—Matthew Durnford, Dover, NH

Save net neutrality. We need to keep an even playing field for innovation. I also already pay the internet provider for faster speeds and they throttle my data. This is unfair double charging, this would stifle innovation and small businesses.
—Crystal Polley, San Francisco, CA

net neutrality is important
—Bend Mergener, Winston Salem, NC

at&t monopoly was broken 40 years ago. now it's bigger than ever. they all need to be broken. cost is too high - value too low. make it a utility and stop blocking cities from building their own.
—Michael Boshears, crestline, CA

Opposition of Net Neutrality is opposition of all of the Americans that participate in the currently open system. It's also opposition to economic and social growth, so regardless of Republican or Democrat alignments, Net Neutrality is good for everyone. Business and ideas cannot thrive in a throttled system. I urge you to take part in standing up for what's all of ours, and not letting those in line to profit ruin something amazing for the rest of us.
—Bradley Grose, Portland, OR

We need to protect the open internet! The FCC must reclassify internet service providers as common carriers to protect the open internet. Bob Latta is on the wrong side of what is truly in the public interest on this issue.
—Robert King, Thornton, CO

You vote for the bill, and I will NOT be voting for you! Nor will any of my family and friends if I can help it.
—Mark Kelley, Germantown, TN

Equal access, equal speed, equal availability
—Robert Horowitz, Westbury, NY

Please do not vote for this bill. Just ask yourselves what does the telecommunication giants (comcast, AT&T etc) have to gain if laws are passed that ends our current state of "net neutrality". Ask yourselves if this is really in the best interest of the american people. Is this in the best interest of anyone in the free world? Would you allow the police offer a form of "hyper protection" only to people who are willing and/or able pay? The current telecom giants do not have any meaningful competition. Just look around the world and compare the costs and internet speeds of what is offered. They are not offering us the best they can. The truth is "the internet is a utility" and should afford the same protection as any other common carrier service.
—Andrew Foster, Valley Village, CA

The internet has effectively killed our public library system in america. Now our internet access is being threatened by big business and corporate interests!?! This seems an awful lot like a modern day book burning party to me! Please restore the american peoples faith in democracy and prove to us that our system still can work quickly to protect our freedoms when they are in jeopardy!
—Zach Smith, Cincinnati, OH

In order for us to continue to lead, innovate, and revolutionize the flow of information, the internet must remain a dumb pipe, a pipe that everyone has equal access to. Letting ISPs double dip is bad for everyone, for consumers that have to pay ever more for access to information, for startups that have an amazing idea, a potentially huge audience, but not much $$$. I continue to be confounded at how dumb we as a country are being about the internet: the spying, the filtering, the greed. If we continue to treat the internet so recklessly the companies and people who are at the front of our nations technology revolution will simply pick up and move to someplace that will allow them to utilize the internet more effectively, and the companies that remain will be so bogged down by the cost of reaching customers that they will not be able to innovate grow and become successful. Please listen to the internet generation, to those that invented the internet, and to the ideas that will take us into the future. Please don't let greed, ignorance, and corruption shackle our future, and win yet again. This proposed path is bad, please be prudent and wise in your decision and stop this bill before it does its damage.

—Sean Murphy, Provo, UT

This bill is an anti-competitive offensive joke!!!!

—Gary Tregoning, Swansea,

The government exists to protect the rights of the people, this is our technological right, protect it.

—Samantha Lincroft, Berkeley, CA

We need net neutrality to protect our democracy. If we lose this benefit we can kiss good-bye to freedom of opinion and real democracy.

—Luis Cavallone, Long Valley, NJ

Do your jobs. Don't look the other way or take the bribe like an asshole. Do the right thing . Stop being pussies for crying out loud.

—Coleen Kane, Kingston, PA

I strongly oppose this bill as a small business owner. I just invested a lot to get a couple of websites prepared to promote my business and this proposal will only make it more difficult for small businesses to thrive and succeed. I urge you NOT to support this dangerous bill.

—Alyria S. Clark Esq, Santa Monica, CA

Net Neutrality is the cornerstone of the success of the Internet. It is immensely important as a platform for both innovation and disseminating information. This must be protected going forward. Allowing ISPs to segregate the internet into fast and slow lanes based on extra fees will undermine the core of what has made the Internet successful. Not only would such fees essentially be extortion, but they would also prohibit newer players from establishing themselves. ISPs must be classified as common carriers to protect what has made the Internet great. As such, Rep. Bob Latta's bill, H.R. 4752, must be rejected.

—Patrick Hogg, Pittsburgh, PA

Please don't change the internet. I feel that as a consumer using internet should be my choice and freedom to use whatever service I like and not have to worry about my service provider deciding what speed I get for any service I may use. I feel that with changes to Net Neutrality is going to ruin my freedom and give me limitations on service I pay monthly on. Please reconsider this bill and please keep the internet for all! Thank you for your consideration and time!

—Cameron Maurice Moody, Hollywood, FL

I support a free and fair internet that benefits all who use it. I oppose any attack on Net Neutrality and my vote reflects that.

—Matthew D Schuster, Milwaukie, OR

Just adding my voice to the expressions of outrage internationally at the way we all, as citizens of the world, are being suckered by the undue influence of a cabal of robber baron corporations in the USA. Please show us you Americans really do stand for decency and fair play.

—Kathleen Cain, ,

Corporations must not control this most important access to freedom of information for Everyman.

—Mrs. Susan Cooke, Phoenix, AZ

A level playing field on the internet is absolutely necessary for start-ups and our future economy. The only people who benefit from the end of net neutrality are telecommunication companies. Please stop the FCC

—Robertson Greenbacker, South Boston, VA

THANK YOU.

—Manuel Jimenez, Chicago, IL

Money isn't a good enough reason for doing anything anymore. You need to do things that benefit our society, not give money to people that already have more than their share.

—Lorinda Logan, Fullerton, CA

<http://billmoyers.com/2014/06/02/john-oliver-takes-on-the-fcc-nothing-but-net/>

—Charlotte Painter, Capitola, CA

Do not vote for this bill! Vote for open internet!

—Daniel, Greenville, NC

If this goes through, it will ruin college dreams for those of us who currently rely on distance education since we're too poor to move and pay tuition. Please don't support this bill.

—Chanel Tompkins, Hyrum, UT

Introducing legislation that would prevent the FCC from doing its job is not only poisonous to the idea of an open Internet, but a sign of a corrupt federal government that does not act for the good of the people. If this bill were to pass, I would lose the little remaining faith I have in this Congress's ability to properly create and maintain fair, sensible legislation.

—Elijah Love, Hingham, MA

Your capitalist system is failure

—Comrade, ,

Keep the internet open and free. We should all be equal even if it's only online

—Roger Owen, San Diego, CA

Please, please protect Net Neutrality and the free flow of information. This bill supports censorship of that freedom.

—Kaila Stevenson, Dublin, CA

Save net neutrality.

—Aidan Kahn, Bainbridge Island, WA

I don't want internet tollbooths, please keep the internet free and open

—Arthur Coja, Tracy, CA

Please don't let this happen. It's wrong.

—Angelica Mateo, Walnut, CA

How can you allow more and more businesses rape the people for profit. When are you ever going to stand up for the people? We are so far down the toilet into the sewer systems the light is dimmed beyond hope. Just once, stand up and fight for the people who voted you into office and stop turning your head towards the money!!!!

—Marianne Gillis, Santa Fe, NM

Free Speech, And Commerce, Must Be Protected, The Internet Was Born Free, And Must Remain So, This is the Right Of The People' To Speak Freely, and Share Information In An Open Society. No Government Agency Should Have the Right to Quell Any' American Freedom' Under the True and still very much+ Living Constitution, Long Live the True De-Jure Republic, By The People' Of The People' And For The People. So Help Me God.

—George Arthur Veghte, Manchester Township, NJ

This is disgraceful

—Ivan Phelan, ,

There is no reason for this bill except to give the cable companies even more power and profit to detriment of our democracy. Rep Latta should be ashamed of himself except that I think that he is looking toward the future and that fat lobbyist job he is going to get when this congress gig is over. Please don't support this bill.

—NL Cronin, Phoenix, AZ

This is a bill that decides whether the internet is a toy for some or a tool for all. This bill needs to die.

—Ken Brucker, Bonita, CA

PLEASE do not do this to the American people. In order to compete globally in the digital age, keeping the Internet completely open and free is VITAL. You MUST reclassify broadband as a COMMON CARRIER under the COMMUNICATIONS ACT.

—Karl Schubauer, Cincinnati, OH

The Internet is set to play a huge role in my future and you are considering taking this away from me! How dare you push the telecom industry's lobbying efforts to create a new global inequality divide? The same people who controlled the mass media of cable television in the 1990's are pushing this bill! What does that tell you? The Internet belongs to the world, and the fact that people like you are trying to privatize it for personal gain sickens me!

—Jesper Mount, Plano, TX

I have worked in web development for over 15 years, and depend on net neutrality for my living. Supporting this bill will destroy my livelihood.

—Christopher Kraft, Cincinnati, OH

Don't stifle the innovation and learning that has made Boston great. Save Net Neutrality!

—Eric Solfisburg, West Roxbury, MA

This bill is an attack on internet freedom and equality. The FCC should not be prevented from using Title II classification as it was already suggested by the Supreme Court twice, as a way to ensure that the internet remains a bastion of freedom and innovation. Do not support this toxic bill. It's a blatant Trojan Horse, bought and paid for by big Telecom, to sneak in anti-consumerist and first amendment breaking legislation to prevent our freedoms from being protected. Do right by your constituents and do not support this

—Gustavo Vargas, Ontario, CA

Please don't ruin the Internet. I know they keep trying because there's nothing else wrong with this country besides the Internet. Sarcasm intended.

—Daniel Saksa, Naugatuck, CT

net neutrality is important for continued innovation and development!

—Cindy Lancaster, Knoxville, TN

What may seem harmless, is, I think, quite dangerous to our democracy and to the free and equal access to all available information. We already know from all the data gathered about us, from the cookies that follow us, that information is contorted to suit those who can pay. Don't add this noxious and unfair bill to end any semblance of Net Neutrality.

—Mary Anne Lushe, St. Clair Shores, MI

I support Net Neutrality. If ISPs become gatekeepers to determine which sites are fast by way of premium pay services that only established wealthy corporations can afford, and which sites are slow by culling competition or other malicious malfeasance, the open internet as we know it dies, and our economy will falter soon afterwards.

—Michael Q. Rudnin, Brooklyn, NY

Stop the Police State. Preserve Freedom.

—Eli Dumitru, Medford, OR

I support utterly the intent, premises, and object of the petition I am signing. But I disassociate myself from the diction, grammar, syntax, and style of the petition's text.

—Jaffee Leonard R Professor of Law Emeritus, Woodburn, OR

Do the right thing for we the people.

—John Woodall, Bellevue, KY

This is a very important issue for the future of business and education of future generations. Thank you Cory Culbert

—Cory Culbert, Waseca, MN

Maintain Net Neutrality!

—Paul Cameron, Carrollton, TX

Please

—Virginia Stancill, Pink Hill, NC

Please do not break the internet. It is extremely important that it remains open. As a computer scientist and an aspiring software entrepreneur, many of my lifelong dreams would be crushed by an internet with gatekeepers. Please take action to ensure the net remains open and an enabler for entrepreneurs all over the world.

—Brendan, Seattle, WA

The level of corruption required at the highest level to make this happen is shocking. I thank God that I live in Europe, but this sets a poor example for the whole world.

—Joel Jenvey, ,

Don't give giant corporations with billions of dollars an even stronger upper hand by allowing them preference on the web

—David Kelton, Elmhurst, IL

PLEASE REJECT THIS BILL, Thank You. Ron Holberg

—Ronald J Holberg, North Bend, WA

There's a program out here called fairness. It's time you greedy bastards got with it. There's no room for sociopaths in the boardrooms of a free economy!

—David Culver, Hopkins, MN

It's profit for the rich on the backs of the poor. It could be used to invade our privacy.

—Dennis Kruger, Lincoln, NE

Allowing anyone to specifically assign speeds or bandwidth to content is a terrible idea and would hurt consumers and content creators alike.

—Matthew Jacobs, New York, NY

I have a PhD in computer science, and I use the Internet daily for both work and entertainment.

—Kenneth Ingham, Albuquerque, NM

I have written a member of Congress asking to Support Net Neutrality!

—Staci Edwards, Marietta, GA

Stop trying to reduce one of last freedoms to yet another monitored, scrutinized, and discriminated platform. You've taken this idea far enough and the people have had enough of your attempts to get around our desires. Remember remember the 5th of November.

—Michael Crossett, Buffalo, NY

The Internet needs to remain an open and equal resource regardless of who provides it.

—Richard N Bernard III, Elkton, MD

Please stop HR 4752, keep our Internet open and free.

—Vincent Murphy, Smithtown, NY

KEEP NET NEUTRALITY!

—Mary Anne Gulley, Chicago, IL

Please!

—Sam Willis, Templeton, CA

The basis of the founding of the Internet is Net Neutrality and all traffic being treated equal. Allowing large ISPs to charge additional money for some traffic and supporting such a bill is not in the Interest of the consumer of the Internet nor the Taxpayer.

—Nick Bausch, Elmwood Park, IL

we need net neutrality!

—Guadalupe Orozco, Houston, TX

You better not ruin the internet congress.

—Sean Dylan Ashley, ,

Please protect our Internet. The rights of start-up companies and creative American entrepreneurs are in your hands! DO NOT LET THERE BE A TWO-TIER SYSTEM! DO NOT VOTE FOR THIS BILL!

—Lydia Holz Ingram, San Antonio, TX

This is America ; not China.
—Minale Polite, Wadesboro, NC

Keep the net neutral!
—Bruce Creed, Seward, NE

DO YOUR JOB, representing "WE THE PEOPLE" not "we the Corporations" who line your pockets.
—Ms Terry L Smith, Atlanta, GA

Net Neutrality is the most unique aspect of the internet and something we as American citizens need to hold on to. Aren't we "land of the free"? Don't we have rights to access? I can guarantee you've received millions of these messages, how can you just ignore all of them? You say you want to hear what the people have to say by having having us send in comments like this one, but are you even listening? It's time to LISTEN. No one in their right mind is in support of net neutrality. No one in their right mind thinks any two major companies should merge. Cut the bullshit and strike down net neutrality!
—Alicia Uhacz, Vancouver, WA

You have a simple job, just saying no to corporations who are in the hunt for more money, they aren't helping us, they aren't helping the nation.
—ME Hope, ,

This would be so unfair. This would suppress creativity and free speech, suppress research of/the expansion of technology, suppress small business, it refutes the whole idea of capitalism and free market, and it would allow monopolies to flourish. Please vote against this. Thank you.
—Cheryl Wankmueller, Monroe Township, NJ

Protect the open internet.
—Melissa Grant, Washington, DC

We need to prevent cable company fuc#ery!
—Laurie Gustafson, Fall River, MA

Protect Net Neutrality for regular Americans who can't pay a lobbyist to support this concept.
—Connie J Hoffman, Tucson, AZ

Don't take our freedom away!
—Marselle Sloane, Fountain Valley, CA

The Internet needs to stay free. It is the Amazon Rainforest of our times. Thank You.
—Talos Virgin, San Francisco, CA

Don't use another method to attack/put down the everyday folk!
—Lauretta Gaylord, Jacksonville, FL

SAVE NET NEUTRALITY!
—Nate Cleveland, San Francisco, CA

Protect net neutrality.
—Lisa Griffiths, Las Vegas, NV

Please STOP THIS! The Internet is a utility and ISP's have no business claiming otherwise. One Internet. No ISP control. This is pure greed and completely outrageous!

—Bruce Macfarlane, Key Largo, FL

I need Net Neutrality for my teaching at Bethel University.

—Dr. Roger C Johnson Phd, Mc Kenzie, TN

I believe that the internet should be open to everyone, not just those who have the money. Please do what you can to preserve net neutrality. The US should not lag. Heinz other developed countries in providing this valuable service to ALL!

—Gayle Selby, Sequim, WA

Please champion this citizen's cause. Wasn't this action the original reason for the creation of this whole concept of representative government for the people, i.e., the masses, not the rich?

—Mark Bloom, Fleetwood, PA

save teh net

—Nikola Lipotic, ,

We need more competition, lower (or free) prices on internet. It should be a right of all citizens of the world.

—Douglas Pieper, Salt Lake City, UT

I can't believe we need to have this discussion. Stop selling out the American public!!

—Joe Manuse, Youngstown, NY

I live in the UK and I am wish to preserve real Net Neutrality!

—Graham D Bell, Middlesbrough,

It should not be possible for big companies to BUY faster internet. This would curtail the freedoms of the individual.

—Don, San Clemente, CA

This bill will kill jobs. Do not want.

—Clarke Macbeth, Independence, MO

Have we considered the implications the loss of Net Neutrality would mean for our freedom of assembly, freedom of speech, and freedom of religion? Not allowing the FCC to classify ISPs as common carriers makes the Congress complicit in allowing private corporations the power to censor and abuse the citizens of this country on a mass scale. Congress, you are responsible for upholding the Constitution of the United States. Corporations in this country are maneuvering for a position to eliminate our fellow countrymen's ability to participate in the future of democracy. You must not let this happen!

—Brian Deyo, Washington, DC

I've worked in the information technology field for over 15 years, and have paid close attention to net neutrality status. ISPs should be treated as a public utility. ISPs already sell the consumer a set bandwidth. What the customer uses that bandwidth should be up to them. We are already paying for the bandwidth. By letting the ISPs charge both the customer and the content provider for "faster" access is extortion by an industry that has monopoly on telecommunications.

—Marcus G David, Chicago, IL

The only reason to change the internet is for profit. Why fix what isn't broken?

—Eslam Khalil, Pomona, CA

H.R.4752 is merely sucking up to Big Media, giving it everything Big Media wants at the expense of the American consumer. We already pay too much for too little bandwidth in comparison with most other countries. I hope the constituents in Rep. Bob Latta's home state see him for what he is and vote him out this year. Giving Big Media what it wants means the end of the First Amendment as we now know it. You will only be able to get your ideas to the the majority of Americans if you can shell out BIG BUCKS. THIS IS WRONG AND TOTALLY UN-AMERICAN.

—William Shirey, Decatur, AL

Please reject this bill! The internet needs your protection. These companies are merging into limiting our choices so that the people will have only one or two choices. This will break the monopoly rule. Show the American people that you support them and are not in the pocket of big business, that you are a true American, and that you believe in freedom. Our country's founding fathers broke with the English for not having representation in the law making, we are now asking you to represent us, the American people and our freedoms in the right to choose.

—Julie Pace, Evansville, IN

Does the word FREEDOM 'ring a bell' anymore??? Free broadband and internet available in MOST nations in our world--why not here in U.S.??

—Anna Becker, Hillsboro, OR

We can't allow corporations to have a monopoly on the only thing that treats everyone equally. Please please don't vote for this bill.

—Asia McClain, galveston, TX

One of the most important technical advancement, one that has leveled the playing field for many citizens, is being threatened by commercial interests. Do not allow Net Neutrality to be compromised!

—Greg Flynn, New Smyrna Beach, FL

There's only one Internet; don't screw with it or sell it, because it can not be replaced. Hocking its functions to benefit the currently-wealthy big players of 2014 will preclude the development of even bigger players in just a few years by stifling entrepreneurial innovation.

—B J. Oliver, Averill Park, NY

Please, do not cater to large corporations. Keep the internet a level-playing field! Net neutrality is crucially important to the public. The only people who stand to lose with our current egalitarian system are the cable companies. Please put me, your constituent, ahead of lobbyists. Please protect net neutrality.

—Samuel Ogles, Wheaton, IL

Aiding and abetting America's economic takeover by corporate entities is despicable. I support start-up ventures and would appreciate communications companies standing equal among everyone else in regard to this free resource.

—Susan Moulton, Bartlett, IL

Please reject this bill. As a communications medium it should fall under the FCC and it should be labeled as a utility not a luxury.

—Benjamin P Swem, Bothell, WA

By the same token, a vote for this bill is a vote against yourself in the upcoming election.

—Emily Whitmore, Phoenix, AZ

This cannot be allowed to happen. A vote for this bill is a vote against the open internet!

—Daniel Post, Odenton, MD

A free and open internet is the only way that innovation and startups will help further the development of technology, global learning, and new ways of communicating with each other. Limit their access to an open internet will stunt the growth of all things innovative in the digital world.

—Natalie Blair, Brooklyn, NY

In the age of the Internet, the viability of our democratic form of government depends upon genuine net neutrality.

—Joe Landwehr, Mountain View, MO

People over profit :)

—Carlos Townsend, Fountain Valley, CA

Please consider reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act - help us catch up to Estonian download speeds!

—Sam Fox, Denver, CO

It's so important to have a variety of different viewpoints on presenting the news---not have a handful of corporations controlling the mass media.

—Lisl Weilgart, Sacramento, CA

Net Neutrality is crucial to maintain the fairness of the tech start-up playing field. This bill is a disgusting bias towards large broadband distributing corporations. Passing this bill will only hurt the economy.

—Garrett Kistler, Leominster, MA

The FCC should classify Internet Service Providers (broadband) as common carriers under. It is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Lisa Krznaric, Canonsburg, PA

Please, listen to the American people.

—Christopher Morgan, Las Vegas, NV

The desire for an open Internet is most assuredly shared by 99% of the population who use it. The media has done well to obscure the meaning of net neutrality and its benefits, causing the opposition to Rep. Bob Latta's bill, H.R. 4752, to not be fully represented by those who actively speak out against it. I urge you not to support this bill.

—Jonathon McBride, Golden, CO stand for personal liberty not corporate takeover. thank you

—Maurice Brown, Montgomery, TX

As an avid content creator such legislation would destroy my chance to build a business online. The internet has been built on individuals and small groups creating new and amazing collaborations. Don't strangle the ability for new small businesses to start in an already struggling economy.

—Ben Yockel, Gibsonia, PA

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler is nothing more than a lobbyist for Verizon and all the other Internet service providers he doesn't represent the interest of the people please don't let him ruin the internet as we know it please help us get it classified as a common carrier and let everyone have equal access at the second speed .

—Robert E Blount, Palm Beach Gardens, FL

please vote against this bill!

—F Charlotte, ,

Common Carrier status is very important to the future of the internet. Please help protect the internet from corporate greed.

—Duane Eckholm, Fargo, ND

A free and open internet has changed the world. We the People own the airwaves, and we all deserve a fair shot at them. DO NOT give our property away to the highest bidder!

—Erin Conner, Oakland, CA

the congress must not ruin net neutrality, because this corrupt and foul bill H.R. 4752 is against net neutrality , we must bring this bill down

—Dorian Sanchez, Eldorado, TX

Please show the people of this country that our government is for the people, not the "people" called the cable companies!

—Pamela D. Buter, Waldorf, MD

SUPPORT NET NEUTRALITY H.R. 4752

—Marg McCausland, Ashburn, VA

We the people built and paid for the back bone and created the apps that make the Internet what it is. You politicians need to learn that you do not have to get your grubby hands on everything and especially those things that you have no part in creating. You are responsible for keeping us safe and that's all. Back off this creation of the people in all ways. Just keep your mind on protecting us and quit wasting time trying to figure out how you are going to control another of our creations. To be perfectly frank I have lost all respect for those that are suppose to lead this country.

—Dick Williams, Plano, TX

Keep the Internet open and FREE!

—Steven Whalen, Olympia, WA

Freedom should be FREE!

—Amanda Reis, Norwalk, CT

Classification of broadband internet and the internet in general as a common carrier is essential to maintaining an open and free internet for the American people. If our Democracy is to survive as an institution representative of an informed and empowered people, then ensuring that modern means of communication, expression and economic activity are available on a level playing field to everyone is essential. Net neutrality can only survive if it is ensured either by a bill in congress or if broadband is classified as a common carrier.

—Eric Smith, Kingston, MA

REJECT HR 4752!

—Mary Rocco, Los Angeles, CA

Taking a stand on this will gain you votes.

—Shqron Almerigi, Miami, FL

John Oliver explained it clearly. If you don't understand why net neutrality is important check out his video online

—Dr. Christine Ogan, Bloomington, IN

You're either for the people or for the corporate oligarchs... we're watching!

—Christian McCarty, Seattle, WA

Any member who votes for this terrible bill will not get my vote

—Mitchell Hook, towson, MD

For goodness sake PLEASE protect net neutrality!

—Erik Hook, Somerville, MA

This is HUGE. It will harm democracy if the internet is divided into "fast (aka slow) and "super fast" (aka normal speed for the US). It is also terrible for innovation and, therefore, new business. Keep Net Neutrality!

—Jonathan Allen, Twin Lake, MI

Protect your constituents and the American people, not the profits of the business. The Internet is a public utility, there's absolutely no doubt about it. It should be labeled as such.

—Denise and John Charno, Webster, NY

Please do the right thing - keep the Internet open! Thank you .

—Kleomichele Leeds, Santa Barbara, CA

We need unbiased internet!

—Cameron Barden, Burlington, VT

Don't allow businesses to dictate how we access the internet. It will kill small businesses who can't afford the speed provided to monstrous businesses. Support small business!!

—Jocelyn Moon, Asheboro, NC

I worked in the corporate end of this industry! Keep Net Neutrality!

—John Sanders, Dedham, MA

Support the 'real' people, not the 'pseudo' people known as corporations!!!

—Tim Greyn, Lake Forest, CA

Internet service is no longer an optional luxury. Claim to support small business owners? Put your votes where your mouth is and reject this bill.

—G Rowan McIntyre, Chicago, IL

your job congress is to act in the interest of "the people" not corporations

—Ronald Budzynski, Nesconset, NY

The Internet should be open and free to everyone- not to giant, bloated telecommunications companies (Comcast, Verizon, etc.) and the greedy 1%.

—Chris Hamby, Walkersville, MD

DO NOT SUPPORT HR 4752. Its aim is to weaken democracy and enhance the power of corporations. It is bad, nasty legislation. Reject it.

—John Sundman, Tisbury, MA

Protect Freedom, not the Corporations.

—Salvatore Mete, Lake in the Hills, IL

Stop this bill now. Spurs innovation and favors big business.

—Zach Marburger, Southern Pines, NC

You work for the people, not Time Warner, Comcast, Verizon, etc...

—Kevin Kirk, Hampton, NJ

This issue is priority one for some of us..

—Paul Martinez, Roseville, CA

I already phoned your office on this issue, but i urge you again to support REAL net neutrality!

—Ms. Ginna Sloane, Santa Fe, NM

I am writing to promote the need for internet liberty! Do not take away the internet freedoms that exist for us today.

—Aubrey Dominguez, palmdale, CA

It never fails to appall me when our so called elected representatives only represent corporate interests for their masters.

—Sheare Bliss, Birmingham, AL

The Internet is public property not the playground for the 1% !!!

—Raul Aristy, Brooklyn, NY

Please keep the internet Open!!

—Paul Simundza, Eastlake, OH

Please vote against this bill.

—Jeffrey Mudge, Wheaton, IL

As a librarian in a public library I can see first hand what inequal access to the internet does. Compounding that with inequal distribution of information over this vital highway and it would be a disaster. Tell the FCC to do their jobs, reclassify broadband as a public utility and protect net neutrality.

—Cynthia Dye, E. Boston, MA

If you vote for this bill and it passes, you will be part of the last straw that broke democracy's back - is that what you really want?

—Reverend Sandra Mackie, Gettysburg, PA

Please do the right thing and NOT let corporate interests destroy the free and open internet!

—Tim Naughton, Roseville, CA

I know it's useless. Congress is corrupt, bought and paid for by corporate lobbyists and corporations out to fleece the general public for every dime possible. But I'll give it a try anyhow and sign this petition.

—Mr. don dines, Danville, IL

Disappointed in Obama-- placing known lobbyists in political offices meant to regulate corporations is shameful.

—Anthony T., Brooklyn, NY

don't mess it up!!!!

—Robert Garrod, Tigard, OR

Corporate hubris will eventually be their downfall and I can't wait. The internet is a public utility and should remain so.

—Howard Switzer, Linden, TN

The Internet is a utility —Stephen L Blake, Clemmons, NC

Fred The internet!

—Rune Abel, ,

Believe me - I and millions of other Americans, including your constituents, will remember your vote on this bill. Don't forget that you work for "we the people," not "we the corporations." The American people are overwhelmingly in support of a free and open internet.

—Victoria H. Strange, Louisville, KY

I'll note that I regard Net Neutrality as a part of free-speech which may not be abridged, here or in the world at large.

—Matt McConnell, Lexington, KY

I think any semiconscious legislator can easily see the special interest forces at work here against "our freedom!" Please vote NO!

—Oma Rose, Reno, NV

Those laaedge pr net neutrality gorups are nthng but corporate lobbyist in disguise,They are lying about representing u citizens who want to prevent big business from controlling our internet

—Michael McGee, montgomery, AL

We need to make the internet a public utility and open to all without restriction.

—Brian D Gregory, Bremerton, WA

Free Wi-Fi for all!!!!

—John Crombie, Lanesville, IN

The broadband internet should rightly be reclassified under Title II of the Communications Act as a Common Carrier, which it indisputably is. I urge you to reject Rep. Latta's corporate corruption bill, H.R. 4752. The internet was developed by the American taxpayer and should not be privatized and destroyed for the profit of a few greedy corporations and their bought and sold legislators.

—PI Norton, Lewes, DE

DON'T KILL NET NEUTRALITY !

—Badar Jamal, Lahore,

Congress, for once, please vote as if your campaign chest didn't need a Big Donation from Big Business....

—Charles S Mitchell, Keokuk, IA

Please don't turn a free Internet become a money maker for big companies that already have plenty of control over our communication ability. This is just one more way for money mad businesses to get money from those who can't afford more bills. They should not "own" the Internet any more than they should control the air we breathe.

—Melissa J New, Tacoma, WA

The Internet is the least satisfying industry according to the 2013 American Consumer satisfaction Index. So why exactly would we give them more power?

—Kris Rentfro, Livermore, CA

It's fairly obvious to everyone at this point that the only people in favor of ending net neutrality are the media infrastructure providers. And that's simply because they want to make money. There's really no debate over what's right for our society.

—Terry Hasan, Brooklyn, NY

FREEDOM 4 ALL of U.S. !!!!

—Denise Skeeter, Long Beach, CA

I am so pleased to see Senator Franken's tenacious representation on this topic. We sorely need that direct front at this time. So many of our issues have this one last crucial need to be changed before the dark side of corporate power totally wins their full stronghold over the People.

—Ms. Nancy Groves, Golden Valley, MN

Keep in mind that I am watching this and will make sure that this will turn me into a one issue voter if you vote for this bill.

—Daniel Vevang, Minneapolis, MN

Keep your fingers off the Internet.

—William Kruhmin, Oceanside, NY

Keep our open net neutrality for everyone-- Reject Bob Latta Bill and instead reclassify Broadband under Title II of the Communications Act

—Monty Barber, Wisconsin Dells, WI

You will hurt this economy more than you realize.

—Tony A Testerman, Abingdon, MD

I do not support bill, H.R. 4752.

—Elvira Ramirez, Elgin, IL

The 1% controlling the Internet and limiting everyone else resembles Facism and not a Democracy. Please stop this before it is too late.

—Ms. Marilyn Katz, Los Angeles, CA

Just read why NBC, ABC, and CBS have gone "MUM" on net neutrality--they owned by conglomerates that have everything to lose if the story gets out. COMCAST(selling fast-lane access) owns NBC, Disney (eager for preferential treatment) owns ABC, CBS owns Showtime (cheaper to produce than pay for shows). Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality!

—Lynn Manzione, Athens, GA

This would really ruin all of the GOOD things about the internet that are left---there are enough bad aspects already.

—Elizabeth Underwood, Mill Valley, CA

True Net Neutrality is the only real free market here. Allowing an oligopoly to write their own rules is the opposite of American free-market competition. Would we let two companies control all Interstate highways and let them choose whom to allow on the roads and for how much? This is the reality we're approaching unless Net Neutrality is enshrined in law, once and for all.

—Matt, Fort Mill, SC

The internet is a common carrier and should be kept that way.

—Keith Stickford, La Jara, NM

Keep the Internet free!

—James Lobdell, Santa Rosa, CA

Every time the middle class turns around the government if taking something away for them, WHY. The internet is the one thing that needs to be left alone, Verizon, Comcast, AT&T and the other big companies have more than enough money. Many times big business is as bad as big government. Congress let it alone.

—Lawrence Miller, Hemet, CA

The USA has the highest costing and lowest bandwidth of industrialized nations. Permitting tiered service levels with further erode our position and damage USA's international viability - it is unpatriotic! Enforce Net Neutrality - we need it!

—John Joyce, Reisterstown, MD

Had it existed I believe that the founding fathers would have included "net neutrality" in the first amendment right along with "freedom of speech" and "freedom of the press."

—Gordon Osterhoff, Muncie, IN

Our rights to free speech and to communicate freely is at stake!

—Susan Heitner, Brooklyn, NY

Please save net neutrality!

—Michael Schatte, Burleson, TX

destroying the open internet will allow companies to increase prices to consumers while simultaneously decreasing quality of services provided. In no way can this bill be good for the consumer. I urge you not to support this bill and to let the internet remain open.

—Christopher Bidar, Garden Grove, CA

H. R. 4752 is COMPLETELY & UTTERLY UNACCEPTABLE!!! The corruption it represents is OBVIOUS!!!

—Katherine Waid, Mendocino, CA

Reject this uneducated distraction! Vote down this bill!

—Dixie Wood, Livermore, CA

PROTECT REAL NET NEUTRALITY: See John Oliver's bit from Last Week Tonight: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fpbOEoRrHyU>

—Jacob Bension, Los Angeles, CA

I rely on an open Internet to do business as a freelance videographer and filmmaker. Should Net Neutrality come to an end, so will my ability to reach my clients and audiences. Please do not let Net Neutrality come to the end!

—Mikel J. Wisler, Weymouth, MA

Just as the Public Library is free, so should the internet!

—Jessie T. Stepanian, Methuen, MA

The internet should be treated as a means of communication similar to the telephone, and should not be controlled by any private entity.

—Mike Andrews, raynham, MA

We need to keep data flow free and not be discriminated against. We don't need data monopolies.

—Matt Barnett, Atlanta, GA

Please keep the Internet neutral!

—John Cotte, ,

Corporations need to be stopped before there is nothing left of our democracy.....

—Kim Mariner, clifton, CO

Please don't destroy our freedom. Net-neutrality is important.

—Kayla Mattes, Portland, OR

This bill must be voted down by a bipartisan supermajority as a strong statement the open Internet must be preserved for the future of our information-based society.

—Mr. Joshua Warner, Rochester, MN

Congress should work for the people, not corporations pretending to be people.

—Peter Faeustle, Santa Rosa, CA

You know what's right. You know what you have to do. All you have to do is say "no."

—Andrew DeFrancis, Pittsburgh, PA

And the open Internet is a basic neccessaity for a functioning democracy. ISPs need to be treated as monopolies and regulated as such for the public interest. We can't act like they're normal companies, they're not. They're regional monopolies like any other utility and as public utilities they should be treated and controlled like we do electric, water and sewage providers.

—Andrew Dobbyn, Durham, NC

Net Neutrality is my number one issue. I will be watching your vote on this bill. If you vote FOR this bill, I will not be voting for you when your next term is up.

—Dan Eshleman, Rockford, IL

I like the internet as it is, comcast, AT&T, and Verizon are already doing almost indecent amount of profit and give no services... And the internet is slow in north-america, Giving them such gift is downright silly.

—Kévin Paré, Vancouver, BC,

Fix the issue permanently. Reward should be based on creativity and improved services, not legislated restrictions.

—Charles Buchanan, Union City, CA

We should all have the same access to the same information with the same conditions. We are the 99%!!!

—Marilyn McClelland, Fanny Bay,

We need to continue this fight

—Manuel Orozco, Long Beach, CA

The internet is a public utility. Don't sell the public out. Let business sell on the internet, not own it.

—Joel House, San Jose, CA

This is crucial. Don't let greedy corporate interests subvert the very nature of this absolutely essential resource!

—Peter Freeman, Los Angeles, CA

An open Internet will be one of the most important factors for democracy, freedom of speech and the education of people in the 21st century.

—Justus Bogner, Stuttgart,

ISPs must be reclassified as Title II Common Carriers. All possibilities of slow, fast, or "hyper-fast" must be eliminated. Equal access to a robust internet connection is essential for all Americans.

—Erik Dean, Lorton, VA

The Internet bandwidth belongs to the USA's citizens not telecommunications corporations!

—Byron Bostic, Waterford, MI

Seriously though, Title 2 would pave the way for Cheaper stronger ISP competition via access to existing infrastructure. This is a win - win for every.

—Carl Lonsdale, Morristown, NJ

Time to stop putting your hands out for corporate money, and pay attention to the rest of us!

—Nancy Schick, St. Louis, MO

On behalf of the Iowa membership of the ACLU, I urge you to preserve net neutrality at all costs. Its demise would be a catastrophe for the future of the world.

—Ben Stone - ACLU of Iowa, Des Moines, IA

Do something GOOD for a change. Reclassify broadband under Title 11 of the communications Act. Net Neutrality PLRASE.

—Leda Slattery, Idaho Falls, ID

Do not ruin the chance for common sense regulation of the people's internet.

—Michael V Cuomo, Trenton, NJ

The Internet should be equal for all! Thank you

—Carolina Salinas, Miami Beach, FL

Why would you not allow open access for the infrastructure which was paid for by the taxpayers?

—Richard Libbey, atlantic beach, NY

Please don't favor the profits of the few, over the best interests of the rest of America.

—Mike Kostich, Milwaukee, WI

The Internet is intended to be a level telecommunications medium for ALL users to have equal access. Without a neutral Internet, industry pioneers like Google, Amazon, and Netflix would have failed before they even started. Killing net neutrality is a death sentence for startups who can't afford to pay a king's ransom for "priority access" to industry giants like Comcast and Verizon. Don't let Comcast, Verizon, TimeWarner, etc choose which players are allowed to participate in the game. That's not what the Internet is for.

—Daniel Lapoint, Cordova, TN

The United States of America has some of the worst broadband Internet access among first-world countries. By supporting Rep. Bob Latta's bill, HR 4752, you will further reduce our country's broadband Internet access. We have seen what happens when corporations are allowed to fully regulate themselves. Please do not expose our method of communication to such risk.

—Rory Martell, Owego, NY

The open internet has been good for the country. Corporate interests are trying to rig the system in their favor. This is nothing but greed. The internet is a public utility. I'll pay for access to the internet, don't let them filter traffic or content based on their own interests.

—Rick Johnson, Olney, IL

Just adding my voice here; I'm well aware of your history of protecting the net from corporate thieves.

—Steve Ditore, Seattle, WA

As a voter in Missouri's 6th district, I am familiar with the monopoly Suddenlink has over high speed internet in my area. That monopoly isn't going away anytime soon, and it would be wrong to allow them to keep the monopoly and force internet users and companies to pay more for access to the networks. The only fair way to address the situation is to treat the internet as a common carrier for all traffic just like the interstate is a common carrier for all automotive traffic. While competition would be nice, internet service providers are not choosing to compete to reduce price. Instead, mergers and price increases are the norm. Americans pay far more for their internet and get lower speeds than users in Europe or Japan or Korea, where internet service providers are better regulated.

—Samuel Crowley, Savannah, MO

PLEASE keep the internet free for ALL!

—Mary Huddleston, Chicago, IL

Do not to support this dangerous bill, H.R. 4752 keep the net neutral!

—David W. Smith, Hollywood, FL

You'll be killing innovation if you don't protect net neturallity.

—Mark Ouyang, Pleasanton, CA

Step back from the vomitorium and do the right thing here.

—Mr. Robert Hogue, Dallas, TX

MOTHER FUCKING STOP TRYING TO FUCK WITH NET NEUTRALITY. COMCAST AND VERIZON ARE A BUNCH OF FUCKING GREEDY MOTHER FUCKERS. WE'RE RANKED 15 of 16 ahead of only the Phillipines!

—Joshua Castaneda, San Francisco, CA

Please reject this bill. Net Neutrality is important. Please don't give even more powers to the providers.

—Duc Nguyen, San Jose, CA

We the people paid to develop the internet! Not any private or publicly traded has any right to decide what website or how fast it loads, for anyone!

—Mitchell Harty, Chowchilla, CA

The internet IS a public utility! It needs to be treated as such, regulated and made available to all.

—Kristyn Reid, choctaw, OK

Do not vote for this bill, it is anti-neutrality, anti-fairness and anti-freedom.

—Simon Sharda, Kansas City, MO

This is really important to me as a writer who relies on internet sources for information.

—Laura Joseph, Pasadena, CA

This is against common logic. There is no benefit to anyone except cable companies.

—Gautam Velayuthan, Elizabeth, NJ

The internet was created through public funding: taxpayer dollars, and should be treated as a public service.

—Donald Robinson, Chester Springs, PA

Stop letting profits matter more than people. Don't allow the Internet to be owned by a few when an open one benefits the whole world.

—Kristin M Leve, Albuquerque, NM

Keep an open neutral internet. People run the world not corporations. Let freedom ring!

—Frank Zedek, Novato, CA

Leave the internet alone.

—Fahad Zafar, Catonsville, MD

Please, as an IT professional my future depends on this. Don't harm the greater good of many for the profit of a few.

—Mitch Stehlin, Cincinnati, OH

[Insert something threatening here. Like taxes.]

—Shayna Feldstein, Cary, NC

START LISTENING TO THE PEOPLE. WE WANT TITLE 2

—William Meyer, Chesterfield, MO

enough is enough

—Robert Wiley, Hilliard, FL

I work for one the major ISPs in the nation and am completely against the deconstruction of Net Neutrality.

—Steven Kagler, Wheeling, WV

Please -- we are counting on you, don't let this happen!!

—Konstanty Hordynski, Oakland, CA

Ni TOLLS.

—Eugene Whitehead, Olympia, WA

It is every American's job to do what ever possible to maintain net neutrality...even yours! ISP's ARE common carriers, just like electrical companies, just like water utilities, just like phone carriers. Prove to your constituents (and all of us) that you are not a pawn of every lobbyist who comes breezing into Washington, period.

—Laurie D. Rhoten, Wichita, KS

I am sick and tired of this country lagging behind others when it comes to our infrastructure, ESPECIALLY the internet. ENOUGH IS ENOUGH.

—James D Creason II, Phoenix, AZ

This cannot be said too many times: The internet must remain equally available to all.

—Amanda Adams, Tacoma, WA

Keep the open Internet!

—Steve Core, DENVER, CO

Keep the internet open!

—John Hughes, Plattsburgh, NY

Net Neutrality assures democracy. Of course, everybody knows this and it unfortunately does not any longer make a darned bit of difference in the United States of America.

—Vincent J. Patti, Long Beach, CA

The internet is not a commodity to sell the the highest bidder while screwing the 99%.

—Donlon McGovern, Portland, OR

The net is for us all, you assholes!

—Shane L. McCune, Manhattan, KS

A vote against an open internet is a vote against American innovation from garages, dorm rooms, and kitchen tables across the nation.

—Joseph Sterling, Albuquerque, NM

We need the internet! Stop this now! Don't take our voice away!

—Lezlie L. Ringland, Denver, CO

Government for the people, by the people. Not for corporate interests, by corporate interests. Do the right thing.

—Menno de Boer, Redondo Beach, CA

If you want to cement the Congress's reputation as a bought and paid for lackey of big business, by all means pass this bill. If you want to maintain some credibility as representing the citizens of the nation, you will not only reject this bill, but encourage the FCC to regulate the Internet as a common carrier.

—Michael Kobb, Belmont, CA

Freedom of the press and free speech are at stake here. Do not fail us.

—Keri McKenxie, Albany, OR

A vote against the open internet is a vote against the great majority of your constituents. Are you truly a representative or just a shill for $$$ and big business?

—Steven Ventura, Taunton, MA

This insidious attempt to not simply undermine, but, ultimately, silence the global democratic exchange of ideas in the ceaseless pursuit of obscene profits is beyond contempt. It is toxic and will have devastating consequences for our nation.

—Darin Singleton, Los Angeles, CA

Keep Net Neutrality! Vote for an open internet. Say no to HR 4752.

—Shelley Allan-Cole, Portland, OR keep the net neutral, do not support this bill

—Merrick Davidson, Canoga Park, CA

Open internet is important--taking that away is just supporting corporate greed.

—L Jarrett, Alpharetta, GA

Keep the Internet FREE and EQUAL for all who can afford it now.

—Dee Hudson, Mentor, OH

We the People paid for the research to create it, therefore we the People are the owners. Thank you

—Luis Jerez, plainfield, NJ

A vote AGAINST this bill is what I expect from you.

—Barbara Palmer, Bradenton, FL

Citizens United and McCutcheon mean corporations and billionaires are already being allowed to drown out our voices during elections with their Money Megaphones. Don't allow them to drown us out on the internet, too. Please vote against HR 4752.

—William Swatos, Palm Desert, CA

Please. Stop letting companies run the government. This has all gotten so far out of hand.

—Vicki Garrison, Nashville, TN

Don't let yourself get bought by those cable bastards, stand up for the people who elected you.

—Chris Abbott, Bromley,

Put the people first and the lobbyist second on this bill. Don't go down in history as the congress that that gave away the Internet to the rich.

—Stan Makowskik, Aurora, CO

As elected representatives of the people, I hope you will support the people's protection of our internet!

—Deanne Rocchietti, Laguna Beach, CA

Do not let this happen...the internet must not be put into the hands of greed driven corporations. The net is a place for people to share info and ideas and not for greedy corporations like Comcast and such to milk for profit.

—, Littlestown, PA

remember dial-up? that was the fastest the net could ever get, according to the phone company. they were lying! they are lying now! DON'T PASS THIS BILL!

—James Lewis, Winfield, KS

A neutral internet is foundational to the advancement and development of the US. Keep the internet neutral and put the needs of the country ahead of the needs of corporations.

—Steve Owen, Warrenville, IL

Everyone should have equal access and speeds to the internet. Don't let the corporations have the upper hand. They're making enough money.
—Kristin Noel, Chichester, NH

If you are more interested in protecting the rights of these big corporations than protecting the interests of the people who put you in office, you don't deserve to be there at all.
—Jon Enge, Los Angeles, CA

Why would you take the internet away from the people and put it in to the hands of corporations? Are you not elected by the people? Want me to elect you? Don't destroy our net neutrality if you want to be in office again.
—Melissa E Wallace, Mountain View, CA

Keep the internet free! The internet is the one place where we are all equal and perhaps that's why it has thrived so much over the last couple of decades. A free internet has become an integral part of American life and world. Ending Net Neutrality is an idea born of greed not need. Have we forgotten where we came from and what we stand for? Freedom of the Internet is as important as the Freedoms that I and countless others fought for. KEEP THE INTERNET FREE!!!
—Theo Parsons, Jupiter, FL

Fuck the likes of Bob Latta and all those similarly inclined sycophants beholden to big business that seek to screw over the Internet!
—John Witte, Portland, OR

Internet is all about communication! Preserving the the internet for equal access by all parties (net neutrality) is crucial to our continued economic leadership as a people,
—Paul Henry Dawson, Greensburg, PA

Please reject the doubletalk bill, H.R. 4752. This bill will eliminate the open internet. Thank you!
—Stephen Dahl, Kingston, RI

Please protect the open Internet and Net Neutrality. Vote against this bill. Thank you.
—Sandra Whiteknact, New York, NY

The people should be deciding, not you Mr. Latta. You may think you know what is right but you are wrong. Ever been told you are wrong? Get used to it.
—Jason Louisignau, Garden City, MI

I earn money to make up for the pension money that was stolen from my husband by writing articles on the internet. If this is made more difficult for me, are you going to restore my husband's $1,200 a month that was absconded with?
—Le Hunt, Port Wing, WI

Cable companies do not need more ways to monetize the overpriced service they already monopolize.
—Kurt Koch, Cincinnati, OH

I know that you have the wisdom to see what irreversible damage would ensue if this bill were passed, and I thank you in advance for your support.
—Erna Luerling, Norwich, CT

keep the internet open & accessible to all —Christine McGillen, Berlin, MD

I want internet neutrality and so should the FCC.

—Ms. Anne Haggerty, Chicago, IL

Please do not make the internet another corporate playground for cheating American's out of their own participation in their communities.

—William H Sterner, Chicago, IL

DO NOT DO THIS. I will vote you out and I will actively campaign and fund your opposition if you do this.

—Megan McKinney, Las Cruces, NM

Do not "fix" what is unbroken. Stand up for innovation!

—Harrison Pak, Los Angeles, CA

If H.R. 4752 were to become law, most of us in Maine would end up on the short end of the stick. The law would benefit big corporations, rich urbanites, and big advertisers, allowing them and their opinions unfettered access to American citizens. The rest of us, which includes most citizens of Maine, would suffer higher prices, slower speeds, and reduced access to the marketplace of ideas. Rather than creating an Internet that has a high speed lane for the rich and gridlock for everyone else, lets focus on increasing the number of lanes on the Information Superhighway, enabling everyone to safely travel the Net at high speeds. Thank you in advance for thinking of the citizens instead of the rich corporate interests.

—Fred Griffith, Houlton, ME

The internet is a utility. Classify it as such.

—Erik Bogle, Houston, TX

don't you dare forsake the citizens who elected you in favor of more corporations' demands like you've done on sane gun control measures, immigration reform and citizen's united!! DON'T YOU DARE!!!

—SMark Jobe, Santa Barbara, CA

An internet free from artificial throttles is vital to our thriving democracy, facilitating the open exchange of ideas among its users. Please don't let ISP's place barriers to communication on the electronic superhighway.

—John Davis, Saco, ME

Support the people, not corporations. They are monopolistic at this time in history and our congress made it that way.

—Chris Wrinn, Milford, CT

Everyone deserves to be treated the same on the internet.

—Sara Obrien, Willits, CA

Freedom of speech and access to ideas are central to democracy and morality.

—Deborah Kelly, Denver, CO

Net Neutrality = Free Speech

—Brian L. Gunn, Auburn, WA

Really people? Let's fix this! :-)

—Rhenn Cahoe, Watseka, IL

It time we put a stop to big money controlling everything. Do not allow the death of Net Neutrality

—Robert Smith, Seattle, WA

The will of the people please!!!!
—Philip Gulotta, Red Wing, MN

Please do the right thing for the people of this country instead of the corporations.
—Catherine Penfold, Astoria, NY

The internet is too important for our modern-day culture to allow it to be closed off, which this bill would do.
—Sally Thomas, Charlotte, NC

This appears to be a historic vote. Please vote against HR 4752.
—Peter Miller, Durham, NH

Congress is filled with nothing but paid off fascist conspirators
—Dan Astro, Sedro Woolley, WA

This is despicable! Rep. Latta should feel ashamed of himself for this blatant farce.
—R C S, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Congress! Stop being corporate lackeys! Work for the people like your job description says. If you vote this bill in, you are responsible for killing the free exchange of ideas! Stand up for once in your life FOR the people and do your jobs!
—Brad Calderwood, Seattle, WA

Please do not kill net neutrality. We can be better than letting this country be run by monopolies, but it takes non-corrupt, high level officials to truly stop this. Please don't make it even more painfully obvious that only the top 5% runs this country.
—Katie Azbill, AUSTIN, TX

Open minds require an open internet with equal access for all. It's an issue of freedom of speech FAR more than is the freedom to give unlimited amounts of money to political campaigns.
—Laurie "Ryan" Norton, Durango, CO

Americans have lost faith that their governmental representatives have real Americans' interests at heart. Give us a reason to believe in you. Vote to protect net neutrality. Rep Latta is surely being bought off by ISPs; don't support his corruption.
—Alison Ruge, Denver, CO

The Internet is the most used means of person to person communication in this country. To pretend that it is only a broadcast medium and doesn't need to be maintained as a level playing field for all, as this bill will, would be devastating to the Free Speech rights of Americans and to our economic competitiveness.
—William McAvinney, Cambridge, MA

Net Neutrality now and forever!
—Lauren M. Tozzi, Seattle, WA

Please show your support for an open internet.
—Alison Tamminga, Goleta, CA

Kindly serve the interests of United States citizens, not corporations.

—Will McCollum, Sebastopol, CA

The internet belongs to the people. It was developed by taxpayer funds through the military and the universities. Don't protect corporate power this time. Keep Internet Neutrality.

—Mary Shesgreen, Elgin, IL

Congress, please do not Ruin Net Neutrality. All you seem to do is make things more difficult!!!!

—stuart Getz, Ogdensburg, NJ

This is another bill, much like Citizens United, that can be a REAL game changer - we NEED our elected officials to act on behalf of their constituents.

—Angel Rodriguez, Elizabeth, NJ

The internet is a common carrier, and is like a utility. There should be no preferred access, either by policy or by finance. All should have equal and equal quality access to the internet.

—Elizabeth Davis, Sterling, VA

Get Comcast, Verizon, AT&T and others out of your pocket and do the right thing...For the consumer! Put broadband Internet providers back under Title II of the Communication Act. We are watching to see what you do!

—Stan Gershon, Marietta, GA

I believe in the entrepreneurial spirit that marks American enterprise. I do not want to see it blunted, which this bill would surely do. We need all of our ideas to have an opportunity to shine. That's the American way!

—Neal Hemphill, Woodside, NY

Protect democracy. Make internet companies common carriers and protect internet neutrality.

—e Gundlach Gundlach, bellport, NY

DON'T DO IT.

—Judy Thayer, Cullman, AL

As a web designer and developer please do not support this bill.

—Khalid Robinson, Los Angeles, CA

It's a service like supplying long distance phone lines or TV stations you wouldn't let a big company tell you what the rules are going to be that's why we have the FCC!

—Glen Garant, Dearborn, MI

Corporate control is killing the consumer by squeezing every dollar they can out of us. We are all humans so should be treated as such instead of pay to play!

—Susan Boyce, Myrtle Creek, OR

Its against everything you used to stand for

—Gabriela Montiel, Miami, FL

Reject this bill

—Elishka Kocendova, New York, NY

With all due respect, Bob Latta needs to have, as we say, 'his head examined.' Net Neutrality is POLITICALLY IMPERATIVE, so this ridiculous bill of Latta's MUST BE ROUNDLY DENOUNCED & DEFEATED.

—Mark Phillips, Richland Hills, TX

Please listen to the American people for once vs. the lobbyists for the telecoms that would benefit from the destruction of Net Neutrality.

—Brett William Franklin, Reno, NV

Represent the people and not big business.

—McKenzie F Kleinman, Huntington, WV

Neutrality means that I (little ole me) have as much speed, bandwidth, etc. available as the big corps. (Verison, AT&T, etc.) I'm sorry I can't give you big bags of money like they do but IT IS YOUR JOB TO PROTECT ME . NOT THEM.

—Allen Hill, Palm Springs, CA

We the People, Humanity and Freedom First!

—T Earls, Jasper, AL

Any profits to be made from internet technology must never be directed to corporations.

—Doug Jacques, Ottawa,

leave our internet alone, please.

—Bob Watland, paso Robles, CA

Please provide one of the only places in the U.S. that has some remaining semblance of freedom of speech.

—Nancy Baer, Sedona, AZ

This is the wrong decision. Vote for this, and your time in office will end shortly thereafter.

—Brian McCarthy, Paoli, PA

Leave us alone Government!

—Anthony Fabozzi, Joplin, MO

A lack of open internet would make me unable to support my family, forcing me to lose any margin on services i provide.

—Mr. Joshua Duplantier, Arlington Heights, IL

Net Neutrality = Net Equality, The American Way

—Donna Besser Stone, Boynton Beach, FL

Keep our internet free!

—Michael Quimby, Miami, FL

This is a perfect and perfectly obscene display of political bribery american style. If this happened in, say, Italy, or Russia, there would be no question that one would frame the discussion around a culture of corruption endemic to the culture and which produces a stench around its political class. American myopia however does not like to look at how things really are here. The fact that such a bill could even think of being bought before the house floor reflects a level of cynicism and indifference to a culture of payback that strangles Washington and wreaks havoc with the society outside DC. You should in no way support this supine genuflection before big media.

—ben x lichtin, city, NY

The internet needs to stay neutral--big business interference will kill the innovation that the internet has encouraged since its inception, as well as putting jobs and the economy at risk. Please let the FCC do its job to secure net neutrality!

—Miranda L Lloyd, Payson, AZ

Alien corporate heads.

—Gretchen Boise, Salem, VA

Internet service providers must be classified as common carriers. This bill is a kick in the pants and needs to be stopped!

—Barbara McDonald, Wyandotte, MI

We need new legislation that protects an open internet; legislation written by people who understand the complexity of the internet. Retrofitting existing law written to address telecommunications is insufficient in considering the totality of difference the internet represents.

—Ryan Engley, Burlington, VT

Don't make any motions to upset the freedom of the internet.

—James T Highwind, Muskegon, MI

Please support Net Neutrality

—Derek Shane, St Louis Park, MN

The cooperation finally taking over? I can't believe that you would screw over ALL of America just for a quick buck, and a big FUCK you to Verizon, Comcast, and AT&T.

—William Drewry, Lewisville, TX

If you think America is about opportunity and a level playing field for the little guy, you must vote against this bill. If you think it's just about your ability to raise enough money to get re-elected, then shame on you!

—Chris Dickey, Austin, TX

STOP THE INVASION OF PRIVACY LEAVE THE NET ALONE

—Pat Metsinger, LENEXA, KS

I'm sure someone in Corporate America is trying to figure out how to charge for breathing air. Let's stop the trend.

—Beth Birnbaum, Flushing, NY

Please preserve net neutrality.

—Eleanor D. Kinney, Indianapolis, IN

Please let us retain this one remaining freedom

—Helen Wasson, Seward, AK

Don't be 'bought out' again by the corporate lobbyists; stand up for the general citizenry.

—Charles Clark, Platteville, WI

I am pro-business, pro-free-market and 100% for Net Neutrality. It is the key to a free market and a thriving economy. This bill is a naked power-play by a few large monopolies to secure control. It is anti-competitive and bad for the economy Please don't stifle businesses and do not support this bill. We need to do everything we can to support a free and open internet. Broadband internet should be brought under Title II to secure a competitive marketplace for businesses and free speech.

—William Purdy, Bainbridge Island, WA

We need to enforce the Sherman Anti Trust laws again. We are the land of no competition.

—Edward Tharp, Riverside, CA

Don't let this happen! The internet should NOT be controlled by large corporate companies!! It shouldn't be controlled at all!!

—Nancy Asciak, ,

Net neutrality has extended the right of free speech and free listening far beyond it's original scope. I can see why authority would fear this and try to crush it. It seems they are ready to destroy the Internet in order to control it. The internet is one of the very few things that was done right the first time. Don't screw it up.

—null null, New York, NY

Broadband providers need to be under TITLE II. Their control over access would only cost consumers and unduly burden businesses. Are you that stupid that you don't understand or are you that corrupt that you have been bought off?

—Brian Williams, Mount Laurel, NJ

A major force for our democracy is under threat. We must not allow for the abandonment of net neutrality.

—Richard Hill, New Haven, CT

Thank you!

—Rachel McCook, Memphis, TN

How you vote will affect how I vote next election.

—Jason Salsbury, Little Elm, TX

Millions of us are watching very closely, those who don't support an open internet are going to lose votes, besides that, supporting it is the right thing to do.

—William Haley, Tye, TX

As a journalist who has a master's degree in public administration, I deplore people not having equal access to information. That isn't how news or any other information is supposed to work. Equal access is necessary for us to keep up with what is going on and giving businesses and other special interests a "freeway" to the Net while the rest of us plod along on the equivalent of city streets is inappropriate. The Internet needs to be classified as a public utility. Period. Thank you for taking my opinion into account. I appreciate it.

—Anne Seebaldt, Milford, MI

This is my third email to Congressman Johnson requesting he oppose Rep. Latta's bill that would end Net Neutrality.

—Alpha O Stacer, Lilburn, GA

Keep the playing field open for We The People. The majority of the Supreme Court Justices had the misplaced audacity to rule that money is speech because - Corporations! and the 1%. Well, when you sell our rights to free speech via the open internet, you unfairly muzzle and restrict our right to free speech. You really, really cannot have it both ways!

—Lorraine Farrell, Bloomington, IN

An open internet for all is far more important than increased Netflix streaming speeds - and far more important to democracy than any contributions you may receive from internet and cable companies. I urge you to do the right thing and kill this bill.

—Rachael Vorberg-Rugh, Vancouver, WA

A vote for this bill removes from the citizenry one major way to communicate. We are already eaten and jailed when we gather in public to express our views. I am sure you understand that this bill is repressive and takes away our freedom, what is left of it.

—Virginia Soules, Brooklyn, NY

NESARA

—Shaun Walker, Chandler, AZ

no means no

—Wayne Scott, Olympia, WA

The internet service providers should be publicly owned utilities. What gives these corporations the right to govern citizens' access to information and community? "Monopoly" is not a strong enough word. If we must have private overlords, then they should at least be "common carriers," neutral to content. If they complain that the system can't serve up enough bandwidth, then that's just another excuse to get rid of the corporate ISPs. They've been draining so much money out of the system, and at the same time structuring a system that doesn't serve the public interest, but serves the interests of the owners and stockholders. Reject Congressman Latta's bill.

—Florindo Troncelliti, New York, NY

This is one we will remember in November!!!

—Dr Charles Reisen, South Orange, NJ

Democratic events such as the Arab Spring would be far less likely with an imbalanced Internet. American tax dollars were used to create the Internet and should support its neutrality.

—Corbett Kroehler, Orlando, FL

America is a leader. We INVENTED the Internet. It was invented by government agencies, and with the help of advanced research projects at public universities, it has blossomed into the wonderful tool all of us enjoy today. Private enterprise didn't invent the Internet. In fact, private enterprise would have NEVER pursued the research, development, and deployment of something they could not own, control, and profit from. Never. So, WHY are we even considering ceding control of the most powerful tool democracy has ever known to private entities like AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, et al? They're merely common carriers - line providers, and should be regulated as such. I strongly urge you to restore full government oversight and regulation of these monopolies. Furthermore, we must insist that they cannot be in both the common carrier business AND media/content businesses. They're welcome to be in either - just not both!

—Hans Rupert, Rockford, IL

Stop it!!!

—Gabriel Nieves, Miami, FL

For once think of your constituents before your campaign contributors. I do still vote although it's bills like this that make me wonder why. Then again, that seems to be the goal - keep citizens under educated and under informed so the plutocrats who have purchased you can continue to get whatever they want regardless of consequences to the the rest of society - known among the 1%ers as "smurfs".

—Tim Isom, San Francisco, CA

Congress - Corporate SHILLS!

—Lee Schondorf, Yoncalla, OR

Net Neutrality is a foundational ingredient for future innovations!

—Kip Boyle, Covington, WA

Don't let private interests control this important source of American freedom.

—Ona L Harshaw, Portland, OR

Please do what we ask instead of going against the wishes of the American people yet again.

—Steven Alvarado, New York, NY

There's far too much arrogant surveillance of everyday people going on in this world

—Alexander Cunningham, EDINBURGH,

Internet service providers are there to serve subscribers, not content providers. In no way should they be allowed to accept payment from content providers to speed or slow any traffic.

—David B. Chandler, Newark, DE

If you intend to preserve equality in this country, such as it is at this late date, you MUST not support H.R. 4752. The companies of this country have enough power as it is. Don't give them the internet as well.

—Kelly Cronin, Chicago, IL

Hey everybody - it's supposed to be of the people, by the people, and for the people - don't forget that!

—Sonja Stahlhut, Durham, NC

One might call this the last knife driven in to democracy... We need to maintain open lines of communication without obstruction.

—Jan Aszman, Goldendale, WA

A free and open internet under net neutrality is vital for free enterprise and innovation which in turn is vital for a robust and vibrant economy.

—Douglas Kister, Hatboro, PA

When the House is trying to take away from the the FCC one of its categorically natural and incumbent regulatory powers, isn't that evidence enough that the Net Neutrality fight is not hysteria and really is about protecting the freedom of a communication medium from Corporate domination? If the opposite was true, then no one in the House would fear an objective decision from the FCC, without encroachment from the House.

—Colin Purdy, san diego, CA

THIS IS ILLEGAL & IMMORAL AND YOU WILL PAY FOR DENYING FREEDOM OF SPEECH and JUST WAIT TILL WE START AGAIN !

—Alita DeMarco, Ypsilanti, MI

We, The People, are declaring our Freedom. A free internet is part of that.

—Judith Gonzales, ,

The only way you can vote for this bill is if you dreamed of being a congressman just so you could sell out the public trust for the profits of a few megacorporations

—Michael Gagliardi, Tallahassee, FL

I have Comcast cable and that's bad enough. To have Comcast, AT&T and other big providers able to control the internet is a threat to democracy itself

—Karl Meller, Minneapolis, MN

do not kill freedom of speech on the internet as it was done on televised content.

—Fredy Palma, Burbank, IL

This is a great opportunity to demonstrate that you support and represent the public rather than corporations.

—Donald Cadenhead, Austin, TX

HR 4752 allows big interests to control what the ordinary US citizen sees. Why is the voice of any single person/entity more important than any other? Why do rich person/entity get to control the last mile? Stop 4752!!

—Joseph Talafous, Chicago, IL

It is apparent that Rep Bob Latta has the interests of AT&T, Comcast and Verizon in this bill and not an open Internet!!! Just why is that, you have to ask!!!!

—Hans W. Hoffmann, Miami, FL

This will effectively put many businesses, out of business. This hurts all small businesses that relay on the internet for commerce.

—Tyler Wade, Louisville, KY

What's next, different levels of water purity and flow? NO, I pay for Internet (inclusive) at a particular speed and do not want that divvied up to the highest bidder .. Net Neutrality should not even be up for question, it Must remain neutral. This country has got to stop the "profit madness".!!!!

—, Beaumont, TX

Please protect Net Neutrality reject his bill and support a decision for the FCC to reclassify Internet Service Providers as common carriers. This is so important.

—Thomas Lopez, Kalamazoo, MI

This is monopolistic extortion, plain and simple.

—Anthony Scherba, San Carlos, CA

Open internet for all!!!

—Maja Margeta, Bronx, NY

Don't let big corps ruin American freedom!!!

—Jeffrey Ellenberger, New York, NY

This is one vote constituents will remember this November. Vote against H.R. 4752

—Terry grunwald, Raleigh, NC

I would also like to add, ending net neutrality ONLY benefits the bottom line of ISPs at the expense of every single other American - in ways we can't even imagine. A vote against net neutrality will be seen by history as a significant example of our failed Republic - one that was unable to act in the public interest in the face of campaign money.

—Andy Fry, Indianapolis, IN

PLEASE VIGOROUSLY OPPOSE THIS BILL!!!

—Carol A. Bouldin, Calimesa, CA

We need our net neutrality where all are protected equally and the rich and corporate interests don't get special access. They are already taking over our elections and government because our right-wing Supreme Court has determined that money is speech. Bullshit! Stop them from getting priority on the open internet.

—Sharon Willmann, San Antonio, TX

Humanity will rise or fall along with the Internet. Don't doom our species.

—Jeremy Turner, Santa Cruz, CA

I get that most of you have no idea what net neutrality is or why it's a big deal, so for once, just believe your constituents and don't let the telecom companies have their way.

—Cathleen Thompson, Woodbury, TN

You're probably not going to read this, but this bill would be a key stepping stone to making US internet suck more than it already does. I don't care how much you are getting paid by any of these 3 companies, you can help the United States of America suck less.

—Joel Williamson, State College, PA

With the consolidation of our mainstream media outlets any restrictions placed on an open internet will be phenomenally detrimental to the average citizen's ability to obtain an unbiased news source. Additionally, the consolidation of internet service providers into megalithic oligopoly threatens to engender a pure pay to play network structure that will only benefit the very largest of companies. I thank you for your attention and for your support in resisting this bill.

—John Barney, Rindge, NH

Google and many other companies are opposed to this bill. AT&T, Comcast and Verizon are in favor. They ruined cable by forcing consumers to buy packages including many unwanted shows in order to get the shows we do want. Don't let them do the same to the Internet.

—David Chernow, Barrington, IL

keep the internet free. You are elected to represent the people who elected you NOT Verizon & Comcast. This is a big deal that people will not stand for!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—virginia Karwel, Dresher, PA

Why are you pretending to listen to us?

—Janie Macfarland, Bisbee, AZ

Please listen to your constituents and not the lobbyists. Please do the RIGHT thing for the future. Please do not compromise the open internet.

—Cari Hawthorne, Grand Rapids, MI

I can't afford HR 4742!!

—Bruce Cox, Brevard, NC

Please keep the internet open. Don't let the ISPs buy the votes. Many people are already totally frustrated with them and their monopoly.

—Mrs. Roberta M Green, Gurnee, IL

Do what's right for a free and open Internet. It's the most powerful communication tool ever made, and we must preserve it!

—Paul Bryant, Birmingham, AL

KILL THE BILL

—Marian Bobyak, Collingswood, NJ

What the hell are you doing?

—Adam Wykle, Wonder Lake, IL

once again big corporations screwing this country so sick of this

—Deborah West, Sedro Woolley, WA

Nothing less than our democracy relies upon a free press, which in 2014 = net neutrality

—Sherry Thomas-Healy, Mill Valley, CA

Don't kill access to free speech.

—Christopher mcgean, Phoenix, AZ

The. Internet and the airwaves belong to the people!!!

—Gerald and Mary Lou DeVane, Palm Coast, FL

This bill is a horrendous idea whose only purpose is to line the pockets of a few unscrupulous businessmen.

—Glenn Alford, Pocatello, ID

This is essentially extortion and the people and the country suffer from it. Please do not support this.

—Claron Hayden, Brooklyn, NY

The internet is my only safe zone. Don't take that from me.

—Clayton D. Sorden, Vancovuer, WA

I have reason to believe that Bob Latta is a communist. Why else would he do this?

—John Adams, Southington, OH

Please don't destroy the most level playing field left in America. Protect it, or be judged by history.

—Nick Criscuolo, Salem, MA

If you vote for this bill, you better hope the Internet gets destroyed before your next election.

—Paul McQuesten, Leander, TX

Internet services are critical infrastructure for every small business from VOIP to e-commerce. Please support the job creators in your district by preserving our vital open access to markets and customers.

—D wheeler, Roanoke, VA

Corporations have slowly taken over our lives and if they have their way we will lose our last freedom: The neutral internet. Please have pity on your children and make sure that the internet is completely neutral.

—Richard Wagner, Vista, CA

Freedom and Love for all !!

—Charles Bramhall, Hanover Park, IL

Please do not make the means for common access to communications and commerce something other than a common carrier utility

—Meg Kidd, Keene, NH

Do NOT support this bill! Support Net Neutrality and the reclassification of Internet service providers as common carriers.

—, Great Falls, MT

Broadband service is a utility, and should be regulated as such. Preserve liberty, preserve the open internet. Giving preference to the rights of corporations over individuals is a perversion of the letter and spirit of our constitution.

—Michael Davis, Seattle, WA

We must classify Internet service providers as common carriers. It is a utility just like electricity, gas, and phone, that must be protected.

—Barclay A Dunn, Clifton, NJ

Please take action to classify internet service providers under Title II of the Communications Act

—Kartikeya Iyer, Campbell, CA

Just say no to your corporate pimps who are lobbying (bribing) you and all of your colleagues to segregate the internet for the benefit of the monopoly's aka. internet access providers

—Nathaniel J Jackson, Westampton, NJ

Please help save the internet. I don't understand why this is so hard to get right.

—Ashley, Chugiak, AK

Congress: your job is to represent US citizens, not the service providers. Net Neutrality is good for everyone.

—Larry Lohrman, Salem, OR

Screw AT&T, Comcast and Verizon - if you really want to get them out of your life and off your computer STOP GIVING THEM YOUR MONEY - it's THAT simple. I reduced my Comcast to Internet only and watch Hulu and Netflix. Let them know you are reducing your bill because of their bullshit tactics and attacking their own customer base.

—John Bidleman, SEBASTOPOL, CA

The bill would stifle innovation, and start up businesses. H R 4752 would also limit free speech on the internet, which is unconstitutional. Again, I urge you to vote no on H.R. 4752.

—Joel V Fears Jr, Daytona Beach, FL

Tax payers money developed the internet, and it would be wrong for any corporation to charge a premium to us to use it.

—Clifton G. Jackson, Stewart, TN

Net Neutrality is the last bastion of democracy. Let the internet be a net, not a hierarchy.

—Eve Neuhaus, San Luis Obispo, CA

Thank you.

—Gediminas Vidugiris, Fitchburg, WI

We need a regulated, level playing field to encourage technological innovation, not sweetheart deals for industry insiders. I demand real net neutrality, and regulation under Title II of the Communications Act.

—Fred Pierre, Kent, OH

Open internet is what made the internet great and allowed so much of the innovation that has changed the way we do almost everything. Please keep it that way.

—Sam Selfridge, Santa Barbara, CA

Don't all US citizens deserve an equal shot at getting data without some large company dictating what rate or if at all you can access this data. What happened to "Land of the Free" ??

—Fred O Rourke, LAFAYETTE, LA

This will destroy the internet and restrict a lot of freedoms we have. The internet is run off of freewill and new ideas. Without net neutrality a lot of the things that make the internet what it is will die taking the internet with it.

—Shango Osayande, West Orange, NJ

Please save the open internet.

—Sam Lindberg, Bishop Hill, IL

c'mon. really. i mean, c'mon.

—Andrew Barger, Lexington, SC

I believe that Internet should be a regulated utility, similar to electricity or water. This has been a successful model in other countries.

—Aaron Sagray, Campbell, CA

Reject this bill. Protect Net Neutrality.

—Annette, Genoa, OH

do you represent me, and fellow citizens like me, or the special interest groups that liberally spread money around congress?

—Peter Smullen, Kissimmee, FL

You're supposed to protect the public interest. Do your job, not those of the big telecom industry.

—James Barbu, ,

It appears the fox is "guarding" the henhouse. An industry lobbyist in charge of the FCC? Bad call. Do not support this bill! Keep our internet OPEN!

—Sonia Wilson, Sacramento, CA

We are letting the corporations rule all aspects of our lives. Enough is enough.

—Nora Gyetko, White Plains, NY

The net should stay neutral, It should not be prioritized by companies by who the most to have faster access. We the people need the freedom to choose which site we want to see or go to at the same rate of speed as some big name company. Its not fair to us or the small business. The European countries do not allow what you are proceeding to allow here. All your doing is bowing down to big companies , you don't need to listen to them. You need to listen to for once. We know what we need and what we want. and sure isn't following big companies like comcast, at&t and verizon. We don't need someone restricting us, then charging us more money to access the internet. we don't need some one saying you can go to these sites or have a bundle for these sites. Our internet is our library , we learn , we watch, we chat, we travel. Your going to let big companies block us from this.? Internet is not cable nor is something a phone company can break up either. its own entity.

—Tracy, Independence, MO

Why do members of Congress do everything in their power to pass legislation harmful to the American people, the people they theoretically represent? Please reject Rep. Latta's bill.

—Kathleen La Chance, Anderson, CA where is my freedom of speech, insured by the first amendment, if net neutrality is altered?

—Vicki Leidner, san francisco, CA

Protecting Net Neutrality helps support democracy.

—Martha Hill, Ann Arbor, MI

My extended family and I respectfully, earnestly and urgently request that Congress reject this bill in order to protect real Net Neutrality. We trust that the most intelligent, thoughtful, honest, upright and truly democratic members of Congress will vote against this pernicious bill that would prevent the FCC from reclassifying Internet service providers as common carriers. We are counting on their good judgement and thank them in advance. Sincerely, Christina Roberts (A.M. Harvard 1961, Woodrow Wilson Fellow) and family

—Christina Roberts, ,

This change will affect not only you, but your children and their children. Don't make Internet and USA the "Land of the slaves (of AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, etc.)." It is your choice and decision to keep our freedom and neutrality.

—Eduardo Eduardo Hernandez Hernandez, Mexico,

Please stand up against the monopolization of American life.

—Linda Bridges, Denver, CO

I'm a perfect example of small business owners who will be harmed by what the ISPs are threatening to do. I'm trying to start an online media company. I can't pay myself yet, let alone a special fee to get my content to my audience using the internet access they and I already pay for. Additionally, I consult with churches who use the internet to live-stream their services. Without net neutrality, they will also be penalized in their attempts to help people. Please stop the ISPs. We need net neutrality.

—Paul Clifford, Nicholasville, KY

Dear Members of Congress, "Just dont do it please". Thanks,

—Jon Ward, Ashland, OH

Do the right thing! After all, it was taxpayers' money that funded research fo rthe internet.

—Major Charles Middleton,Sr., USAF,Retired, Chicago, IL

Seriously? Don't you have more important work to do than block the FCC?

—George Georgalis, Mountain View, CA

We've been allowing the big corporations to become mega-monopolies. We have to move back to the anti-trust and anti-monopoly laws. Bigger is NOT better for the citizens of this country, and not for the denizens of the world.

—Darby Tarr, CARTHAGE, NY

I have worked in IT since the first computers were connected via phone wires. We started with modems and unrestricted connections. Do not let companies take over just because they now control the routers and connections. Those lines are a public connection just as phone lines were public utilities.

—Brian Silver, South San Francisco, CA

Don't sell out to big companies!! Protect Real Net Neutrality!! Do right by the people!!

—Neena Azadi, New York, NY

I am totally opposed to Rep Bob Latta's bill, H.R. 4752, or to any bill, that would prevent the FCC from classifying internet service providers under Title II, Communications Act, such classification being the one way to protect Net Neutrality. The fact that such a bill as Latta's stands any chance of passing given the overwhelming support for REAL net neutrality in the nation's populace is further discouraging evidence of the increasing disconnect between voters at large and their elected representatives. I urge Congress to say NO to the floodgate of corporate lobbying efforts aimed at destroying Net neutrality, and to bills such as Latta's, and instead attend to the job of protecting the democratic principles intrinsic to REAL Net neutrality. Thank you for this opportunity to express my view. Jane Adan

—Jane Adan, Carmichael, CA

Keep the internet fucking free!!

—Zachary Merwin, Martin, TN

Please do the right thing.

—Brian Lamprecht, Marquette, MI

This is one more step down that slippery slope of authoritarianism, cutting off access to unpopular speech by opposition political groups, among other things. This should never have been proposed, let alone pass. I follow these issues, and I vote. Please act accordingly, and support the interests of the vast majority of your constituents.

—Mary Behm, Berkeley, CA

Get real!

—Josh Kronske, Bozeman, MT

This is just another money grab by the internet providers. Current Internet providers enjoy monopolies or Duopolies in every city and thus enjoy tremendous profit margins. Coax(Tv Cable) and Copper(Telephone Wire) was installed decades ago and the cost to install ISP cable was recovered decades ago. The US ranks 31st in the world in Internet speed while paying the most. It is cheap and getting cheaper every day for providers to increase Internet speeds for everyone. Computers that are used by the ISP's are getting cheaper and faster everyday and it is very easy(Plug and Play) to add more computers to the ISP's servers room. Why open a can of worms by charging for fast lanes on the internet when the FCC does not have the tools or manpower to properly regulate the ISP's. We need to make all ISP's common carriers and regulate them like we did in the early decades of the telephone industry. The Internet is the encyclopedia of innovation and learning today and must be provided free to those that are unable to afford the outrageous prices that the current ISP's charge. I would even propose that that government, local, state or national declare Eminent Domain on all ISP's in the national interest. With public ownership of the entire Internet--when any new innovation occurs that is popular with the public, then the government/public will build the infrastructure to support it. It will be cheaper and more productive. Sincerely, Rick Severns

—Rick Severns, Long Beach, CA

It is bad enough that we are already paying so much for such a terrible service. If you take away net neutrality you will add to the divide of the halves and halves not. You will stifle economic mobility and the prosperity of our cities!

—Valerie Woel, Baltimore, MD

the net should remain free & unbiased

—Mohamed Ghanim, Vienna,

Please support the people and not the companies!

—Jeff Lowenfels, Anchorage, AK

THIS WOULD GIVE CORPORATIONS MORE POWER THAN THE voter's of AMERICA THE FREE AND HONEST FOR ALL

—Constance M Rodman, Seattle, WA

! Protect Real Net Neutrality!! Do right by the people!! Big companies have only profit in their mind. This will be a terrible disaster for 99.9 percent of the people!!!! Why give these unworthy companies power to control it all!! Tell FCC that they were created to protect and monitor not to sell it all!!!

—Deana Allice, Los Angeles, CA

This affects everyone. You, your family, your constituents, America's innovators, and worldwide communications and commerce. Most ISPs have a monopoly in areas they cover, the free market will not sort this out.

—Sarah Steever, Gold Bar, WA

Instead of discriminating against popular websites by charging them, or discriminating against independent websites by relegating them to a second tier, perhaps ISPs should say "thank you" to the businesses that are driving unprecedented demand for the access ISPs sell. I'm not convinced that Title II of the Communications Act is the only or best way to preserve network neutrality. But preserve it we must. Get creative.

—Alex Dempsey, San Francisco, CA

Fighting for the open internet is essential for the future of our democracy. The internet is one of the most important ways we communicate, and that significance is only rising as time goes on. Failing to recognize ISPs as common carriers is already a willful distortion of reality. But that absurdity is nothing compared to the damage it does to a nation if its citizens cannot rely on equal, reliable access to information and communication free of extortion. We are not China. We are Americans. We recognize the ability of individuals, governments, and businesses to coexist and be effective in each others' company WITHOUT compromising individual freedoms. We do not allow those with power, whether governments or corporations, to infringe on citizens' rights by telling us what we can or cannot hear or see, or impose unjustified burdens on knowledge itself to serve their own ends. A country that cannot rely on open communication and information cannot make decisions, cannot learn, cannot compete, cannot be unified. We are not that country. Let's keep it that way.

—Andrew Tourtellot, Bethesda, MD

I have my job because of open standards and net neutrality. Texas has a thriving startup culture because of open standards and net neutrality. My job and my industry stand to suffer if this bill passes. This bill is an example of power being taken from consumers and placed in the hands of a small group of companies. Historically, that has not ended well. It usually ends in bloated corporations over-reaching themselves and then looking to congress for a bailout (for instance the housing market a few years back). I'd rather just keep the bustling ecosystem that the open internet has created, making the American dream possible for people like me. The reason these companies don't want net neutrality is because it creates open markets they can not control. With net neutrality, new businesses can be created, new ideas are quickly shared, and no one is the curator of any of it. It is the free market ideology embodied. This simple fact makes their claim that an open internet prevents innovation both insulting and absurd. The end game for this is clear. These cable providers are losing market share to video on demand providers such as Netflix and Hulu. They want it back, and they apparently don't have the ability to do so by providing a quality product of their own. So instead of competing in the free market, they are attempting to create a closed market where they have the advantage. Once again, we've seen this before and it has not ended well. A balance of power between consumer, provider and government is the best solution. Net neutrality rules were providing that balance, and will again if the FCC can put those rules back in place. If you care about Texas, it's place in technology, and it's future growth as a place for new businesses to blossom, you will reject this bill. Texans are freedom loving, self reliant people, this bill stands against these cherished values.

—Joe Mills, Little Elm, TX

Internet needs to be free

—Andony Escudero, beamsville,

This is of great importance to me. I will hold any politician who will fight for Net Neutrality in high regard.

—Jim Witschey, Raleigh, NC

I believe this bill is a move in the wrong direction and would make net neutrality and keeping an open internet almost impossible with the restrictions in this bill. Please vote against the bill H.R. 4752.

—Diane B. Revell, Issaquah, WA

Do what you know is right, and represent the best interests and opportunities of the constituents who elected you!

—Lorraine Schmidt, Mountain View, CA

If Net Neutrality is killed, American business will suffer. A free and open Internet is important for the flow of trade.

—Robert Edwards, Kirkland, WA

REJECT THE BILL!

—Andrew Thomas, Antioch, TN

Do not pass this legislation because it is truly not the will of the people! Please do not be a corporate puppet.

—Bart Schidecker, Dayton, OH

Please! Vote no on this bill! A true open internet, is important to our freedom!

—Jacqueline Feulner, Arvada, CO

Someone needs to educate me on the purpose of government. If they are the tools of only the wealthiest then why have one...and by the way, I'm not an anarchist.

—William Deane, Greer, SC

Do you want the economy to suffer even further so that a few in the 1% can become even more wealthy at the expense of the taxpayers? That is what this bill will do. Net Neutrality is a right of the people. Keep it that way.

—Mark Kastello, Bloomington, IL

Please remember that Rep. Latta received $51,000 from cable company interest groups in the two-year period ending December 2013. It is my firm belief that Rep. Latta's neutrality in writing legislation on Title II of the Communications Act has been severely compromised by these donations from cable company interest groups. Rep. Latta's bill does not benefit the American people; it benefits the cable companies that have helped to bankroll him.

—Derek Spencer, Linthicum Heights, MD

This is a terrible bill. Do not support!

—Rebecca Mondorff, Hanover, PA

Please support Net Neutrality! Vote nay on H.R. 4752.

—Janet F Patruno, Santa Barbara, CA

It is time to stand up for the little guy and not the big corporations. Please do not vote for this bill.

—Daniel Etapa, Chicago, IL

Don't sell out to big greedy companies.. Protect Real Net Neutrality!! Do right by the people!! Big companies have only profit in their mind. This will be terrible disaster for 99.9 percent of the people!!!! Why give these unworthy companies power to control it all!! Tell FCC that they were created to protect and monitor not to sell it all!!!

—Andy Mellville, ,

A vote against this bill is a vote against creativity, innovation, and freedom of choice.

—Cherie Braun, Raleigh, NC

Allowing endless mergers among these tech giants is not the way to make sure all Americans have full broadband access to the Internet. Remember, the citizens of this country paid for the creation of the "information super highway". Now, we are expected to pay all over again, for the benefit of enormous, international media corporations?

—Scott Weaver, Las Cruces, NM

Stop siding with big money and start paying attention to citizens who which can vote you out of office...

—Barry Harding, Torrance, CA

I work for an regional internet service provider and I'm a subscriber to Netflix. These ideas of two things in common, net neutrality. The internet is a source of human knowledge, that extends to blogs, music and video and not just things like the Wikipedia, WebMD, and Government web sites. If the internet is limited in any areas it affects people and companies, like me, the company I work for and Netflix. Already Netflix is being levied to pay for bandwidth "they're using," however as an end user, I'm the consumer, not Netflix. I expect to receive access to the internet when I sign up for service from an internet service provider, like Verizon, Comcast or at&t. I work for a tier 2 internet service provider. In some cases we pay for the bandwidth we use, but a majority of our traffic is done through peer exchange. Our users want to get Youtube, like most end users, and we have therefore entered in to a peering agreement with Youtube. We have many peering agreements and we have to constantly improve our network so that customers have faster and more reliable connections to the internet. Destroying net neutrality will hurt companies like the one I work for, my blog, and Netflix. In some areas, like mine, I don't have choices. I can't choose to get internet service from more than one internet service provider. The tragedy is that the reason for this is because companies like Verizon and at&t have decided to let the copper infrastructure of America fall apart. They're only legally required to provide voice quality enough to basically be able to dial 911. Technologies like dsl and dial up require that the copper telephone network have good quality. In my area the copper is so old and not maintained that I can't even get internet through copper and most rely on the local cable internet company to provide my internet even when I work for an internet service provider that can provide service over copper. Fiber to premises isn't available in my area because local government doesn't want Verizon to tear up the streets to lay the fiber or have unsightly fiber boxes in the area. Cellular isn't an option either due to the high price of cellular service. I must rely on a competitor internet service provider to not limit my ability to access the data; my work, my blog or any other content that I need to get to from my the network of the company I work for. I really like the internet. It's an amazing concept. Let's not put an end to a two decade old piece of technology because the big names of the internet service provider world don't want to expand their own network to handle a purely organic growth in the industry. Let's model our selves after other first world counties that have opened the door to bandwidth to users. There are laws in place that prevent municipal or even non-profit internet service providers. In ending I just want to say, "Mr. Gorbachev - tear down this wall."

—Justin Maness, Goleta, CA

No more widening of the gap between wealthy corporations and the rest of us! Keep the playing field level!

—Amanda McNeill, Cortez, CO

Top selling us off!

—Tristan Hubsch, Hyattsville, MD

I for one am so TIRED of big corporations trying to control every aspect of life in the US for their own profit! Please protect net neutrality, these guys do NOT need any more money!

—Cari Chenkin, Citrus Heights, CA

An open internet that works for everyone is essential to an informed citizenry.

—Ellen Hertzmark, brookline, MA

PLEASE!

—Frank Malczewski, Midland, MI

Please , be honest, dont make people hangry, they can become not so quiet if we cut them their voice. Thank you. JF Musy

—Jean Musy, ,

Good grief! The public, who elect you and all Congress, emphatically want internet free and open. It should be classified as a Public Utility. Please do not let democracy die with this bill.

—Judith K. Bogdanove, Los Angeles, CA

Stand up for real Net Neutrality, Do Not Prohibit It!!!

—Dean Allen, Burley, ID

These new rules create a financial incentive to slow down internet service for everyone to force businesses to use the "fast lane" service.
—Matt Williams, Highland Falls, NY

It's time to stop supporting big business and support the people who vote.
—Shae L McKean, Leander, TX

It is absolutely imperative to keep the Internet free and open and a level playing field for all users. This can only be ensured by classifying Internet Service Providers as common carriers. Otherwise we will surely see a repeat of the railroad monopolies of the 1800s, which were finally broken up by the Interstate Commerce Act. The telecom giants, through consolidation and the large financial, technical and logistical barriers to entry they now present should not be allowed to charge different prices for the same service to different customers. Like the railroads, Comcast and Verizon are vertically integrating and also trying to enter the content production business, much as the railroad began buying steel mills and agricultural and manufacturing businesses. Naturally, they charged the businesses they owned less than the ones they didn't for rail transport, effectively giving them an unfair advantage. We have already seen the large ISPs increasing charges on content providers like Netflix. My personal opinion is that to be fair, ISPs should have the option of charging by Quality of Service and volume, like electric companies or courier services. But they must charge all users the same rates for the same QOS or volume. The danger from not deeming them common carriers is that their monopolies will spread beyond merely bandwidth provision and into entertainment, information and computer services until, like the railroads, they have stranglehold on all uses of the Internet. Please don't let this happen. Please oppose this bill.

—Joseph Cascio Jr., Stonington, CT

Let's protect the little guy for a change. Let's protect the entrepreneurs and the innovators over the corporate behemoths. Let's act in a vision of the republic that our founding fathers wanted and that is one where the rights of the one are protected from the onslaught of the many.
—Curtis Maurand, Saco, ME

I urge Congress to vote against Rep. Latta's bill, H.R. 4752 and continually stand up against the nonstop corporate lobbying efforts aimed at destroying REAL Net neutrality. Thank you, Virginia Kovak
—Virginia Kovak, Carmichael, CA

Please do the right thing.
—Duane Poncy, Portland, OR

The unintended (and intended) consequences to passing this bill will be enormous and untold. Please DO THE RIGHT THING!
—Karen Peterman, Austin, TX

Do NOT let companies start to give preferential treatment to those that pay a fee. KEEP THE PLAYING FIELD LEVEL FOR EVERYONE.
—John Henbest, Calabasas, CA

The internet should be a utility open to all! We need less ISP monopolies!
—Nathan Sullivan, Bloomington, IL

A free and open internet is essential to the growth and prosperity of all Americans, not just the corporations that want to regulate the system.
—Joel Steudler, Pittsburgh, PA

Do what is right or else!
—Mark W Pope, Houston, TX

The internet is a primary means of communication for most Americans, and all Americans should have equal access.
—Chris Sandow, LaFayette, GA

This is such an essential necessity, it boggles the mind that there would be thoughts of higher paying and faster use.

—Scott Chamberlin, Denver, CO

Net Neutrality protects FREE commerce. Don't contribute to killing the internet. Stop Bob Latta's bill , H.R. 4752 Vote against this bill. Please

—Lawrence Nordquist, Norwood, MA

I told you last time, do not let this law pass. It requires EVERYONE

—James Carsen, APO, AE

Please represent the people, not the corporations.

—Michelle Clark, Nehalem, OR

I do not want the internet controlled y people who don't give a f about my need for truthful information, a company tha will try to make it difficult for me to learn any information that does not reflect well on them...and by them I mean corporate entities. How anyone in their right mind can sider this is totally beyond me.

—Ms. Eva E. Hatch, Richmond, VA

Support freedom and the people, not the worst telecommunications companies on the planet.

—Roger Osborne, Redding, CA

thank you. I vote EVERY election.

—david O'Brien, Houston, TX

The NRA (Nasty Repugnican Assholes) do NOT own the airwaves, the world owns them. Tell the FCC to stop this nonsense, right now!

—Roger Shaff, Fremont, CA

Please work for the people; not the corporations!

—Matthew Pressnall, Seattle, WA

Why is there an attempt to give more money and, therefore, power to the Already rich and powerful and not protect we the people and improve our quality of life?

—Wendy Dart, Maiden Rock, WI

Defend the commonwealth!

—Gar and Christeene Hildenbrand, San Diego, CA

Don't, don't let corporations barricade the Internet's now-equal playing field! Vote against this bill that would prevent sensible reclassification.

—Ravenna Oakes, Lawrence, KS

This bill is a gift to AT& T Comcast and Verizon and poison for freedom of speech and democracy. Please don't Let Latta's greedy lobbyists get away with it!

—E Miranda, Oakland, CA

An open internet should be considered similar to a library. We also should not limit the capabilities and ingenuity of startups.

—Riker Jones, Norwalk, CT

Dear Chairman Wheeler: I have been following with interest your ongoing proceeding on how best to re-implement the “net neutrality” rules. Like you, I believe it is critical that we maintain a free and open Internet, where consumers are not blocked from accessing the websites of their choice and providers do not use their control over the last mile to stifle competition. As you consider how best to move forward to achieve these goals, I write to share my concerns with reports that the Commission may be considering achieving these goals by reclassifying broadband Internet access service as a “Title II” common carrier service. In the years that broadband service has been subjected to relatively little regulation, investment and deployment have flourished and broadband competition has increased, all to the benefit of consumers and the American economy. While we still have further to go to ensure that the benefits of broadband reach all Americans, I am concerned that opening the door to subjecting broadband service to a wide array of regulatory burdens and restrictions, including imposing Title II, might halt this progress. I respectfully urge you to consider the effect that regressing to a Title II approach might have on private companies’ ability to attract capital and their continued incentives to invest and innovate, as well as the potentially negative impact on job creation that might result from any reduction in funding or investment. I share your goals of keeping the Internet open to all. I do not believe that a Title II approach is the best means of achieving this goal for our country. Thank you for your work on this very important issue.

—Saika Octavien, Pompano Beach, FL

Don't do it. This is a dangerous road to trend down, this country needs better than this.

—Micah Menefee, Winter Park, FL

This is an important vote and I hope you will vote for the public good instead of more concentration of power in corporate entities. The internet belongs to all of us. It is a vital part of our country's infrastructure.

—Susanna Winters, Raleigh, NC

The internet as an enterprise vehicle will be more successful with net neutrality, as millions more people will have access to a free and open internet.

—Michael Grish, Austin, TX

Leave us alone !

—Kevin Kupser, Phoenix, AZ

Help protect net neutrality by voting against this bill. Thank you. Margery Armstrong

—Margery Armstrong, Great Neck, NY

I own a small business that has a better mousetrap, not a real mousetrap but a figurative one. I rely on a free and open internet to bring my better mousetrap to market. It is the last bastion of free market in this country. If you allow these mega corporations to disembowel the internet and allow them to decide if I am allowed to compete or at what level I may compete, I may as well lay off my employees and shut my doors. Please keep the internet free, it's the only real freedom left in this country. P.S. I make electric on-road vehicles, that is my better mousetrap. You can't make gas on your rooftop, you can make electricity.

—Tim Foster, Spokane, WA

Be on the side of freedom.

—Leksi, Yukon, OK

The internet's infrastructure should be treated like a public utility. No fast lanes, or slow lanes, just a single lane. Treat it like public water supplies, electricity generation, etc.

—Robert Reichard, Olympia, WA

I own a one-woman online business. I depend on the level playing field of the Internet to be and stay in business. The vast majority of Americans and businesses want a free and open Internet. The only people who don't are those associated with a handful of corporations that would profit from the proposed legislation. Do the right thing. Ya'll are on thin ice already based on other acts of favoring greedy corporations.

—Jennifer Weber, Sutton, AK

The internet should be treated as any other PUBLIC UTILITY.

—M Garrett, South Jordan, UT

Seriously guys? This literally ruins the internet. Its not just some thingie to fuss with.

—Clifton Brett, Carrboro, NC

Will the pro-corporate prostitution please stop! Dump Media Whore Bob Latta's bill. And, when you get a chance, knock some sense into him.

—Steven Bard, New York, NY

It's a right for Citizens to continue to use the internet free from a government regulated way that plays into corporate control..

—Nicholas Frangakis, West Hollywood, CA

Thank you.

—James Bullock, Lee, NH

The commons of public discourse is imperative to protect for all of us! Make the Internet providers common carriers.

—Lee F Greer Ph.D., Riverside, CA

Keep it open and fair. Speed should not be controlled by those who have the most cash. This whole scenario is despicable!

—Kari Quaas, Everett, WA

Equal access to all parties is the only way the internet can grow and continue to create economic growths and jobs. Everyone, let me repeat, everyone pays for their own bandwidth. Allowing the large ISP's to charge more for a "fast lane" will kill net neutrality, jobs, and innovation as only large established companies will be able to afford preferred access.

—Charles Johnson, Terrell, TX

If this happens, it will price students and seniors out of the internet.

—Patrice Ann Shay, Byron Center, MI

Without real net neutrality, the internet is just a set of corporate accounts. Is Congress so corrupt it will kill net neutrality?

—Peter Brawley, McComb, MS

Please, do not allow internet providers to charge us more for internet access.

—Charles Repsher, Eugene, OR

We don't want corporate America where only the uber rich can do anything... Net Neutrality is an equal playing field for all regardless of status and wealth.

—George MacWayne Hite II, Springfield, VA

Let's represent the people and not corporations for a change.

—Shirley Cameron, Newport Coast, CA

Corporations are NOT GOD. Stop giving them control and eroding the Government, Law, and Democracy.
—Jay Howell, Ithaca, NY

Please, Vote against this Killer!
—Stephen F. Kislock III, Beaver Falls, PA

If this goes through, big business will have all the power re the Internet, just as BIG OIL dominates the energy we have available. Leave us equality somewhere, if only on the Internet.
—Wanda Schertz, New Braunfels, TX people have the right to decide what they want view on the net; not the service providers, not corporations, and not the government.

—LaDonna Lewis, Chicago, IL

For once listen to the people and do what's right.
—Timothy Franson, Woburn, MA

Don't hurt innovation for our country!
—Elizabeth Payne, San Francisco, CA

I havve not been politically active, but I will do everything that I can do to defeat anyone who supports this bill.
—Lawrence E. Fraley, Reedsville, WV

This is an awful bill, designed as a run around the movement to classify broadband as a utility.
—Ellen Zarter, Bellevue, WA

Don't do it!
—Julie Loder, nashville, TN

Let's be realistic here. These are the same companies that through multiple mergers now control our phone and cable lines. Has your phone service improved any? How about your cable service? Have you seen either get cheaper? I know I haven't! And these companies are wanting to do the same thing to the internet in the US. We are already behind most of the developed world in having access to high speed internet and this bill will make sure countries like China and India have better internet connections than we do!
—Reese Yontz, Michie, TN

Democrats and moderate Republicans should know that the best way to elect a "conservative" or "radical" Republican (corporate-supported) candidate in 2016 is to pass this Bill! By doing so, you would be permitting private interests to control the one remaining open communications system in our Country. If passed, it would be one more nail in the coffin of our Republic.
—Timothy O Hanlon, Waimanalo, HI

Use of the Public's Airwaves is governed by the US Congress twice in reaffirming "shall be in the Public Interest, Necissity and Convenience"!!! Please keep this in mind as you vote on behalf of all citizens-as well as your consiitants-of the one and only United States of America.
—Fred J. Noble, Hendersonville, NC

WE MUST MAINTAIN NET NEUTRALITY!!!
—Roy Simmons, Orlando, FL

This has the potential to foster censorship. Please don't put more of our freedom at risk.

—C Barry, west chicago, IL

Internet service providers should be reclassified as common carriers. Net Neutrality needs to be maintained so please vote accordingly.

—Vaga Hargadine, Brookfield, MO

Please support Title II.

—John Hrabar, Pittsburgh, PA

As a user of the internet, I believe the internet should be a safe and open place. To keep it safe and open, we must have net neutrality so large cable companies cannot exploit users by forcing the domains to pay more money for "higher speeds".

—Anthony Tang, Honolulu, HI

H.R. 4752 is a sell out to AT&T, Comcast, and Verizon. Don't support this bill.

—Wray Wray Stanley, MALVERN, PA

Too many actions of Congress lately, have not been in the best interest of our Country and the citizens that elected you. If you do believe in the basic premises of our Constitution, you will not pass this bill, which favors money over citizens. It is not the American way.

—Ron John Waterman, Grand Junction, CO

Not only is it a vote against the open internet, but it is a vote against the liberty and Constitution that you have vowed to uphold. This is not about free speech for a few big corporations. This is about equal protection under the law for all American citizens, especially those who do not have the power to bribe and corrupt our government. Don't bow to that dangerous power. We the people are your constituents. We are the majority, not multinational companies who pay paltry amounts in taxes and ship our jobs overseas to satiate their greed. Do your job. Deny big companies the right to stamp on other people's freedoms as well as smaller businesses'.

—Kinsey Poland, Flowery Branch, GA

Wake up!!

—Nancy Crist, Sedona, AZ

Let's have a bill specifying that the internet is a public utility.

—K Hill, Malibu, CA

We want to protect Net Neutrality.

—Elinore Krause, Mc Kees Rocks, PA

Giving certain groups (those with the most money and the most to gain) preference based on the bottom line is just plain inequitable and unfair! In a Democracy all the people decide what is best for the whole, not those with the most money. I urge you to keep the net neutral. R Niles

—Robert Niles M.D., Maryville, TN

Don't cave!

—Nathaniel Rundle, Monterey, MA

Information Monopolies are next if you don't STOP

—Tom Lellis, Brooklyn, NY

Fight for net neutrality.

—Pedro Gameiro, ,

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality. Why do average people like me have to repeatedly sign petitions to get common sense laws. Congress only pays attention to campaign contributions $$$ from the wealthy and corporations. The result is more petitions from those of us who don't have millions to spare. Does anybody in Congress really read these petitions or care about average people?

—Carol Ring, Schererville, IN

As a municipal government worker, I rely on the internet daily for to be a neutral search engine for data and information service. I do not want to have to filter out commercial status while viewing my search results!

—Joe Smoke, Los Angeles, CA

It is beyond crazy that anyone would even introduce a bill that would infringe on internet rights. What is left that hasn't been given to corporate America? Do not vote for this bill!

—Melody Brinkley, Lyons, CO

To me this is absolutely the MOST important issue of our lifetime. I am a registered voter - and frankly this is the ONLY issue that will get me to the polls. There is nothing any politician could do that is more important to this, because without real net neutrality the biggest innovations that will change the world in the next twenty years could be held back.

—Joseph L. Hurtsellers, Maumee, OH

Keep net neutrality!

—Patricia Vargo, Murrysville, PA

This outrageous power grab is nothing more than corporate muscle bashing its way to establishment of new monopolies and murder on those of us who depend on internet for business. The FCC Chairman is the former chief lobbyist for the industry he's now supposed to regulate? Is that supposed to give me any confidence in his judgment? He's a shill, nothing more. One internet, one speed. Anything else is discriminatory and detrimental to the public welfare the Constitution says that government must serve.

—Janine Nichols, Brooklyn, NY

Please protect the open access to the Internet. We will prevent innovation if pay to play becomes the law. Schools will be forced onto slower bandwidth

—iRA ERBS, Portland, OR

There is no actual need to be even considering this proposition. It is a non-issue brought before Congress in order to further the economic desires of a few large corporations. Please don't let them decide the future of the internet.

—Mary Hein, Richmond, CA

Please do not jeopardize consumer rights to a neutral Internet.

—Dawn Williams, Garner, NC

Keep the Net free and out of corporate control. The net is for people. Corporations care only about profits.

—Leigh Clark, Granada Hills, CA

The Net is meant to be free. Companies like AT&T, Verizon have NO RIGHT to take it for their own selfish ambitions.

—Carlos Felix, Valdosta, GA

We have to stop all this "the rich get richer". Please keep the internet accessible and fast for all, not just those who can pay.

—Mr. John Jansen, Minneapolis, MN

Keep the internet neutral!

—Duane Burnett, Sechelt,

I wrote to you about this earlier and you or one of your "aids" replied with some malarky about protecting us consumers from the FCC. The FCC is NOT what imperils us. It is the rapacious corporations (Comcast, AT&T, Verizon et. al.) that we need to be protected from. Stop acting as if these corporate interests have bought and paid for your support of HR 4752. Vote against this bill so I don't have to vote against you come the next election.

—Frank Lowney, Gray, GA

The open Internet has saved my life several times because of medical information and support I had access to that I would never had known about without it. It is up to Congress to fight off attempts to weaken any aspect of the Internet by corrupt politicians who are in the pockets of COMCAST, VERIZON and TIME WARNER. Please oppose all attempts to weaken the Internet. THANK YOU.

—Elizabeth Benedict, New York, NY

Please. The internet should be for all persons to get information in order to make intelligent decisions.

—Marianne Olguin, Hayward, CA

Need to be reasonable!!!

—John Cavaliere, Warwick, RI

I truly hope you stand for and support the people of America and vote to protect our best interests as a free country instead of representing and supporting big corporation control.

—Amber Atwood, Kenilworth, UT

Support net neutrality. This is key to growth and prosperity as well as freedom of expression

—Douglas Longman, Chapel Hill, NC

Are you ready to come out publicly as a corrupt fascist?? To agree with this bill in a vote is demonstration that that is what you are. Represent freedom and protect Net Neutrality.

—Ron Savage, Clearwater, FL

Please put Internet service providers back under Title II of the Communications Act.

—John D. Santamaria, Stoneham, MA

Please Help Us! The Net is all we have left for true Democracy.

—Tony Chavez, North Hollywood, CA

Money should not control the flow of information on the Internet. Lets say there's a public forum. I have five dollars in my pocket, and someone else has ten in his. Should that entitle him to speak before I do, and should he be given a microphone while I am not, all because the powers-that-be know he has twice as much money available to him? The just answer is no. The Internet is also a public forum, and justice demands the same answer to those questions in that situation.

—Peter Victor, Ho Ho Kus, NJ

Let's recognize the strength of our free and fair internet, and also recognize malicious intentions no matter how eloquently they are put.

—Addison Neville, Los Angeles, CA

Don't sell out!

—Bruce Elsensohn, new orleans, LA

The Internet is a utility and needs to be regulated like all others. We cannot allow these virtual monopolies to collude together to drive up prices and neglect service and infrastructure.

—Russell Drown, Clarkston, MI

I'm counting on you, sir.

—Gretchen H. Freda, Portland, OR

The Internet is America's gift to the world. We gave it freely to everyone all over the globe. And we've been rewarded by it's astonishing growth and acceptance. By and large the Internet has brought people and nations together far more than not. Especially important is how it has been an instrument of achievement for those with the least resources, both here at home and in "third-world" countries. The Internet is a success--far more than any of us could have predicted. More than not it serves our individual and national interests, but its benefit will be impaired if it can't operate on the basis of freedom it has established. Please let's not take back the gift we gave. Not only is it a shabby thing to do, it is also shooting ourselves in the foot.

—Jules R Altfas MD, Portland, OR

Stop take over of big greedy companies!! Protect real Net Neutrality!! Congress you are here for the people! Protect their interest not the big companies!!

—Ronald Pears, Los Angeles, CA

ENOUGH ALREADY! DON'T LET VERIZON, AT&T OR COMCAST DESTROY NET NEUTRALITY!

—Richard Clifford, Milton, MA

These companies want to be able to ban their users from getting to google stating that google is using too much band width. They will then charge google in order to let users of their service get to google. Yet google is not using it, they are not forcing me to go to them. They just see another way to line their pockets with someone else's money. Yet when signed up for the internet service me and the internet service provider agreed to a term, I pay $X amount per month and you let me get on the internet, now they want the right to block sights that they don't like or sites that wont pay them. This is wrong and we need you to help stop them. Thank you

—Roy Sekulich, Manchester, TN

It is time the "people" are protected...not the big companies that are pumping campaign money into our political system. Please vote for "us".

—Jerri Meys, Honeoye, NY

As an artist with a website for my musical instruments, I depend on net neutrality. I cannot compete with well-financed millionaires and corporations for a place on the internet, and equal access to it for my clients.

—Dwain Wilder, Rochester, NY

The proposed internet rules provide way too much opportunity to be abused by the largest ISP providers. Judge Green's original decision keeping carriers and content providers separated was correct. Please classify the internet as a common carrier, otherwise the internet just becomes another cash cow for the rich in control of the big Telecoms.

—Tom Voorhees, clioton, WA

This is not in your best interest. This is not in any of our best interest. Please do not let this bill pass, we have enough problems to worry about. These companies want more money and refuse to change this archaic system, but the reality is that the only way they can get more money is by taking things away that are already free and then charging us. Please STOP! Stop being paid to look the other way, stop being the obvious member of congress who takes bribes. This culture needs to end. Don't let these companies by your vote, use your own voice and stop this bill. We aren't trying to buy you, but just convince you to do your research and understand why this will hurt us globally.
—Zachary Asher, New York, NY

I am the owner of a small business that depends on a free and equal internet, the way it has always been.
—Patricia White, Orleans, MA

For one damn time, represent the millions of citizens that hired you!
—Kathleen Dougherty, Duluth, MN

Leave well enough alone you corporate greedy busy bodies!
—Gary, Kihei, HI

Congress: do your job! you are here to protect the people not to sell them out! protect real Net Neutrality!!! you should control the big companies not the other way around!!!
—dana J, Glenview, IL

Do not let net neutrality die. It would be a massive blow to the free market, in terms of online small businesses.
—Michael Rogan, Westhampton Beach, NY

Congress sells to highest bidder
—John la Follette, Columbus, OH

A Government of the people-by the people and for the people is not a Government that takes away our rights and give them to corporations. Leave Net Neutrality alone and support the people and stop trying to fill your pockets by giving corporations our rights.
—John L Grand, Green Valley, AZ

Remember, elections are coming soon.
—Lynn Miller, Portland, OR

Please be FOR the people - not against them!
—Jill Ferguson, Dana Point, CA

protecting real Net Neutrality is congress's job!!! Do not let big business control people's pocket and mind!! Net freedom is a precious thing and should not be lost by any means!! help protect people!!
—Andrew Jackson, Los Angeles, CA

Net neutrality has to be protected and kept free. Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality. Net neutrality is under attack like never before and this is completely unfair. And now some members of Congress are ramping up the fight. Rep. Bob Latta has introduced a bill that would prevent the FCC from reclassifying Internet service providers like AT&T, Comcast and Verizon as common carriers. This is the EXACT OPPOSITE of what will protect the open Internet. Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality. Net neutrality is under attack like never before and this is completely unfair. I am asking my Representative Paulsen to vote reject the bill that is against open Internet
—Kay Beams, Eden Prairie, MN

And also the slowing of the internet to make spying and data collection that is happening now needs your rejection. Public speech and listening are both protected!!!!!!!!!!

—Erika Morgan, blackdiamond, WA

Please do the right thing. Thank you.

—Kristi Hart, Salem, OR

It is seriously annoying to have to tell congress over and over and over again that we demand that the net remain neutral. It seems like every other day this shit is happening and we are sick of it.

—Evan Nevermore, Reisterstown, MD

Don't let American innovation be destroyed!!!

—Kelly Albin, Oakland, CA

This will go a long way in deciding my vote in November. I hope that matters to you! I will NOT support any member of congress who betrays Net Neutrality.

—Ed Porter, Santa Cruz, CA

This bill appears to interpret internet service in a way that will allow internet companies to proceed to avoid a net neutrality mandate. I have yet to see the rationale that shows that consumers (which the FCC is supposed to represent) will benefit from relaxation of vigilance in supporting net neutrality. IF ISPs BELIEVE THEY NEED TO CHARGE MORE FOR A HIGH SPEED LANE IT MUST BE BECAUSE THEY ARE BANDWIDTH LIMITED. In that case the ISPs should begin making infrastructure investments to support high bandwidth equally to all users on the network as other countries have done. The USA has fallen behind lesser countries in providing high speed internet to their nations. CHARGING MORE FOR BANDWIDTH IS NOT THE SOLUTION!

—Irv Ellner, Hopatcong, NJ

Keep and protect real Net Neutrality!!! without it we will lose a lot and a handful of greedy companies get rich. Do not sell out to Comcast Verizon etc... Protect your people.. that's why there is a congress!!

—Hamid Asad, ,

Lest we forget: the Internet is what it is today BECAUSE of the lack of this type of business. This would kill the Internet in the United States: the country that gave birth to this technological wonder. Fix it. Fix it now. Not only are we a laughing stock "across the pond" but we're quickly going to paint ourselves into a corner here. Oh and one more thing: whomever of you that have had money's or other resources "donated" to you from AT&T and their ilk, give it back. Give it back and try to not be bought again.

—Nathan Steger, Las Vegas, NV

The internet is like electricity, vital to the economy and a basic utility that must remain 'neutral'. Protect Net Neutrality!

—Mary Lou Ritter, Portland, OR

This would hurt seniors, the disabled and shut-ins. Please stop it!

—Ruth Kantor, CLAYMONT, DE

Congress do the right thing!~protect real Net Neutrality!!!

—Deja donya, ,

Keep your money grubbing hands off my internet!

—Steven Rowley, Tahlequah, OK

This is really important!!

—Hal B. Rager, Arvada, CO

I'm not just jumping on a bandwagon here, I'm a computer professional that knows this is a bad idea.

—Joseph W Phelps, Birmingham, AL

When the media works better, society works better.

—Donald Beasley Jr, Pittsburgh, PA

Congress Do Right by the people who voted for you!!! protect real Net Neutrality!!! Or we will loose what we have!!!

—Andy Frears, ,

God and Comcast only know what's gonna happen if this passes. Better Shut it down quickly!

—Peter Ellis, ,

Stop allowing corporate $ trump american freedom.

—Brian Scheer, Naples, FL

Freedom of speech includes the Internet -- please keep it free and open!

—Lisa Teman, Morrison, CO

Show your true colors.

—Gail Massey, Longmont, CO

This is really not good for consumers like me whom have very little choice in the cable/internet providers they can choose from. Please don't let these monopolies have any more power over what we can access over the internet.

—Troy Clevenger, West Bloomfield, MI

As a rural resident and owner of a small business, I can see that net neutrality is vital to those of us who have to compete with big business to get our message out. Voting against an open internet is voting against small business.

—Elaine Strobe, Galena, MO

If you vote for this bill you are voting against the American people and we WILL remember it.

—Ann McGarry, rye brook, NY

Please keep the internet open and free.

—Aaron Mohr, Seattle, WA

How about you start thinking about what the consumers want? It is public airwaves, and a world wide web.

—Robert Fellows, Seattle, WA

The internet should be available to all...not just the wealthy. Thank you for your consideration of our position. Kay Carmody

—Mrs. Kay Pirtle Carmody, Lawrence, KS

The chairman in his response to my email claims to support neutrality but his actions speak for themselves. Stop 2 tier

—Patrick Reed, Micco, FL

Save the internet for ALL OF US!
—Nancy Mueller, Chapel Hill, NC

The phone companies are seeking to have the old phone lines replaced by internet-based solutions. It is clear that common-carrier protections must be brought to the Internet, just as they were to the public switched telephone system.
—Guillaume Lessard, Louisville, CO

If you don't stop this war on net neutrality the people will rise up and do it ourselves. No amount of money is worth the protection of net neutrality.
—Shelby, burleson, TX

The internet is still in it's infancy. Give it room to grow and thrive, and don't restrict it so much. Start-ups use this to grow their own businesses not just here, but around the world. Like it or not, stuff like this does affect the whole world, and countries like Sweden and Norway are going to leave us in the dust some day because of it. Stop being so damnably capitalist.
—Dan Curley, Monroe, MI

The open internet is why we have had such great advances in internet communication & innovation.
—Pat Harms, Morehead City, NC

Please. This is such a clear choice to preserve free speech. H.R. 4752 would prevent the much needed correction to Powell's corrupt decision to place broadband providers outside Title II of the communications act. Vote against this bill so that the FCC can do the right thing, the American thing, and reclassify broadband providers as common carriers. Thanks.
—Suzanne Dyksra, Ijamsville, MD

The Internet is definitely a telecommunications medium and not an information medium. It is a means of transferring information but is not itself a source of information content. Information carriers should treat all users equally.
—Paul Karsh, Martinez, CA

Does anyone in congress actually understand how modern technology works, or do you all just let the technology lobbyists explain it to you in their own words? I understand that you're busy, but this is getting ridiculous. Reject this farce of bill.
—Andrew Osgood, San Diego, CA

Hey Congress FUCK OFF! You Greedy Bastards!!
—TJ Reich, McKinney, TX

A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet and the wishes of millions worldwide. The internet does not belong to anyone including greedy corporate interests
—Alan Stevens, dublin,

Why don't we here mire about this on media outlets?
—Phil nRtinez, Lombard, IL

no fast lanes, no slow lanes. every internet user treated the same.
—Colleen Moody, Junction City, OR

Please keep an even playing field for everyone who uses the Internet.
—Donna J. Klein, Millersburg, MI

Thank you.

—Bernice Meyer, Saint Louis, MO

A vote for this bill is also a vote against free speech, American innovation, and small business. Please vote against this bill and urge every one of your fellow members to do likewise.

—David Langley, Alexandria, VA

I will be marching on congress if they ignore the people and pass this law

—William harper, Augusta, GA

I will not vote for anyone who votes to weaken Net Neutrality.

—Dexter Kamilewicz, Orrs Island, ME

Please don't limit my precious Internet! As a teacher and life-long learner, I rely on this incredible resource.

—Dana Barbato, Staten Island, NY

The government has invested too much money in these companies to expand broadband networks for free market economics to allow competitors to challenge their dominance. Net neutrality must be protected via reclassification.

—Ryan Cummings, Elkton, MD

This is the biggest threat to the Constitution we face, this cannot be allowed to slow or stop the free exchange of ideas and information for the American people. Yhis change would put or internet in line with China. Please don't allow this to happen.

—Diane Burnett, Goodyear, AZ

When is this government going to protect the people of this country. It is a shame what they have done to television and now they are going to make internet prohibitive.

—Elizabeth Pritchard, Manakin Sabot, VA

Enough IS Enough.

—Kim Schiavone, Hamilton, MT

leave the internet alone

—Mitch Reinitz, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Free and open Internet is the only path for innovation. Please don't take our future away from us.

—Kathleen Jansen, Manhattan, KS

Attacks on Net Neutrality undermine our precious democracy, and must not be allowed.

—Honora-Bright Aere, Blodgett, OR

Would you allow unregulated electric service? Unregulated water? The Internet is a UTILITY. Let's treat it that way.

—William Blinn, Columbus, OH

Enough Already!

—Mr. Richard J. Clifford, Milton, MA

It's utterly repulsive for to allow internet companies to discriminate on peoples's and content providers internet speeds. Please reject this bill, and while you're at it work on bills that actually strengthen net neutrality and regulate internet and broadband companies. Activists are working on reclassifying broadband under title II of the communication's act. But there is more that congress can do. Congress can make the internet to be utility. We can break up the cable and internet companies like the breakup of the bell system in 1982 to add some much needed competition and stop the oligopoly. We can require them to share their cables. TLDR; The point is we should be working to strengthen net neutrality not restrict it. Please reject this bill. And create bills that strengthen the internet and internet consumers. Don't allow companies to discriminate internet speeds in ANY WAY PERIOD.

—Alex Bishel, Raleigh, NC

The internet has become critical to the economic and general welfare of all, and internet service qualifies as a public utility, not a cash cow for Comcast and TimeWarner.

—Marian Goldeen, Three Rivers, CA

You know no one needs to alter the internet in any way other than to make it more equal and free. Anything else is dead wrong. I do NOT need to tell you this. Just do the right thing and keep the internet free and equal for all.

—Dorothy Poole, Memphis, TN

I don't think taking potential solutions to the "Net Neutrality" issue off the table is a responsible approach to the problem. Members of Congress should not be afraid to simply look at all the options available and compare them based on their merits. While it's unfortunate how much influence that campaign contributions have on getting legislation crafted/passed these days, please at least recognize that most American's who follow this issue can see this legislation for what it is. They also can see that this is being proposed in the best interests of the cable companies and not their customers. Please remember that Americans elect and pay you to act in their best interests and we are watching to see how well you do that.

—William Albert Bedard, Fort Washington, MD

We don't need a restricted pathway to the world citizens...the cable co. Already owns my phone, my broadband and cable TV...NO more consolidation and toll roads!!!

—Chris Ducey, Woodacre, CA

Do NOT let HR 4752 KILL the vibrancy and level playing field of the Internet! This is a BAD bill for America!!! Please, No Slow Lanes!

—Susan Mohn, Bothell, WA

Freedom of information needs to be protected from paid gateways imposed by corporate interests. Preserve neutrality!

—Ally Cohen, Mendham, NJ

6406 S 120th Plaza Omaha, NE

—Mr. Eric Harbison, Omaha, NE

Here's the thing you have to understand about this distinction between a "telecommunications service" and an "information service"... what Net Neutrality means is that a "telecommunications service" ought not be allowed to be an "information service", and an "information service" ought not to control a "telecommunications service". Net Neutrality means that companies may deal in content ("information service") OR telecommunications infrastructure ("telecommunication service") OR telecommunication devices ("digital/electronic communications device providers"), but not two or more of these at once. H.R. 4725 expressly aims to eliminate the distinction between a telecommunications service and an information service when considering the market role of ISPs. This bill wants to allow some companies to deal in content AND infrastructure. So this bill is expressly against Net Neutrality. When this bill talks about supporting a free and open Internet, it means like a clubbed and hooked dairy cow is free and open to be gutted in a slaughterhouse. That's good business for the slaughterhouse and the few people rich enough to claim a portion of the beef, but it's bad news for the cow and the scores of people who relied on her milk. Please, Congress. Don't pass this bill to gut the Internet.

—William Wright, Coralville, IA

Why should the internet be any different than our phone lines? Because of the money to be made? Do people matter at all?

—Sally Sommer, Berkeley, CA

Want to stifle business growth, new startups, and ram broadband rates through the roof? Go ahead, vote for this bill. The US, creator of the internet, is already far behind other countries in average speeds to the home for broadband, and this bill will only reward AT&T, Comcast and Verizon for their crappy service levels. An open internet, where the common carriers are actually treated as such, is the only way to ensure broadband speeds are increased.

—Jeff Wood, Ocala, FL

Reject this bill that would kill net neutrality to the profit of the few at the expense of the many.

—Glenn Allen Scott, Norfolk, VA

Why are members of Congress trying to destroy our Internet? Move and vote to protect Net Neutrality NOW.

—Richard C. Placone, Palo Alto, CA

Thier arguments and speaking points about setting a fast and slow lane for the internet doesn't really follow a capitalist form. Current isps already charge quite a large premium to current servers like netflix for example, so that they may host the file transfers at appropriate bandwidths. so the current argument for a fast and slow lane doesn't make sense because it is already in place, and regulated by the US market. Having the government jump in on this is not capitalist and considering the amount the government wastes in overhead, I believe that their involvement in such a task would ultimately fail the cause. It would require successfully improving the current regulations (which it could actually use) but doing so without a high cost/government overhead, we need a repeat of the equivalent skunkworks project, something the government has not replicated in 25 years in my opinion. The government is arguing to set a fast lane to those who pay more and a slow lane to those who don't. This is already implemented, by looking at the services offered ranging from 1mbps to 100mbps from say suddenlink, comcast, and time warner cable, they even the overage fees for using too much bandwidth. It also begs the question why is the government getting involved in something like this, when what they want is already in place? One immediate answer is to charge additional fees for a service you currently pay for, thus creating an unlevel playing field for companies. Helping the larger companies and hurting the smaller companies. I.E. the opposite of capitalism and free market.

—Michael Scott Carpenter, San Antonio, TX

As a member of the tech and development community I can scarcely think of something more detrimental to my profession. By allowing telecoms to charge for tiers of service the multitudes of start-up ventures without massive capital backing will be doomed. Additionally, allowing Internet fast-lanes means no longer providing the best possible service to those of us who pay for high-speed Internet access. Choke points, throttled connectivity, disputed service and a complete lack of transparency will be the new norm. Please don't give control of the flow of information to the hands of a few in this Age of Information. Keep our Internet democratic.

—Benjamin Stendahl, Denver, CO

Please do not fall victim to BIG businesses bullying Congress. Seriously. This bill is the open the flood gate for ISP Giants to have even more power and control of an InterNET that should remain open and NEUTRAL. Thank you for understanding.

—Jesse Campbell, Somerville, MA

save our nation!

—Nolan Carpenter, Huntsville, AL

Internet is utility just like water and should be treated as such. Anything other than that will be very detrimental to one of the greatest inventions of the 20th century, a truly modern Library of Alexandria. These companies' greed has no limits. It's your job to protect us from it and to ensure fair treatment for all. Please do your job!

—Stanislav Levich, Quincy, MA

The "airwaves" including the internet are a part of the "COMMONS", and as such belong to the public. There is no excuse for giving corporate scum a leg up on the average CITIZEN as far as internet speeds go. There's a word for constantly putting corporate interests above those of the citizenry. FASCISM!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—John R. Shipley Sr., Brick, NJ

What's the difference between a corrupt democracy and any other form of corrupt government? Obama: "The rest of the world (God's: pop 7.2 billion (192 countries)) isn't stupid!" After all, isn't approximately one-third of that world already Microsoft free? 2008-04-03: Brazil, India, and China, which together count for more than a third of the world's population, all voted against Office Open XML last week. Address : <http://www.informationweek.com/news/software/productivity_a_pps/207001577?_requestid=118181> Patriotism begins with knowledge, not lies and propaganda. Most of society, including the majority of all the world's Christianity, prefers the knowledge. -Ron Wike Vietnam veteran

—Ronald Wike, Annville, PA

NO!

—Pierre Halfquiz, ,

Broadband is a telecommunications service. Keep it that way.

—Amanda P Mobley, Louisville, KY

Mr. Wheeler states "We are dedicated to protecting and preserving an open Internet..." This is an empty statement absent the specific words 'net neutrality' and more important, but specific, phrase 'classifying the internet as a title II common carrier (i.e., a public utility)'. Without these very specific qualifiers the statement is hollow, and its logic asymmetric. Internet Service Provider (ISP) companies are claiming that they are not utilities, but rather, "information and entertainment companies", so by that logic, my electric, gas and water providers are really food service companies since they are used to cook food, or perhaps they are really laundry services since they are used to do wash. All an ISP does is provide the pipeline that all that information and entertainment comes down. That means they are a utility and as such they should be regulated. Verizon originally initially laid down their lines down as a utility to take advantage of government perks, so their want to reclassify the same lines as something else is pure hypocrisy.

—Mitchell Struble, Philadelphia, PA

Make sure you protect net neutrality by classifying ISPs as common carriers-and of course that's what they are! EVERYONE appreciates a free and open internet and so these lines in the sand MUST be drawn and protected now. Thank you for hearing the people's voice and voting to keep the internet OPEN and neutral!

—Linda Decker, danville, CA

Information should NEVER be limited

—Christopher Skylar Bolton, Durango, CO

Destroying Net Neutrality is absolutely disgusting and completely uncivilized. It spits in the face of the American Constitution and of every citizen on this planet - all of which have equal rights to the Internet. They have the same rights as that relatively small number of anti-social people who have "acquired" a position that sets themselves apart as being somehow more superior and special. Shameful behavior which needs to be reined in without further delay.

—S Tuffham, New York, NY

Net Neutrality is of grave importance...do what you know is right and do not supper this bill

—Blaine L Gott, West Valley City, UT

Represent the people and do the correct thing, protect Net Neutrality!!

—Greg Zyzanski, Lyndhurst, OH

In the land of the free, we should not have to suffer for a few that would abuse the open internet. Please Don't pass this bill.

—Ann Aurelio, West Sayville, NY

I can't believe in this day and age we are having to take action like this! Net neutrality is important to the national security of the USA!

—Monty Nicol, Brooklyn, NY

Keep the Internet open and free for all.

—Diane Sievers, Olympia, WA

I keep getting notice that the AT&T internet is overloaded. It is cheaper for AT&T to dump net neutrality than to provide and maintain the infrastructure needed for this century. Please make AT&T (and Verizon) do their job of providing and maintaining needed infrastructure. That is money they need to spend as part of having a business in this century!

—Duncan Peterson, Sacramento, CA

net neutrality support innovation and a better economy for small businesses

—Teri Yamada, Rancho Palos Verdes, CA

This is a Common Carrier .You Bribe Crooks have SCREWED the American People Enough.You better start serving the Peoples interests or it all will Collapse on each and everyone of you Thieves!

—David Scott, Weatherly, PA

This bill is an affront to an open internet. It's a boldfaced pro-telecom, lobbyist written bill. It must be stopped.

—Ron Kelley, San Francisco, CA

Don't allow major corporations to strip away our freedom. Don't give them this power. You will be crushing entrepreneurs and small businesses throughout the country if you let corporate giants control who can see what.

—Jenifer Rosenberg, Woodside, NY

Please kill this bill!!

—Ken Ellinger, Dalton, GA

Let the people have something for themselves. So much has been taken away from us

—Toni Mueller, Waldport, OR

This is so harmful to small businesses and stands against everything this country was built upon.

—Kyle Marchal, Castile, NY

I don't know if passing this bill is unconstitutional, but it certainly is unethical. Leave the Internet open and free!

—Rod Lockwood, Ypsilanti, MI

Please consider the majority and not give in to bribery.

—June Gowing, ,

Weasals are guarding the bastille,

—Billy Foppiano, San Luis Obispo, CA

It's naive to expect Tom Wheeler to look out for the interests of the public. I'm sure that when he leaves the FCC he'll get another cushy job with one of the telecom firms as a CEO or as a very well-connected lobbyist. The revolving door just keeps spinning.

—Henry J. Bielefeld, Springfield, OR

Please don't let money strangle our individual freedoms.

—Jimmy Thanki, Santa Clara, CA

My vote is for any member of congress or party that opposes this bill. This is a classic case of Government serving big business at the expense of individual rights.

—Nigel Love, Treasure Island, FL

Protect the internet from political stooges like Representative Bob Latta! Vote against H.R. 4752!

—Bruce Hlodnicki, INDIANAPOLIS, IN

Do not allow the big companies like ATT, Verizon and Comcast to monopolize the internet. Consumers deserve the right to equal access.

—Dawn Peterson, Santa Rosa, CA

Do we need to get John Oliver involved again?

—Susie Barton, San Jose, CA

Net Neutrality is everything! It is the only way democratic debate can take place if you're not rich. I don't like "one dollar, one vote"; it is not true democracy nor freedom of speech. Net Neutrality is the heart of modern democracy and freedom of speech. Why outlaw the poor man's speech and enshrine the speech of the wealthy. Don't the wealthy already have all the advantages but this one? I will work to defeat any office holder who does not actively support Net Neutrality--regardless of Party!

—Susan Wingfield-Ritter, San Diego, CA

Free internet for all! What's the big deal? It's your job ! Get on with it! Don't sell us out!

—Steven H. Bridgens, Kansas City, MO

Please consider that the biggest innovations in our nation over the past 20 years have very nearly all been made thanks to a free and open internet. The internet service providers should not be allowed to control anyone's access to the internet. This would be tantamount to phone companies charging more for a phone call based on the content of the call, or electric companies charging more for electricity based on what it is powering. Please, voice a strong opposition to H.R. 4752. Lead others in preventing the degradation of the internet. Lead them in building a strong platform for future innovation, new businesses, and more jobs. Please protect the internet from the ISPs.

—Kevin Tumlinson, Missouri City, TX

Support Net Neutrality--or else!

—Brian Ritter, San Diego, CA

The internet should be accessible to everyone at equal rates. The public and small business should not get punished with slower speeds because they can not pay like big business. The internet was created by the people for the people. The internet was not created to keep people from accessing information and communicating with others; it was created specifically for that purpose. Changing the current relationship between users and access to the internet would be unconstitutional.

—Melanie Markert, Levittown, PA

Why make the net more unreachable for the poor. Because the large Comm & Entertainment companies have set it to have a monopoly in each area as they have agreed, they have prices so the poor and higher low class cannot afford the internet and if we can afford anything it is only the slow speed. I have noticed that although our ISP cargoes more since the beginning of the year, our Internet speed has gotten even slower so that we can no longer use our Internet phone.

—Gary Gilmore, Woodland Park, CO

Free and open access to the Internet has become every bit, if not more, important than free and open access to a telephone. Too important to be left to the whims of corporations whose sole interest is in making money for themselves. The Internet should be classified as a telecommunications necessity with all the protections of our phone service.

—John Gunn, CORONADO, CA

Net neutrality is important to all of us, especially those who might not be in power after a next election.

—Dennis Cook, Oberlin, OH

If you screw up every other piece of legislation, get this one right. Stop prohibiting Net Neutrality.

—Kevin West, Austin, TX

Please stand up to the Cable monopolies that continue to hold America hostage. Things are already way out of control while cable lobbyists are going even further trying to make it impossible for cities and towns to offer broadband services to residents. See Kansas SENATE BILL No. 304.

—Troy Eyring, Belton, MO

Ladies and Gentlemen of the House and Senate, Please help protect us, your constituents, from a monopolized and non-neutral net. This issue is a matter of the basis of our country: Liberty. If you don't understand - ask. Don't ask your lobbyists or secretaries, ask your constituents. Ask google.com or youtube.com. Ask your People, not your sponsors. In sincerity,

—Josh Townsend, Sacramento, CA

Eat the rich! Off with their heads!

—Anna kestava, west allis, WI

Thank you. I know you are doing the right thing.

—Sherrill Futrell, Davis, CA

Please don't cave to the large companies who are purposely monopolizing the industry according to regions, keeping the internet prices high and have been slowing the speed down purposely to make it appear they need this. I call it manipulating the system to get what they want.

—Alice Gilmore, Woodland Park, CO

Don't make the Internet another thing the rich have control over. We the people need free and open access to all information on the web. Thank you.

—Barb MACKIE, Melbourne, FL

Net neutrality is essential for a thriving economy.

—Arthur McKay, Mount Prospect, IL

You really must be out of your mind discontinuing this bill >:(

—Joseph, Rumson, NJ

This bill is a violation of free speech, because without Net Neutrality, the internet will shut out most Americans.

—Judy Chapman, Wheeling, IL

Just like the telephone was to the 20th century, the internet is the communication technology of the 21st century! Like telephones, water, electricity, sewer and roads, the internet is a modern public utility, and must be classified as a COMMON CARRIER. These few powerful corporations want to govern and filter all digital communication. It is worse than thought police. They seek nothing less than to give themselves a total monopoly on what ideas live or die. They are trying to make themselves the gatekeepers to everyone's business and communication-- the ultimate arbiters of innovation and discourse worldwide. This is happening now, in Mexico. It will happen here if you let it. There was a time when the FCC stood for the people of this country. Your forebears regulated against foreign ownership of 20th century media on the basis of national security. Today, the companies and billionaires who stand to benefit from controlling content on the web are more powerful than most governments on Earth and hold no allegiance to anything but themselves. Allowing them to monopolize discourse on the single most important commerce and communications network of all time is dangerously unAmerican.

—Adrienne Arno, Los Angeles, CA

Please reject this bill!

—e gilbertson, Morrison, CO

Do the right thing for you and for us. Reject censorship & corporate control. Support net neutrality. We all need to hear from all of us.

—Wayne Magnuson, ,

This is disgusting!

—Patrick Burke, Montpelier, VT

Don't give in to the GREED of these companies. The Internet is one of the most valuable resources used to keep our citizenry well informed and able to communicate. That makes us a treasure to our society. LEAVE THE INTERNET ALONE.

—Ruth Scheidler, Coldwater, MI

The Internet is one of the most awesome things to ever come along to advance the human condition. Don't let it be hobbled by the need large corporations feel to get even larger. Tom Rush

—Tom Rush, Norwich, VT

vote against

—Keith Wright, Sugar Land, TX

As a public servant I would hope you know your American history. And if you do, you'll remember Theodore Roosevelt and Taft and their great trust busting efforts. Out of that came the realization that sometimes capitalism needs to be regulated to work properly. With this bill you would be taking the easiest, most appropriate method of regulation off the table. The internet needs to be treated as a Title II common carrier to be regulated and distributed appropriately. These Internet Service Providers are just that, just providers to other content. They are common carriers in action but, conveniently for them, not in legal definition. I cannot in good conscious support a representative who would be so blinded by the big money of ISPs, and so ignorant of how the technology of which the bill is concerned, as to support this. Even Michael Copps, a retired FCC commissioner sees that making them title II carriers is the best route. Listen to his experience.

—Julia Winegeart, Wichita, KS

Take a stand on this vital issue to protect net neutrality!

—Janice Vranka, Portland, OR save the internet by keeping as it is now

—Gary Ewald, syracuse, NY

Net Neutrality is one way to keep the market alive & evolving. Granting extra protections to current incumbents helps freeze the status quo.
—Kathy Van Dame, SLC, UT

This bill ought to be titled "Pay to Play." It needs to be rejected.
—Gerald Ottone, Milwaukee, WI

All of our internet companies are multimillion dollar operations. Please legislate so that they cannot "screw us over" as they clearly want to do!!
—Virginia H. Bennett, Honolulu, HI

To destroy democratic access to the net is to destroy the fabric of our society, from education, to research, to communication, to business, to entrepreneurship, to marketing, etc.
—Karen Alexander-Brown, Hillsboro, OR

Net neutrality is the life blood of our and future generations. Please keep it in tact.
—Jesse Yemma, Franklin Square, NY

We need our freedom. Liberty was given us more than 200 years ago! Please save this one avenue for the common man. I am part of the 99%, and losing ground daily! Thank you very much, congressman. Sincerely, Dr. Mullane
—Dr. Robert T. M Mullane III, Grand Rapids, MI

Please reclassify ISPs as Title II common carriers. According to Wikipedia, over 97% of our communication takes place online. As the primary way that the world communicates, it needs to be protected. This would also allow actual competition in America regarding ISP's, and maybe we could catch up with some of the other 1st world countries when it comes to internet speeds. Allowing Internet Fast Lanes also discourages growth of start-ups and small businesses, by possibly rendering them unable to handle larger bandwidth requirements due to the additional financial strain. Thank you for your time.
—Ariel Banks, Pittsburgh, PA

This bill is a no-win for millions of users who depend on internet for daily family, learning and business communications. Please stand for us, the consumers, not the already scandalously wealthy providers!
—Jill A. Roberts, Brevard, NC

Allowing a couple of companies to control access to the Internet is one of the worst ideas in decades. The Internet is a public utility and we need to keep it open and neutral.
—Mary Hager, Leverett, MA

Net neutrality is as American as freedom of speech... and JUST AS ESSENTIAL TO A FREE STATE!!
—M M, piscataway, NJ

The Internet must be declared a public utility. This will ensure that the net will remain as is and will not be influenced by those with money who if this bill is passed will get priority as opposed to those who can't afford the fees that are expected to become reality if the FCC accepts the proposal submitted by Comcast and other companies. Please vote against this bill and any compromised versions of the same thing. Approving this would be a serious mistake to what we've become used to using and the growth of technology in America. The Internet should not be influenced by a handful of companies who are only out for themselves.
—Lawrence Stoler, Stamford, CT

What the ISP's are wanting to do would be like your telephone wanting to charge a pizza place an extra fee because so many calls in your neighborhood go through their network to that business. So, even though you are paying your phone bill to your company and that pizza place is paying for 2 or 3 phone lines to its phone company; your phone company is wanting the pizza place to pay them a "special fee" to make sure your call does not get dropped. It is as simple as that. Companies like NetFlix are already paying quite a lot of money to their ISP's every month. Just like you are paying quite a lot of money to your ISP.

—Darrell Capley, Horn Lake, MS

Its time to prove to the world that the government is not run by the corporations.

—Nicholas Dunbar, Boulder, CO

Protect Net Neutrality!

—Rob Cleland, Charleston, WV

At this point, attempting to stuff the genie back in the bottle & taping it shut will only create problems for everyone. Even those who will attempt to profit from it. This will be a giant step backwards into allowing corporations to censor the greatest tool for innovation and communication of a generation--of all generations to come. Make no mistake, gentlemen, denizens of the Net will revolt in ways you cannot yet conceive of, and those responsible for it's abuse would be held accountable.

—Rob Burr, Miami, FL

Thank you for protecting an even playing field, by championing net neutrality, it's good for business!

—James Elmore, Riverside, CA

Please reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act, and do not support Rep. Latta's bill, H.R. 4752. Please protect net neutrality!!

—Karen Wehrman, Castro Valley, CA

Pls Keep Internet Free as intended!!

—Ed Thein, Winnetka, CA

The internet is the only voice we poor people have in "our" government. The billionaires and corporations have taken over. Is that the way you want to be remembered????

—Nancy Roessel, Fort White, FL

Classify all Internet services as Common Carrier or open all networks to all service providers.

—Mr. Scott Yates, Littleton, CO

PLEASE THE NET IS NOW THE ONLY PLACE BESIDES COMEDY CENTRAL THAT WE CAN GET SOME TRUTH!!!

—Kathy Barrett, Dunmore, PA

Don't turn the USA into a second China.

—L D Best, Lebanon, OH

The internet is now a utility and needs to be regulated as one.

—Gavi Stevens, Largo, FL

Its time to stand up to big money, time to move our nation in line with other world powers who made USPS common carriers.

—Patrick Handley, Woodbridge, VA

A vote for this bill means I won't vote for your re-election!!

—Paul Schneider, Garden Grove, CA

We need more competition, not less! furthermore, like telephone service the internet SH Like the phone companies the Internet providers SHOULD be considered common carriers! Rep. Latta has been bought off by the corporations and I suspect so has the FCC. The Latta Bill MUST be squashed.

—Ira and Lorraine Schwartz, El Prado, NM

The internet is founded on the mechanic that all information is equally available. Passing any bill or regulation allowing tiered internet fundamentally breaks the internet. Do not further cripple a country who's education system is already in the toilet. Do not uphold failing business models that refuse to update on their own fine while taking millions of taxpayer money and funneling it into bonuses instead of upgrades to fiber. Passing this bill is not only gutting our latgest resource, but also is morally disgusting.

—A Spain, Chicago, IL

Stand up for the people instead of the corporate interests. An open internet is critical to an open society.

—Leslie Johnson, Los Angeles, CA

Please vote to keep net neutrality.

—John Toscano, Bennington, VT

This is an extremely important issue because it effects the very essence of democracy--the sharing of information about important issues.

—Marcia Bailey, Dunedin, FL

We're watching!

—Tom McCorry, Mariposa, CA

the internet is the communication infrastructure of everyman and not a playground for the rich and powerful few corporations. it needs to be neutral so that ma and pa start ups can take hold like my video company. keep the net neutral and DO NOT vote for the Latta bill as it is skewed against the public good of our country as a whole.

—Mike Tomecek, Riverside, IL

Please vote to keep net neutrality.

—John Toscano, Bennington, VT

LEAVE THE NET ALONE, IT HAS WORKED FINE WITHOUT INTERFERENCE FROM OUTSIDE INFLUENCES.

—Guy Harrison, Vicksburg, MI

It appears the constituents of our elected do not understand the meaning of NO. Let's hope we do not have to wait until Novemer when they will understand NO because they are not back in Congress for another term.

—JoAnne Orr, Wooster, OH

start working for the people instead of the corporations

—Thomas Wiseman, TEGA CAY, SC

Thanks for your attention to this very important matter!

—Anne Kalosh, North Bay Village, FL

Thanks Lois!

—Tim Jouet, San Luis Obispo, CA

The internet is a UTILITY!!!! Don't sell it out to the highest bidder!

—Mr. Anthony Chun, Los Angeles, CA

They who own CONGRESS rule America.

—MelArgon Argon, Waltham, MA

An open Internet is essential to maintaining our freedom.

—Juanita Lander, Lancaster, PA

Other folks that I have talked to in Boulder and Denver are of the same opinion that both Congress and the FCC should protect net neutrality by treating the internet as a utility and ISPs as common carriers.

—Joseph Hueser, Longmont, CO

Just one more Republican privatization for profit scheme to further cheat "The People" of our country.

—Nicholas Zizelis, Bayside, NY

Shoving most of your voters into the internet slow lane is infuriating--and for you, stupid politics. Even more egregious is any vote which would slash away at our most fundamental right: free speech. Kill H.R. 4752. Back measures which designate net providers as being utilities.

—Jerome E. Paul, Santa Cruz, CA

Rescinding Net Neutrality is simply a way to avoid upgrading the Web infrastructure. Instead of upgrading to faster equipment, data streams will be slowed down. This is an immoral and unethical stance.

—David Taubner, ,

Please - stand with the popular voice, the voice of the people, not the voice of the money. I beg you.

—Mareisa Weil, Augusta, ME

Unbiased internet access is as important to a free society today, as the printing press was in its day. It's a cornucopia of information, communication, and creativity. The internet is essential to modern life, a utility, like electricity. The FCC should squash the idea of fast lanes, and classify broadband as a telecommunications service to prohibit companies from engaging in service discrimination. We must veer away from the dangerous path, where government agencies let corporations write the laws to their liking--and uphold the rights of our citizens, instead. Net neutrality is good for the American people, it's good for small business, and it's necessary to really live in a land of opportunity.

—Diane Zentner, East Greenwich, RI

We demand net neutrality, and will vote out all who support other schemes !

—Mike and Sharon Bramlett, Apopka, FL

Who is paying Bob Latta "We the People" or the corporations. We as a nation need to vote out idiots like Bob Latta. The internet is for all not the select few.

—David Boerst, Globe, AZ

the last bastion of free information? reclassify broadband if that is the only way to protect net neutrality!

—J R. Jarvis, Seattle, WA

I believe in democratic. open, free debate, and a neutral internet is an important plank in that platform.

—Derek Rogers, GLASGOW,

Internet access has truly become a basic necessity for work, play, and maintaining an informed and functioning democracy. You MUST reclassify it as a utility, and prevent greedy corporations from destroying it for the future. America has dramatically fallen behind other countries in terms of internet quality and access. Do not cripple us further.

—Zach Goist, Seattle, WA

I do not believe in Ton Wheeler's "open internet" That just means open for business. You MUST classify the internet as a common carrier so that we may all have the same rights & service. This is very important to me & my wife. Thank-You, Robert Dederick

—Robert Dederick, Saugerties, NY

it is the right thing to do

—Howard Rotstein, portland, OR

Comcast should have to sell its broadband business. As should all media content providers that own IPS's.

—Trevor Pierce, Seattle, WA

Fight for justice equality an the common good, not profits and self interest

—J runia, Los Angeles, CA

The time is now to take a stand to protect the interests of American citizens----and not the interests of large telecommunications corporations.

—Deborah Forest Hart, oak bluffs, MA

Do not try and screw us Americans over !!! We are not all fools and if we see you taking TELCO, etc Money I have a strong feeling it will be the last Term you are in Office for you will be Voted out by the next one. Many types of political beliefs all agree that you keep the Internet free and open to all at the same speed and with no toll roads set up.

—Jordan Kratz, Portland, ME

Keep corporate interests from dominating what should be a common good. You wouldn't let AT&T regulate lanes and speed limits on a highway.

—Sage Nagai, Las Vegas, NV

Please stand up for us ordinary Americans. We need you.

—Douglas Long, Rio Rancho, NM

Keep the net open for all users.

—Mark Hayduke Grenard, Phoenix,Yuck,Sprawl, AZ

This should be a no brainer!!!

—John Gallagher, Minnetonka, MN

Please reject this bill.

—Winnie Durdant-Hollamby, forest row,

I absolutely will not vote for any person who supports this bill. Please hear our words, or else you will hear our votes. Thank you.

—Karl Buchwald, San marcos, CA please dont let them do this it will hurt people like me who need the internet

—G Blake, Newark, NJ

Transparency and equal access are essential to our democracy. This bill would seriously injure both.

—E T Harris, Philadelphia, PA

NO! NO! NO!

—Jeri Gray, Port Angeles, WA

Net Neutrality 4Eva!

—Carlos Ronka, ,

There's no need for corporate influence of any kind on the Internet; the most it will do is ruin what's there for everyone.

—Randall McKinnon, Honolulu, HI

Real Net Neutrality is important so that people don't pay many times for their Internet access.

—Christian Couder, Colombes,

The internet must remain an open means for people to meet.

—Wilfred Damhuis, ,

The people have clearly made their will known on this issue. The one question is who do you serve? Greedy corporate interests or the American people?

—Dave, San Antonio, TX

How can you even be considering this?? Corporations are the enemy. Please, DO NOT collaborate with the enemy!

—Stephen Sleeper, Bonita Springs, FL

Latta is not representing his constituents. Please prevent his bill from moving forward.

—Robert Smiley, Newbury Park, CA

And while you are at it, how about realizing that cable TV is also a "telecommunications service"? Damn this Korportocracy!

—Michael Ryan, Citrus Heights, CA

Do the right thing!

—Ron Williams, Travelers Rest, SC

Please, Ladies and Gentlemen, vote for equality.

—Michele Roosevelt, Greenvale, NY

The Internet must be kept open! Big corporations have screwed everything else up--not this too!

—Susan D., Lafayette, CA

REJECT THIS BILL!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Debi Garrett, Sturgis, KY

Please leave the Internet open for everyone, not just the rich!

—Chris, Downers Grove, IL

This self interest thing, is getting a little out of hand.

—Jennifer Sidathong, Saint Paul, MN

Nix this bill!

—Anthony N Ambrosio, Miramar, FL

Please do not support the corruption of the internet as a free and open place. This would be a terrible precedent to set! SUPPORT NET NEUTRALITY

—Aaron Smith, Chico, CA

Please please please do not support this!!

—Mark Foster, Portland, OR

Please so this.

—Lou Markert, New York, NY

As for my un-representative here's an item from his Facebook page: "Matthew Steven Melin Scott Peters does not support regulating Internet Service Providers and therefore SCOTT PETERS OPPOSES NET NEUTRALITY. MR PETERS IS MISLEADING REAL SAN DIEGANS. The irresponsible and reprehensible letter he penned to the Chairman of the FCC contradicted the letter written and signed by Barbara Boxer, Elizabeth Warren, Chuck Schumer, Bernie Sanders and 7 other responsible US Senators imploring Chairman Wheeler to RECLASSIFY BROADBAND PROVIDERS AS COMMON CARRIERS. Here is the quote from the letter Mr Peters wroth for his Cable Giant cronies: "While we still have further to go to ensure that the benefits of broadband reach all Americans, we are concerned that opening the door to subjecting broadband service to a wide array of regulatory burdens and restrictions, including imposing Title II, might halt this progress."

—Crystal M. Clearwater, San Diego, CA

This Bill is a step in further violation of 1st Amendment Freedom of Speech, the Press and for people to Peacefully Assemble in discussion and debate. It also violates 4th Amendment Right to enjoy security in our Effects, as people make our Effects known in the internet.

—James Phillips, Muscatine, IA

Freedom of Speech! Does no one in Congress understand what this and the internet are together? Big Business does not need to control yet another aspect of OUR lives. Please vote no on this restrictive bill.

—Ken Larson, Aurora, CO

Thanks for considering.

—Lynn Levine, Mpls, MN

please keep the net free and out of big bussiness control.

—Albert Birks, wichita falls, TX

We will remember in November how you vote- any action other than a no vote is a yes! You will not hide from your record!

—Steve Molenda, Huntington Beach, CA

The net is a public utility and should be regulated as such.

—Roger Jollis, Leawood, KS

Don't screw freedom, please.

—Christopher Fewell, ,

Please vote against any bill threatening to carve up the Internet into fiefdoms where innovators have to pay tolls to bring their wares to market. We innovators will create more economic prosperity than all the ISPs combined. Side with us. Side with prosperity.

—Mr. Galen Sanford, Boston, MA

neutrality=equality

—Matusa Barros, ,

Net Neutrality must be preserved, now, and forever!

—Paul Jackson, Laconia, NH

Please listen to your constituents and vote against this bill. We enjoy so many fabulous things here in America, please don't allow private corporations to infringe on basic communications.

—Austin C Germer, NOVATO, CA

Bob, you've been a bad boy.

—Robert J. Palermo Jr., Maple Shade, NJ

Exactly when is my government going to quit pandering to the giant telecoms and the TBTF banks, and start looking out for the rights and interests of the American People?

—Larry Dennison, Port Townsend, WA

You use the net too. Do you want to suffer the consequences of this? Think hard about it.

—R Lauer, Orlando, FL

Please vote against this bill, as it would endanger one of the fastest growing methods of communication, research, growth and innovation we have ever seen.

—Austin Germer, Novato, CA

Please stand for your constituents and our need for the open internet.

—Lana Kitchel, Los Molinos, CA

If this bill passes its the end of free press,your local news serves up pap.

—Gordon Kelly, Port Saint Lucie, FL

It is against our rights as people. Corporations should NEVER get to take our rights away.

—Michelle Sanville-Seebold, Fond du Lac, WI

We don't need more plutocracy!

—Frances J. Barber, Seattle, WA

Free the internet!

—Dylan Abramovich, Los Angeles, CA

How much money do you have to get paid before it becomes a BRIBE!!! Go Bob Latta's "campaign contributions"

—Stephen A Toher, Virginia Beach, VA

Utterly ridiculous that a bill like this could come up for a vote.

—John Carr, Centerport, NY

You all preach how everybody should strive to get on even footing, this bill will not provide this, it's back to the old, the haves and have nots!

—Ronnie Mahan, McGregor, TX

Keep the internet open for all and affordable.

—Eunice Malott, Wichita, KS

The whole world is watching. Say NO to this terrible legislation

—Jim Simons, Austin, TX

Keep the Internet free and open. It should be back under the communications act. It also should be labeled a common carrier. Do the right thing for the public.

—Terri Prevost, San Diego, CA

The Internet needs to be protected from corporate greed, please do not support such a measure.

—John Jensen, Sparks, MD

Don't do it. We are watching and will remember.

—Howard Miller, Lakeport, CA

I cannot believe this I have to keep writing to you about this. How does this benefit the American people? Do the right thing .. kill this bill.

—Andrew Jackson, West Lawn, PA

I would like to see proof that these companies have any right to own any part of our commons!

—Laurinda Conyers, Fair Oaks, CA

This is an UNACCEPTABLE measure to turn the internet into the commercially-saturated, low-quality, controlled, mediocre, alternative-information-free, pre-packaged propaganda that the wasteland of TV has become. The Web is the last media bastion remaining where uncensored, unfiltered alternative information can be found on the who, what, where of our government's antics. We know you have noticed, and that is precisely why it sticks on the craw of those who "success" relies in preventing the public from petitioning, protesting and resisting the nonsense that passes for governance these years. We will not be deceived.

—Mark McKennon, Brooklyn, NY

Do the right thing, please. Just do it. Thank you.

—John Lovell, Portland, ME

Net neutrality is essential for true market competition, competition based on price and product or services, not on the financial strength of a participant to buy promotional advantages.

—Alvin Goldman, Lexington, KY

Support FREE speech in America, NOT corporate control.

—Chris Rhodes, Chicago, IL

Vote for this and neutralize your support from me and everyone I know.

—Kenneth Christopher, Plymouth, MI

It has been a long time since Congress did something right. This is your chance to change that record!

—Alan Benefield, Spring Hill, TN

Please keep the Internet open and available. Please don't let the big money interests squeeze out everyone else.

—David E Howarth, Sachse, TX

As my representative, I demand you reclassify broadband providers as common carriers!

—David W Bickel, Bothell, WA

PLEASE!! I am begging, as a CITIZEN!! Stop this NONSENSE!

—Trevor Cox, Bloomington, MN

This is crucially important to the future of our nation and our world. Vote to keep net neutrality rules in place, or people like me will vote you out of office.

—Eric Wiener, Santa Monica, CA

Do NOT pass this bill please. It is time that a congress elected by the people, protects the peoples best interests, and not the best interest of big business.

—Sue Boling, Alexandria, AL

Please do not allow this to happen.

—William Simpson, Puyallup, WA

PEOPLE OVER BIG MONEY

—Vaughn N. Anderson, Saint Petersburg, FL

Protect net neutrality by classifying the Internet as a common carrier!

—Dr. Andrew Flanagan, santa barbara, CA

Keep the net equal!!!

—Christopher West, Riverside, CA

Please do what is right for the American people you swore to serve, not for American companies who serve only the bottom line.

—William J Dodd, Dayton, OH

The Internet should be a Public Utility. But then we just read about the Virginia state senator who sold out the poor for a place on the tobacco board for himself and a judgeship for his daughter. If this bill passes, it is crystal clear what is going on - Congress, President Obama (who appointed a telecom lobbyist to head the FCC) and all the rest (even the judiciary) have been bought and paid for. The US is no longer a democracy.

—Patrick Smit, Coos Bay, OR

Stop supporting corporate interests regarding net neutrality and keep the internet open for all.

—Curtis Bosket, Eureka, MT

Please listen to us.

—Leroy Rouse, Traskwood, AR

You will be well-remembered by future generations!

—Jim Houghton, Encino, CA

Large companies can already out-spend independent producers like me in advertising--giving them an option to buy a "fast lane" would only worsen the situation for independent artists, authors, and musicians.

—Tempe O'Kun, Bismarck, ND

no way no how!

—Roger Schmidt, Madison, WI

As a blogger and an extremely low-income person who is desperately trying to eke out a living on the Internet, I'm begging you to protect Net Neutrality. Netflix and Amazon have already passed along the extra money they've had to dole out to ISPs for proper bandwidth speeds to consumers. This isn't fair to any of us, especially entrepreneurs who don't have a lot of cash to spare.

—Rebecca Oaks, Saint Ann, MO

The two party system is a farce. Do what is right for the people and stop evaluating ANYTHING in terms of party. Evaluate only in terms of common sense and what is right.

—Dane Cobble, Boulder, CO

Keep the internet open and productive!

—Dana Stickney, Mattapoisett, MA

Democracy demands an open Net.

—michael amescua, los angeles, CA

It is wrong to protect the freedoms of a few and not protect the freedoms of the many..... FREE , OPEN AND AFFORDABLE internet access should be classified as a public utility and should be a right of "EVERY" citizen ! Please do not go down this dark and unproductive path. you have been warned by the creative and productive many !!!

—Paul Kulick, Portage, PA

PLEASE DO NOT LET THIS HAPPEN TO OUR COUNTRY - IT IS AN INCREDIBLY BAD CONCEPT AS WELL AS IT IS ENTIRELY SELF-SERVING TO THEIR OWN INDUSTRY !!! PLEASE STOP THIS DANGEROUS ACT FROM PREVAILING !!!

—Matthew Shapiro, Tallahassee, FL

Get real. Protect the internet and don't sell out. This is a dangerous bill and you know it. THINK and do the right thing for us, not for Comcast, AT&T and Verizon. That kind of control will ruin our ability to love communication.

—Kate Drew-Wilkinson, Bisbee, AZ

Goth is is a reason to keep net neutrality.

—John Aponick, Harrisburg, PA

I will not vote for anyone who votes to ruin Net Neutrality, not for any office whatsoever.

—Ann Garrison, Oakland, CA

Either we are a free country or we aren't. Where do you stand? If you vote for this bill, I will know you are not in favor of a free country.
—Robin Jensen, Monterey, CA

There are enough have and have-nots do not vote for this bill
—Len Alessi, albuquerque, NM

A happy and successful cable industry isn't important to the longterm health of our nation. A continued high pace of innovation and an educated populace are. Both correlated with a free and open Internet. The fast lane works against our present and future wellbeing. Please support real net neutrality for the sake of my children and your constituents.
—Stephen Whitney, West Sacramento, CA

there is no hope when all decisions are made for profit. Money changes everything and not for the good. Greed is ruining everything.
—David Maddux, tustin, CA

Equal access for all, not just a few!!!!
—Angel Santiago Jr, Vacaville, CA

This is THE most important issue of our life time. Please vote AGAINST H.R.4752 !
—Larry Andreassen, NEW PALTZ, NY

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality.
—Kathryn Remell, Fayetteville, AR

Broadband internet service needs to be put under the Title !! of the Communications Act to protect Net Neutrality.
—Karen Wagner, Rolling Meadows, IL

This is ridiculous! How could you support this. Stop this bill and fight for net neutrality!
—Judah, West Hempstead, NY

If you want democracy to continue to exist, if you want freedom to continue to exist, if you want the middle class to continue to thrive, if you want the internet to continue to function like a public resource... then you need to stand up for Net Neutrality.
—Ryan Provonsha, Lynnwood, WA

Why do we have to keep fighting for this, it should be taken for granted that the internet should be as it has always been, FREE.
—Dodie Shepard, Burbank, CA

The government belongs to the people, which corporations are not. It's past time we had a government that money can't buy.
—Mark A Martin, Scranton, PA

As a US citizen registered to vote in Campaign IL, even though now resident in New Zealand, I am continually appalled at the congressional gridlock and pandering to arrogant commercial interests by the government. I am vitally dependent on the internet for continuing contact with friends and family "at home." Please preserve real net neutrality.
—Dr. Jim Baltaxe, Champaign, IL

<http://linkd.in/SKyA1B> Net neutrality is necessary for the unimpeded future of the US's tech industry!
—Meghneel Gore, Walnut Creek, CA

Why are they so uptight if the net remains "Open and Free?" Let the "People" say what we want.....not the 1% who can't even pay their bills... We never hired those in Congress to become Millionaires...You were hired to do a job...Time you started working on that job....or "NO PaY" Your not there to become a millinonaire...Remember us..."THE PEOPLE?" "YOUR BOSSES?" Leav the Net alone...
—Connie Nowe, Port Richey, FL

Broadband internet service providers should be classified as common carriers!
—David Leibowitz, New York, NY

To say that they are not common carriers seems silly.
—Mr. Rodney Gay, Waddell, AZ

IF CONGRESS PASSES THIS, I WILL KNOW THEY HATE THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AND LOVE THE MONEY THEY GET FROM CORPORATE AMERICA.
—Dr. Ebert Hino, CYPRESS, CA

We the people under our constitutions, and the charter of human rights: the internet is our means and " RIGHT"to freedom of speech if we so will." HANDS OFF"
—Robert Smith, ,

Tough sell when Obama appoints yet another revolving door cable company lobbyist Wheeler to head the FCC. Same garbage as when Michael Taylor -lobbyist for the criminal cabal Monsanto- was appointed to be the fake protector of the US food supply. Montag PharmD. M.S. Pa-C
—Jonathon Montag, boulder, CO

Please save our Internet. It's too important. Please help us.
—Luke Madrid, Ventura, CA

Protect net neutrality! Keep the internet accessible for any and all web content providers and users. Thank you. Katherine Low —Katherine R. Low, Redmond, WA

Corporatism is fascism! Let the people be equal before the baud.
—Leigh Hill, Felton, CA

Support Net Neutrality.
—Dr. David D. Markwardt, Spokane, WA

You are paid/bribed by the industry. Just a reminder that your oath of office is to serve the people who elected you.
—Robert E Flynn, Minneapolis, MN

Way to fuck up the one thing you haven't fucked up yet.
—Robert Andrews, Oswego, NY

just stop with net neutrality already —Josh Dorenbach, Lincoln, NE

Please do not support this terrible bill.
—Lois Brooks, Ferndale, MI

Please represent the peoples choice for an open internet. Force Comcast, Verizon, and AT&T to act as common carriers as they should be.
—Jon MECHAM, Ellicott City, MD

Please do not let big business control our neutral net. It is important that keep this beautiful invention free from any form of non neutrality
—Michael Luna, Yorba Linda, CA

Stop Net Fascism. Shoot down this bill.
—Mark Herrick, Grandville, MI

What else is big business going to ram down our throats....reject this bill, please.
—Nancy Farris, Jacksonville, FL

I am all for protecting our rights to the internet. Everyone needs that protection. Everyone needs this protection and feel safe. Please keep the internet safe. Reclassify under Title II of the Communications Act will keep the use of open internet would reap havoc. Keep the internet safe back under Title II/Communications Act. Thanks!
—Sharon C Douglas, Memphis, TN

An open Internet is vital to commerce, innovation and free expression. H.R. 4752 would seriously threaten these. I urge you to reject this bill.
—Nathan Lehman, Tulsa, OK

Please, cable TV is a mess, don't do the same thing to the Internet
—Donna Williams, Columbus, OH

A vote for this bill is a vote against economic growth and jobs in New York.
—Robert Brown, Keuka Park, NY

I urge you not to support this bill!!!
—Bennett Hoffman, Tallahassee, FL

Our public commons is being given away to political cronies of those who are supposed to represent us. It's sickening. There will be nothing left for our kids and grandkids.
—Marlena Machol, Glendale, AZ

If our political representatives can't protect the neutrality of the Internet...then we will have to create a new one for all people...
—Hank Keeton Ph.D., Scotts Mills, OR

Please support the reclassification of broadband to Title II. Don't value Comcast's monopolistic profits over the innovation that an open internet allows for new websites and start-ups. The American dream is predicated on the idea that if you work hard and can provide something of value, you will succeed. Monopolies kill that dream before it ever starts.
—Matt Lindley, Eureka, CA

Stop interfering with what works. Focus your attention on welfare reform.
—Gary Abosch, Bel Air, MD

We need less overt corporate welfare supporting laws and more competition and equality to keep the internet as a major source of wealth creation and innovation. Letting a few very large companies dictate what and when we can use the net is a way into a very backwoods, non-democratic world. Don't let profits of a very few companies dictate the standards for the net.

—Michael Forster, Portland, OR

Please protect the Net Neutrality!

—Glen Shue, Loveland, CO

Reclassification as a common carrier is clearly indicated.

—Thomas Jjohnson, Memphis, TN

greed and censorship that is what this is. if you can afford more you get through. Again money buys control

—Ron S George, SOMONAUK, IL

net neutrality isn't yours

—David, McAllen, TX

The Net belongs to the People...not the Corporations. Keep the Net open for everyone.

—Katherine Wuthrich, Chicago, IL

I ask to you to vote against this bill

—Henry Crawford, dorchester, MA

Vote NO on HR 4752!

—Joyce Kidd, Beverly Hills, CA

Keep those stinking hands off of our internet!!

—Chris Criner, Aliso Viejo, CA

Please fight to keep the internet open and free. Please.

—Jordon P, Littleton, CO

Thank you for listening.

—Christopher Willis, heber city, UT

Keep corporate influence out of the public square. Corporations are not people.

—Georganne Ross, Santa Cruz, CA

Thank you

—Rosie Jardine, Branhholm,

Many of us are watching to see how high the corruption runs on this issue. If you don't think this matter is important to us you are wrong! We are spending billions of dollars on a service where we are afforded little to no protection and we need it to carry out everyday tasks. People rely on the Internet for their work, to do banking, pay bill, shop and get an education. You need to do your best to make sure this service is protected against fraud and exorbitant costs.

—K Ash, TUJUNGA, CA

Please think long term, and act for the people.

—Dan Cooney, Ann Arbor, MI

Seriously stop with this bill, if you need someone to explain to you why this will be awful for most of America but also really hurt the economy I have no idea why you are in office.

—Makena Harmon, Livermore, CA

Please vote NO on HR4752 and wait for FCC ruling

—Karen Wilson, Vallejo, CA

Don't let big coglormiritze take a government paid for program for the citizens.

—Thomas Weiks, San Diego, CA

The internet SHOULD be treated as a utility!

—Karen Robertson, Jacksonville Beach, FL

Internet Service Providers should be treated like utility companies like electricity or water and be reclassified as access providers. I do not agree with Rep. Bob Latta's bill H.R. 4752.

—Justin Presto, Everett, WA

As someone that lives in a rural area, it is distressing to see how there has been very little development in high speed Internet availability to my house. As it stands I cannot get any sort of Internet aside from over priced and limited satellite or way too slow dial-up.

—Frank M. M.Lemanski, Dowagiac, MI

Whatever happened to fair, equal, nurturing information exchange to support democracy!?

—Joy Schroeder, West Bend, WI

Keep Net Neutrality

—Dwayne Casey, Houston, TX

Don't sell us down the "internet" river.

—Spencer Matthews, Houston, TX

Most Americans these days have slipped out of middle class into the ranks of the poor. A slow internet lane would have to be awful wide to accommodate us all. In reality a move like this removes the Internet from the poor. It freezes us (we the poor) out of the legitimate things we want and need. I was priced out of car ownership

—Thomas Daniel Smith, Columbus, IN

I urge you to reject bill H.R. 4752. This bill is bad for consumers, bad for Internet freedom and for democracy. Don't let this bill be your legacy, don't be remembered for this bill come election time.

—Rui Ribeiro, West Hartford, CT

Will our government come down on the side of the people or will it embrace the Corporate Cabal that wishes to destroy the government itself.

—James Thompson, Santa Monica, CA

So, are you going to let a step closer to Plutocracy happen or help stop it from happening?

—Kelly Arellanes, Bryant, AR

The people pushing Net Neutrality would harm 99% of Americans, leaving the ultra-rich as the 1%. It's UnAmerican.

—Nancy L Singham, Chicago, IL

I cannot believe the horrible ignoring of the

—Robin Wisdom, Roseburg, OR

Net neutrality is an essential freedom. Voiding net neutrality is a cave-in to the oligarchs! Net access should not be based on corporate desires.

—Howard B. Weithorn, Sherman Oaks, CA

Rep. Bob Latta's bill, H.R. 4752, is yet the latest example of doublespeak: common carriers, like AT&T, Comcast and Verizon claim they are not common carriers. This government created oligopoly graciously allows the public to access the public's own broadband, and as Adam Smith, knew so many years ago, oligopolies commonly use their position to generate uncommon profits, unless stopped by the government entities charged with preventing such abuse. Unfortunately, this bill allows this oligopoly to fleece the public, using public resources, i.e., broadband, just as Adam Smith predicted.

—Michael Harrod, Arroyo Grande, CA

Please keep the Internet open to us, and reject this bill. Marie G. Potter

—Marie G Potter, Herndon, VA

Another perk for the rich, another slap in the face for the rest of us. No fast and slow Internet lanes!

—Cynthia von Hendricks, Albuquerque, NM

I recently went on a trip to France and was shocked to see Gigabit fiber to the home offerings with TV, Internet and unlimited phone service bundled for $40/mo. And not even in Paris, but in the countryside, in a very small village! I can't even get basic DSL access for that price in Denver, CO. Why? Lack of competition, plain and simple. You need to liberate Internet in the US by allowing competition with local provider, municipal Internet, etc. But before opening-up the market you need some basic rules in place - and Net Neutrality is the #1 of these!

—Nicolas Ganivet, Denver, CO

AT&T, Comcast and Verizon are doing little to expand and provide for internet access as it is. Allowing them to control content without oversight would NOT provide them any incentive to expand and innovate. I had to switch over to a satellite provider to get reasonable service but it is still expensive for the bandwidth I am receiving. This is shameful, what with the internet having been conceived and invented by the US with public funded dollars. Verizon switches to and from Title II claims whenever it benefits their interests. Thank You. Scott Willis

—Scott Willis, Petersburg, IN

I reject Rep. Bob Latta's bill, H.R. 4752. I support an open internet and net neutrality.

—Mary E Heinz, Denville, NJ a corrupt internet will hurt the us and us companies in the long run, stop this nonsense !

—Fr. Sascha Krohn, New York, NY

Classify ISPs as common carriers! ISPs are trying to double dip - getting payed by content providers and consumers! It's wrong! Having a "fast lane" by definition means everything else is slower, which is NOT open internet! Having slow and fast internet is anti-entrepreneurial as well.

—Amanda Walsh, Boulder, CO

We no longer have free press now this.

—Martha R. Armas, Elmhurst, NY

We must, all, have equal access to the internet!

—JoAnn Witt, Kansas City, MO

It is just a support to freedom of expression.

—Javier Amaya, Seattle, WA

Service providers will still make boatloads of money. Please stand up for consumers and small businesses.

—Kevin Prange, St. Louis, MO

It should be a no brainer.

—Guy Janssen, ,

Statistics indicate that you do not care what the constituents care about, but this one is asking for net neutrality for the homeland before the electorate throws the baby out with the bath water so the people will better benefit from something as great as the web. Not everybody is as rich as you or those who fund you and your cohorts.

—G Wayne Hild, Navasota, TX

I will consider how you vote on this bill in the Fall.

—Virginia O. Maher, Austin, TX

No corporation should have control of my freedom of speech!!

—Dave Howe, Denver, CO

Until there is true competition for internet service providers, we cannot let go of net neutrality.

—William Alan Dishman, San Rafael, CA

Please stop being so dysfunctional and take action to protect the interests of all America not the corporate giants and political benefactors.

—Ann Gile, Culpeper, VA

FAIR PLAY

—Steve Mayer, Saint Louis, MO

I have had poor service from Comcast, Verizon and AT&T and have had to pay top dollar. I fear what they will do next.

—Zinnia Politzer, Lincoln, MA

Net Neutrality is good for citizens, the people who voted you In office.

—Helena Coleman, Pontiac, MI

Bills like this one only provide every hacker and thief great motivation to hack and steal bandwidth and create cyber attacks on each provider for implementing these rules. Something as widespread as the internet will never successfully be regulated and to try it is so banal as to even clearly violate existing monopoly laws in the USA. If the very providers that now would be able to deny access to internet are the only ones who also own and manage all phone, fiber-optic and network connectivity, there is nothing to stop them from deciding who gets internet and who does not. This will create a war-like attitude in the cyberspace like none ever seen. Guaranteed.

—Philip Schmidt, New York, NY

Net neutrality must be preserved. The future of the internet and democracy is at stake if net neutrality is not protected. Only Congress can do this.

—Ralph I Sato, Honolulu, HI

The NET needs to stay neutral, without it it will lose its sense of equality, big or small!

—Stephen Couche, Portland, OR

Please reconsider this bill. It is in the best interest of a Free Market, Freedom of the Press and Speech to make sure net neutrality can be maintained for all Americans for generations to come. Thank you for ethically considering all options that are in the interests of the people, not a few industry heads.

—Lisa McNorton, North Las Vegas, NV

Please do not support Representative Latta's bill. I don't know Mr. Latta's motives but I suspect that he is receiving money to do the industries bidding. I ask that you side with the average internet user and preserve net neutrality.

—Kevin Allemann, Harrisburg, MO are we going to lose all our freedoms

—Calvin Varner Helen Zika Dan Wilson, Betty Wilson, Mansfield, OH

I have signed other such petitions asking you, the legislators of our country, to protect our ability to use the internet freely as a medium for the sharing of information, a haven for small-companies to engage in commerce, and as a communications service to keep in touch with our friends and relatives. Unfortunately, it seems the corporations have forced the issue down to the wire, and the only thing standing between the internet as a telecommunications service that all may use freely as was intended, and a censored and controlled internet -- as we have seen in places such as China, albeit for much different reasons. I know these companies are not the literal boogeymen some make them out to be. They do not want to censor us just for the sake of censorship, but they will censor us if it means even an extra dime in their pockets. It is up to you, our elected officials, the men and women that we, the people, have chosen to represent us, to put a stop to this travesty. It is up to you to end this threat of censorship now before the internet as we know it, as a service created for the sharing of knowledge and ideas, comes to sorrowful end. I implore you to think about what I, and so many others, have said in these petitions; but whether or not you vote against this bill, I thank you for reading.

—Jesse Slomka, Bemidji, MN

The Internet is not just for the rich and wealthy. It is for everyone, it helps to ensure everyone has a fair chance, not just those with deep pockets.

—Sherry L. Wilber, Mentor, OH

If it ain't broken, it does'nt neef fixing. Internet must be kept Free, even if we have to elect a new Congressn & Senate. It is the will of the People!

—Orlando Bonnelly, Glendale, CA

Do the right thing!!!!

—Nancy Neskauskas, Santa Fe, NM

Open internet businesses are doing quite well and our right to information and free access should not be compromised. The internet has brought innovation to thousands, and a daring pathway for handicapped and impaired people to network. Don't let the big companies ruin net neutrality.

—Mary Matzek, Murphys, CA

Net Neutrality is a necessity and a Constitutional right. Destroying Net Neutrality is unconstitutional and must be stopped.

—Thomas A. Hale, Sebastian, FL

Open access to the internet (which was developed by the government of the USA) is intended for the use of all citizens. It is not the private purview of any corporation that can afford to buy it.

—L m. Klungness, Mt. View, HI

I'm guessing you'll not be voting for this bill. Please ask other liberal and progressive Members of Congress to vote against this bill. Thanks for your support of Internet Neutrality.

—Dennis McPherson, Lee's Summit, MO

This is a grave threat to our democracy.

—Ms. Diana Wilson, Westminster, CO

Please, please, please read any bill very carefully. Think everything through. Don't vote in anything that could be seriously abused to raise costs for consumers, or even just website operators/owners, or that could be used to direct consumers to/away from certain websites and companies by slowing down websites or making other websites super fast at loading.

—H Saulmon, Huntington, IN

Your constituents are increasingly becoming aware of when you function in their best interest and when you go against what is best for the public to function in your own best interest. I would keep this in mind as you move forward on the issue of net neutrality - as well as all of the other issues you face as a REPRESENTATIVE of the people.

—Elizabeth Perrachione, Champaign, IL

Monopolies like these internet providers have no right to completely control the people and have no-one else challenge them.

—William Curt, Port Republic, VA

STOP IT!!!!

—Steven J. Baril II, Hesperia, CA

There is no justification for not reclassifying Internet as broadband. Reject HR 4752; protect open internet, not corporation control.

—Lelia Bogard, Coarsegold, CA

Letting companies control who has what access is detrimental to the public's interest in freedom of speech.

—Keith Bennett, Humble, TX

This bill endangers what the internet is and favors big business over the common good. Representative Latta should be ashamed of himself. I call upon the US Congress to reject this bill and embrace the Internet as a Title II Common Carrier.

—Charles Eaton, Ellensburg, WA

Plutocrats have toooooo much power. Please stop this nonsense now. Vote for the people, not Wall St

—Judy L., Carson City, NV

To protect true Net Neutrality please consider how to reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act.

—Susan Weber, Soquel, CA

Voting to allow ISPs to control content and speed to their customers is allowing an already dangerously powerful monopoly even MORE power, when what we SHOULD be doing is examining these companies for illegal monopolies, cartels and collusion. Net neutrality supports open communication, freedom of communication, and the birth of new ideas and new frontiers. All things that America should stand for - not being in the pocket of telecom corporations.

—Tristan Turlough, Signal Hill, CA

The Internet is still the only place for REAL freedom - let's keep it that way!

—Leanne Sarkisian, Sherman Oaks, CA

We are running of time for you guys to not screw up the entire basis for the information economy. Do the right thing.

—Mark Watkins, Decatur, GA

Save net neutrality!

—Daniel Borgstrom, Berkeley, CA

It will be telling to see which representatives support this bill and which representatives do not. I'm a constituent who pays attention to who votes, or does not vote, for what.

—B Cannon, Rocklin, CA

Please fiercely protect net neutrality and vote against Rep. Bob Latta's H. R. 4752. Thank you. Sincerely, James L. (Jim) Whittier, Ph.D. 98 Byrd Drive, Apt. E Steilacoom, Washington 98388-1677 253-582-3682 <jimwhittier@gmail.com>

—James L. (Jim) Whittier Ph.D., Steilacoom, WA

Latta's bill should be called the Broadband Monopoly Bill, because that's what it would enshrine. It would allow Comcast, Verizon, and the other cable providers to continue to shake down large companies like Google, Apple, and Netflix, while strangling any small innovative startup that wants to compete.

—Michael Heister, Los Angeles, CA

We need an open internet.

—James M Hughes, BLOOMINGDALE, OH

I know this is one of those mass emails that say the exact same thing across the board, but net neutrality means a lot to all of us. Without net neutrality, thousands of online businesses would cease to exist. On top of that, recreational use would be dictated by our government and our internet service providers, and not by the people who use it. We would lose our freedom of choice, and that isn't what America stands for. Thank you for your time.

—Jacob Adrian Stepp, Dewey, OK

Stop screwing the consumer!

—David A Shewmake, Edinburgh, IN

As employees of the American people you are among your other duties required to do things for the people and not for your own personal interests. internet neutrality is in everyones best interest. the greatest and fastest way to find out information and learn is in danger, you must protect it. tell the corporations and any of your fellow congressmen that they are wrong and that they need to abandon this crusade against neutral internet and against freedom of speech, a constitutionally guaranteed right of every American citizen. you dont want to be in violation of the constitution ever but especially now. now when people have had enough of a dysfunctional government and are already on the verge of rebellion as it is it wouldn't take much more to tip the scale..., people have already died, obama finally crossed one line too many and will be impeached soon. finally people have seen enough. dont be the congress that sparked the next revolution. do the right thing and stand up for the people, do the American thing and make the internet companies continue to serve the people. keep in mind that while you may not care about the internet or use it your family, your children might. your grandchildren will care for sure. dont be a disappointment to future generations. take a stand for whats right now. be the congress that said "we stand for the people and against corporate control" on an unrelated note, please guys dont let the first Amendment to our Constitution be repealed. once again it would affect everyone. stand by the Constitution and stand by the second amendment as well, not that its ok to ignore others, its not but those two being the first two are damn important and the ones most targeted. removal of either of these amendments will result in a rebellion and many Americans would die. im not trying to be rude or threaten anyone, im simply and calmly informing you that we the people require of you our congress to do what you where elected to do, and that is to preserve and ensure our rights and freedoms remain intact. after all you are also a citizen of this great, sorry once great nation. its been allowed to slip too far. as a country we have lost so much. industry, respect, jobs, a middle class and just as bad, we have lost our national dignity. outclassed by foreign cars, outclasses in technology and our nation, the pioneers in most modern technology and the only ones to get people on the moon are now last in line as far as modern countries go. you guys have alot of work to do to get our country back on track. i hope you can deliver. thank you all for your time and consideration of my words here.

—The Eternal Hater, Fort Bragg, NC

please don't send us into the greedy territory of ala carte services like airline flight.

—Judith Knaiz, Pittsburgh, PA

As a professional journalist for many decades, I believe Net Neutrality is essential for ourselves and for future generations.

—Beverly A. Eckman-Onyskow, Alamogordo, NM

We expect congress to represent the best interests of constituents, so I hope you will not support a bill against an open internet.

—Betsy Gingerich, Kalamazoo, MI

Is the FCC the publicly paid agency that allowed moguls to own multiple media in the same area? I was thing that change was made by FCC! And now they are taking care of us pesky citizens..., You are all so honorable ! Please remember that honor when you look in the mirror. One day I pray that honor actually returns to our government.

—B Darsey, Roswell, GA

Protect free speech and an even playing field--keep the Internet open to all.

—Mary Ellen Ruesch, LODI, WI

Don't vote for this bill--vote to protect Net Neutrality!

—Nancy Yoksza, West Hartford, CT

...and many votes against you!

—Stewart Hartsfield, Lake Oswego, OR

A free and FAIR internet is important to anyone who wishes to have any say in the future. It allows information to be disseminated, opinions to be formed and moreover allows for everyone to stay informed. Letting ANYONE control what goes on the internet stops this information from spreading and could create a worse environment for the future. Keep the internet free.

—Richard Tuppen-Jones, Whittier, CA

Please represent your constituents, not your lobbyists.

—Donald Eckhardt, Canterbury, NH

Anyone voting against net neutrality is a traitor and should be imprisoned.

—Michael L. Marlin, Sacramento, CA

Stop this madness!

—Rhonda Todd, Lathrop, MO

Do not yield to the big-money interests that want to tilt what has been a level playing field in their favor.

—Alan Gilbert, New York, NY

Save American citizen's Net Neutrality.

—Jan Struhar, Prince Frederick, MD

The fascists wealthy own all of our media & control what we see & hear plus their subliminal messages. We MUST keep the web open or we will die as totally controlled economic slaves.

—Geri benner, Santa Barbara, CA

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Brad Weisbecker, Fullerton, CA

There's always someone in Congress ready to act on behalf of Big Business and against the interests of consumers and the general public.

—Darrell Noel, New York, NY

Regarding Net-Neutrality and the position of the FCC (Tom Wheeler, Chairman, and a former lobbyist for the industry he regulates) being run as a captured department for the industries it is supposed to regulate, all one has to do is look at the Communications Act of 1996 and the damage it has done to Democracy, the allowance of consolidation of Radio, TV and Print can be seen in that 4 or 5 companies control about 80% of the communication market and here in So. Florida we haven't seen any Progressive Radio since 2000 when Clear Channel bought up radio left and turned everything to radio right. I have been streaming since the early 2000's and using satellite radio for my news and info, since then I am forced to pay for what is no longer available on "Public Air Waves". The Cable Companies and terrestrial Radio mostly lean right and now the only open Communication Media, is the Internet and the developing threat of the right taking over the only means of free and unfettered information sharing available to the people of this Country is not only anti-Democratic, but Oligarchic or in simpler terms the Robber Barons are back and the question that all public servants must answer is who do the Governments' of this Country serve the people or the corporations.

—Mr. Michael Greenspan, Coral Springs, FL

For the love of god and freedom please sure that the net goes unhindered ,open, and unexploited.

—Steven Hardy, San Francisco, CA

Your vote for this would mean your the end of your politics. Money does not always win elections.

—Fred Gosling, Beaumont, TX

The decisions you make on a global network will affect the world. If I have a choice to purchase services, I will want to buy them where my traffic is equal to the next and not downgraded. I may only be a small business, but passing this bill will mean that I move all internet related business from the USA to another country which doesn't discriminate against my internet traffic.

—Tom Courtney, ,

Please protect the last vestige of the first amendment and protect free speech instead of curtailing it. God save America and the constitution.
—Zoltan Buday, ,

The USA = Government of the Corporations, by the Corporations, for the Corporations. When will Congress start looking after the interests of Main St. instead of just Wall St???? Let the FCC do its job: Defeat this special interest bill which will turn the people of the United States into serfs for big Corporations
—Thomas Bow, Jersey City, NJ

That is crucial!
—Giselle H Piburn, Santa Fe, NM

Leave the internet open.
—Jennifer Macy, Emigrant, MT

Currently Broadband my Internet service costs me $65.00 per month. According to Reports I've read it costs Internet providers about $5.00 per month to provide this service. Now these companies are trying to Lock up this Cash Cow by Hamstringing the FCC by pushing their agenda through Congress. You need to put a Leash on these companies either Leave the Market open for true competition or Place the current Providers under Monopoly & Utility Rules that Limit their Price Gouging Pricing Policies.
—Michael W. Peil, Renton, WA

Nobody will be happy until all moving parts stand still —Kurt Schwartz, Randolph, NY

It is a tradition in America: Open and free access in public facilities.
—Paul Richey, Portland, OR

I hope you've already seen it. John Oliver's segment on Net Neutrality says it all. Please protect this important freedom.
—Phyllis Hawkins, Darien, CT

Take a stand and make America a WORLD LEADER again. Preserve Net Neutrality now and forever. All ISP's already have all the powers they need to limit excessive use - use beyond the norms for the contracted services. They have effectively used this to curtail file sharing, business use of residential service, spamming and hacking. ISP's demands to charge by the bit is nothing more than milking Americas increasingly impoverished citizens to increase profits by what amounts to a monopolized industry, as anyone who wants to sell internet services must first buy it from a few corporations and then pay the same corporations for access to customers "last mile". PREVENT THIS MONOPOLY ABUSE from destroying one of Americas vitally needed resources. INFRASTRUCTURE, education, COMMUNICATION, transportation, energy. ALL are needed to support a growing and robust economy. America after WWII developed the world standard in all of these, either through public works, or rationally recognizing the monopoly needed to provide them privately, and then REGULATING for the GOOD of the NATION, it's peoples, and businesses. America abandoned these efforts in the prelude to the 21st century, the beginning of the time of GREED. Business subtly influenced through lobbyists and self serving research, then overtly bought our political system, bought the laws to raise ever greater short term profits, funnelled to fewer and fewer ultra, then mega rich, who then paid more for more laws to increase profit by ignoring, cannibalizing, effectively monopolizing more and more but with less and less regulation, all in the pursuit of higher next quarter profits as excuses to reward themselves further. Stop the insanity, preserve net neutrality, make it permanent.
—Russell Higgins, Brooklyn, NY

Its not OK to open our mail or emails.....Protect our right to privacy. This is not an option in a democracy!
—Barbara Ward, Berkeley, CA

Protect net neutrality at all costs—a democracy is nothing without free and easy access to good information.
—Lawrence Rogovin, Arlington, MA

Lori Price Editor-in-Chief, CLG <http://www.legitgov.org>

—Lori Price, Bristol, CT

Net neutrality = free speech. Uphold the First Amendment!

—Joel Watt, Indio, CA

The internet is the most important tool man has ever devised. It must be protected for the benefit of science.

—Stacey Spiegel, Lancaster, CA

This involves YOUR freedom too. Please don't SELL OUT your freedom!

—William Widdoes, Salem, OR

Open range is the same thing and look what happen there.

—David Rosenberg, Red Bluff, CA

<http://www.seconnecticut.com/internet.htm>

—Robert L Vogel, East Lyme, CT

Please do not mess around with Net Neutrality. It is vital to the future of our country. Do not support Bob Latta's bill, H.R. 4752.

—Sandra Stein, Ithaca, NY

Come on folks! Give us a break.

—Joanne Thiele, Norfolk, VA

Please do not let big money kill net neutrality. Do not cave... Thanks, Derek and Jen

—Derek and Jen, Eureka, MT

Hey! Stop trying to destroy the internet. We beat you before. How many times do we have to kill you before you finally lie down and die?
You're greedy monopolies. We're just people. But we WILL win.

—Edward Vaughn, Everett, WA

Protect net neutrality.

—Lisa Langbein, Plainfield, IL

As a tax-payer that works within the IT industry, I understand my future livelihood depends on an open and free internet. Anything less would be disastrous for our Industry and employees. If an open internet does not exist in America, I would gladly move overseas (along with my Tax money) where the EU has taken the proper steps to ensure that Big Businesses will not and can not dictate the future of the resource that provides my livelihood. Thank you, Eric —Eric Mendes, Dorchester Center, MA

I'm counting on you!

—Gail T. Mosley, Shakopee, MN

The internet should be considered a public utility, not a luxury sold to the highest bidder.

—Angela M Mogin, Redwood City, CA

NO TO H.R. 4752!!!

—Maura Stephen, Spencer, NY

Listen to the people, it's your job.

—Marianne Sippel, Nevada City, CA

It is critical for the future of our people to have FREEand EQUALaccess to internet bandwidth and resources.

—Marko Siladin, Henrico, VA

Please, do not let our country join the growing list of nations that are limiting the fair and equal access of the internet to their citizens. The royalty free sharing of the world-wide-web by its creators will go down in history as an extraordinary act of altruism. Please do not re-package that gift with restrictive rules that are paid for by mega corporations. There are so few level playing fields left for the 99%. Please don't take this one away from us too.

—K Gass, norwich, CT

Please don't sell the Internet to the highest bidder.

—andrew Wilson, rapid city, SD

Again I urge you to save our remaining commons.

—Lewis Patrie, Asheville, NC

We are paying close attention!

—Linda M Thomas, Cornell, MI

A free internet is a prosperous internet, and through a prosperous internet our country and its citizens progress. The loss of internet neutrality has the possibility to be second only to the destruction of the climate for shitting on the future generations - only the effects of the loss of net neutrality would be felt much, much more quickly. Information should be free. Competition should be allowed to drive progress. The internet needs to remain open.

—S Francis, Walnut, CA

This is a vital issue and we must keep the internet open at every level.

—Cristian B Skinner, Durham, NC

Keep the internet open. The reason the web is so great is that we all have equal access to it! Don't divide it.

—Emily Korman, Flanders, NJ

A vote for this bill is not just a vote against the open Internet. It's a vote against 21st-century small businesses and the American dream. Don't let voters see you as someone who hates small businesses and killed the American dream. Vote against this bill.

—Sarah Ammerman, Columbus, OH

PLEASE!

—Vic and Barby Ulmer, Saratoga, CA

Remember the 1st amendment?! Don't sell us out to big corporate interests! There are more important things in the world than money...secure our freedom before it's too late! Once they take away "net-neutrality" - we'll NEVER get it back!!!

—Benjamin J. Burlingame, Ashland, OR

I urge you to support Net Neutrality, it's what consumers want. Thank you.

—Teresa McBride, Mountain Ranch, CA

A bought & sold government is worthless. - Alexander Hamilton

—Robert Barricklow, Las Vegas, NV

A vote in support of this bill is not in the interest of the American people.

—Barbara Bengtsson, Seattle, WA

Dear Butheads, Get off your duffs and kick Bob Latta AND his bill, fire Tom Wheeler's ass, and vote to RECLASSIFY INTERNET PROVIDERS AS COMM. CARRIERS.

—Steven Rudy, Cary, NC

The internet is vital to our democracy.

—Kathy Shimata, Honolulu, HI

This is urgent to forward our countries goals!

—Mark Feickert, Albany, CA

The future of democracy, which is based on the free exchange of information, is at risk here. Please protect net neutrality.

—Rachel Pratt, Oak View, CA

Our cable is turtle slow, they never maintain the cable wire like they are suppose to do & we pay an outrageous $ 50 a month ! This merger will only make things much worst !!!!

—Mrs & Dennis Roderigues, Pinellas Park, FL

We don't need any corporations to tell us what we can see and hear. What we like or don't like. Keep the internet open and free. I will drop any corporation that takes my internet away or makes me pay a higher price for my internet.

—Molly Noone, Chandler, AZ

Net neutrality doesn't only affect U.S. citizens. The internet isn't a "national" entity. Passing this bill would piss of millions of people world wide.

—Bernard Green, Wellington,

Be a representative of your people, not a representative of a few corporations. There is nothing in passing this bill that will make your voters happy.

—Evan Kice, Richardson, TX

Please, do not let this bill become law. It is designed solely for giant companies to be able to pay for faster traffic on the web destroying competition and startups. This proposed bill is disastrous, to say the least.

—Ryan Satterfield, Camarillo, CA

Dear Sirs. Guess its not needed to remind you you're there to protect the people and citizens, not the enterprises. Thank you

—Jose Venegas, ,

Participation - That's what's gonna save the human race Pete Seeger (1919 – 2014)

—Glenn Rice, Portland, OR

Don't let yourself be bought out by the corporate evil. Remember your morals and stick with them. Please don't inflict this bullshit on the people just to increase your own power complex.

—Nate Stewart, Roanoke, VA

This is from an article on <http://arstechnica.com/tech-policy> referencing the traffic slowdown on internet-availability of Netflix films to it's customers. If you have Verizon, the company warns you that Verizon is crowded right now, and Verizon's having a fit: "Netflix refuses to comply with Verizon "cease and desist" demands" Netflix will keep telling customers that ISPs are to blame for bad video. by Jon Brodtkin - June 9 2014, 3:24pm PDT BROADBAND LAWSUITS 167 Yuri Victor Netflix said Monday it will not stop telling consumers that Internet service providers are to blame for poor streaming video. Last week, Verizon sent a cease and desist letter to Netflix threatening a lawsuit unless Netflix immediately stops sending notices to customers (like the one at the top of this story) blaming Verizon for poor quality. Verizon also demanded a list of all customers who received such messages and evidence that each message was justified... While Netflix caved in to Verizon and agreed to pay for a direct connection to its network more than a month ago, it's not paying off for customers yet. Verizon hasn't established enough links with Netflix to improve quality and promises only that the upgrade will be done by the end of 2014. Hyman [for Netflix]: it is "Verizon's responsibility to provide its customers with the service it has promised them... It is my understanding that Verizon actually upsells customers to higher speed packages based on improved access to video services, including Netflix. Verizon's unwillingness to augment its access ports to major Internet backbone providers is squarely Verizon's fault... To try to shift blame to us for performance issues arising from interconnection congestion is like blaming drivers on a bridge for traffic jams when you're the one who decided to leave three lanes closed during rush hour." FURTHER READING VERIZON CLAIMS NETFLIX IS DRIVING ITS CUSTOMERS AWAY, THREATENS LAWSUIT Verizon says its stellar reputation is hurt when Netflix blames it for bad video. FURTHER READING NETFLIX GOT WORSE ON VERIZON EVEN AFTER NETFLIX AGREED TO PAY VERIZON Verizon lags behind Comcast in upgrading direct connections with Netflix. "Failure to provide this information may lead us to pursue legal remedies, and Verizon reserves all rights in that regard," Verizon wrote. Expecting more of the same if you don't do something to ensure Net Neutrality...

—Beate Nilsen, Malibu, CA

I intend to actively work to defeat any candidate that is in the pocket of service providers who seek to destroy the open internet by killing net neutrality. I know that you understand what is at stake for small businessmen if these companies are allowed price us out and shut down competition as they pick and choose the winners in internet commerce. If you vote for this legislation it is a clear indication that you are anti small business and I promise to work tirelessly for your defeat.

—Mark Wesley, Charlotte, MI

This is critical. Please stop this bill.

—Donna Berry, Eau Claire, WI

Seriously, please please keep the Net Neutral. Make the FCC reclassify the Internet as telecom service !

—Stephanie Stone, Brunswick, GA

People need net neutrality to be effective in their professional and private lives. Don't kill it!

—Gisela S. Ray, Gresham, OR time to stand for the people NOT THE BIG CORPORATIONS

—Michael C Kimes, post falls, ID

A neutral internet. Protect us from the greedy.

—Henry Neal Camp, Tempe, AZ

This is not capitalism.

—Steven Willhite, Fort Worth, TX

We invented the internet, but we are 30th in the world in quality. What does this say, who do we hold accountable. Please defend the future of our country.

—Dennis N Schurr, San Francisco, CA

Net neutrality is my right as a user!!!!!!

—Robert Delgreco, East Hartford, CT

Republicans are butt wipes!

—Mr. L Ss, Atlanta, GA

Allowing ISPs to privilege some traffic over others is not alright. Granting ISPs the ability to designate some traffic as "fast lane" while the rest is relegated to low bandwidth is not neutral, not fair, and not in keeping with how the Internet was conceived, nor how it should ever be managed. In order to maintain a diverse and vibrant internet culture for information, art, and business, the playing field must remain level. Otherwise, the entry level expenses may become too great for start-ups or small businesses to bear. Likewise, as consumers, everyone contributed to the success that is the modern Internet, and to restructure it now is a betrayal both of our investments and our trust. Please classify all broadband data networks and companies as Common Carriers, with all of the benefits and regulations that that entails. -Jeremy Loveall

—Jeremy Loveall, Duncan, OK

The fact that this is even making it to vote is utterly disgusting.

—Ryan Jewell, Ormond Beach, FL

Keep equal access to all internet sites.

—James Allen, Cherry Hill, NJ

This would take America in the wrong direction. End this travesty, NOW!

—Jack Schlotte, San Diego, CA

Don't let big telecom destroy one of the few fair playing fields left!

—Mr. Patrick Mounts, Portland, OR

How much really needs to be said about this. Protect the public's interest. Protect Net Neutrality!

—Eric Russ, Brooklyn, NY

The open Internet is Humanity's potential.

—Jim Betz, Elizabeth Lake, CA

Do the right thing, the thing the people are insisting you do or stand down.

—David Charles, Pac Pal, CA

Please take these words into consideration. Sincerely, Ashley Schmidt

—Ashley Schmidt, Atwood, KS

it is only fair

—Asma Jafri, Livermore, CA

Listen you IDIOTS!!! The USA is based on PERSONAL (meaning ONE ACTUAL HUMAN BEING!!!!!!) FREEDOM. To EVEN SUGGEST a "non-human" entity has the SAME rights as ANY HUMAN BEING is NOTHING LESS THAN TREASON AGAINST THE ENTIRE HUMAN RACE!!!

—Chris Griffith, Dennisport, MA

I just read Hacking Politics. It's an important read for those interested in this subject

—Michael Kelly, Syracuse, NY

Stop Big business from stealing what belongs to the people.

—Esther Peterson, Battle Lake, MN freedom for everyone

—MWanders, ,

...and justice for all.....

—Pete Whimster, Aberdeen, CA

This is a situation where big cable companies are counting on the ignorance and indecision of millions of Americans. Regardless of whether they are aware of it, it is our job as aware citizens to protest what companies such as AT&T, Verizon and Comcast would like from the internet: complete control.

—Craig Apfelbeck, Poulsbo, WA

Please, Its time for you to understand that the empire of money and market cant enter everywhere, you already have our lands, our clothes, food, homes, you haver all of our lives, exepct this, our way of expression, our only way to say "hi here we are, and this is supposed to be a democracy", you wont take this from us, from the entire global community, we as connected Humanity wont let you

—Manuel, ,

If this passes in the US, South Africa will follow and that will destroy the freedom we've worked for in the past 20 years and cover up corruption in our country.

—Donovan Solms, Pretoria,

Classify Internet service providers as Common Carriers! You Fucking CONgress Twats! Im tired of your old asses sitting down in your highchairs messing everything up for everyone else! This is OUR internet and you get your fucking hands off of it! You have NO right to sell OUR internet. WE made this internet NOT you! God the nerve of you people.

—Aj Shannon, Ingalls, IN

We know this was the big pay back for the Corp. cooperation to spy on Americans, but it has to be stopped. Two wrongs can never be right.

—LeMoyn Salmonsens, Placitas, NM

You know the right thing to do. Now DO IT!

—Rick Kane, Minneapolis, MN

We the real people that work hard to balance this country will decide on each bill thats right for our country not congress or any other elite official who thrive on greed, negligence, and destruction.

—Robert Bell, Jonesboro, GA

keep it neutral !

—Deasy Bamford, ,

When will the money from big companies to politics stop taking over everyone's free rights? Please think of equality for the whole population that you are supposed to be looking after as your job and duty. Particularly the majority, not just the profitable benefit of the minority. There is enough unrest happening in the world, why push for more.

—Eugene Stadnichenko, ,

Save the Internet for the betterment of all mankind

—Zach Wheaton, Visalia, CA

Anyone who does not believe that this will be a corporate takeover and cost all of us money is living in a dream world.

—Lorna Paisley, East Dubuque, IL

I understand that the FCC Commission intends to propose rules that would enable phone and cable Internet service providers to discriminate both technically and financially against Internet companies and to impose new tolls on them. If this is true, this represents a grave threat to the Internet and to me personally. This would be completely unfair allowing major communication corporations to dictate what I can view, where I can shop and what I can say. This would create the biggest monopoly in the US. Please keep the internet a free place of commerce and communication.

—Marcia England, Vashon, WA

Pro-business favoritism is becoming in-our-faces blatant. Do something for the people - for once!

—Gordn Miller, Walnut Creek, CA

The net is every bit as a public utility as electricity itself.

—Terry Sanders, New York, NY

i wonder if you like being money hungry.

—Panayoti, athens,

Not only would the law to prevent net neutrality increase costs but will lead to further censorship of what Americans are allowed to know. Please do not vote for censorship.

—Louis Kali, Whigham, GA

do something for once that the people really want , we are fed up with all these lies and greed.

—Cathy Burrows, yuma, AZ

We need to keep the internet safe if we want America to continue being the Home of the Free, and not the Home of the Corporations. Please please PLEASE do your job and protect Net Neutrality, PLEASE!

—, Bayonne, NJ

Enough is enough! No pay to play!

—Gary Pierson, auburn, WA

Keep the net neutral.....Fergus

—Fergus Quinlan, ,

Save your own children's future by saving this democracy for them. Democracy cannot exist without free flow of information, without net neutrality.

—Raheel Chaudhry, Columbus, OH

Net neutrality forever

—Pedro Revilla, ,

Our internet freedom is on the line, please do the right thing for the people!

—Trung Nguyen, San Jose, CA

The internet is the highway on which communication travels. Where the exchange of ideas, beliefs and information is set out for public scrutiny. Let this one avenue of freedom of speech remain free and unencumbered by big corporate interests embedding themselves into the controls process - we have priced this country out of affordable healthcare by allowing for profit corporate entities - HMOs, PPOs to embed themselves so deeply into those administrative processes that how, when where and at what cost medical care and wellness treatment is made available to our citizens!!!! protect REAL Net Neutrality!!!

—Linda N. Hutchinson, Austin, TX

Dont vote against net neutrality - for the sake of everyone on this planet.

—Leon, ,

Passing this bill is equivalent to handing internet providers a monopoly, which is reprehensible and unpatriotic in various ways, but most specifically it will cue the gradual end of the open internet, as well as quickly destroying the reputation of everybody involved. There is no good reason to end the open internet, and if a bill's impact on it is questionable then it should be rewritten more succinctly or discarded entirely.

—Michael Davidson, Yreka, CA

I'm requesting that the FCC reclassifies Internet Service Providers As Title II Common Carriers.

—Taylor Adams, Mesa, AZ

This bill is very, very dangerous.

—Fergus Wheeler, ,

The Internet is like our food and water It is our right to have it support our evolution as a species.

—John Coombes, Sevenoaks,

I am a U.S. citizen and a registered voter in my home state. I must assume that Bob Latta has been bought by big business interests who wish to monopolize the internet. The influence of big business in our electoral process has grown to an extent that can only be described as obscene. It is unacceptable that these self serving, profit driven entities be allowed even the slightest influence over the flow of information on the internet.

—Chris Gix, ,

You will do a great disservice to Americans if you allow net neutrality to become a thing of the past. It is the one place where the size of your wallet does not dictate the volume of your voice. Let's keep everyone on an even playing field. Without public money, it's doubtful the internet would have been built. It is a public utility, not another avenue for corporations to get richer, and control who gets heard

—Mr. Jared Graham, Salem, OR

Though I am from another country, I realize the importance of this matter - as a world power the USA needs to realize they set global standards in terms of governing; making the fast, easily available internet a privilege for the selected few broadcasters and recipients will harm the global flow of information and impede the availability of press, communication and educational resources for the whole world.

—Maja Jarczyńska, ,

keep the internet free and open...
—Jaimey Perham, Bridgeport, CT

Please, don't let our nightmare become reality. Save our net neutrality.
—Nita, Adams Basin, NY

Open Internet!
—Tobias Wikström, ,

If Net Neutrality is not maintained in America the negative implications will be far reaching and catastrophic. These companies acting as common carriers is the way to go.
—Christopher Jordonne, Manhasset, NY

At this point the corporations are going absolutely nuts. You can't listen to anyone else. You have to make the internet a communications' service! The world uses the internet to communicate now--more and more it's becoming the primary way for people EVERYWHERE to communicate, even if this communication is provided through individual services, this exchange of information is your country's--and the world's--lifeline. It's more than a 'utility', it's absolutely essential in this day and age! Everyone communicates with the internet. If this massive network falls under control of corporate interests, the usefulness, the basic democratic freedom, the trustworthiness, of that essential function will be compromised without millions of people ever knowing, while all the time the corporations will say nothing's wrong because it is in their interest to do so!
—John Robert Rutherford Fraser, Niagara Falls, ON

Politicians more often than not used to be those of average ability who merely sought power for power's sake. The nature of the job itself meant you had to know how to lie & then feel no empathy whatsoever to those who'd been so badly let down. We know they're full of shit! That was before! Now politicians in the West can only be described as TERRORISTS! Here is a true terrorist act. They have no justification! No one wants it! We've never been given one earthly reason as to why they wish to do this. The only pathetic excuse offered is some bullshit about porn & national security! From what I see the problem of paedophiles is not that the Internet allows them to operate freely but that politics itself is loaded to the brim with these perverts. I jest not. We should make it absolutely clear - any move to interfere with the Internet will be met with a massive withdrawal of labor. We should all go on strike.
—Michael Aydinian, , this bill would essentially remove our freedom of speech, i.e. our whole way of life and true Democracy, which is how the supporters of this bill want to continue to build a country run by only the rich corporations

—Chimey Lee, Berkeley, CA

Seriously you guys from the congress are fagot.
—CONAN Christophe, ,

Reject forced control
—Letty Riding, Ceres,

Net neutrality should be a simple honest choice for everyone, unfortunately it isn't for those who we trusted to "protect us."
—Bart Habrowski, Stanton, CA

T consider censorship, and surveillance an affront to the progress of 'The Human Experience'. 'We' need to allow unfettered communication between nations AND Individuals. OUR Father, Yaltabaoth feels especially aggrieved with the US, as ALLY of GB... ... Possibly time for Atonement, Compatres?
—Robert Laverick, Sunderland,

The internet has become a public utility. it has become our library, postal office and broadcasting network. It has become our phone lines and news media. It has become an essential part of modern life.

—David Krumwide, Estherville, IA

The internet must be kept open to keep monopolies from controlling it.

—Frank Burkhardt, Warner Robins, GA

The internet is the only thing some of us have. Do the right thing.

—Sawyer, Aransas Pass, TX

Attacks on network neutrality in the US harm the entire world.

—Richard, ,

We are the people not you washed up overlords WE are the people unlike the banksters against the hoards We are the people not a corporation's bloody sword We are the people and fucking tired of being ignored

—Mary Tucker-Pettersen, Austin, TX protect open internet freedom

—F Molenda, orange, CA

I hope that you are still working for the people of this great country, but it seems you are against us. Prove us wrong!!

—Craig Holden, Uniondale, NY

Work for the voters for a change.

—Ms. Theresa Ford, fort lauderdale, FL

Bad! Bad! BAD!

—Jean Beauvoir, Boynton Beach, FL

How much longer do we have to put up with politicians who are effectively BOUGHT by an industry? I'll tel you, till next election!

—Edwin Ackerman, Feasterville, PA

Please take this opportunity to regain the law and put the power back in the hands of the people, not the plutocrat! As corporations continue to encroach on the citizen, it is the duty of Congress to ensure that we are protected — from both foreign and domestic — harm.

—Jeff Cales, Aurora, CO

I have been actively involved with Internet policy since 1993. Up until now there has been no issue that I have felt more strongly about than net neutrality. The Internet as we know it will be destroyed. Please help the American people. Please do not bow down to the large corporations and lobbyists that line your pockets. I have never been embarrassed to be an American until this day. I served my country is a member of the U.S. Navy, volunteer with various Internet security organizations, and do my share to help my country and it's citizens. Please do your job and stop this from happening.

—Gene Jakominich, ,

The Internet belongs to everyone, not to a few comm companies.

—Philip Davis, Marfa, TX

Keep Net Neutrality. Its only Fair!!!

—Claude A Byrd, Florence, SC

Uhm ... no. The American People are sick of our do-nothing, cater-to-big-business, partisan-bickering, corporations-are-people Congress. And elections are in November. Just sayin...

—Anna Burroughs, East Sandwich, MA

The Internet has become almost as important to our economy and way of life as basic utilities are to life and should be protected as such. Do not let the FCC or any member of Congress impair equal access to the Internet.

—William Combs, Bentonville, AR

The open internet is the most democratic part of our society today. To kill the neutrality of the internet would be one of the worst injustices in the history of our great country!!!

—Bart Lawson, Pittsburg, KS

I know you already support net neutrality, thanks!

—Lynne Hadley, Tunbridge, VT

Free speech means free internet.

—Allison Tupper, New York, NY

This is one of those issues so critical it's worth a vow to vote against any Member who votes wrong on it, regardless of other votes.

—Mary Wildfire, Spencer, WV

I'm just an old poorly educated Hill Billy from the coal fields who has spent a great deal of time over the last couple of years complaining to my representatives about the sickening corruption of government. While government has always been corrupt, the majority of people no longer have any "Limits". Unable to even embarrass any politician by the self serving greed that drives the corruption I recently stopped petitioning them for relief from it. And, I plan to stop voting as we no longer have a democracy but rather a plutocracy. When politicians stop serving the needs of the nation knowing the "Money", which they spend 30% to 70% of their time chasing, will almost guarantee their reelection, it's a Plutocracy! If not for the corruption of government, "Open Internet Access" would not even be an issue. We know the internet should be a regulated public utility. We know that it's as critical to the nation as phone service. We know that the way providers choose not to compete in each others areas results in de facto monopolies. We know that American internet consumers have speeds far below much of the world and at a higher cost. We know that providers have enticed city politicians to keep tax payer paid for broadband networks from being used to serve the tax payers in any way that would provide competition to them. We know that consumers are as sick of their internet providers as they are of their politicians. But, we also know that government corruption and greed allow "Money" to control everything. So, we have little hope that any one in government will ever step up and do the right thing. Politicians often appoint corporate people to government regulatory agencies from the very businesses to be regulated, seeking campaign cash and jobs for family, friends and themselves should the need arise. This would not be a bad thing as they know where "The Bodies Are Buried", if one could find that rarest of all birds, an honest person devoid of greed not wanting to use the position to enrich self and friends in the business. That's why the peoples cries for relief from telephone marketers took so many years to be addressed. It was not until politicians saw the pitchforks at the steps of Congress that they could bring themselves to disobey the "Money" and act in the best interest of the nation. For years politicians took the money and when questioned as to why the peoples needs were not being addressed, they read from the script written by the "Money". That's why the music industry has been allowed to selectively sue people, children and old folk, extracting larger penalties for trading songs than any banker has ever received for laundering drug and terrorist money. The banker's customers and stock holders may have paid a fine but nothing every came out of the bankers pocket. And I say, "selectively sue" because it seems no politician, music industry person or any of their families or friends were ever sued even though it's reported that many illegal downloads (Music and Porn) were traced to them. Why has the American government stated that American companies doing business in China may be engaged in corruption by hiring children of Chinese government officials (Quid Pro Quo), while doing nothing to discourage such corruption in this country? Guess they hate to see good paying "Quid Pro Quo" jobs shipped abroad. A family member of an American politician can be given a no work paid position by a "Think Tank", Super Pac, corporation, etc. And even if their pay is coming from those seeking favors from the politician, the Chief Justice says I'm paranoid to think that there may be any Quid Pro Quo going on. He also says, "Money Is Speech". Restricting how much corrupt money that can be spent on behalf of a corrupt politician is not a restriction on speech. But, lets say that it is so. You can't legally use your money to buy a prostitute (Which should be legal), and so many other things. A few years ago performers (George Carlin) were hauled out of theaters & arrested for exercising their free speech. Even today one can be arrested for cursing on city streets here in NC. if in the presence of two or more people. Yet we can't restrict the "Money Speech" of corrupt people trying to buy corrupt politicians in order to enslave & maintain the "Plutocracy"? So saith the Supreme Court. War started because a politician wanted revenge against an other politician in the Mid East. Few politicians willing to vote against that war for fear of being called weak on national defense and of losing support of the "Money". When the bill is finally tallied it will have cost in the trillions to kill and maimed hundreds of thousands. And now politicians that voted for that war want to pay for it with social security and medicare / medicaid funds, children's lunch money, and veterans benefits. One of government's latest scams is to entice people to cover up problems. Rather than spend the needed funds to meet the medical needs of veterans, they offer supervisors bonuses if certain goals are met. They know the goals can not be met with current resources, but know corruption will find a way to make it look so if a little "Money" is spread around. The same scam is being used to get the test results they want from schools. Then when the "Crap" hits the fan, they put on their American Flag Pins and face the cameras to sling "Crap" at everyone else, even veteran groups. Not only is no politician ever held responsible, none ever feels any shame.

—Charles Laver, Asheboro, NC

Instead of supporting Latta's bill, support a move urging the FCC to adopt rules that would classify broadband as a telecommunications service.

—Richard M. Rubio, Pompano Beach, FL

the net is the most democratizing force the world has ever seen. make it a public utility, not the source of even greater profits for the huge telecoms!

—Michael Cicerchi, denver, CO

It internet is an open platform that should belong to everyone. It is lucrative to provide is but also a privilege.

—William Schulte, Rock Hill, SC

You're letting monopolies happen if you do this. Oh, I forgot, you're mostly ALL bought out by KOCH, Big Oil, Frackers, etc. Most of you need to be out, just like Cantor, but only with Democrats who care about us on the lower end of the spectrum, like SSDI!

—Rebecca Trammell, Cedar Park, TX

It's just one dirty trick after another. But it all adds up to the same thing. Everything for the 1%, nothing for anyone else.

—John D Peele, Portsmouth, VA can anyone tell me a reason other than accepting bribes that a congressman would vote against the wishes of nearly 100% of his constituents?

—Stephen Valdes, Bonaire, GA

The people do not want this. It's time to show us who you work for - the voters you represent, or the corporations trying to buy your soul.

—Mr. Rob Nienburg, Palm City, FL

Protect the Internet from companies who are anti-competition and anti-busines. Companies who work with government local to federal to force out any choice for consumer. Companies that officials turn a blind eye to monopolistic practices are used. The Internet should be ruled by the people rather letting a small handful of billion companies tell the people what and how they should use the Internet

—August Laue, Tulsa, OK

It's time for our government to make laws that protect the people instead of the corporations. Corporations have long gotten all the benefits of "personhood" but none of the drawbacks. If they get to lobby and influence politics, they should also be taxed as individuals are taxed. It's only fair. I suspect that presented with that choice they would back out of politics and keep their corporate tax rates.

—Jamie Piperberg, Lewisburg, PA

Net Neutrality = free speech /Stop corporate control of the Internet.

—Charles W Lynch, Shorewood, IL

This is oligarchy.

—Gregory Andrew Nasif, Brookline, MA

In my 69 years I've never seen such an arrogant and corporation-pandering bunch of greedy fools as this crop of congressional members.

—Kelso Ballantyne, Longmont, CO

Please keep the internet free from corporations control.

—Brian Crowley-Koch, Philadelphia, PA

Enough already. Isn't it time to we no longer let big business dictate policy for our country ? This is a travesty that will be looked back on in the history books as a horrible loss of our freedoms which will affect future generations. Do you really want your name attached to this ?

—Jesse Goodman, Waterford, MI

NET NEUTRALITY IS FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND DEMOCRACY! NO TO CORPORATE TYRANNY!

—Amy Harlib, New York, NY

Pretty sure this would also affect members of Congress in ways they may or may not grasp. Decision makers need to ensure they are independently informed.

—Kevin F Kaland, Grandville, MI

If this happens then the internet dies! And with it thousands of lifestyles like mine. We rely on the net so much and now these people want to take it away? Well fuck that and fuci everyone that had anything to do with that!!! If this passes then we will just fight even harder to undo it!!! WE WILL NOT LOSE!!!

—Colin McMahon, Kansas City, MO

I will STOP all FUNDING for any congressman that votes against the open internet.

—Paul Bailey, Deerfield, IL

That this bill could even come to a vote is unbelievable. The open internet is too important, don't let this happen.

—Allen Denette, Springfield, VA

The internet providers had not upgraded their systems so they don't have enough capacity. So they want to charge people and companies for higher priority, but the capacity is still clogged. Force the internet providers to upgrade their capacity, and non of this matters any more.

—Dennis Simpson, Carrollton, TX

I want net neutrality and so do millions of other citizens including those who put you in office

—Randy Gleason, Penn Yan, NY

It is time NOW to reject this reclassification!

—Gail Barton, Naches, WA

Democracy requires an internet that is open and free! It's part of our public commons. Private toll gates curtail our freedoms of speech and assembly, and interfere with commerce between people!

—Ante Lundberg Sr, Chevy Chase, MD

What is happening right now is an atrocity. We cannot put Net Neutrality at risk as it is a Human Right in this age.

—Lily E.S. ,

Let the internet be what it is: Inter-net not Intra-net.

—Amankwah Adoff, Tallahassee, FL

Have the guts to stand up for the people and protect Net Neutrality against Corporate America who will then discriminate and cost the American Public more money they don't have ~ only to line the pockets of the 1%!

—Dianne Jacobs, Tucson, AZ

I have a hard enough time surfing the web as it is, since I'm blind and these infernal machines do not always behave themselves. Great! now the only websites I'll be able to use with ease will be those favored by Big Money.

—Gary J. Jones, Joliet, IL

Enough is enough. This issue will play a major part in who I vote for.

—Mark bernardi, Astoria, NY

I urge you to listen to the voice of the people you were elected to represent instead of caving in to special interests groups with more money than the rest of us. Reject this bill!

—Rachel Onstott, Louisville, KY

I currently pay for internet service at 50 MB/s and since I pay for it, I should be able to consume any content I want without a concern that my content may be slowed, limited, or taken off of the internet because they cannot pay companies like Comcast. The only way that something like Anti-Net Neutrality makes sense is if an internet company allows two options: Option 1, a consumer pays for internet, and there are no limitations to the internet and no cost to internet content providers. Option 2, an internet provider gives internet away 100% free to some consumers and that content and speed can be limited and charged back to the content provider if they choose to. This only works if both options are available. This comes down to a simple idea...you only have to pay once for a service. That means no double pay and no double taxation. Once you have paid for 50MB/s or whatever speed, you get that speed regardless of what you use it for. In fact, these internet companies like Comcast advertise the higher speeds so you can stream video. I urge you to take all of this into consideration when discussing Net Neutrality. This is something that will have massive ripple effects in the future that I think we are not aware of the depth and scope to date.

—Mike Joosten, Thornton, CO

Internet search engines are already distorted by numerous advertisement. Allowing companies to buy faster responses would make the public's ability to use the Internet to find what we need would be even further degraded. Please do all you can to protect the neutrality of the Internet. I really think it should be made a public utility, since it is becoming more and more essential to students, commerce, nonprofits - just about everybody under age 80!

—Kathryn J. Riss, Piscataway, NJ

We, who live in rural America need rely on a reasonable price and access to the internet. Stop favoring the big 4 and work for the common good. Do not pass bob Latta's bill. Thank you. Carmen Miller

—Carmen Miller, Kennebec, SD

The north american internet is already a laughing stock and it is your fault, and your presidents fault for enabling monitoring and disabling freedom. What's next? Halving our meager bandwidth so that a stream of all data of individuals is copied to government and meanwhile letting destructive corporations run rampant, trolling, hacking and remaining an un-monitored fast lane I guess. You erode not only net neutrality but basic freedoms when you hand the controls of one our main channels of expresion over to industry (really? Tom Wheeler...Really?) You are currently a part of making the internet less meaningful less informational and just less useful till it's as significant as TV.

—Matthew Haughn, charlottetown,

This bill again gives monopolies what they want and screws over small businesses, individuals and small non-profits. As for education and the learning experiences that can be had on the web only those who can afford it will get access which leaves out a huge chunk of Americans and their school districts. I guess having an internet strangled by monopolies and slower than most of the world is what we are proud of as Americans!

—Carole Plourde, Amesbury, MA

Net Neutrality is to Internet use as uniform, instantaneous line connection is to Telephone use! The Internet must be ONE SIZE FITS ALL--no arbitrary weighted streamlining for selected elite users and their content!

—James Hansen, Wilmette, IL

Internet service providers need to be reclassified as common carriers. They should be regulated like phone service, and other similar services.

—Joseph Newton, Brooklyn, NY

If you really want an open marketplace, you have to stand up for Net Neutrality. Letting ISPs decide who gets faster access to customers is picking winners and losers in business. I promise you, I will not vote to re-elect any representative of mine who votes against Net Neutrality. Furthermore, I believe Congress should do more to prevent the FCC from creating regulations that would allow the ISPs to create "Fast Lanes". It's just a different way of saying the same thing, and it's still not Net Neutrality. Thanks.

—Blake Fischer, Oklahoma City, OK

This is insane and cause for a revolution.

—Jacob Wilson, Saint Louis, MO

Why would Congress go out of it's way to step in and prevent the FCC from doing the right thing? Can't vote for a U.S. Rep. that would do this!

—Juan Calvillo, Oak Grove, OR protect the people's rights. stand against the giant corporations for change and show us that you work and represent the people.

—Jackie Janecke, hartland, WI

The internet is an unusual place because anyone who has access to it can go anywhere on it. You don't have to pay extra to watch videos on YouTube or post on Tumblr, and so many ideas are exchanged there. From creating a 1,000,00+ following of people who want to decrease worldsuck, to the 15 people who created a Bohemian Rhapsody parody that included all of the major fandoms after this one person said that Bohemian Rhapsody wasn't even that good of a song. If you vote for this bill it will limit those exchanges because everyone might not be able to afford an additional fine to watch Netflix or Youtube. To post on Tumblr or Facebook or the countless of other websites where humans can interact with each other.

—Michele, Hillsborough, NC

These carriers should be under the Common Carrier provision. Simple

—Joe Barcelona, Beavercreek, OR

The Internet is a utility used by every segment of our society. Stop protecting corporate interests and start protecting citizens. Protect Net Neutrality.

—Ann G. Grusin, Shorewood, WI

Comcast etc are working overtime to turn the Internet into a cash cow. Net Neutrality is also a kill target in the proposed Trans-Pacific Partnership Trade Pact. ALEC is also pushing legislation to prohibit small, remote communities ill served by the big ISP providers from setting up their own wireless systems. The goal is corporate control of the Internet. Then the corporations can fight among themselves for dominance, but the Information Highway becomes a tool for those with the most money to tell us what to believe, how to live, and what to buy, buy, buy.

—John Young, San Benito, TX

We need the open Internet where start ups have a level playing field

—A Andaloro, St louis Park, MN

Please oppose this H.R. 4752.

—Cheryl Umberger, Nashville, TN

Fuck you Bob!

—Andrew Major, Glenside, PA

web access should be a public utility- essential services for everyone need to be protected from greedy monopolists.

—Mark Henson, Upper Lake, CA

It's hard to believe that you would let this stratification of society occur. My Internet is already $70 a month, can't imagine how poor the connections will be for those who can't afford that. It's sad.

—Irene Paine, Bigfork, MT

A free and open internet is important to all normal citizens. Having a tiered system would eliminate the ability to gather uncensored information to help make informed decisions unless you can afford the required access and speeds that would be controlled by multibillion dollar telco corporations. Please keep the internet free and accessible to all.

—Jeremy Rouse, San Francisco, CA

We need your protection against these mega-corporations. You are there to protect the rights of the little guys. The net was created to keep a free flowing path for information and ideas. Please act to keep it that way.

—John Marcus Smith, Raleigh, NC

Why are the only things that get done in Congress the things that hurt the American people. Do not vote for this bill keep the internet open and a level playing field for all future companies and people. Wish I had 18 billion dollars then maybe you would listen to the people of America instead of businesses.

—Jessica Parsons, Roy, UT

Equal access to the Internet by all companies and all users is a cornerstone of our modern communications system. Allowing huge cable companies to control what appears on the Internet will be catastrophic to our freedom of speech and action, and to the economic growth of our country. The American people do not want huge monopolistic corporations controlling what we can and cannot see, read and learn about!

—Deborah B. Chaiken, Palmyra, NJ

What happened to Cantor can and will happen to you. Vote against this or we will turn on you and vote you out. None of you are immune to the vote.

—Krieger Kolasa, Allegany, NY

In fact, PUT ISPs under Title II of the Communications Act! FUCK Big Telco!

—Timothy Liebe, Syracuse, NY

The vote on this bill will tell all voters whether their representatives stand with corporations who buy our elected officials or with real voters whose interests they should represent and whose democracy they should be protecting.

—Robert Rice, Irvington, NY

What they said up above. Internet should be common carrier. I mean, come on -- everybody understands that. Thank you.

—Judy Arginteanu, Minneapolis, MN

Dear congress men you should be working on a bill to fix the issue and restore net neutrality, not take it down. Rep. Bob Latta I will be sure to let me friends and on all the media platorms I use know you are no friend of Free Speech. I know you might be confused because now there is so much entertainment on the web that you might thing it is just like cable but it it not. Its the only thing building the middle class and it keeps companies like comcast on their toes because the playing field is level. I know that you are scared if the FCC classifies the Internet as a common carrier that this will open the flood gates for all kinds of regulation. If that is your fear then find a way to fix Net Neutrality, don't block what is right now the only option we have to preserving the level playing field on the internet.

—Nicholas Dunbar, Boulder, CO

The free flow of information is at the center of my life. I work at a large public library, so I see how much students rely on current reports and recently documented historical accounts. Unrestricted access to factual information is necessary, despite the availability of tens of thousands of books. Please don't allow yet another division to be created between the children from well-to-do families and their poorer classmates. That is not the American way.

—Leila Zai, San Diego, CA

Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality.

—ML Polak, philadelphia, PA

The erosion of net neutrality has the potential to have a serious impact upon the rest of the world.

—Ciaran Cumiskey, Trim,

When did making money become more important than creating a society that is just and fair to everyone, no matter how much money you make. Well, we all know its always been this way, which is why the majority of people are always disappointed in our politicians. The men and women who can actually make a difference in this country (our politicians) are easily swayed to support large companies with deep pockets, in hopes to get money from those companies. A politician should always think of the masses (the poor), before the few (the rich). By passing this bill, the rich will surly get richer, and the rest of us will have our freedoms infringed upon. VOTE AGAINST THIS BILL!

—, Apple Valley, CA

As a college student we all need this more than you could imagine. I mean think of all of the individuals including yourselves who will suffer from this pathetic bill. Please kill it! The amount of damage that will come from this it's catastrophic!!!

—Elgin Braggs Jr., Denton, TX

The internet has become critical infrastructure and must be regulated as a public utility to protect the future. A bill to prevent this from happening is just plain wrong.

—Diana Smith, Denver, CO

Don't ruin the internet, reject that toxic, and reclassify broadband as a telecommunications service,

—Peter Podlovics, Szigethalom,

While you're at it, please break up the large telecomm companies.

—Paul Symanski, Grand Rapids, MI

What the fuck is the matter with you bastards!

—George Mabry, Brookings, OR

Keep it open

—Zack Sneed, East Lansing, MI

This is a huge populist issue that crosses party lines and would be to the benefit of any politician seeking reelection to get behind it and side with the people over the corporations.

—Judith K Zitko, Hot Springs Village, AR

Please take a stand in favor of the people instead of taking one in favor of corporate interests.

—Andrew Riggio, Walpole, NH

Don't allow profits over the people...stand with the people...

—Laurie Buckley, North Hollywood, CA

The open Internet is part of what makes the world great, the free sharing of ideas and cultures that otherwise couldn't be done because of distance that some can't travel. And to stifle this is to trample on what the Internet stands for, as well as our own first amendment rights for free speech because these companies will be able to slow down sites they don't like regardless of how much they pay for the fast lanes.

—Hayden Shelby, Shreveport, LA

Allowing ISPs to be the internet police is unjust! It violates our freedoms. I should not be charged a ton based on how much data I'm using because I am a gamer. I pay a flat rate for unlimited internet. I will not stand to pay an astronomical amount because you are willing to pass a bill giving ISPs, thieves in their own right, a chance to rob me more of my money. The internet quality in America is already a joke compared to the rest of the world!

—James Gullo, Moorestown, NJ

You need to protect our Net Neutrality by making it part of the Communications Act to prevent those influenced by internet service providers who want to make huge profits at our expense. You represent the voters not special interests!

—Lloyd R. Jackson, Kansas City, KS

Net neutrality, a fight against the internet monopolies for some reason allowed in this country. Why is it that bibonly have 2 choices for internet in the city of Atlanta? Shut this down!

—David Campbell, Tucker, GA

Stop this madness. Don't let the corporations continue to stupefy the American people. Our television is already catering to the illiterate masses. Will you let the Internet turn out the same way?

—Jason D. Poley, Santa Barbara, CA

We now have more inequality in America than we did after the Civil Rights Act was passed. C'mon people #%%! right now, it's embarrassing to admit I am a US citizen. KOCH BROTHERS PAID FOR DEMOCRACY IS APPALLING.

—Deborah Graham, Madison, WI

Net neutrality is good for everyone except for the money-mad people who just want to enrich themselves on whatever is possible. They don't need to be pandered to all the time.

—Mary N. Swersey, Flagstaff, AZ

Leave the Net OPEN.....

—E Levi Chew, Los Angeles, CA

The Internet (WWW), is an utility, it has become a necessity. Require the FCC to declare the internet an UTILITY and treat it as such.

—Thomas A Clarke, Durhamville, NY

Freedom must prevail.

—David Poretz, Long Beach, NY

I hope SC has a state that listens to the people, not the big cable donations. I do not want my Internet delivered an different speed based on where browse.

—William Peyton White, Rock Hill, SC

Once again, Congress, in order to do their jobs (which is to represent the entire American citizenry and not just the few). has the opportunity to choose and the choice must be to end supporting privilege for the wealthy. Does Congress think that those who are not wealthy are blind to the preferences given to the wealthy or does Congress not give a damn that their bias is transparent? Giving power over the Internet to the wealthy and powerful would essentially limit free speech for the American citizens.

—Janet Ahler, LINCOLN, NE

The Net is one of the greatest inventions ever developed by Man! It is about to be destroyed by the likes of H.R. 4752. It is vitally important for it to be decisively defeated.

—Paul Kaneko, Santa Cruz, CA

Start protecting us the people not greedy corporations

—Susan Clark, SHERMAN OAKS, CA

It's about an open market, NOT a cornered market.

—Mr. Marc Nordlund, SEATTLE, WA

It is not allowed to let anybody mingle in your private life whether by controlling the internet or otherwise.

—Afifee Kayale, Beirut, Hazmieh,

Listen, I live in Canada why do you think you own the internet? The world owns the internet no you! It is us that support it and you need us to support this and I do not support any changes, they way it is fair, open to everyone and no one can censor it and I like it that way. As a Canadian, I resent you thinking you have the right to change anything. You don't, if it should change I would simply not use it no more, I would choose to boycott it until you change it back. It isn't broken so it doesn't need your medal-ling in it, got it!

—Skye Verbeek, Calgary, please reject this bill as the internet is the only way us common people to have any freedom and access to real news since the electoral process has been taken over by big money and the mainstream news is a joke and nothing more than a lapdog regurgitating government talking points

—Russell Blizzard, Rock Hill, SC

do the honorable thing

—Maud N Pollock, SOUTHAMPTON, NY

Do not let net this bill go forward

—Reed O'Ryan, La Pine, OR

An open interenet is really the only thing keeping you in a job. Its the idea that we have say. Every other country that has restricted the internet in any way is currently rioting. See the ukraine. Do you really want to throw out the civil peace for something as simple as some money they throw in your back pocket.

—Anthony Vaughan, Aurora, CO

Keep THE iNTERNET FREE FOR AL!!!!!!

—Joshua Heffron, NYC, NY

It is no coincidence that the First Amendment protects freedom of speech and freedom of the press. It is essential that people are informed about national issues and policy choices so that they can vote responsibly. But modern media - print and broadcast - has been absorbed into large corporate conglomerates that have no interest in serving this public good. They exist only for profit. Fair enough. But they must not be ALLOWED to sacrifice the public's need to know things of importance to whatever moneymaking scheme they choose in their own interests because they WILL. The Internet is all we have left to provide a free flow of information that might not be favorable to large corporate interests. It must be protected by public regulation that is not up for sale to the highest bidder. Please demonstrate which side you're on by voting against this bill - protection of our freedom of speech or selling yourself and selling us down the river. Please.

—Michael Lutter, Boulder Creek, CA

I'm asking Rep. Maine's Chellie Pingree vote against HR-4752, that would prevent the FCC from placing broadband internet service provider back under Title II of Communications Act.

—Louise Lora Somlyo, Portland, ME

This bill would ruin the lives of many people and make every day internet access a pain it's not something I want passed in the. USA

—Johnathan Dudley, Cumming, GA

How can intelligent members of Congress not recognize that there are no longer any (well almost any) telephone (voice), Cable TV (video) or Internet (data) companies left. They all (or almost all) bundle, offering voice, video and data. Therefore they are all (almost all) telephone companies and therefore are common carriers, telephone companies and should be regulated by the FCC as such.

—Charles F. Larkin, Montpelier, VT

It's high time that the politicians in Washington represented THE PEOPLE that have elected them - NOT SPECIAL INTEREST BIG BUSINESS GROUPS. Bob Latta is a TODY for these groups, REJECT HIS BILL.

—Philip Anderson, South San Francisco, CA

Please help put an end to the nonsense.

—Tristan Lamb, Orem, UT

The origins of the Internet date back to research commissioned by the United States government in the 1960s to build robust, fault-tolerant communication via computer networks for the military. Much like the Interstate Highway System, that was created with uniform height and width standards to allow rapid deployment of military vehicles and weapon systems in the event of attack; The Internet was developed to insure communications between military units during the Cold War in case of attack. With our allies England and France the United State created this Network of Networks to protect its citizens and its citizens paid for it. The Internet does not belong to any one company and just like the Interstate Highway state is open and free for all no one company should be allowed to erect Toll Booths on a Public Highway. The American People did not build the Internet to have it sold back to them a data byte at a time.

—Robert J. Miletta, Bridgeport, NY

This bill's legality will be challenged on the grounds of it being a restriction on the ability of people to communicate, ergo Free Speech, ergo a 1st Amendment violation.

—William & Donna J Pellegrini, Hollywood, FL

Basics. We need the internet, air and water. ...and food that isn't poisoned. Don't let the internet become another separate class representation.

—Yuana Blanke, Chicago, IL

Please vote against this bill. Internet providers need more competition, not less. I understand that your campaign finances are propped up by these companies, but don't let that cloud your judgement of what is right and wrong.

—Christian Edwards, San Francisco, CA

Free speech is our American right.

—Linda Jackson, Pensacola, FL

Net neutrality is very important for the sake of freedom! Please DO NOT RUIN NET NEUTRALITY.

—Oscar Backenson, ,

Support an open net!

—Judd Webber, Scottsville, TX

Please stand up for the American People. Thank you.

—Sara, Des Moines, IA

The internet should be a utility.

—Carole babb, St Petersburg, FL

Why isn't anyone LOUDLY stating the FACT that the internet was developed as a defense project (and is maintained to this day) using tax dollars, and therefore NO company should be able to throttle or control it, unless they want to pay for its entire upkeep!!!

—A Ward, Eugene, OR

And tell Kurt he's dead wrong on this issue.

—Richard Yarnell, Beavercreek, OR

Keep government out of our internet.

—Shirley Pike, Marion, IA

This is America! Keep it free!

—Dorothy Staby, Aliquippa, PA

The internet is ours, not big money and corporations that can unfairly influence our representatives due to the unlimited funding allowed to donate to our representatives. Both these affronts to our democracy must be stopped. Eventually We the People / Voters will change what is wrong to service and care for us Citizens that is in our best interest We the People 99% Ned Litin

—N Avery Litin, Minden, NV

Do not Make This A Communist Country !!!

—James Green III, Frisco, TX

Please fight for the freedom of all Americans to have equal, unrestricted access to the Internet! Big corporations already have too much power. Rein 'em in, please.

—Holly Croydon, San Andreas, CA

The open internet has been an amazing engine for progress on all fronts. Please don't let it be limited by the restrictions of just a few companies.

—Stephen Tonjes, DeLand, FL

Everyone I know uses the internet for most of their communications with busy family members and friends, because unlike phone calls, internet communications enable busy people who work long hours/multiple jobs, particularly working parents, to access communications when they have a free moment instead of when they are in the midst of the demands of their life. While the internet also provides information services, communication has become the primary non-work use of one's computer. The internet belongs in the communications category governed by the Communications Act.

—Judith Blair, Ithaca, NY

Net Neutrality is one of the most important ideas behind a successful internet. Please do not make make the wrong decision by allowing large corporations to crush competition by throwing Net Neutrality out the window.

—Grant Ball, Novato, CA

Everyone in the world has a stake in this.

—Lorne M Salter-Concerned Canadian, Point Roberts, WA

free communication is a human right

—Bernardo Alayza Mujica, Sioux City, IA

There is far too much oligopolization of the entire economy - and communications are a most important sector since democracy depends on multiple viewpoints having as free play as possible.

—Stephen Fleck, Long Beach, CA

A vote for this bill is a vote against the will of the people.

—Kathy Reimer, Los Angeles, CA

Keep the internet open!

—Tara Bigeault, ,

I will never again for any man or woman that votes for this bill. I don't care if their opponent runs for NeoNazis, I will vote for the opponent of any person who votes for this bill. Cut this shit out.

—Joshua A Petree, Greenwood, IN

We are watching you

—Lance Gunnersen, Sacramento, CA

Free & open Press; free & open internet!

—Robert G Hilgenberg, Everett, WA

Please protect our Internet, in the best interest of your constituents.

—Karen H Phillips, Flintstone, GA

we don't want a two class internet service

—Mike Tobin, Melbourne,

I am a small business person (micro- one person shop). I NEED equal access to high speed internet and will be priced out of work.

—Michal Bouilly, Camarillo, CA

If you want my vote, represent me!

—Dt, Altadena, CA

it`s pretty ew

—Sarah, ,

Do the most common sense act to not support this idiot bill.

—Dale Noonkester, Potrero, CA

A vote for this bill is a vote against the American Public who elected you.

—Joe Samples, Austin, TX

Net Neutrality should NEVER be threatened, taking my stance.

—Bob, Bossier City, LA

We need you to stand up for consumers and the future of free enterprise on the internet. Verizon, Comcast, Time Warner , et al are conspiring along with the FCC commisioner to kill the internet as we know it.

—George M Bojanowski, Evans, GA

Dear Rep. Latta, As one of your constituents, I seriously urge you to rethink your support for creating a monopoly of our internet.
—Lynn Deters, Bowling Green, OH

Stop your filthy Treason your acts of sedition to injure the people of America. I will not vote this year for traitors Liars and thieves, you are the same old war mongering whores, waging war against the people, people are waking up and you are to have a revolution and in that revolution head will roll I personally i am in the process of instating common law grand juries, and you are to be put on trial if we catch you. under International law, you will be brought to justice, remember that you are a servants breath traitor, and your treason has gone on for to long, get out of my country you filthy Animals, stop waging war for your pathetic monopoly money with out any substancial backing I will be fieling in the international Court of trade agains the UNITED STATES for waging war and terrorism agains the American People I want you alive for the future trials, the system is crumbling thanks to your treaturous acts. You filty fucks, America has the best paid politicians, when the only thig they know how to do is Steal from others, America is no more thanks to you animals, there will be trials, and we wont forget.
—Ray owen, Seattle, WA

Please stand with the majority of your constituents and enable net neutrality to be the law of the land.
—Steven Tope, La Crosse, WI

This is a terrible Bill, please do NOT support this!!!
—Sue Holtz, Boulder, CO

The FCC should classify Internet Service providers as common carriers.
—Helen Bushnell, Lakewood, CO

Net Neutrality is very important for me to keep informed on the issues, will help keep small businesses running, and will save you, my representative, money. We all benefit from Net Neutrality. Don't let it disappear.
—Darlene Elkins, West Richland, WA

Don't vote for H.R. 4752! The Internet NEEDS to be kept equally accessibly by all, in order to continue to exist!
—Linda Lee, Atlanta, GA

Do not let information CARRIERS such as COMcast, Verizon, AT&T be allowed to control who has access to what on the internet. Reclassification as Title II Entities is NECESSARY to protect free enterprise and freedom of information on the internet. DO NOT let this bill pass!
—Brian Romanowski, Leavenworth, KS

...
—Parker Sapp, Virginia Beach, VA

Save the artists and other people who make a living using the internet!
—Megan Jones, Mullica Hill, NJ

We, the people, depend on the Internet to remain neutral.
—Karen L. Lew, Lynnwood, WA

True net neutrality will allow the internet to be the driver for more innovation while allowing faster access for some will make it much harder for start-ups to change things in the same way that google and facebook have done
—Suzan E Syrett, Menlo Park, CA

Open, neutral internet is very important to many people, for work, school, communication, and entertainment. A non-neutral, corporate controlled internet would make the wonderful advances of the internet more difficult to obtain, blocking many people from efficient work and learning.

—Sierra, Fort Collins, CO

As a small business, the internet has been a level playing field for our business to be able to market itself along side the big businesses that are far more well funded than we can ever hope to be, so this is an important issue for the sake of our livelihood, let alone our personal liberty.

Please stand up for the people and not for the money. Marla Gulley

—Marla Gulley, Frisco, CO

Keep the Internet open and free!

—Vincent LaMarca, BROOKLYN, NY

The only people this bill doesn't affect is the rich.

—Norma Madera, Houston, TX

Please keep the Internet open.

—Brian Lawrence, Redondo Beach, CA

Uphold the 1st Amendment - we need Net Neutrality to protect Free Speech and Free Press!

—Elaine Fischer, Roanoke, VA

Why not work for the people you were elected to work for instead of corporate interests?

—Mick Robinson, Santa Maria, CA

NO.

—Amy Bush, Spring Hill, KS

Internet is sacred its what makes 21-st century so unique . And to top that off the INTERNET IS NOT PROPERTY OF THE US

—Marin, ,

I urge the FCC to reclassify broadband Internet access as a public utility in order to save and preserve Net Neutrality and to keep the Net running at the same speed for all of us. I oppose the privatization of the Net that would occur if unaccountable corporate interests are given -- or are essentially allowed to purchase -- preferential use of the Internet. The FCC's focus should be on pursuing regulations that strengthen Net Neutrality, especially since the creation of the Internet was funded by taxpayers like me. The FCC must face the process of undoing the terrible Bush-era decision to deregulate broadband instead of treating it like the vital public utility it has become. Please have the integrity to protect the world's most important mode of communication and to reclassify the Internet as a public utility.

—Sigrid Asmus, Seattle, WA

Bob Latta are you working for the people or the corporations? It seems fairly obvious to me.

—Terri Armao, arlington, VA

The government is ruled by corporations, but for once, grow some balls and defend the people you're being paid to represent.

—Kalyb, Saint Joseph, MO

We're watching...

—Oliver Hansen, Federal Way, WA

don't destroy something that everyone has such a passion for

—Connor Paull, Redruth,

What will it take to get you to stop selling out the American people to CORPORATE AMERICA?! Serve the people you were elected to represent, PLEASE!

—Mari Wilson, Atlanta, GA

Politicians supporting bills such as those by Rep. Bob Latta's either misunderstand or are misrepresenting the reasons why Net Neutrality is so important. I shiver every time they equate Net Neutrality to the government stepping in to control the net where Net Neutrality is necessary to keep the net free from controlling interests. Comcast, Verizon, AT&T, if it were up to them they would piece meal every aspect, service, and advantage the current internet offers in order to extract more capital from us. We don't need or want to go back to the days when Compuserve and AOL ruled. We want the net to stay as it is and we need more competition in the ISP market.

—Yamil Chaar, Ashburn, VA

Broadband carriers must be classified as common carriers. Please protect net neutrality.

—Ray Nelson, La Salle, CO

The internet is like broadcast. It belongs to the people and this bill will only hurt the 99% of us (especially entrepreneurs and small business owners) who can't afford to pay extra AGAIN> Please stop this bill!

—Suzanne Chapman, Round Rock, TX

Please preserve the spirit of one of the greatest technological wonders made by man!

—David Shaibu, ,

We already have near-monopoly in many parts of the country when finding an internet service provider. Please don't give them even more power to start collecting more money to give some customers better service than others.

—Abby K Alcott, SILVER SPRING, MD

The internet was originally conceived as an open means to transmit scientific data quickly and to many recipients. The philosophy was simple; everyone was equal. Introducing multi-tier pricing and controlling the flow of data or content is against everything the creators of the internet and the American people have asked for. Please vote in favor of the people and not big business.

—Steven Robbins, Londonderry, NH

We cannot say we live in a democracy if corporations control our access to information. Please protect our freedom of speech and our ability to access information. Thank you.

—Chelsea Earles, Durham, NC

The idea that ANYONE in Washington would support such an idea is (yet another) OUTRAGE!

—Mr. Thomas Warner, Castleton, NY

Your seat as Representative is at stake should you vote in favor of this bill, which violates the wishes of your constituents. Show us you are bought by AT&T, Comcast, Verizon, et al and I will make it my mission to unseat you. Do the right thing and allow and even encourage the FCC to reclassify these communications giants as common carriers, after all they use common towers. Any other choice on your part shows where you stand and support turf and monopoly corporatism.

—Thunder Sollock, Roanoke, VA

Hello "BOB" ...Freedom RIDERS, "against EVIL" Fighters ..."SOLAR BEARS" AND Those WHO Really Care: PS ALSO Please be Aware of: AMERICAN "CorpoCRISY" $$$ CORPORATE Media CON-OCRACY $$$ & SOCIAL TREASON ~ Definitely Not the Sound of We the People Or We the WORLD* (Washington D.C. or B.C.? , Yes BEFORE Christ OR JUST PLAIN BIZARRELY CUCKOO!) Good Luck on this One for Sure! Greg's Universe Publishing/Th.Trkstar www.GregsUniverse.com On Going UNIVERSE the Thread to Mend... NOTE: This communication may be unlawfully collected and stored by the National Security Agency (NSA) in secret. The parties to this email do not consent to the retrieving or storing of this communication and any related metadata, as well as printing, copying, re-transmitting, disseminating, or otherwise using it. If you believe you have received this communication in error, please delete it immediately.

—Greg Garbulinski, Lapeer, MI

Please stop taking everything from us and giving it to giant corporations.

—Sean A. O'Neill, Palm City, FL

No way, just do the right thing for our citizens of U.S.A.!

—Mel Morgan, Bryan, TX

Back the people, not the big corporations.

—Ray Ruthenberg, Stockton, IL

Save our internet!

—Jim Stewart, Los Angeles, CA

Net neutrality is one of the most important issues for me and many other Americans. I support net neutrality and I want my representatives to do the same.

—Jerish Brown, Los Angeles, CA

The internet is our country's last hope at true democracy, don't blow it.

—Jason Gager, Plant City, FL

GOD bless.

—Harold Hollister, Paterson, NJ

I am so tired of bills that allow big business to charge more money for the same or even diminished service that I was already receiving. Support Net Neutrality or lose in open elections. Reclassify broadband under Title II of the Communications Act.

—Charles Koch, Pottstown, PA

Those who wish an end to net neutrality already reap too large profits. Surely America isn't all about money?

—Louis C. Harris Jr, Cherry Hill, NJ

Someday the people will rise up and you corporate hogs will rue the day.

—Richard Falice, Daytona Beach, FL

Please continue your support for a neutral net. THANKS!

—Carmen L, Baltimore, MD

Protect Net Neutrality by voting against bill H.R. 4752. Stop cable companies from becoming monopolies.

—Jean Gelbart, Oakland, CA

Please know this is one of the biggest issues of our day. This issue is at the heart of Freedom of Speech and the more voice we give to those with money the less everyone else can be heard. There is already too much money controlling legislation in Washington, it's high time you listen to The People and it should be glaringly obvious what The People want now: to reclassify broadband ISP under Title II of the Communications Act. Listen to The People, not corporations.

—Dustin Parsons, Los Angeles, CA

this is a no brainer, please act accordingly! KEEP THE INTERNET NEUTRAL.

—Sandy Rutter, Helena, MT

Reject the deception. The public is quickly catching on.

—Robert Pape, Park Ridge, IL

This is the most important decision that you will make this year.

—Sheridan Sonne Rice, Wrightwood, CA

TV already stinks. Stop it from getting worse. Protect NET NUTRALITY.

—James W Steeves, Albuquerque, NM

Please protect the open internet. We already can't get any "real" news from the television!

—Mitzi Green, Decatur, GA

I urge both Senators Collins and King of Maine not to support this bill. Keep our freedoms and rights alive. Please do not support this bill.

—Frederick Cyr, Van Buren, ME

Now my private message, short and simple: maintain internet neutrality of access for all. Please.

—Bart Windrum, Boulder, CO

Net Neutrality must be preserved at all costs. Information is freedom and the USA will lose its freedom if corporations cram their self serving propaganda down our throats.

—houman Sabahi, Warrenton, OR

Keep our internet free of any charges that are not already there. Keep it open and don't give corporations more money and control.

—Gail Cook, Albuquerque, NM

The Open Internet is one of our rare, surviving, freedoms. Vote against Open Internet only if you plan to retire soon! Voting for Latta's HR 4752 would qualify as voting against Open Internet!

—Carol Anne Ogden, Placerville, CA

Keep the internet open ! Keep net neutrality !

—John A. Williams, Effingham, NH

Reject this Bill, as this is not right. People have been allow to search the internet free and willing. I personally don't want restriction on how or what I search the web for.

—Bianca Wagner, Cincinnati, OH

The USA has the best politicians that money can buy!

—Gregory A. Grimm, Oxford, MI

Why is it that we the governed, are required to keep an eye on those who supposedly are looking after our best interests? . . . that is those whom we elect to govern in the best interest of "we the people", as opposed to the profit interests of corporations?

—Perry Ragouzis, Fort Collins, CO

we all know that the filthy rich don't want the rest of us to have Anything! At least let us have Net Neutrality. I know that most of you are sociopaths, but if you still have a soul, Don't do this.

—Pam Miner, Wichita, KS

This is not what's best for American consumers. We already pay more than most countries for less internet. Please do the right thing and veto this bill

—Alison Patten, Stilwell, KS

I am a physician at Kaiser Sunset LA - net neutrality is paramount for a free and democratic society.

—lyn Pestana, Los Angeles, CA

Please represent the will of the people for REAL net neutrality. Thanks you, Dr Lyn Pestana

—lyn Pestana, Los Angeles, CA

You have to stop giving away our country to big businesses. Leave something for us!

—Judith Kanies, Hermitage, TN

Please reject this bill. Help protect the free internet!

—Claudia McNiff, Tempe, AZ

Look at what a free and open internet has created in our world. Do not mess with success.

—Douglas Russell, Scottsdale, AZ

I am DISPLEASED that Congress has not made a full effort to protect the Internet with Net Neutrality rules!

—Mark Nichols, CROSBY, ND

Don't disappoint the country in favor of corporate favoritism. You represent the people, not the corporations.

—Scott Bush, Lynnwood, WA

Reclassify ISP's as common carriers, its the right thing to do

—Dana De Paulo, Dayton, WA

Interesting that the media that routinely fetes us with a steady diet of the glories of free-markets is working so assiduously to create a thoroughgoing UN-free system of net access. If these "news" organizations were truly interested in doing the most good for the most people, as we would presume would be their fundamental motivation, they would be working for net neutrality with us, rather than trying to rig the system against us.

—Stephen Newman, Martinez, CA

Time to Act Now!!!! why does everything in the US cost so much and we are getting less and less. It's just corporate GREED.

—Elisa Cyrus, Lorton, VA

I fight for my right for free Internet!

—Tamara Cherewan, Winnipeg,

The internet is a place of free speech and free thought. We cannot allow corporations to control this socially and culturally significant and progressive environment.

—Jack Phillips, ,

The Big Corporations are ruining the internet!

—Vincent J. Legnetto, Marietta, NY

Please reject Bob Latta's bill, HR 4752, and keep net neutrality. This is against the principles on what the internet was founded on where all web sites can be on equal footing. This will make it difficult for new companies and startups to compete against corporations. Thank you David

—David Chan, Forest Hills, NY

The internet was created for the public good by the public good, not private companies.

—Benjamin Schlein, Nashville, TN

Please don't. This destroys innovation, one extremely important thing that keeps America's economy.

—Jake Sullivan, Newport Beach, CA

How much more of a message do you need? I've seen the petitions and I've seen the protests. If you have somehow deluded yourself into thinking this is what the people want you are sorely mistaken. Prove to us that we, the people, still run this country. And that you politicians aren't bought and paid for as we all suspect.

—Jeff Schofield, Middleburg, FL

These corporate giants are only thinking of themselves, the Internet did not come about for their individual profits.

—Clifford Ward, Dripping Springs, TX

AT&T, Comcast and Verizon, didn't invent the internet and have done nothing but reap profits from it, but they're greedy and want more, don't give it to them.

—Robert Hord, Fort Lauderdale, FL

I think that the TITLE of this bill was chosen deliberately to mislead. It is the exact OPPOSITE of net neutrality and I doubt any congressman or senator except Al Franken has read it.

—Stephen Wilson, Pensacola, FL

Stop the power grab

—John Bidleman, Sebastopol, CA

Broadband Internet service is the modern day equivalent of the telephone and the town hall. It is also an important entry point for new businesses and innovation. Title II is the only way to ensure that it will not become a cash cow or a tying product for established powerful self-interested corporations. The best evidence of this possibility is the fact that nearly 20 years later the anticipated competition among providers to provide best value over common infrastructure has failed to materialize. And the best evidence that these behemoths are gaming the system is the claim they place on easements for common carriers while behaving as anything but common carriers. They've had their chance to deliver innovative value-added service at competitive prices (not bait and switch teaser rates followed by outrageous prices and contracted duration) - and they haven't done it. Vote NO on this bill to preserve our only hope of real Net Neutrality!

—Linda Risinger, Covina, CA

Wow! Shame on the elites, do you not have enough control and wealth to last 10,000 lifetimes already.

—Star Ship, Nacogdoches, TX

As A Small business Owner I Am Strongly Against This Bill. The Internet Should Be Classified As A Utility.

—Nathaniel Voss, Smyrna, GA

The internet is by definition, a communications communications media. Governments should not ever impede, restrict, control or manage communications. Nor should government permit any individual, business or special interest to restrict, regulate or control communications. You were elected to serve the wishes of the people and uphold the Constitution. Do not erode more the protections Americans hold dear.

—William B Schindler, Los Angeles, CA

This bill will hurt america and the free market. Please do not let this bill pass.

—Mark Serrano, columbia, MO

If you slow (I read "control") the internet, I'll have no use for it. So, it will be back to reading, playing cards, and real, face-to-face socializing for me. I already distrust the "news" put out by our compromised cable stations.

—Pat Sutton, Stanwood, MI

ALWAYS FREEDOM FOR THE PEOPLE.

—Judith Hendricks, New York, NY

I'm an owner of a small web development company. Please keep the internet neutral!

—Sean Smith, Saint Louis, MO

We want the internet to STAY the way it is!!!

—Deborah Crocker, Alexandria, MN

Please keep the Internet free and accessible!

—William A Burton, Stone Mountain, GA

if we lose the internet we lose our freedom. Do you really want more people on the streets?

—Charlie Cutcliffe, ,

We need fair and free access to information and opportunities.

—Nancy Cox, Martinsville, VA

The true nature of internet broadband service is the transmission of information. From Latta's bill: "...`broadband Internet access service' means a mass-market retail service by wire or radio that provides the capability to transmit data to and receive data from all or substantially all Internet endpoints, including any capabilities that are incidental to and enable the operation of the communications service,..." Thus his own bill acknowledges that broadband is a communications service closer in nature to telecommunication (the transmission and reception of information) than to an information service (the definition of which requires manipulation of or changes to that information). As such it is reasonable and appropriate to reclassify the service and acknowledge the errors made by the FCC and others in originally defining the service as an information service.

—Kenneth J Ingraham, Raleigh, NC

Let the FCC do it's job. They should be able to classify ISPs under Title II because that would benefit consumers the most.

—Carlos Rodriguez, Astoria, NY

Open internet encourages creativity and communication, and gives all Americans equal opportunity for digital literacy, ever more important in our increasingly digital world. I strongly urge you to protect Net Neutrality.

—Stacey, Falls Church, VA

Large businesses already have an advantage on the internet. They do not need special perks such as preferred access rights. Preserving net neutrality helps insure a fairer marketplace for competing businesses and consumers as well.

—Dan Gibfried, Kansas City, MO

This bill is dangerous, un-american and just plain unfair. Do your job; protect the American people.

—Joe DeMarco, Yucca Valley, CA

The Internet needs to be free & open to everyone.

—Ellensue Spicer, Bala Cynwyd, PA

A free and open internet is key to freedom of speech in this new electronic media we are in today. The internet should be governed as a utility under Title II of the Communications Act. Broadband internet is the primary method of communicating in today's world. This is a matter of freedom of speech. Please protect all citizen's rights to express themselves freely and openly.

—William Heiland, Oakford, PA

Can we get this buried already? It's pretty stupid that this is even being allowed to get through there should be a mandatory course that politicians have to take about modern affairs before they try to change stuff they don't know about.

—David William Charles Bryant, , we need to stand up for and fight the proposed rules by the fcc

—Stephen Kollenborn, mesa, AZ

We, 'The Common Folks', have been abused for too long. Please don't give away this small pleasure.

—Al Schroeder, Hugo, OK

Help protect our free and open internet

—Jesse Rose, Centralia, WA

please keep the internet open and fair to all. Please respond with your comments Thank you.

—Jay Kramer, Oconto, WI

A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet.

—Michael Sherbert, Seward, NE

Please stand up for Net Neutrality

—James Robinson, Redway, CA

Protect my internet from the greed of big businesses. Make it free.

—Vivianne Mosca-Clark, Williams, OR

We will be nothing without this. We NEED Net Neutrality.

—Tristan Oakunsheyld, penticton,

Reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II of the Communications Act.

—David I. Hogarty, Davenport, IA

Please keep the internet free and open. Do not let big business ruin this too.

—Laura Hubers, Webster, SD

STOP letting them try and destroy the internet once and for all!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Don Andrzejczak, Erie, PA

I don't advocate for many things, but net neutrality is something I will always fight for. This war on the Internet is entirely unacceptable. Please, please, please do not support this bill. It's not what your constituents want. You are responsible for representing us; please do not forget that. Voting in favor of this bill will not help the public or the economy. Make no mistake, this bill is toxic.

—Meredith, Alpharetta, GA

We're tired of corporations controlling this country!

—Jan and Larry J. Slobin, Portland, OR

Please leave the Internet the way it is.

—Yvan L'Abbé, ,

stop these pirates from hijacking the internet!

—Kenny Swain, Fair Oaks, CA

This is a threat to the greatest tool for peace in our time. There is nothing fair or appropriate about giving this power to corporations.

—Christopher Whitten, Willis, TX

I will be watching the votes on this bill carefully, as will my peers. This bill, which could make or break our future online careers, will dictate our voting habits for years to follow. If this bill is voted for, I will oppose said representatives and senators regardless of party affiliation or platform. A vote against net neutrality is a vote against America, plain and simple.

—Alex, Wisconsin Rapids, WI

The Internet is the #1 source of jobs on the Internet, screw that up and you single-handedly kill America

—Alexander Cayford, Springfield, MA

Internet should be a utility and run like one

—Dianne Poague, Columbus, NC

Please don't do this. The network should be for all of us.

—Jane A. Roberts, Delavan, WI

The people are suffering enough, without having this crucial form of information away from them. Do not support this bill.

—Victoria Chandler, Lakewood, CO

If this happens, I won't be able to be active on Deviant Art, I won't be able to talk to my friends on online games, especially my friends who are from other countries.

—Louis Morrell, Moorestown, NJ

Please do not pass this bill, you will bring an end to something so many love. There is an overwhelming amount of people who DO NOT want this bill to go through.

—Adrianna Apostolec, Alexandria, OH

We can't let these ISPs monopolize the Internet.

—Ricardo M. Roxas II, Reina Mercedes,

Net Neutrality is essential for American liberty and freedom of speech. It's the free speech issue of our time.

—Cynthia Creswell, Vista, CA

Please don't kill Net Neutrality...It's our freedom!

—Rebecca Finch, Highcliffe,

Think of your constituents and not big business.

—Pete Eichstaedt, Lombard, IL

H.R. 4752 prevents the FCC from doing the job it was assigned when it was created. This bill will destroy any power the FCC has, making it pointless. Please do not support this bill.

—Kirkland Pearce, Cleveland Heights, OH

One can't help but wonder who is paying for this move to end the open internet and who will suck up the money offered. This time, money should not be a factor. The internet is for all. R.Sheets

—Ruth Sheets, Brookhaven, PA

The internet started in the USA; we need to keep it open and available to all who want to go onto the internet.

—Al Wolf, Monte Vista, CO

The FCC chairman introduced and got a majority vote to allow these corporations to decide who would use the internet. This is so wrong; however, it is a part of the Trans-Pacific Trade Partnership "fine print" agreement. So please be very careful of the TPP as well.

—Peggy A. Hadaway, Moreno Valley, CA

Do not sell a public resource to private interests.

—Greg Cahill, Culver City, CA

Congress needs to give more support to the American people and less to huge corporations. They don't have our best interest in mind. Their only interest is their own profits and their CEO's bonus.

—Frank Harrison, Graton, CA

This America, run by corporations in bed with politicians to further both groups' agendas for more money for them at the US citizens' expense, has to stop and will if not done by our purported representatives first.

—Dan Farris, Eatonton, GA

There are already enough class systems in the world. The Internet needs to continue with equal service to all. To take that away would be to support oppression and limit access of information to the people who need it most.

—Andrea Huisinga, Fenton, MO

Congressional action on Net Neutrality is a test of every member. Do they represent the people who elected them or have they been bought out by the giant corporations? What is their price?

—Lincoln B. Justice, Seymour, MO

This might look like an issue that will blow over, from what I am seeing, this will be a hot topic in the next election cycle.

—Robert Fletcher, Austin, TX

Stop the insanity .

—Mr. Bruce Alan Coston, sunnyvale, CA

Net Neutrality=democracy in this century

—D N Le Fevre, Fort Bragg, CA

All things seem to prosper and enhance the lifestyles of the wealthy in this Country! Isn't it about time, that the people that fund that wealth get a break and get to enjoy some of the fruits of their labor; just out of decency and respect for where the wealth comes from!!

—Lorraine Perez, Saint Augustine, FL

We must stop the madness before it is too late. Ending net neutrality looks suspiciously like another stab in the back of our right to free expression and I cannot and will not support it in any way. Neither should you.

—Peter Ekstrom, lincoln city, OR try to recall that you work for the people, not the corporations. do the right thing and reject this bill!

—Elizabeth Hope, Nerstrand, MN

Let's not be China. Please keep our internet open by preventing a monopoly.

—Tammy T Lowery, Seaside, CA

Don't stomp out our rights.

—Jack Santiago-Garcia, Antioch, CA

We must keep the internet open to all on a level playing field!

—Martin Kascewicz, Fifiield, WI

The best avenue of free speech and information must remain accessible to all.

—Ellen, Rakvere,

freedom

—Warren Bear, ,

Dont ruin the internet. The fact that this is even a consideration is ludicrous. This has to stop now. It's no longer freedom if this bill is passed. Please have the decency to not allow this to happen. NO American citizen wants this to happen. It doesn't benefit anyone outside of the cable/communications industry.

—Richard Lewis, sandy hook, KY

The telcos and broadband providers will stifle the kind of innovation that has kept America on top for the past 20 years. Don't let them.

—Kevin Packard, Cedar Park, TX

Over my almost 30 years of life I have seen amazing changes. While I am sure technology will always continue to develop, I would be saddened to see innovation stifled on the internet by the fees broadband providers could extort from startups and people trying to get new ideas off the ground. Don't let this happen!

—Michael Scott Hackman, Warwick, RI

In support of free Internet and non interference from government.

—Llermo Rogers, Saint Louis, MO

I strongly urge you to protect net neutrality. Vote against Rep. Bob Latta's bill!

—Margaret Sweeny, San Ramon, CA

Congress, I hate you so much. Stop doing evil things like this. You are the absolute worst. Keep the internet free and open. I will hate you slightly less if you do that.

—Zack Nixon Willis, Brooklyn, NY

Please don't support this bill. Thanks!

—Gina Palmer, Atlantic Beach, FL

Don't you think enough things in our country are regulated. Let us keep the internet.

—Seamus Palmer Carey, Easthampton, MA

I tried to give my comments on this to the FCC office in Lees Summit, MO. and they said they were not taking any comments from the public regarding keeping the internet as it currently exists. I was very upset and disappointed that they did not want, nor would they listen to or record requests to leave the internet as it is today. Please do not change the freedom of the internet. Naoma Hudson, 4406 S. Meadow Lane, Grain Valley, MO. 64029

—Naoma Hudson, Grain Valley, MO

Now that Comcast's top guy heads the FCC he wants to give them even more money and charges us all more for the same thing we have now. So congress what are you going to do represent the people or Comcast and the like? There is no reason these people should be allowed to charge netflix more (i was already informed of increases coming btw) or us directly or indirectly. Next they will start giving packages just like cable. Do you know anyone satisfied with Cable? No you don't. It's a ripoff! I will remember if you vote for me or them!

—Tina Mizhir, Port Chester, NY

It's important to take action and remain watchful about these issues, and I'd like to share this on fb with many others.

—Marcus Patrick O'Connor, ,

Please reject this bill.

—Johnathan Tebeau, The Colony, TX

I urge you to vote Against this dangerous bill.

—Ms. Sandra Hoffstrom, Minneapolis, MN

this is one of the Most Important issues of our Time - Don't be on the Wrong Side of History!

—Bobbi Browne, Oak Ridge, TN

Information is free!!! Stop trying to take away our freedom!!

—Andres Gonzalez, Reno, NV

There is only Net Neutrality, period!

—Sarah Unhappy, Cleone, CA

An open internet is really important to Montanans and Montana businesses.

—John Wilson, White Sulphur Springs, MT dont let the merger go through

—Marlon Kirk, lansford, PA

Oil, Wall Street, now the Cable Company - Buying their representation in Washington. Government of the $ Buy the $ and for he $

—Charles Key, Colonial Heights, VA

It is completely humiliating that the whole world knows that the United States has the best Congress money can buy! I certainly hope that you are in Congress to represent your constituents, and NOT the interests of the giant corporations. If you have any integrity at all you will stand for what the people want, what is right and what will keep America in the forefront of technology innovation. Remember you are being watched closely, and I vote!

—Kim Hensley, Stockton, CA

Corporations should not have greater privileges than citizens. Please support an open internet.

—Benjamin Fairbrother, Londonderry, NH

The internet should be a commons with equal access for all. Only criminal activity should be barred.

—Wendy Little, Solon Springs, WI

Title II. Preserve our speeds. We need more competition.

—L A Rose, Grand Rapids, MI

Reject this dangerous bill! The United States no longer stands for the Freedoms it has long been loved for. The Constitution and rights of the people are diminishing. PLEASE STAND AND FIGHT!

—Candace Butler, white settlement, TX

The wrong vote will have political consequences !

—Michael Swan, Seattle, WA

It should be illegal for elected officials to prioritize the interests of corporations while claiming to be a champion of the people. Corporations object to an ICANN stakeholder model representing business, civil society, academia and governments. Corporations object to ISPs becoming common carriers of a service that is essential for every part of American society and needs to be available at a reasonable price. Congress is accountable to the American people, not to corporate shareholders.

—Marsha Sorensen, Ashland, WI

If net neutrality is not worth being protected then neither should Congress be worth being protected.

—Lawrence Higgins, Glen Cove, NY

A bill preventing the FCC from reclassifying Internet service providers like AT&T, Comcast and Verizon as common carriers, is the exact opposite of what will protect the open Internet. Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect real Net Neutrality! Please reject this bill. A vote for this bill is a vote against the open Internet.

—Lynn Todd, Stover, MO

The internet is a beautiful system of communication, and must stay open and neutral so that we all have equal opportunity to business and expression of opinions. Destruction of the Open Internet would damage the economy and violate our freedom of speech. With our lives so dependent on the Internet, we need to ensure our rights come first.

—Alexandra Crane, Chicago, IL

Thank you Rep. Swalwell

—Chance Kaye, Hayward, CA

I don't want my son to live in a world where the only free access to truths and networking is sensed and propagated by corporate money mongrels

—Heather, Ketchikan, AK

Who will use the internet if there is no freedom. The only thing keeping the idea of being constantly connected to the other parts of the world is the freedom that comes with it.

—Luka Stefanovic, ,

Don't make it cost anything or else you're going to have one less person even using any of it. It's not that hard to get rid of internet. I'm sure a lot of others feel the same and will do the same.

—Maggie Prest, Philo, OH

This is a very obvious bill that was bought and paid for by big companies using their vast budgets for Lobbying... please don't let this happen.

—Timothy Nelson, Chattanooga, TN

I don't feel like being a slave to corrupt corporations looking to leech their way into mine and my parents' paychecks

—Tyler, Bartow, FL

Seriously concerned with this... your action is urgently needed

—Catharine Tringali, ROCKWALL, TX

I fear the day I get raided for complaining about the lack of drinking water.

—Laurie Ann LaGoe, Alexandria, VA

Please don't prioritize lobbyists from big corporations over the people you serve.

—Eric Shen, Saratoga, CA

Protect innovation. Protect neutrality. Protect consumers.

—Ebony Barnes, Oklahoma City, OK

The fact that this has even come up is ridiculous, this shouldn't be a question of Net Neutrality all the way.

—Lauren Elizabeth Johnson, Asheville, NC

Please keep net neutrality. The internet does not need to be split up into slow and fast lanes.

—Brendan Murray, Bethel Park, PA

I want to live in a world where the people have a voice, for their creativity, for their passions, for their social, environmental and political needs, for their concerns. It's tough enough trying to stand up for your rights against the corporate bullies on a day to day basis, please don't let them take our voices away too. So far Comcast has lied, cheated and manipulated. Please hold them accountable. They have not earned our trust.

—Dorothea Lucaci, ny, NY

We already have the slowest, most expensive internet compared to other advanced and many 3rd world nations. Now we have private corporations scheming to make even greater profits by ending internet neutrality and charging both users and providers for their already overpriced services. It is time to listen to the citizens of the US, instead of the corrupt corporate culture that will gouge us even more for less. Where is president Obama, who promised Net Neutrality when he ran for the presidency in in 2008?

—Sylvia A. Aronson, Alamogordo, NM

Education is perhaps the most powerful tool against poverty, discrimination, violence, disease, and abuse. Freedom of information and the ability to self-educate regardless of economic class and financial resources is a tenet of a truly democratic society. Any action that results in discriminate provision of information and the reduction of accessibility for those who cannot afford to pay for optimal services (i.e. faster bandwidth) is a gigantic step backwards for a society dedicated to innovation and progress. A step in the opposite direction of preserving net neutrality is a step towards discrimination along socioeconomic lines. Please represent your constituents faithfully by taking every action possible to preserve internet neutrality, starting with the rejection of Rep. Latta's bill.

—Hannah Thomason, Clovis, CA

The fact that no regulation is coming into play into what is becoming a utility just like water or electricity is appalling.

—Brent Maple, Forest Park, GA

It is my firmly held belief, that the open nature of the Internet, that every user is treated the same is what has allowed e-commerce to flourish. The Internet has also become a necessary utility for our modern way of life our children use it in school, our businesses use it in work, local state and federal governments use it to dispense information and collect taxes. the Internet has become a vital utility in our way of life, every bit as important and necessary as gas, telephone, and electricity. This is why everyone needs equal and open access. This is why I support net neutrality.

—Robert Huether, Milford, MA

I'm embarrassed that this is even a thought by people voted into office.

—Joseph Gorecki, Safety Harbor, FL

Comcast & other cable companies already give terrible service and charge through the roof for internet if you don't want cable as well. The last thing they need is more power.

—Briana Caesara, Lafayette, CO

Losing net neutrality is such a shocking and unbelievable idea, it's difficult to imagine what could possibly be on the other side of the debate aside from a very limited number of companies making unspeakable amounts of money. Losing it will hurt everyone- stifling innovation and limiting speech, creativity and educational opportunities throughout the country.

—James Wardle, Fredericksburg, VA

Greetings, ladies and gentlemen. I would like to extend to you a slice of truth. Uncomfortable as it is, inconvenient as it may be to many a politician and to many a megaconglomerate, Internet Neutrality represents the epitome of Free Speech. Is this concept, Freedom, not the basis of the American way of life? Is the ability to express openly and freely share knowledge and information without being regulated by economical pursuits and convenience not what makes people people? Think honestly about what it signifies losing that ability. And the implications it has in the future: People who cannot be Free to speak, without neutral Internet, are bound to get angry. And Empires have collapsed under the weight of their angry inhabitants. That is all. Have a nifty day.

—Lord Daniel of House Andrade, ,

The destruction of Net Neutrality would set a dangerous precedent, effectively telling any big business handling an important commodity that no matter what, they can count on Congress to ensure their bottom line over the common good of the people

—Phillip Balzano, Baltimore, MD

Let's fight to keep this revolutionary, beautiful form of communication safe.

—Zachary Arneson, Bloomington, IN

Don't let cable companies have autocratic rule over the internet.

—Thatcher Whitacre, Gore, VA

Stop the monopoly on Cable and internet and make the internet a free utility of the people

—Lance Ostrander, Rockville, MD

You must stop this. The internet is our future. You can't sell it. We can't have less access than the rest of the world. It'll ruin us. Don't do this.

—Evan Fowler, ATLANTA, GA

Getting rid of net neutrality will just make small business owners like myself have a harder time starting and maintaining a business that can afford to pay employees as well as support myself. Also, why should anyone get a chance to decide what information is most important? In this age the internet is as important to commerce and daily living as electricity and water. Ending net neutrality is ethically wrong.

—Ellie Bockert Augsburg, Avon Lake, OH

This is ridiculous.

—Bobby Kozak, Murgon,

An open and free internet is in everyone best interest and should continue to be that way.

—Susan Adamic, Cleveland, OH

This is going to be one of those issues that can get you kicked out of office if you're on the wrong side.

—Joseph Sharkey, Lincoln, RI

As an Active Duty Military member, myself and those I know in the service support Net Neutrality and wish you to reject Bob Latta's bill

—Shawn Smith, Ft Walton Beach, FL

The prohibition of net neutrality, is nothing but a greedy money grab. It is a violation of freedom of speech, I say that because we have a wonderful amazing tool at our disposal, but with this bill our views and experiences can only be shared properly if we are a multi-million dollar corporation? Schools depend on the internet more then ever now, and any information or research needed to be done, will be severely limited due to this abomination of greed that is being proposed.the greed of this world is showing now more than ever, our planets environment is being changed for ever due to greed, and now access to knowledge is being crippled due to greed. Please stop this while we still have a few good things left in this world.

—James Chepurnaty, ,

This bill is evil, please stop it!

—Tyler Hubbard, Oakville, WA

Give it up you greedy bastards

—Colin Cann, ,

This bill is horrendous, a threat to both our economy and our freedoms. It would stifle innovation and allow the telecoms to carry on a glorified protection racket, carving up this country like gangs carve up territory. It would benefit enormous companies that would give nothing back to this country in return. Any individual with a shred of moral and intellectual integrity knows that passing this bill is wrong, and the fact that this is even debatable is shameful. Having looked at how things have panned out historically in this country, I expect you, as our representative, to go with whoever has the most lobbying dollars, let alone money toward you, public good and legality be damned. In a world where many accept political corruption as the default state of politics, I urge you to hold yourself to higher standard and do what is best for the public.

—Justin Schoener, Newtown, PA

Net Neutrality is essential to the health and viability of the internet, adding laws that remove this critical factor will damage free enterprise and ultimate the US economy. Preventing the FCC from reclassifying Internet service providers as common carriers hurts common everyday users and only benefits corporations.

—Tim DeLand, Royal Palm Beach, FL

I am, frankly, appalled that this is even being considered.

—Matthew, ,

Please don't prove that none of you actually care.

—Kris Buttafoco, San francisco, CA

Please don't.

—Alyssa Fernandez, Allen, TX

In Blacksburg we already live in an ISP monopoly. Many sections of town have one and only one available Internet carrier, and the only way to switch carriers is to move. The ISPs understand this and opt not to reach into each other's areas of town. I have never seen a member of our government even tangentially suggest that this sort of collusion is wrong or preventable, and as residents we've largely given up on the idea that our representatives have any interest in our needs as consumers. I ask you to prove us wrong by supporting Net Neutrality and rejecting any bill that would harm it. Please don't make things any worse for us than government ignorance and neglect already have.

—Mr. Matthew Highcove, Blacksburg, VA

It is imperative that ISP's are not given the ability to farther deregulate the restrictions placed on them to ensure fair use of the internet. Removing such restrictions would not only impact the lives of the average consumer by adding to continued increases to the service cost they are forced through regional monopoly to absorb but can give ISP's the ability to influence politics and the free flow of information based on the companies personal agenda or the agendas of the political or social groups who pay them the most. Free enterprise should be allowed to be free, but not at the cost of the freedom of speech.

—Andrew Ryan Gonzales, Oklahoma City, OK

Please do not cave into Verizon, Comcast, AT&T and other special interest groups.

—Walter S. Jakielski, Marseilles, IL

Internet has, at this point, become so much of a necessity to daily life that limiting the regulations upon companies that provide it (and moving away from net neutrality) could set the stage for a crisis later down the line.

—Kim Blumberg, Austin, TX

I am appalled that this is even being considered. No wonder approval is hovering around ~12%!!!

—Joseph Tarantino, Sarasota, FL

I have seen congress show incredible cowardice in everything it does since the recession hit. You have done little to nothing to help the public throughout these difficult times, and everything in your power to help those who are incredibly wealthy. This is the sort of bill that is a crystal clear reflection of those values. Not only that, but this further remove what little voice the public has left, and will greatly harm the economy in the long run by removing a vast resource from the homes of many people. It's disgusting that a bill like this would even be introduced, and I urge every member of Congress to refrain from further debasing themselves by voting against this terrible piece of legislation.

—Samuel J.H. Coulter, Evansville, IN

96% of Americans have access to fewer than 2 internet providers--a monopoly to say the least. The abolition of Net Neutrality is, at best, an attack on Americans' freedom of choice, and, at worst, anti-Capitalist.

—Stephen Bands, Baltimore, MD

Government of the people, by the people, FOR the people. The people benefit greatly from net neutrality, so please do what's best FOR the people!

—Alex Richter, Elko New Market, MN

Voting in favor of enormous monopolies over the individual people across the land is one of the most intensely un-American things a person could do. Voting against net neutrality is an unconscionable act.

—Zachary Welford, Frederick, MD

With the current state of the internet we have seen businesses started, flourish, and connect with customers like never before. The internet is also a much more powerful learning tool than we could of ever hoped for. Knowledge has now been made unlimited to anyone who wants to learn. I do not wish to see this change in any way, shape, or form. Thank You.

—Brandon Morrison, Lake Worth, FL

Don't ruin net neutrality. Please.

—Josh Ulanoski, Drums, PA

Are you gon let them cocksucking corporate shills weasel their way into making you pay more to access normal high traffic sites under the shameless guise of excercising free speech?? Im not, fuck you verizon,comcast,and at&t, fuck you dumb face.

—Bill Billardson, Sarasota, FL

The internet is the backbone of modern commerce, modern discourse, and modern society. And any attempt to create unequal access to it is a blow against our economy and against democracy itself that benefits only very few. The Internet should be a utility just like electrical power or water.

—Jonah Miller, Boulder, CO

Having grown up with the internet, I have no desire to see corporations make any digital overtures more invasive than the ones currently in place. Protect net neutrality, protect innovation, protect the new economic possibilities of the internet.

—Andrew Herrera, Lake Hiawatha, NJ

Please don't support the end of net neutrality

—Christopher Postma, Leawood, KS

I am a veteran and I strongly oppose restrictions to speech via the internet. I support maintaining Net Neutrality and ask you to reject this bill.

—Torey R. Lyons, Greenwood, IN

Net neutrality helps protect the best interests of the consumer and small business.

—Derrick Martinez, Grantsville, UT

If you represent ME and not business giants exclusively, you'll preserve net neutrality

—Dave Hess, Indianapolis, IN

I am a hard working university students. Protecting my right to do research without having to pay these corporations extra money is vital, especially because I'm already dishing out tons of money for the educational corp. Stop making us pay even more, stop being absurd.

—Melissa Montero, Montebello, CA

Dear Congress, Please do not play with our freedoms. You are elected for the people by the people -- the people demand Net Neutrality. Do what is right. Thank you.

—William Halick, Montclair, NJ

This bill would make it so only well funded organizations will be able to utilize a productive speed for their websites. How does this support the American dream of being able to start a small business and build?

—Matt Horine, Denver, CO

I support further regulation of broadband service providers, they should not be able to charge for a speed of internet that they do not deliver. As I am considering opening my own clinic, this bill is especially dangerous to me because of its anticompetitive nature.

—Patrick Brennan, Wheaton, IL

Big business has no place making laws and regulations for us! We voted you into power to PROTECT our rights and freedoms! Tell big corporations to back off!

—Eric Browne, Norwalk, OH

JE SOUTIENS LE MOUVEMENT POUR UN INTERNET LIBRE !

—Duchemin, ,

Net Neutrality is the free speech issue of today. This is a critically important issue that we maintain inexpensive and uninterrupted access to the wealth of human knowledge and connectivity that is a cable via the internet.

—Andrew Fitzthum, Fairfield, OH

Your bill H.R. 4752 is an insult to every individual in this country. As an American I am infuriated and appalled that you would attempt to push such a horrible piece of Anti-American legislation through. SHAME ON YOU!

—Del Pullen, Dallas, TX

My company, McCort Entertainment, depends on a free and open internet to distribute our content. We do not have the billions of dollars that our Hollywood counterparts do but we do produce content that is just as good. Please keep the internet free for small businesses like mine that depend on this technological innovation for our business. The cost of internet servers to do this business is high enough and letting the ISP's charge even more for what little service they provide would put us out of business.

—Brent Dow, Arlington, TX

I don't believe that big corporations should have a say in how fast or slow certain sites will load just because they happen to make money from those customers. That's NOT what the purpose of the internet is; it is a space where everyone is free and equal and that's the way it always should be.

—Melanie Dodds, Bridgewater, NJ

If Cable providers get to be a monopoly anyway, at least protect the people.

—Austin Andrews, Orono, ME

It's a public utility!!!

—Nicholas Crawley, Denver, CO

Please stop them from getting rid of net neutrality. Getting rid of net neutrality would be like letting the phone companies extort businesses for money or the phone company would make the business's customers wait an extra ten minutes for a phone call to connect.

—Adam Littman, Lake Balboa, CA

Ending net neutrality is a way for the cable companies to make more money while it harms the average consumer and small businesses. It is good for business but bad for the average American Joe.

—Manuel Robles, Whittier, CA

We need jobs and a level playing field for new companies to start up, not higher-than-95% profit margins for these swine. Your jobs depend on this bill failing.

—Andrew MacDonald, Savannah, GA

Please prevent this travesty. The internet is one of the last truly great and open environments for innovation, don't destroy it through this nonsense.

—Doug Fedor, Kingston, PA

We need to keep net neutrality! We do not need CEO's or any big business telling us what we can and cannot view, which is essentially what will happen if it goes away.

—Michael O'Leary, Grand Rapids, OH

Corporations are not people and the internet is not a territory. Right now, the corporations are thugs in an alley hoping you make it legal for them to beat up anyone who doesn't pay. It's like being on the line at the club and watching the "beautiful" people or the people with more money go in before you. It's wrong.

—Richard Knowles, Levittown, PA

Please look into forcing carriers and content providers to be separate companies. Having Comcast (for example) be a content provider and a content transmitter creates a very obvious conflict of interest.

—Mr. Cody Denver, Plymouth, MN

The Internet is something I've grown up with; it's incredible potential to communicate ideas, messages and emotions relies heavily on the fact it is a free, unrestricted, neutral network. That is precisely why it is such a different, revolutionary method of communication. Please, protect the future.

—Adam Schiappa, Massapequa, NY

U.S. Army Vet

—Robert Korsakas-Ycaza, Fort Hood, TX

Keep the net neutral. Do not allow ISP to extort websites for bandwidth.

—Gabriel Desourdy, Alameda, CA

I will never, ever vote for someone who doesn't support net neutrality. And unlike most Americans, I try to vote in every primary and every election.

—Miles Gibson, Doylestown, PA

If you don't reject this bill, you can call yourself my representative, but you sure as heck aren't representing me, or anyone else but cable companies.

—Lisa Lake, Cleveland, OH

Net neutrality is important for free speech and America. Keep the internet open!

—Nicole Summer, Calabasas, CA

Internet service provider megacorporations such as Comcast and Verizon are actively destroying access to certain websites. They need to be stopped.

—Aidan Kierans, Marshall, VA

Stop this bill please. Yes, I vote and contribute. Thank you.

—William B Johnson, spotsylvania, VA

Please do not ruin my internet you horrible people.

—Ryan Wozlonis, Hicksville, NY

Would you put education lower than a companies bottom line?

—Brian Harris, Springfield, MO

I'm disabled and nearly house bound. The internet functioning as is is my only social, shopping, and library outlet. To give providers free reign would rob me of the freedom I have found on the internet, limit free speech by allowing providers to determine load times of anyone they like, and and stifle the start up of new business. The big players operate on an ample profit margin, leave us peons our internet.

—Carolynn McCoy, Belleville, IL

Aren't cable companies screwing us over enough already?

—Charles Burnett, Salt Lake City, UT

The government should work for the people not the greedy corporations.

—Eric Infante, Las Cruces, NM

Voting against net neutrality is a surefire way to lose my vote!

—Dustin Brown, Kalamazoo, MI

We need you to stop voting things in that are against the people's interests and that favor businesses that spend more money on their lobbyists than they do serving their customers! With Net Neutrality in place, they would be more likely to earn new customers and less likely to lose existing ones that feel disenfranchised because the keep getting fucked over by everyone, their representatives most especially!

—Adrian Davis, Pittsburgh, PA

Please don't allow corporations to take over yet another area of our communications.

—Tyler Lambert-Perkins, Saint Paul, MN

This is the first thing I've ever sent to anyone in the government. That's how bad this is.

—Ryan Croker, Orange, CA

Protect Net Neutrality!!

—Eric Bunyan, san diego, CA

If you were elected to represent the people and you vote in favor of this and kill net neutrality. KNOW THAT'S YOU WILL NO LONGER BE REPRESENTING THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE AS NO ONE WANTS THIS LEGISLATION. NO ONE. And when I say that I don't me the minority of the people don't want it. There is not one single citizen in this country that supports this. So what will that make you if you use your representative position to approve of this bill?

—Jeremy, ravenna, NE

This act against Net Neutrality begins in USA but unless it is squashed, it will spread like a virus across the globe. Adhere to people's wishes of a free Internet.

—Rishi Mittal, ,

The internet is the last real place where people have the freedom to do and say what they like to anyone in the world. The internet belongs to everyone and allowing a select few because they are greedy control something they have no right to control is just wrong. It would be the final step before people put up their hands and say I've had enough.

—Paul Frambes, Ingleside, IL

The internet has always been a hub of startups. This is partially due to the relative ease in which people may create internet startups. However, if there is no longer net neutrality, these startups will be much harder to create and, thus, innovation will slow. Just as industries are deregulated to encourage growth, the internet must be open to all to make full use of its innovative potential.

—Coryelle Pondy, Columbia, SC

Dear Congress The internet is the last place many people go to be without judgement or prejudice. For many and most, giving cable companies the right to determine who deserves what service makes that safe haven disappear. Not only that but it would promote big business to get even bigger with both direct (i.e. Comcast, Verizon) and indirect results. The companies that can afford to pay for these "fast lanes" (i.e. the already big ones) will by default get more traffic in both advertising and home page viewing based on the fact that the smaller, still growing, or less successful businesses can not afford the same luxurious treatment the already big businesses can. So wen it comes down to it, destroying net neutrality is just one more way to make the average man feel victimized (whether it be "legal" or not) and to expand the gap between the commoner and the wealthy. Thank you for your consideration

—Nick Radick, Lansdale, PA

Please don't assist in damaging the greatest current innovation of my time

—John Snelling, ,

I do not support the ruination of our Net Neutrality!

—Michael Fisher, Kennesaw, GA

One side of the argument would allow massive corporations with GDP's greater than many independent nations to further increase their already alarming profit margins and strong arm the consumer base they essentially hold hostage. The other would allow users of a service to continue paying vastly inflated prices to the same corporations who maintain a communal monopoly over one of the most influential industries in the world. We, the people, have low standards in this fight, but that doesn't mean it isn't important. This would be a step in a remarkably bad direction. One that limits the freedom of the people in exchange for guaranteed profits for a select few companies. Don't do it. -Jeff

—Jeff Dickinson, Wilmington, DE

Please. The future of small business depends on this.

—Victor Murta, Beaufort, NC

All we need is Verizon, AT&T, and Comcast doing more terrible things to charge us consumers more money for services. We are already one of the worst first world countries in terms of internet access, speed, and cost. Don't allow these telecom giants to screw us over anymore!

—Ross Bragg, Indianapolis, IN

The internet is one catalogue of thoughts, goods, and services. Allowing a corporations to take away my own personal choice of which of those services I can receive, what goods I can order and whose thoughts I can hear is heinous, and I won't stand for it.

—Philip Kevin Sasso-Lundin, Fargo, ND

We must protect our democracy, it is as lively and vital as we make it, and it is as fragile as we allow it to be. Net Neutrality is essential to the newest phase of democracy, do not let it die on the vine.

—Sean Huggins, Oregon City, OR

Net neutrality is important. It may seem hard for some of you to ignore the big money, but the people- the true people, who have no affiliation with lobbyists- want net neutrality to stick around. For the good of everyone. Absolutely everyone- not just some greedy corporation like Comcast or Verizon.

—Aidan Ramsay, Eugene, OR

I personally believe this is one of the most important issues facing our country and world today. The Internet as it is currently constructed truly brings a free exchange of ideas and thoughts. If companies are allowed to dictate preference, then it will restrict choice. We need the Internet to belong to the people everywhere, not to companies interested in profit. This is a fight for freedom and I hope lawmakers don't let us down.

—Patrick McEvoy, New York, NY

Public dollars built the Internet, and it should serve the public interest. Letting ISP's charge individual businesses extra for people to reach them does not serve the public interest.

—John Temple, Florissant, MO

Don't let companies degrade the signal I'm paying for already because they want to profit over profit

—Gilbert martinez, Orlando, FL

Corporations should be highly regulated and net neutrality should be defended. Congress is meant to work for the people, not Corporations. Please don't let them keep taking our freedoms from us, you're there to protect us.

—Jason Paz, ,

Don't let the internet be controlled by big business of any kind.

—Robert, Abingdon, VA

We have the most expensive slowest internet in the nation, and companies like Comcast and Time Warner continue to benefit from their lack of service by basically being a bully in an unregulated market. Making these companies a public utility would be a great move forward into making them more responsible and having the motivation to provide a decent product for a decent price. Internet is not a luxury this day in age, it is a requirement for most people.

—Kyle Bullock, Huntsville, AL

The internet is one of the most fascinating inventions of humankind: the means to globally interact. The means with which, I, one voter of many, may speak my mind to you now. Please don't destroy the internet.

—Alyssa C. Barron, Stockton, CA

Allowing the big companies this much control over information and entertainment is a dangerous idea.

—Donna, York, PA

Leave the internet alone....

—Simon Cason, Camden, AR

The availability of information and the ability for all to spread information is necessary for a democracy to function.

—Niven Wilson, Downieville, CA

Please reject this bill. It saps the vitality out of our country and will begin the destruction of what makes the United States so incredibly amazing: the ability for anyone to attain their dreams if they just work hard enough. I'm really sick of seeing our nation fall into the hands of psychopathic corporations who care nothing for this country and quash anyone working hard to support their families. Didn't you go into politics to make a difference?

—Judith, Ramona, CA

Seriously this shouldn't even be a decision. Support Net Neutrality.

—Henry Sharpe, Hawarden, IA

If things were done right, you were elected to help people, not corporations. Don't let money ruin you.

—Megan champagne, Phoenix, AZ

Net Neutrality is why the internet is such a wonderful place. Don't kill off sites from smaller companies. You might kill off the next google that way.

—Rebecca Meyers, Eugene, OR

The internet should be considered a public utility, and internet service providers should be classified as common carriers. Net neutrality is critical for maintaining a free and well-informed society. Please, do not allow net neutrality to be undermined!

—Cale Dunlap, Tiffin, OH

Just say no and start thinking of your constituents instead of the money lobbyists bribe you with!!!!

—Brandi bowman, Algonac, MI

If you vote on this bill. I will not vote on you. You cannot take the internet away. If you do people will rise up, and they will finally be tired of being taken advantage of.

—Devin Mitchell Durbin, St Charles, MO

I write and publish music on the web. An end to net neutrality would make it more difficult for me to get my sound out into the world.

—Taylor Aslinger, Chattanooga, TN

Let the American middle class keep something easy and equal. Telecom companies make enough money without creating another way to charge websites, our consumers more. Please do not vote for the bill, the internet us something that be free for everyone.

—Daniel Northey, Clinton Township, MI

Protecting Net Neutrality is about more than just defending the internet, it's about defending freedom of speech and freedom of commerce. It's about not allowing a monopoly to destroy everything that America stands for and needs to thrive and prosper.

—Daniel Moulton, Concord, CA

The beautiful thing about the internet is that it gives everyone equal footing to make themselves known, to spread ideas Limiting that to the people who can throw the most money at a faster page-loading time is the exact opposite of conducive to free speech, and the noose to strangle the spread of ideas.

—Travis Vaughn, Crestview, FL

Please make the internet a utility.

—Roy Hammonds, Austin, TX

The internet is now a intricate part of our society that needs to be protected.

—Wesley Clark, Salt Lake City, UT

As one of the people out there who has a lower income, but needs the internet for work, having to pay more for specific websites to load faster would be a huge hindrance. Please stop this ridiculous change from occurring. It's going to hurt the people who already feel a lot of hardships the most: the poor.

—Elyse Walk, Morgantown, WV

You always hear America is the land of the free, from here it looks like the land of the corrupt. Don't let yourself be brought, nobody wants this.

—Amanda Eggers, Takaka,

Voting against net neutrality is insanity. I already pay a lot of money for internet access. It should be up to me how I use that access. I'm an avid player of video games. I have no doubt that destroying net neutrality will cost me more money. Allowing the internet providers to charge companies for preferred access to their systems will eventually trickle down costs to me. If Microsoft has to pay comcast money to insure it's servers reliably connect to my house, they will pass that cost to me. Which is ridiculous since I already pay both services for that privilege.

—Vanessa Chiaramonte, Highland Park, NJ

In most instances, the local cable company is the only provider of high speed internet service. Would you let the phone company tell us that certain people had to pay more to call us? Well, the only provider of high speed internet in my area is Comcast. They already charge me more than double because I want high speed. Now they want to charge the sites I visit extra for the same high speed. Is there no limiting the greed of these people? Silly question...of course not! In this modern age, these companies are utilities.. They need to be regulated as utilities.

—Clyde Davis, LAFOLLETTE, TN

ISPs need to be restricted and regulated by SOME sort of laws. Don't make it easier on them.

—Katie Dillehay, Glen Burnie, MD

Net neutrality is the natural order of things. Consumers pay for internet access. Businesses pay for servers, and bandwidth. This is just a cash grab by the ISPs.

—Bryan McCoy, Arlington, TX

Don't let this happen!!

—Nick Hale, Columbus, OH

Stop edging us ever closer to monopoly and complete control of information, and by extension, our minds. If you actually care about America as a country or the American people, you won't let this happen. Otherwise, you're just looking to line your pockets.

—Matt Watrous, Lansing, MI

Net neutrality is critical for business growth and our citizens' freedom of speech. Don't go down in history as the people who damaged the US economy.

—Patrick Loftus, Leawood, KS

It is not fair for service provider companies to monopolize the internet.

—Erin Grainger, Casselberry, FL

Net Neutrality is very important for us the internet "citizens"!

—Dakol, Prishtina,

The internet was a huge step forward in human development, and it always for us to amazing things. Ending neutrality would ruin the service. Please, please, if you have an interest in a good future, reclassify broadband under Title 2 of the Communications Act.

—Tori Murphy, Chester, WV

Do not allow ISPs to buy new rules for themselves. Vote against any bill which prevents the FCC from reclassifying ISPs as common carriers. The internet remain a level playing field.

—Mr. Jay Sickorez, Ayer, MA

Net Neutrality is easily the most import issue I've seen come up in my generation when it comes to protecting the public's rights. If the internet were allowed to be chopped up and sold off piece by piece, it could well mean the end of it, which is exactly what the cable companies are after. With their shrinking market and growing competition, they try to target and destroy the internet for the sole purpose of making sure everyone stays entertained by paying a $100+ a month to them as opposed to getting entertainment for free on sites like youtube, or paying a reasonable amount to sites like, Hulu, Netflix, and Crunchyroll and the like. I have no problem with corporations trying to make money, that is the entire point of corporations. I do have a problem however with corporations trying to make money by taking away citizen's rights. Unlike what some companies might have the public believe, getting rid of Net Neutrality does not support free speech, but violate it. By only giving a proper a proper amount of bandwidth to the sites that are paying them the most money, it is their way of telling us what we can learn or post on the internet, which is supposed to be the place where people have complete freedom of speech to say anything and everything they want free from persecution. Think about it this way, if certain people had the ability to control what people search for on the internet by refusing bandwidth to sites that didn't pay them, what would stop them from refusing bandwidth to sites that spoke out about them, or disagreed with their stances on political, social, or religious issues? If, for instance, an internet provider was strongly anti-gun, could they not slow down, and thus restrict access to any and all pro-gun sites, under the guise of them not paying enough? What if the CEO of a company was extremely religious and took offence to anti-religious websites? What would stop them from simply blocking user access to that site, once again under the guise of that site or company not paying enough? Without the barrier of Net Neutrality, there really isn't much to stop internet providers from controlling what people both see and do on the web.

—Calvin Anderson, Abilene, TX

Greed is coming for our freedom: Don't let it be taken; save the internet!

—Patrick B., St Charles, MO

My ability to communicate with friends and family in other areas is entirely dependent on a free, fast internet as well as the ability of people to do the same all over the world.

—Jacob Gibson, centerville, OH

I'm writing this comment concerning Net Neutrality. While you may get a lot of remarks on how ridding us of Net Neutrality affects people personally, I think the damage would be catastrophic for everyone. The internet has given a lot of people the chance to start their own websites and businesses. If web providers have control over the internet's speed, they can easily sabotage any dissent and competition to their own advantage. Net Neutrality has put everyone on even ground so we all have an equal voice and a chance to succeed. Please keep it this way.

—Rachel Hall, Owings Mills, MD

Keep Net Neutrality!!!

—Leah, Manvel, TX

I think that it is just stupid that these big companies would screw over companies that have not even started yet. A company like Riot Games would not have been possible if this went through, and look at how thriving they are.

—Aric See, Plymouth, IN

I will not vote for anyone that opposes Net Neutrality, and I actually vote.

—Daniel Ian Deitsch, Lansdale, PA

This is wrong and you know it. Just be a shill of the lobbyists.

—Olivia Basham, Arlington, TX

dont do it

—Chad Jones, Moncks Corner, SC

If telephones are projected, how can the internet not be?

—Ryan Ehlert, Shawano, WI

This oligarchy is taking our freedom of speech and rights one at a time. This is an example. We are slowly becoming China. Please represent the PEOPLE and protect Net Neutrality.

—Karla Rodriguez, Los Angeles, CA

This is very important to many people. I will do everything I can to get anyone who supports this out of office. The people of the internet can band together like no one else.

—Amy Martinez, Gladewater, TX

Freedom of speech is as relevant and important today as it was when this country was founded. Net neutrality protects freedom of speech.

—Cristin Williams, Ocean Springs, MS

As a cryptographer and computer scientist, the open source initiative is absolutely central in my life. The free flow of information is what allows my field to exist and to thrive, and my experience in the last 20 years of my existence has mostly demonstrated that the same is true of pretty much everything else. The connections we are forging as a society are catapulting us into a technological revolution, and net neutrality is a core piece of that revolution. Without it we will stagnate. Don't let that happen.

—Nicolas Schank, Washington Grove, MD

The implementation of net neutrality is the reason the internet succeeds. Without it many of the upcoming developers and content creators would never have a chance to meet the public's eye against the corporate giants. ISPs need to be classified as common carriers for democracy to continue.

—Joshua Bollschweiler, Moreno Valley, CA

The American people rely on Congress to stand up and protect their best interests, even in the face of unbridled lobbying and special interest groups. Please use your power and respect the right of the people of this country to freedom of expression and vote against this dangerous bill.

—Rhea Blasdel, Escondido, CA

Free access to information and communication is the standard and hallmark of free society with equal access to economic opportunities a necessity of individuals and families in an ever changing world. You have to leave the average person with some kind of chance in this world. If you support Bob Latta's bill you are supporting a new kind of slavery. DON'T DO IT!

—Katie Krikorian, Duluth, MN

Congress appears to work for large corporate interests instead of the people who elect it. Passage of this bill would be further proof that you do not care about the citizens.

—Harold Beiler, Oswego, IL

The Supreme Court has spoken out for our right to privacy. It is now your turn to act for our modern freedom of speech!

—Barbara (Barb) M. Newman, Toledo, OH

Do the right thing.

—Reed Sherrill, South Boston, MA

The internet isn't broken. PLEASE STOP TRYING TO "FIX" what isn't broken. It hasn't had regulation up until now, and things have worked out fine. Why are you trying to change what isn't broken?

—Sarah McDowell, Sacramento, CA

Allowing greed to dictate human and intellectual advancement would be of grievous error and a hinderance to all of us

—Jenni Styf, Stevensville, MI

Remember free radio, free tv. We need free internet. It benefits everyone, especially the non-wealthy.

—Carol M Hermanson, Dexter, MN

Listen to all the hundreds of actual citizens pleading to you, instead of the handful of business owners with vaults of greasy cash. You want to improve your public image; do what the public demands.

—Tristan Knight, Danbury, CT

This is ridiculous. Net neutrality would ruin small businesses ability to use the "faster" internet to do things such as marketing, online conferences, customer service, and many other essential tools that small businesses use the internet for. This is complete madness and will significantly damage the economy. Stop this now.

—Erinn Carey, ,

Don't do it!!

—Leah Arthur, Hebron, IL

We, as a society, have a standard that one does not have to pay extra to be treated equally. Net Neutrality is equality in distribution and access to information. This inequality is artificial - the hardware of the internet does not distinguish between the kinds of bits that flow through its' pipes. By instituting artificial barriers to information cable companies grant control of information to media companies that they are affiliated with or that are willing to pay for access. It will leave behind anyone who is not affiliated with the cable companies or unable to pay the fees. By removing Net Neutrality we limit equality to those who can pay for it and artificially restrain those who can't.

—Pieter Spealman, Pittsburgh, PA

Please do not take away the freedom of the internet. The internet should be free and open to everyone to help stimulate small and big businesses, to allow the freedom of communications between friends and family, and to help make new connections throughout the world. Please do not let this happen to our country. Thank you for reading this.

—Adam Saunders, Miami, FL

REJECT THIS BILL.

—Cheryl Spell, Fort Worth, TX

A neutral internet, one in which all ideas are treated equally by those governing traffic, is the only way to ensure that the egalitarianism of ideas, which has made the internet such a wealth of learning and investment, can continue. By restricting the freedom of a few wealthy and powerful players, we can protect the freedom of American Citizens to have their ideas heard without being wealthy enough to already dominate the conversation.

—Shane Clune, Pine City, MN

If you support this bill, you won't be getting my vote when the election comes.

—Nicholas Toth, Mobile, AL

There are better ways to handle this —Jeremy Stewart, Pell City, AL

The Internet needs to stay free.
—Jim Hrastar, Hillsboro, OR

Support the citizens who vote for you by protecting net neutrality from corporations that are out to make a buck at the expense of your constituents!
—Danielle Key, Louisville, KY

I will fight this to the best of my ability.
—Scott Siddall, Fenton, MI

Do not regulate the internet. An internet that operates like cable TV is not a good idea. No bundles. No high priced tiers. Just keep access to all of the internet as is and as it has been for years.
—Melvin Ah Ching, Honolulu, HI

Do not allow corporations to decide which websites are the most important. That should only be determined by the end user.
—Chris Miller, North Port, FL

The Internet is a voice and an ear for many; and if you allow voices to be muted and ears to be stopped up you have just trod on the 1st amendment. The above is a simple legal argument but the moral arguments are much more important, and I cannot fully express that importance; I sincerely hope that you can.
—Monique, Boise, ID

Is the bill aimed at controlling the internet or just pure greed? I know better than to think it would serve an honest and righteous purpose. These actions against freedom and legit markets aim to basically semi-privatize the internet, which is one of the very last things actually moving this feeble economy upward. Perhaps sabotage is the agenda here, how disappointing.
—Josue D., San Jose, CA

Don't let greed have it's way with this country.
—Elizabeth Cano, San Jose, CA

Do not let this pass, save net neutrality! !
—Jeremy L Winn, Salem, OR

Dear Member of Congress, Please support net neutrality. Most Americans are too busy working night and day to keep a roof over their head. Consequently, they are not able to keep up with what is going on in Washington D.C.. This is why we often fall prey to unethical big business and political schemes. As a consumer, I have received "service" from many of the major internet service providers. There is little choice and notoriously poor service when it comes to these providers. Without proper oversight and an environment that fosters competition, this is not likely to improve. In my role as a healthcare provider, I find that net neutrality is essential. It allows my patients access to a wealth of information that is vital for health maintenance. We are about to implement a video conferencing program for our heart failure patients that is intended to help reduce morbidity . We also would like to introduce web-based educational tools that would help our specific patient population. We do not want to see this jeopardized. Please demonstrate political courage and unequivocally support net neutrality. Thank you for your time and consideration, Neeta Bavikati, M.D.
—Neeta Bavikati, Plano, TX

Enough has already been said. Please just get the right action done for We The People~and again, big on the "please".

—Jill Vilinskas, Kirkland, WA

no no please stop dude. 's not funny. i aint motherfuckin laughing.

—John, barstow, MD

ISPs MUST be classified as common carriers.

—Brett Ferree, Salt Lake City, UT

If we don't preserve net neutrality, we risk creating an internet so full of access roadblocks that its use will become more and more difficult and frustrating. Furthermore, in internet terms, AT & T, Comcast, Verizon, and similar companies are the functional equivalents of common carriers. So, the law should treat them as common carriers. They can still make good profits. But to prevent abuse of their powers, they need reasonable regulation.

—Howard Yale Lederman, Berkley, MI

The internet doesn't "belong" to Comcast or Time Warner or Verizon. It should be a utility and it should be regulated. Tim Berners-Lee gave his invention away for FREE as a global benefit to humanity - NOT as something that corporations could exploit for their own bottom line.

—Ritama Haaga, Seattle, WA

let the internet stay free!

—Guillermo Soto, Pomona, CA

Saving Net Neutrality is one of the greatest issues of our time. For the sake of access to an Open Internet for us and our children, please oppose H.R. 4752

—Clayton Kennedy, Goodlettsville, TN

Please, please do not make access more difficult for the average user!!!

—Amy Loretta Crookes, Ashland, KY

Don't let the large providers rig the game. Stand for a democratic internet. Let everyone's voice be heard equally.

—Michael Corcoran, Carmi, IL

It's important that the internet remain a true open platform free of consolidated corporate control.

—, Palo Alto, CA

Please reject this bill, a vote for this bill is a vote against the open internet.

—Dr Shirley Canniff, Stoughton, MA

REGULATE ISPS AS PUBLIC UTILITIES-- IN THE MODERN AGE INTERNET ACCESS IS THE DRIVER OF INNOVATION AND MUST BE KEPT OPEN TO ALL EQUALLY, NOT JUST ANOTHER MEDIUM FOR DELIVERING ADS WHICH IS WHAT A 2-TIERED SYSTEM WILL LEAD TO.

—Charles Fredricks, Santa Monica, CA

Please do not prohibit Net Neutrality

—Jason, Salt Lake City, UT

Rep. Bob Latta introduced a bill into congress that was influenced by lobbyists who only have the best interests of the cable companies in mind. These lobbyists do not care about the best interests of the American people nor does any member of Congress that support Rep. Latta's bill. The only way to protect consumers from unfair practices currently used by these same companies being represented by Rep. Latta's bill is to reclassify broadband under Title II. Keep the internet free and open for all users, do exactly what you have sworn to do and uphold the best interests of the American people and our country's constitution instead of the best interests of the lobbyists for the cable companies!

—Stephen Kirscher, Orland Park, IL

Make the internet a utility, because that's what it is now.

—Carl Lonnquist, Mankato, MN

Net Neutrality is one of the few freedoms that we currently have that has not been irremediably sullied by capitalism and its influences on our socio-economic and political ecosystems. Please do not open the door to further infringement on the accessibility of the internet - or the freedom to choose what we access. Keep the competition around internet content and access to that content from constricting the freedom to choose, the freedom to have a choice AND the PRIVACY of making that choice ourselves.

—Dawnine Clews, Salem, OR

There is NO WAY this is going to be tolerated. I will not support or go along with any entity ~ commercial or OTHERWISE ~ that stalks and manipulates users with no respect for privacy, legality, or Constitutional rights. This is NOT Democracy. I am outright disgusted at the degree to which the government has come to act as support for corporate predation instead of protecting American citizens.

—Claudia Rullman, Leverett, MA

Do not allow companies to control the flow of information, this is fundamentally against our freedom and what this country is supposed to stand for! Reject this bill for AMERICA!

—Luis Dorta, Doral, FL

Democracy is on the line here. Stand up for it instead of knifing it! We want NET NEUTRALITY to be protected!

—Cornelia Cornils, Concord, NC

the silence from the all the news stations is deafening. Pres Obama please keep your promise.

—Roman Weber, Nashville, TN

I personally rely on the Internet for my living. Don't create extra roadblocks for me, there are enough already.

—David Krolick, Albuquerque, NM

NN is important because, as a free human being, I don't want more rules and regulations made by corporations--those fictional entities that own our gov and run our lives--for the sake of their profits. I have NO representative gov, only the hope that one day honest people will be elected that actually serve the citizens interests and not those that do NOT. Do the right thing and leave NN as intended... free and open without more money being spent by the general public. I pay for services and I don't want to pay more for less. ISPs as common carriers makes more sense for the public.

—Dave Jecker, Frisco, TX

Any limitation on public access to the net is a jugular issue.

—Leo T. Olson, Clearwater, FL

It is a shame that once again we let money, in the form of big corporations trump fairness. Retain total net neutrality for everyone. Let's catch up with the world and install true high speed internet for everyone.

—Lee C. Drickmer, Oberlin, OH

The internet is the property of the American People, NOT corporations, NOT congress.

—Mr. Roland Watson, St. Louis, MO

Because the internet is important.

—Sebastian Johansson, Boden,

Obviously, this is a bad idea for anyone who isn't the CEO of a cable company. You, reader, are aware of this. Please don't let this happen. It's a really, really bad idea.

—Daniel Hall, Bristol, VA

I find it ridiculous that in a country that prides itself on freedom, and preaches it nonstop, we need petitions and activists to keep the internet free and neutral. Net neutrality is essential for the continued growth and innovation of the technologically driven world we find ourselves in. Please do not let congress limit such a vital service.

—Lauren Heilig, Swanton, MD

To: Chairman Wheeler and the rest of the Federal Communications Commission, We want action for democratic media, not platitudes as smokescreens for corporate domination of the Internet. We want net neutrality.

—Zachary Tyler Brown-Garcia, Paramount, CA

I was a devoted Time Warner cable customer since I was in my 20's and now I am in my 50's. They blocked me from getting the best packages, did soft shut offs, took down our internet after raising our bill so high we could not pay it anymore. I used to get my network stations for free now they charge for them. They force us to pay for each box except for the first one just to have their service. They charge us for the modem monthly to use their service. I was up to $150 for 2nd speed internet and 2nd tier cable..no movie channels or anything. So now I pay for internet only at $60 a month and watch Hulu. Now you are allowing them to stop us from having programming on Hulu. No company should control so much. If they had charge reasonable rates and not got so greedy people would have stayed..How much can you charge for watching Tv that advertisers already pay for???This business of slow speed internet for people with less money is just cruel. I watch the commercials on Hulu...I don't mind. Why should only Comcast and Time Warner only get to have programming ...they are the worst company ever..rude to their customers too. Stop allowing them to block my right to watch TV where I want...Is this Russia??? Now they are trying to force us to sign in with a cable provider on Hulu..I won't do it I will rent shows at the library..I am done with this. Stop only caring about big business..the people..me included are sick of the greed.

—Patricia Soos, Leetonia, OH

It is time to stop letting corporations run this country. Do your job for the people who elected you, not the companies that pay you

—Laurel Bolduc, SPFLD, MA

The Internet is a public Utility. End of discussion!!

—Paul Mirsalis, Richmond Heights, OH

Real net neutrality (which is NOT what the FCC proposes) is Free Speech. Protect the bill of rights and with them the First Ammendment. And any other ammendment.

—Robert Offson, Endicott, NY

"Unless our conception of patriotism is progressive, it cannot hope to embody the real affection and the real interest of the nation." - Jane Addams

—Robert Swiatek, Buffalo, NY

Stop the monopoly of the Internet. Corporations have gained far too much control over the common people's lives during the past thirty years due to caving in to conservatives. It has got to stop or this country will have uprisings like in other countries.

—Helen B. Perry, Jacksonville, FL

Independent Internet for an Independent America (Happy 4th of July)

—Justin Moreno, Paramount, CA

I urge you to reject this bill

—Mason McCarty, Chesterfield, MO

reject this bill!

—Gregory Sherman, New York, NY

"Reclassifying broadband under Title II of the Communications Act is the only way to protect REAL Net Neutrality."

—Misha Powell, Glendale, AZ

This is EXTREMELY important to me. Please ensure net neutrality.

—Christopher Nagel, Miami, FL

The people will not stand for this!

—John Tomczak, North Hollywood, CA

Please protect your own individual rights to a free open marketplace of ideas.

—Jan Read, Miami, FL make verizon and at&t go out of business

—Marvindarkinvader Doomirkenmartian, Pasadena, CA

Time and again we the people have to write congress to beg for the very basic of COMMEN SENCE to be applied to the issue of net neutrality which should not even be an issue. That's like saying if you pay extra you can drive in the fast lane. This is insanity and completely unfair to the masses. Do Not allow this to happen.

—Marci McWilliams, Eugene, OR

PLEASE! Do not favor money and power as you decide the fate of internet neutrality. The little guy needs equal rights to access the information highway. Thank you!! JG

—Joseph J Giampietro, Seattle, WA

If you support this bill, you will loose my support!

—Howard L Bain, Debary, FL

w2ly3N vkrjxczywlwy, [url=http://hyfyhmexmqjo.com/] hyfyhmexmqjo[/url], [link=http://qbytzlkgowqz.com/]qbytzlkgowqz[/link], http://yoiyqctxznwb.com/

—Aczjbu, ,

NET NEUTRALITY NOW

—Brock Grimm, Bellevue, WA

I have grown up in a net neutral environment for the Internet, which has allowed me to enjoy various entertainment services such as games, videos, and music with my family and friends as well as in my own free time. The Internet has also benefited my education greatly as well. I could not imagine a world where all of these services and benefits are restricted in any way for everyone today and for future generations. Please consider classifying broadband Access as a "Title II telecommunications service."

—Justin, Fredericksburg, VA

I've said it once, I've said it a thousand times. I am sick and tired of Americans equality and freedom being further stripped from us. I can't believe how backwards this country is becoming. Don't let this happen, preserve our equality and freedom, and make way for the future.

—Whitney Seabrooks, Binghamton, NY

A free and open internet is the single greatest technology of our time, and control should not be at the mercy of corporations - a free and open internet stimulates ISP competition and helps to prevent unfair pricing practices. Furthermore, a free and open internet promotes innovation and the spread of ideas; drives entrepreneurship; and helps by further protecting the freedom of speech.

—Brian D. Killian, Baltimore, MD

why does this country want to productize EVERYTHING? There are many ways to make money. What next? Will someone own the air?

—Sherrill Carter, Georgetown, TX

REMOVE: DMCA/DRM RESTRICTIONS/EULA AGREEMENTS/FOIA/NDAA/SAFE HARBOUR CRAP/TAX INCOMES/GREEDY WAYS/ACT SIGNINGS/GOOGLE+/FACEBOOK/TWITTER/SELFISH WAYS/UNFAIR TYRANNY WAYS

—Darkinvadermarvinmartian Doomirken, Pasadena, CA

The free and open internet has been one of the greatest advancements to human knowledge in our time. To end net neutrality is a move that only benefits corporations. Please remember your duty to the citizens of the United States and support net neutrality.

—Ms. Kerry McNamara, Dutch Harbor, AK

Broadband internet should be classified as a common carrier.

—David Saunders, Oviedo, FL

The INTERNET is the true opiate of the masses. Do NOT fuck with the masses. That is a Pandora's Box you do NOT want to open.

—H Reed, Mankato, MN

I support net neutrality. Please reclassify ISPs as common carriers.

—Rahel Sewell, Ojai, CA

The US citizens need regulation of huge companies like Comcast and Time Warner because mammoth companies often take advantage of consumers to make more money. Please DO NOT support H.R. 4752.

—Leah Becker, Boston, MA

I think we need to beat the telecom duopoly into shape like a naughty puppy, and putting internet under Title II is the only way to do that.

—Thomas F. Johnson, Tucson, AZ

ISP's should be classified as Title II Common Carriers and regulated as utilities. With modern technology equal access to the internet is even more important than equal access to phone lines.

—Jason Oppler, Gig Harbor, WA

Don't let them rake us over the coals. Most can't afford to pay more and they will. Watch out for the little guy that you represent, not Comcast and TW. They have all they need, but they will squeeze us like oranges, until there is nothing left for us to give. Then what?

—Faro Davis-Nail, Mission Viejo, CA

It's not broken please leave it alone don't mess this up.

—Darrell monson, Staples, MN

PLEASE let the people have an equal voice and opportunity online.

—Tamara Carouthers, Saint Louis, MO

Stop the greedy telecommunications corporations like Verizon, AT&T, and Comcast from controlling the FCC and Congress. Stop them from creating a tiered internet that gives them free reign to double-charge and overcharge for internet access while simultaneously blocking access to content they dislike. Vote no on H.R. 4752 and urge the FCC to reclassify ISPs as Title II common carriers. It is only way to save the internet.

—Clifford Levine, Tempe, AZ

Don't let corporations rule America anymore that they already do!

—Katrina Rodriguez, Baltimore, MD

I know you support net neutrality and will do everything you can to protect small businesses like mine which depend upon an open and free internet. Thank you.

—Janet Zeh, Willington, CT

No on bill H.R. 4752

—Alyssa Murillo, Fontana, CA

Net Neutrality affects all the world. Thanks to it the Internet was able to develop and flourish into what it is today. Without it the Internet will quickly fall apart. Think of a world, where depending on which ISP you had you were limited to only a tiny fraction of the real limitless sea of content. Think of what it would be like to want to watch YouTube or read The New York Times only to find it blocked by your ISP. Now think of how it would feel like to know that you could have done something, that you could have prevented it, that you could have saved the Internet, but didn't. I urge you to keep the Internet free as it is. I urge you to reject this bill. It is in your hands to save the future of this incredible technology, that has brought the whole world together.

—Gleb Boytsun, ,

Net neutrality is absolutely essential for a free and open Internet. True capitalism can't exist without a level playing field; without regulation it tends towards monopoly or plutocratic oligarchy.

—Jonathan Young, Carmichael, CA

My first instinct is to ask what are you afraid of? The Truth? God knows, and He will remember!

—Juli Betz, San Antonio, TX

Save net neutrality

—Robert Wynn, Chillicothe, MO

RECLASSIFY THE INTERNET AS A PUBLIC UTILITY. THE AMERICAN PUBLIC IS AGAINST THESE COMMUNICATION MONOPOLIES CONTROLLING THE INTERNET FOR THEIR MALICIOUS GAIN. NOBODY, NOBODY ELSE GAINS FROM THIS. TO SIGN AGAINST NET NEUTRALITY IS TO SIGN AGAINST THE FUTURE OF THIS COUNTRY.

—Anthony R, Langhorne, PA

The Internet has become a nexus for communication. Perhaps the most important one already and our dependency on it will only grow further. Access to it become then a political issue, an issue related to the freedom of speech and it should not be based on how deep somebody's pockets are, it should be based on equal terms for everybody. Furthermore the Internet and some of its most popular functionality has been developed using taxpayers money and for people's benefit and it is sickening to see corporations stealing it for themselves.

—Tomasz Karczmarski, Ashland, MA

Please support a free internet!

—Roxanne Meek, Brewer, ME

It's vitally important that we don't have slow and fast lanes on the Internet - that would crush innovation and likely hike up fees for Internet users everywhere.

—David Christopher, Bellingham, WA

Net neutrality is important for the entire world, please reinstate it! It's important

—Simom Dupuis Howard, ,

My requests are as important as the next request. There should be no difference bewtween requests.

—Harvey Sachs, Littleton, CO

Money is not everything.

—Ian Smith, Irving, TX

It has allowed for the greatest exchange of information in the history of the world. Don't fix what isn't broken.

—Andre Cordeiro, Beverly Hills, CA

Stop!!! Listen to the people's voice!!

—Alex Bell, Brooklyn, NY

To have free speech !

—Mark Callaway, Cary, NC

The internet is an important means of communication and should not be restricted by who has the most money

—Brian Nichols, Tazewell, TN

Equality for all

—Todd Brunner, Brooklyn, NY

Hands off free speech you grubby corporate dogs

—Michael Kinvig, ,

"All are created equal, but some are more equal if they have the money." This is not what the internet is meant to be.

—Martin Konrad, Bridgewater, NJ

It allows us to speak our mind and speak the truth.

—Chiam Jack Chee, ,

We are the land of the free.

—Emily Barbour, Monson, MA

I want an open and free internet, not one delegated and managed by corporations

—Jonathan Rourke, Fort Lauderdale, FL

The internet should remain open and provide equal access to all.

—Craig Donovan, De Forest, WI

Because internet access has become a basic human right.

—Katherine Gulick, Philadelphia, PA

The Internet has become like the air we breath.

—Rick Ray, Troutdale, OR

Please keep the telcos away from pushing us in the slow lane.

—Jair Ferreira Jr, , if big business wants this we all know it is to screw consumers..period

—Steve Dillon-Gehrig, Durham, NC

Having a free and open net makes it easy to get in touch with family and friends who live far away and quick access to knowledge is helpful to people who need it and people enjoy learning whether it be crazy trivia or helpful to others.

—James Lincoln, Andrews, SC

Restrictions to internet will harm USA economic competitiveness.

—Donald Garlit, Canton, MI

It keeps information free to anyone that wants it

—Albert Haines, Mc Intosh, FL

Because It should never be in the hands of the ISP which site is faster

—Dragos Turmac, ,

Nearly all decisions made by Congress and the executive branch seem to benefit corporations and Wall Street. Income inequality and despair seem to increase. Our democracy becomes even more out of reach. Please make at least one decision favoring us people, not corporations.

—Ray Bellamy MD, tallahassee, FL

I've already said everything I can. Have some integrity and stop bowing to the almighty dollar.

—San Paulsgrove, Monmouth, IL

It's the quintessence of what this country was built upon

—Jorge Rojas, Elizabeth, NJ

It's the only free place left.

—Yannick, ,

Everyone deserves basic civil rights.

—Robert Mason, ,

Fairness and goodwill. Treating people equally.

—Caroline Wynn, ,

Because without the ability to easily, quickly and FREELY access information will be controlled by those who A; stand to make profit from it B; wish to limit information they deem unimportant and C; care not how it may impact consumers of their services.

—Daniel Cox, ,

Because we need to know who in the FCC was bribed, blackmailed or bought out

—Russell Se, Wrlj, VT

Net neutrality is best for business because it allows the little guys to compete with the established corporations. It promotes healthy competition.

—David Deutsch, Brookline, MA

Net Neutrality lets consumers use cool gadgets like at <http://GadgetsGo.com>

—Ross Kelsonpetit, Miami Beach, FL

A truly open and neutral Net means that small and large businesses can compete, a free exchange of information and ideas, and less price gouging by internet providers.

—Tim Deschaines, Riverview, FL

No restrictions or hierarchy of users should exist on the internet.

—Laura Goodman, Alexandria, VA

Simple - free democracy and speech cannot be controlled by corporations. Manage the internet like a utility —jeffrey J. Dravis, Houston, TX

The small startup business has just as much of a right to use of their website as multi-billion dollar companies.

—Tom LaMantia, Seattle, WA

I want someone I can do business with, not someone who tells me how I can do business.

—Justin Weiss, ,

The internet is a powerful tool; for entertainment, research, learning, and connecting with other people of earth. Please don't affect the way people keep humanity moving forward. please help make the flow of information open and fast.

—Nigel Scott, ,

This will be abused by monster corporations and used against the smaller business sector.

—Sean Murphy, Vero Beach, FL

What's next, some company charging for AIR, the phone companies done need more money, how about breaking up the phone companies, that is something everyone can get behind.

—Tom Farekian, Valley Center, CA

Don't try to make yours, what's not yours but belongs to all people.

—Kamen Kovachev, ,

They are common carriers and should act like it.

—Alex Johnson, Houston, TX

As a web developer and aspiring entrepreneur, I depend on net neutrality to keep the market fair

—Kyle Ramey, ,

As a senior citizen, I rely on the internet for information, entertainment and commerce. Please keep net neutrality at the forefront.

—Maria Nykanen, ,

The ONLY remaining platform and market that treats the "little guy" and the Corporation equally. All ideas are equal. Different ideas reach billions of people equally.

—Jacob Setchell, Hampton, VA

As an IT Business executive. Net Neutrality is paramount to my business model. This is not a 3rd world country. Please act accordingly.

—Alexan Kulbashian, ,

A neutral internet is key in our growth as a society. By allowing the creation of lanes you will be opening up the internet to a world of unfairness and profiteering. Data should be free for all. Not charged. This is all just a cash grab and we will not stand for it

—Shaan S, ,

Net Neutrality is essential for our First Amendemnt rights, for finding work, and several other daily chores. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. It is essential to our democracy.

—Gregory Rossi, Waterford, MI

It supports egalitarianism and democracy, two good things!

—Douglas Renick, Florence, MA

My bills are already too high. The cable company and phone company take advantage of me and typical Americans enough as it is.

—Jessica Clem, Spring, TX

The net started as a free and open medium and should stay that way.

—Ellen Segeren, ,

We need net neutrality to counter the corporate propaganda that dominates all other media.

—Clinton Scott, Show Low, AZ

It represents the very essence of the definition of a true Democracy.

—Joanna Morgan, santa Barbara, CA

Because control from source to your door by a single corp entity is a monopoly in which a necessary interface (the internet) needs to be affordable and available to everyone - it makes us more competitive as a nation

—Stephen Marx, Cooper City, FL

Keep the playing field level!

—Shaun Redmond, ,

Given the important role the Internet plays in human development on a global scale, which will be essential for progress, it seems essential to preserve it in a fully free and open way, without sacrificing it to commercialism. The internet should be treated as a basic human need for everyone, since it is hard to imagine life functioning without it these days, with even some government services requiring it.

—David Rix, London,

The FCC is not worthy of respect. You are the enemy of the people. Keep your filthy hands off the internet.

—Denise Ward, Westborough, MA

It would be like charging higher rates for electric so that you can get it "all day" instead of for 4 hours or so. My goodness what are the greedy parts of our society going to do to us ??! This is becoming more of the America of the 1890's instead of what we could be and still can be if "good people" start speaking up.

—Steve and Roberta Raps, Eaton, OH

An equal opportunity and fair internet.

—Karim Khalil, ,

Progress in the United States will be impeded by turning over more of American resources to huge corporation to throttle for their own good.

—William L. Sharfman, New York, NY

Giving untrustworthy telecom companies the power to charge 3rd parties to access their customers is un-American, and downright deceitful. Customers pay for Internet access, and don't want Telecom companies to tell them what sites they should use. Creating a fast lane will do that, killing small content providers in favor of the sites that work better. They'll only work better because Telecom companies will unfairly prioritize bandwidth to their sites. Please do not let this happen and reclassify the Internet as a common carrier.

—Ryan Trondsen, El Segundo, CA

If Net Neutrality becomes extinct it will become more expensive for me to acquire the tools I need to develop the software I use to support myself. it will also become more expensive for me to communicate with colleagues, friends, and family.

—James R Swenson, State College, PA

I want the same internet as everyone else. Nobody should have more access than anyone else even if they can pay more. No one should have more control either

—Steven Lee, Huntsville, AL

The creation of Internet slow lanes allows established telecoms to suffocate emerging technologies with crippling fees and eliminates the level playing field that has allowed the Internet to become so successful. Market forces, not telecom policies allowed companies like Facebook to overtake MySpace. What would happen today if Facebook had to pay exorbitant fees? Netflix beat Blockbuster because they had a better idea and delivered what customers wanted. The couldn't do that without the level playing field. Now that many have abandoned their overpriced cable TV subscriptions, Comcast and Verizon are trying to extort money from Netflix in order to deliver the performance that they themselves advertised.

—Mr. Daniel Shookowsky, Downingtown, PA

We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Roger Hannah, Round Lake Beach, IL

NO EXPLOITATION OF TELECOM POWER!

—Ben Marker, Raleigh, NC

Make the internet classified as a UTILITY, that way competition is greater than having no choices in who provides internet. There is hardly any legit competition in most areas outside of a major metro area, even then it is sparse. Lets get companies to have the customers interest in mind again.

—Jason R, Lawrence, KS

The internet should be a public utility!

—Margaret Mew, Lafayette, CA

Living in a rural area of Texas makes the internet an absolute necessity. It simply must remain, neutral. At certain times and under certain weather conditions it is our ONLY link to the world.

—Glenna Shenas, Whitewright, TX

Keep the net even steven.

—John Cleary, Chino, CA

The US needs policies that spur innovation, not stifle it.

—Chris van Gorder, Reston, VA

As an on-line business owner, slowing down the internet would destroy my business.

—Karen Boehler, Roswell, NM

Of all the issues that concern me greatly right now, and htere are many of them, this one is the one I am most keeping my eyes on and working for! NO WAY is letting the internet become the private sales floor of a few huge businesses an acceptable move.

—Mary Ostlund-Wood, Renwick, IA

We need LESS not more exploitation by Big Telecom.

—JoAnn Mallory, ,

Because we will lose our freedom of speech, our rates would skyrocket, we would be controlled and at the hands of corporations yet again.

—Colleen Collins, ,

Monopoly is bad. North American Internet stuck in stone age

—Vitali Khlebkp, ,

I don't want Big Telecom to have even more control over content on the internet. Also the Internet was developed using tax payers, the big ISP's shouldn't have a monopoly over that resource.

—Kevin W McCarthy, Salisbury, MD

Free flow of education without tax or limits is a right worth fighting for! Our children deserve better than this sort of corruption!
—Francesco Kozerski, Locust Grove, GA

The Internet belongs to everyone. Not one person this isn't a toll bridge where you have to pay to cross.
—Fox Moncrief, Saratoga, TX

Freedom
—Craig, ,

My small business depends on good internet access; we don't have the funds to pay for 'special' privilege.
—Chris Daum, Stevensville, MT

The open internet is the most important economic engine in the USA.. Do not screw it up!
—Mr. James Sherpa, Ithaca, NY

Because everyone should have equal access, and no one should profit at the expense of others.
—M Jane Kribs, Corinth, NY

I care about true democracy, and true democracy doesn't work unless we all have an EQUAL voice.
—Thomas C Snell, Aptos, CA

The strength of the internet is in its diversity of ideas. Net neutrality will ensure this remains. It is also empowering for those less well off, something else that net neutrality protects.
—Mr. Roberto Aviles, Fremantle, OR

It will have a huge impact on what ISP's will want me to pay.
—Alan Quinn, ,

Please protect Net Neutrality. Failure to do so will only serve to exacerbate inequality among citizens and between citizens and corporate interests. Also, as a voting citizen, I will certainly keep in mind which politicians and parties supported this policy when voting in November.
Sincerely, Amy DeSantis
—Amy DeSantis, Virginia Beach, VA

I have a small stained glass business and a new website that I want thrive, not die under the FCC pro- big money proposal.
—Bert Goodrich, Albuquerque, NM

Mega corporations should not control our access to information and free speech.
—Scott Burton, ,

When big companies take over,we all know it is never NEUTRAL.
—Victoria Moore, ,

The privatization of the Internet is the unspoken goal and profits are the driving force. There has not been an invention since Henry Ford that has affected the American public, let alone the world, than that of a free Internet. People will see through this thinly disguised attempt and the backlash will be wicked!
—Michael McDonald, Leonard, MI

The Internet is a shared resource and the property of no one. Stop trying to control what isn't yours.

— ,

Setting up a tiered system for the internet will add to the inequality of opportunity that pervades this country. Internet service is a utility, not a profit center.

—Wayne Gersen, Etna, NH

Its simple. A free and open internet has encouraged creativity and innovation for years already. Proper Net Neutrality supports the American Dream. Anyone, anywhere can strike it rich and live the high life because the Internet is accessible to anyone, at a decent, fair price. If Net Neutrality is removed then only the rich can afford to reach the largest audience on the internet and only they will get richer. Eventually this will lead to civil war.

—Conor Murphy, ,

Or freedom and any hope for a democracy are at stake, nothing less.

—Kevin B Vaught, Antioch, TN

As a programmer, innovator, entrepreneur, I value what the internet currently stands for. An open highway where everyone can travel as fast as it allows. This gives everyone an even opportunity and gives companies an even chance to succeed based on the merits of their products and not how much they paid to make it accessible. The lanes have already been paid for. In north america we currently pay more than in a lot of places around the world for inferior service. These companies already make their fair share and more and don't need to nickle and dime to continue being more than profitable. Enabling them to do this is only going to empower corporations to rip off customers and to control other smaller corporations, decide which ones get to succeed. This is a door which should not be opened. The internet has helped the growth of a new international economy, new markets, no jobs, etc. Lets not ruin something which has served us so well.

—Peter Cyr, ,

The internet is an essential service for all. Trying to have an internet fast lane is bull, it's obviously a money grab and has not been discussed by the public with public.

—Ian Tolmay, ,

The internet is basically a channel of communication and any stifling of it is akin to reducing free speech and exchange of ideas. Money or any other corporate directives should not be the deciding factor for exclusion/reduction of services on the internet period.

—David Atherton, ,

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Michael Keeffe, ,

The internet is an open platform and should remain that way. All legislation relating to the internet should be legislation to protect it as a free environment.

—Kyle Hersey, ,

The internet should not be a privilege, but a right.

—Rick Lou, ,

A multi speed internet will mean the destruction of free speech. But, of course, you already know that fact. This once resist the greed of the few and do whats best for all.

—Damien Coyle, Beverly Hills, CA

For the public good.

—Robert Belknap, Raleigh, NC

Dear FCC, don't let the big corporations screw over everyone at a whim. The regular citizens and the smaller companies are counting on you to keep the internet a fair playing ground for all involved.

—Dana Olson, ,

The ability to get to a web site or video provider without worrying at what speed they paid for with my ISP instead of what I paid for with my ISP. I've already had issues with one ISP (TWC) with youtube being unable to stream HD youtube and had to switch ISPs just to be able to watch HD youtube. Most people are unable to switch ISPs as they only have one available. I'm lucky to have two in my market. If ISPs can have a fast and slow lane then those who have a monopoly in their respective market can do whatever and charge content providers/websites whatever they want to deliver their information properly.

—Mr. Chris Blackmon, West Columbia, SC

Free to move without boundaries, and restrictions of any kind. No one should control or regulate a medium that was made to shorten the distance between entities that were far away to bring them closer.

—Alfred Ruiz, Aguadilla, PR

I use the internet and I need net neutrality to do so freely

—Robert Powell, ,

If you make it about money, you'll make it a repressive tool. The internet is about free and open communication.

—Shannon D MacLeod, ,

Net neutrality has for several decades now allowed public libraries across the country to provide taxpayers with communications services they might individually be unable to afford. These communications services have allowed people to apply for jobs online, respond to legal inquiries, submit homework from middle school grades through college levels, keep in touch with family members, and dialog with doctors, lawyers, and other professionals. As more and more aspects of our daily lives occur online, members of the public have been forced to utilize free access available at their public libraries. This means of communication must not be pre-empted by some corporations' wish for greater profits at the expense of the needs of the general public. Library budgets will not be able to keep up, which will be a disservice to the public of epic proportions.

—Toni Rorapugh, Vestal, NY

History is littered with the carcasses of failed entities as the result of government intervention and intrusion. Socialism, (or whatever the politically correct moniker it now carries) has failed, continues to fail and will fail in this case again. Please, for the love of everything that is good and decent, leave your grimy, 'well intentioned' and devious hands off of that which brings people, and ideas together. The free flow of information, unencumbered with government oversight saves lives, enlarges horizons and "turns on the lights" to the impoverished, downtrodden and forgotten. Ask any recent defector from North Korea and the likes how well government intrusion works.

—Bob Peters, ,

It's time for the FCC to make net neutrality a priority. The open internet has been an economic driver for the US. If Big Telecom is able to destroy net neutrality then it will take a lot of the economic growth and innovation with it. Chairman Wheeler has said he supports net neutrality. It's time to stop lying and to start really supporting net neutrality.

—Glenn Glenn Tarcea, Ann Arbor, MI

We are rapidly becoming a nation of haves and have-nots. The internet and cyberspace should be and remain public infrastructure regulated in the common interest. Otherwise, we condemn ourselves to failing to develop the potential in our citizenry necessary to be competitive in a global economy and society.

—James Williams, Talladega, AL

The loss of net-neutrality will mean that wealthy corporations will control the main access most people will have to information. This will kill democracy, or whatever remains of it.

—Peter Abrams, Hyattsville, MD

Dear Federal Communications Commission: We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Charles Keller, Chicago, IL

The internet is meant to be shared for all. Not limited to those who can afford the faster speeds.

—Mr. Steven Schafer, Beaverton, OR

The internet is slowly becoming my local broadband provider's local area network. For someone my age the internet has always been an open place where new startup companies could thrive and that is slowly changing for the worse. I eventually imagine an internet that is completely different based on where you are located because you'll only have access to content that is coordinated through your provider. I'm not a fan of walled gardens and this "internet fastlane" is a bunch of bull. I work in IT and I know that it's a non-technical way to make it sound like something the average person can understand but in the reality it's just another way to give more power to our broadband providers so they can make more revenue.

—Mark Brewster, Southington, OH

Because we, the people, paid for it. We paid for the research and development of the Internet, and without which it would not exist. Because it's not your decision to make.

—Pala Dasgupta, ,

There's just no need except to create money for someone else, and some people will not be able to afford it, so why have different tears to create a class system on the internet

—Regina Minniss, Baltimore, MD

Allowing competitive smaller, independent, ISPs creates a diverse market.

—Raymond Harrison, ,

Open and honest uncensored communication available to everyone is essential to be able to peacefully move into the next level of global civilization. This counts for your personal future as well!

—Thijs van Leeuwen, ,

All ISP users pay for a specific bandwidth rate (x Mbit/sec), they should be entitled to access that bandwidth as they see fit, not as the ISPs do. What is next, a super-tax to use certain lanes on highways/freeways? Let's get real and understand why ISPs REALLY want to slow down certain sources of traffic, it's about stifling competition! Enough is enough!!

—Christopher John Burn, ,

The monopolies are enough. We, here, have one choice and if we don't like it there is nothing we can do about it and most other areas are the same. As it is our service is spotty and irregular at best - customer service is almost non-existent and now they want to charge for everything they do - even if it is their improperly operating equipment. We need choices and we do not need to go to any type of tiered service where those can pay more get the better, faster service while the rest of us should just go to a tin can and a string. If that type of service begins in our area we will cancel ALL service and depend on whatever we can get with an over-the-air antenna, drop phone service and depend on cell only and go with our Roku for anything else. It is time for the monopolies to stop and for we, the people, to be able to expect equal service and choices not geared to the rich who can afford the best while the remainder of us suck the old proverbial hind teat. DO NOT throttle our service or slow down streaming unless we pay more - most of us whom cannot afford to do so. SAVE NET NEUTRALITY!

—Frances Porgal, Silver Springs, FL

Thanks to globalization, United States policies become the world's policies. The Internet is an international network, and what you do affects me. Net neutrality is important to me, and other citizens of the world.

—Kae Elgie, ,

Why would you give control to these companies that are already raping us with their telecommunications charges?

—Denny Hunkler, ,

I want to live in a country where small businesses have an equal opportunity to thrive and grow.

—Judith White, Lansdowne, PA

Our world economic depends on millions of little guys starting small businesses, without them the world just would stop, the big so called genius corporate company's wouldn't last. Leave the internet in the little peoples reach so America can grow and prosper equally.

—Matt Atkinson, ,

The internet is a force for public good, and allowing it to be privatized by a few corporations will result in the stifling of free expression and the reduction of access to important resources.

—Toby Garbutt, Morgantown, WV

Equality

—Sarah Mendez, ,

Net neutrality allows people of all persuasions to discuss and share their thoughts about the future. This must not be compromised by the reckless pursuit of yet higher profits. America (through the FCC) must live up to its Constitutional mandate of freedom by keeping the Internet free and (economically) neutral.

—Scott Van Denham, Burnaby,

It's a basic democratic right to have access to information.

—Sean Michael Wilson, ,

Control and fascism is a stupid option for humanity. Why would you even allow that? We can do better and you know better. Only liberty is a intelligent option for all of us and US!

—, ,

It is tearing the fabric of society apart by putting a price and profit on every last damn thing on the planet !

—Michael Lab, Port Townsend, WA

Stay out of my house. You would be like an uninvited guest.

—Miklos Bosarge, Cincinnati, OH

Listen to We The People and not the goddam corporations!

—Katerina Kokolis, Columbia, SC

The internet is key to knowledge and so much of what life has to offer. Big business has already taken over our country. If they take over our internet, they take over our lives.

—, Cupertino, CA

Net neutrality is essential to the free exchange of ideas that this country was founded upon. By handing the reins to a few wealthy corporations you would be for all intents and purposes killing any chances for those of us with normal resources to compete in the digital marketplace.

—Doug Housley, San Antonio, TX

I want freedom!

—Georges Paz, ,

We urge. You to. Reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under title 2 to protect real net neutrality

—Joe Kalik, Lakeland, MN

We all know that YOU KNOW why Net Neutrality is important!!!!

—Ralph E Rexroad, Hamilton, VA

If the hpusing communities owned their own fiber, we could have true competition from several ISPs over it. That way users could choose a different isp if the other where throttling or discriminating. Might be a good counter to this serious issue, Tom.

—Jon Austenaa, ,

At the time of my retirement - after 36 years in IT - I was data/voice communications lead for a major multi-national, responsible for connectivity infrastructure across~ 550 sites in 120 countries. So I have examined your proposal from an infomed, insider perspective and it is clearly a very bad idea, for a host of reasons which others have summarised and I will not repeat here. I urge you not to do this!

—Tony Jilings, ,

It fosters innovation!

—Richard McDonald, ,

It must be equal for all. Many things are being decided by the wealthy only. Middle income works and pays taxes, too. Please keep Internet fare and equal.

—Margo Thurman, Salt Lake City, UT

I depend on the Internet every day for my career and livelihood. Stifling small innovators would be harmful to the work I do and to progress in the digital services that power our economy now and in the future.

—Scott Drake, Wallingford, CT

If common carriage isn't re-instated and net neutrality is lost, then it will result in balkanisation of the internet and an even greater reason to prevent routing of internet traffic through U.S. servers.

—Marita Finnegan, ,

It's bad enough that you usually don't get options of who can provide you internet service so we pay exorbitant amounts for service- and now YOU want to make the internet worse? Seriously -you are not listening to the American people but are listening to corporations and big business. Try to get back to working for the people- that should be your first priority
—Jim Sakovitz, Florence, KY

The internet should be open to everyone.
—William J Reulbach, Las Vegas, NV

The loss of Net Neutrality will mean greater time spent to see internet sites that are essential to my small business. It will hurt my small business operations by requiring me to spend more time waiting to see the small websites that I depend on.
—Jozef Timmers, Chicago, IL

There should be no discrimination against the exchange of ideas, whether in the classroom, in the workplace, or on the internet.
—Christine Sneed, Evanston, IL

Net Neutrality is critical for our democracy. Stop the destruction of our country and its people by Big Corporations. Their greed and desire for power over the American people apparently has no limits.
—Juanita Hepler, Boise, ID

Everyone should have equal access to the content of the Internet. It should'n be prioritized in any way!
—Yuriy Chamkoriyski, Arlington, TX

Net neutrality is free speech. Taking that away violates the first amendment.
—Peter M, Mount Prospect, IL

The Open Internet fosters innovation, and free speech and widespread availability of information like never before. The ISP's want to double-dip and double charge us for our Internet. Without Net Neutrality, the ISP's will degrade the Internet into just a big online shopping mall and advertising service like commercial television.
—Chris Sibert, Ponte Vedra Beach, FL

Keep the Internet for what it was made for
—Carl coburn, ,

I am a user & a believer in democracy: that includes fairness & equal treatment for all.
—Rev F. Mark Mealing Ph.D., ,

The Net is my primary resource for information and communication. Any limitation of access will directly impact my ability to function as an informed citizen
—Kenneth Ammerman, Atlanta, GA

I do not want to see the telecom giants hogging the Internet. Equal access for all!
—Cathy Deptula, Brandon, FL

Net Neutrality is important because WE THE PEOPLE run this nation/internet... not greedy corporations that only care about their money and not about innovation and advancing. It's common sense and anybody that opposes net neutrality is bought and paid for by the corporations. It's time to take the internet back and we WILL take it back.
—Jeremy Page, Boca Raton, FL

Slow lane is 3rd world. USA is better than that.

—Jeff Legato, San Luis Obispo, CA

No single body or organisation should be able to police or raise money on ordinary citizens' internet use.

—Philippa Elmhirst, York,

Dont bend over lobbies. Think of all the progress that was made in the last 10 years while the internet was 'neutral'. Thanks.

—Olivier Asselin, ,

Ideas are free! We never know where the next brilliant idea will come from. Let's leave the field open where all our ideas can copulate and spawn the next generation of tech. for all to benefit.

—Catherine Callaghan, Greenbelt, MD

Net Neutrality is important to me, because top-tier ISP's should NOT be responsible for restricting access - in any way - to the Internet sites I want to visit. Net Neutrality exists for a reason, and it should be a RIGHT of all who pay their fee to access the Internet.

—Rick Elphinstone, ,

Why is a level playing field important? Because it gives 1 in 1000 the hope for a tomorrow where the uninformed can simply "Google" into some enlightenment. The internet is too young to be neutered, we haven't seen its potential yet.

—Jeffrey Lalonde, ,

Net Neutrality is what allows the internet to innovate as much as it has. Allowing large companies another advantage over smaller ones will limit innovation.

—Christopher LeJeune, Dekalb, IL

It is our last bastion of freedom of the press, i.e. free from Big Business manipulation.

—, Exeter, NH

An open Internet promotes democratic free expression.

—Barry Rabichow, Oak Park, IL

Isn't the income inequality in this country bad enough without locking people who can't pay through the nose out of everything good on the Net as punishment for being poor?

—Jessica McGeary, Winthrop, MA

The internet isn't broken, it doesn't need fixing.

—Michael Kealy, ,

We are a country that is constantly being sold something by huge corps., people barely making a living, and it wont be long before the country is unrecognizable in the name of greed. The internet, like it's country should be for the people, not healthy, fat, greedy, corporations who collect welfare and pay no taxes. Shame on anyone who votes in favor of net neutrality, and may God have mercy on the soul of those who make it happen. Karma is yours, I will pray for your Karma to be swift.

—Nancy Toder, Mount Kisco, NY

I strongly support Net Neutrality! The idea of a 'tiered internet' is all about money and greed. The internet should be a free and open platform, like any other utility we use in our homes.

—Stephen Manis, Ringgold, GA

I use the internet for banking, communication with my nearly deaf sister and keeping in touch with my friends. I use it as my map finder, my encyclopedia, my knowledge, my source of news, because I do not have cable tv. I use it for nearly everything anymore, mainly because I was encouraged to do so by banks and utilities and now they want to make it where you can't afford it. And yes, I like to watch videos that are not appropriate for children, but they parents should watch what they are doing, not my job to babysit. My mom knew "everything" we kids did when I was a kid.

—Gregory W Griffin, Lowell, OH

The end of net neutrality will impose more barriers to entry to new businesses, which are the engine of innovation.

—Jonathan Garneau, ,

It is the basic ability for new companies to compete. If established vendors can cause competitors to be slowed down by paying large preference fees, new entrants like NetFlix, etc... would not have arrived. The internet carriers (Cable, Telecom, etc...) see this as a bonus fee that costs them nothing as they are doing net neutrality today. Why inspect all packets and decide which to route to the fast/slow lane, when you can simply ignore it and route it through fine. Once the cable/telecom can decide who can be fast or slow, one political party could pay to have their communications fast, while the other party gets slowed down. Is that right?

—Steven Scott, , none of your buisness

—W F. Noble, BOSTON, MA

The takeover from big business needs to stop. They do not control what we have created! Do not let the tyrants win again. For once, stand up for the people you work for.

—Lynn Tyler, Odessa, FL

Ask me why Honesty is important.

—Katherine Peters, Denver, CO

If we allow corporations to censor the internet via economic pressures forced upon small providers then America is no different than nations such as Iran and North Korea.

—Mackenzie Lussier, , leave internet alone

—Paul Leveille, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me because I rely on the internet to communicate with my friends and family, and also to buy my favorite artist's music cds and my favorite clothes.

—Sarah Savala, Los Lunas, NM

Must keep a level playing field for all.

—Tim Dolan, Colorado Springs, CO

I don't want to pay more for access.

—Fred Chauncey, RALEIGH, NC

Please don't let for-profit corporations limit my access to information for their own gain. Internet access is as critical to modern life as utility services, and the FCC should ensure that all have equal access to it the same way.

—Chris Smith, Concord, NC

This is an indirect subsidy to telecom corporations which have oligopoly control of our communications. It will lead to higher charges to consumers by a lot.

—John Wetherhold, New York, NY

The internet is the economic engine of the 21st century and EVERY Citizen deserves EQUAL access. Anything less is undemocratic and will only create a "fast lane" to total Plutocracy! The powerful are already powerful ENOUGH! We need someone in Washington to look out for "the peoples" interest...and that is YOU...and NOW is the time.

—Andy Belisle, Chaplin, CT

Free internet is what democracy is all about.

—Djunaedi Wreksoremboko, ,

Creativity, communication, freedom. How can you even consider giving big telecom even more control? NO!!!!

—Max Kennedy, ,

The internet is a platform for free expression. It cannot and should not be owned by anyone.

—Lloyd Greenfield, ,

It a space for FREE expression of will, speech, thought for everyone, and imposing such segregation is the same as denying the right to vote to women, or "black" people

—Milen, ,

A paid tiered Internet will destroy one of the last venues for free speech in the country.

—Lawrence D. Snyder, Davis, CA

Their needs to a fair playing field for all companies

—Nathan Lubbers, ,

Inexpensive advertising is vital for my small businesses. Remote computer support is one of my offered services. I do a lot of Internet consumer, scientific, and professional research online.

—KGH Nicholes, Martinsdale, MT

The common carrier model is historically the best way to support our diverse economic activity. Destroy it for the internet and you promote inefficient monopolies at the expense of innovative diversity.

—David Hill, ,

The internet must remain a level playing field to help maintain freedom of expression. Failure to keep it neutral will result in an even more unequal distribution of power, which is dangerous to all in society

—Tom McCanlis, ,

PRICE SHOULD NOT BE AN OBSTACLE TO INTERNET ACCESS, and there is already sufficient injustice in that often the poor ,who need it most, because of access to cheaper bargains and productd , already can't afford it often.

—Alexander Cunningham, EDINBURGH,

we had already seen enough of big company greed

—Darko, ,

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler claims he supports the open Internet, but his proposed rules would allow Big Telecom to charge steep tolls for premium access — and block or slow down websites and services that can't afford the new fees.

—Sa Re, Paoli, PA

The internet service providers have too much power as is with there monopoly, if you let them dictate what sites get slowed or blocked then it will really hinder other businesses in Canada.

—Alexander Jaques, , as one of our disabled community who relays on internet for economic and social independence, competition is best!

—Nicholas Molson, Carney, MI

Net neutrality is essential to preserve the culture of innovation that the internet has fostered. A "slow lane" will bias competition and make it harder for small businesses.

—Donna Berry, Eau Claire, WI

the internet is for ALL--not a select few---

—Mike Jones, ,

Small businesses and contractors who work from home will be at a disadvantage if there are two tires of internet speed / service.

—James and Joan Tomczyk, Caldwell, NJ

Whenever corporations are given new freedom to fleece the public they invariably do. Corporations will cast aside the common good for profits and just plain greed.

—Walter R Tulys, Perth Amboy, NJ

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler claims he supports the open Internet, but his proposed rules would allow Big Telecom to charge steep tolls for premium access — and block or slow down websites and services that can't afford the new fees.

—Shirl R Parker, Brownsville, TX

I strongly believe in internet innovation as well as freedom of speech. I do not believe that any changes to the internet should be made, or even be considered. Let us keep our internet the way it is.

—Piers B-F, Le Sueur, MN

Net Neutrality is not just important to me, it's important to all humanity - why is that not obvious?

—Marc Pell, ,

Net Neutrality benefits the public good, allows small business to compete, and reduces the threat of corporate censorship by a few giant telecomm. Please support the initiative to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality. Please serve the public interest, rather than corporate interest. Thank you!

—John Robey, Minneapolis, MN big telecom corporations should not control the speed of the internet... please protect access for citizen people, not just "citizen" corporations... thanks you...

—, Minneapolis, MN

The internet isn't yours! What gives you the right to change it in anyway?

—Alex Knapp, blue mounds, WI

Free press

—Laura Gardner, Charlotte, NC

For the last 4 years I have been writing a Star Wars custom action figure blog with my son. It went from only 50 views a month when we first started in 2010 to an average of 12,000 hits per month throughout 2014. It was just a simple family activity that ended up growing into a popular Star Wars blog throughout the Star Wars community. It introduced Star Wars custom action figure art to a larger community reaching over 120 countries around the world. The blog is photo and video heavy and if it has to function on a slow lane network, majority of our content will take so long to load that we would lose our viewership. We have devoted at least 30 hours a week for the last 4 years on the blog and we'd hate to see all that hard work lost. Our efforts have earned us praise on the front pages of numerous Star Wars fan sites, and lots of interviews on many famous Star Wars podcasts. Making the change to the internet policy, will put an end to numerous sites like ours and we's hate to see that happen. It would break my 10 year old's heart. The internet is a utility and needs to be deemed so. Anything else would be supporting outright corruption in our government and supporting a power grab by telecomms.

—Brian Fulton, Meriden, CT

Please - we need a single internet. Not a fast one for the rich and a slower one for the poor.

—Baxter Tocher, Edinburgh,

Net Neutrality is important to the free exchange of information. To implement a tiered dollar driven system would kill innovation and hurt the public.

—Robert Aldridge, Rutherford, NJ

Information must be available for all

—Shari E Bruun, Camas, WA

Because it works "for the people", and since the people own it, you should do what is "right" "for the people" Yes?

—William Duff, Morgantown, WV

Information is Democracy; Democracy is Information... We say we live in a free world..is our internet free? Consumers are already complaining about ISP's and NETFLIX. Is a "fast lane" policy really to benefit consumers or the telecoms that put in buku money into infrastructure?

—Stephen Cohoon, Silver Spring, MD

General Information should not be accessible by all not just by the higher income earners in society- it's bad enough an education is now for the one with the dollars not the one with the best aptitude.

—Julie Wenzel, ,

Freedom of Speech

—Matt, ,

I want freedom to find and access sites that interest me and are not dominated by rich corporations.

—Penelope Rowe, ,

Loss of net neutrality will stymie competition and will adversely affect my business and innovation.

—Dwight Hilpman, Lawrence, KS, KS

All web traffic must be treated equally. Stop listening to the lobbyists and start listening to the actual people.

—Terence Mele, Blue Bell, PA

We the people don't need another overseer. Let there be freedom!

—Rosemary Smith-Campbell, Memphis, TN

The internet belongs to all Americans, not big corporations. The internet is the great educational equalizer. Don't turn the internet into another wealth disparity against the poor.

—James Kraft, Sumner, WA

Allowing the big telecommunications companies to control the internet would be against what the internet is supposed to be, available to everyone without any strings attached.

—Corrado Felice, Middle Village, NY

Preservation of an open market for all businesses and information providers is critical, as opposed to more profits for a few businesses.

—Richard Nutt, Brooksville, ME

The net is our only platform to sound against the unjust.

—Cyrus Liu, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me because I spend the majority of my time on it playing games, streaming videos, communicating with friends and family around the globe, educating myself since I cannot afford college, and even attempting my own start-ups. There is no way that all these things would be possible unless the internet stays fast, free, open, and affordable.

—Axel Ricks, Virginia Beach, VA

It must be kept completely unadulterated

—Anthony Pasco, Spring Hill, FL

All my live is about Internet...

—Jan Jedlicka, ,

Pricing should be fair and equal.

—Peter gonzalez, ,

Our Internet is a vital resource and common cultural heritage for the entire world that MUST remain free and open!

—Cristalle Watson, ,

It's just common sense. This is a democracy.

—Jennifer Griebenow, Taylorsville, KY

Pay to play internet will slow down America's progress.

—Misti H Stout, Virginia Beach, VA

As a senior on a fixed income, I strongly support the open internet and it's NEUTRALITY

—John Brown, ,

There is no neutral ground any longer in today's world. A place where the citizen can speak freely and avoid government intervention. And the government can't seem to stay even out of that. (NSA). The neutral net is paramount to democracy and the free expression of individuals. Do not give this up for profit driven ideals. We as a people can create a much higher system of education, standards of living, and scientific understanding with a free net. Sure lots of people use it for Netflix and things like that, but there is no reason we should change the net for those people or powerful ISP's. Let's keep it open. Make the ISP's figure out a way to make more money. Maybe they could provide better and more competitive services? HEY!!! What a concept!!! Maybe they could figure out lucrative business logistics instead of changing entire policies and infrastructure for profits. I know these are radical ideas haha. We cannot bow down to these kings of the modern era.

—Brad Ramlow, Cudahy, WI

The free, global flow of information may be one of the most important developments of mankind in the last century. Please don't stymie one of our great achievements as a species to pander to corporate greed.

—Spencer Trueax, Delaware, OH

open access for all

—Cynthia Gardner, South Chatham, MA

As an Internet user I don't want to lose control over what I watch and share online.

—Bryan Anderson, ,

Net Neutrality has provided more access to making myself, a totally blind person and others who are disabled able to successfully work in the business world. Slowing down websites and allowing only those who pay to continue at a faster pace would make the Internet less valuable to all of us who have taken it for granted for years. I am not against these companies making money because that's why they're in business but approving this proposal would be a big mistake. Please declare the internet a public utility under title II of the Communications Act. It's the proper thing to do to keep the internet open and equal for everyone to use.

—Lawrence Stoler, Stamford, CT

Selling this in an uneven manner is like selling heating to one person at 70° and another person can only buy 50°. The product had to be shared evenly to get the most accurate results.

—Susie Cassens, Fort Pierce, FL

Connectivity has become more like a public utility and discrimination or tiering of any sort is simply outrageous to me! Please, please leave things just the way they are. Thank you.

—Lee Rogers, New London, NH

Most of our small businesses depend upon a free and open internet. If you give in to the Verizons of the world, you are not only limiting our choices, but giving them permission to do anything they want to do and charge more for limiting access. You are making a mistake and giving in to the worst kind of policy that will affect us all for years to come. Do you want China or the United States? You will become the Supreme Court of the internet, limiting our access to freedom and information. Shame if you do not side with the public.

—Linda Contract Contract, Santa Monica, CA

The Internet is important to everyone. Not just the big telecom and media companies. The people need a neutral network for communication, education and sharing of ideas. Please keep big money from controlling the Internet.

—Lon Jones, Fayetteville, AR

I see common carriage as a fair way to proceed with internet access.

—Delia, ,

FR EE D O M

—Tom Wenzel, Prescott, AZ

It is crucial to the survival of small businesses and it is vital for everyone to express him/herself without monetary obstacles.

—Ming Li, Irvine, CA

Please don't take away our internet. I say "our" because it is ours. We don't need one more Corp. making decisions and charging us for it.

—Tony Chavez, North Hollywood, CA

I am a senior living on Social Security I use the internet for hours daily. The net is my source of information and entertainment as I can't get out much. I can't afford much charging more for fast lanes is out of the question for me. Keep the internet free and open reclassify provides as a common carriers under Title II.

—Judith Bodie, Bloomington, IL

The Internet IS a common carrier!

—Ralph Tuscher, CEMENT CITY, MI

The Internet is a public entity solely provided by the public. It should not be controlled by anyone particularly the currently established ISP's. It is a forum for free speech and the free market. It must remain that way in order for competitive, open and free markets of products, services, news and free speech. Whether good or bad people have access is important, as the free market has self regulation if freedom of that market is maintained. If the Internet is regulated by ISP's it is really no more than government sanctioned preference dictated by the ISP's or corporate entities that wish to maintain a monopoly of their position. The Internet needs to be open to allow more and even smaller ISP's to allow competitive services and not make it harder for a small business to supply those services.

—Joel Faust, Churchville, MD

The "internet slow lane" is a DREADFUL idea, one that benefits only large corporate users, and STIFLES SMALL BUSINESS & INNOVATION. Please don't make this destructive & completely unnecessary move!

—Frederick Ripley, Columbus, OH

708 485-6098

—Victor Skade, Brookfield, IL

Looks like the powers that be are all in the pocket of these corporations. Of course, that isn't anything new. It would be interesting to see the money trail from these companies!

—Jacqueline Bobnick, Lawrence, PA

The internet has evolved to become a basic right to communicate. It should be open and available to all on an equal basis. This is the only way that small business has a chance to compete with large enterprise. Net neutrality is the first amendment of web communications . . .

—Ron Smith, ,

The Internet today should be considered a basic right. Any for-profit tiered approach to Internet access and priority will quickly remove the ability of the Internet to represent everyone equally. Those with more money will be heard louder and that can only spell one thing - a demise in what we all strive for: democracy for all.

—Peter Baranowski, ,

I run a small business and use the internet to obtain information for environmental site assessments. I also use the internet to stay informed on important political issues. I don't want some big company telling me what I can or can't see. Big corporations already have far too much say in how we can live our lives. Keep Net Neutrality!

—Dan Avery, Butte, MT

The Internet is a powerful for democracy. Giving preference to corporations at the expense of individuals is a vote against democracy.

—Odilia Leal-McBride, Austin, TX

Freedom of speech and expression

—Allan Bilous, ,

Freedom of choice, freedom to use the internet without someone deciding for me how, when and why I can use it.

—Chris Maguire, ,

I use the internet, I pay for the use, I have as much right to the use.

—Wilmalyn Puryear, Timonium, MD

Every rider on the bus has equal right to arrive at their destination at the same speed as the other riders. To demand that websites pay to reach content consumers is extortion. It will hold back advancements in new content consumption and creation technologies. As a software engineer I can see the impacts to the final users will ripple through the web commerce ecosystem.

—Andrew Braini, ,

I want to be able to shop or read news without big corporations hogging all the searches!

—Pat, Montgomery, NY

To allow companies to charge increase charges for faster service, and to have the power to slow down websites is just plain wrong. We need a level playing field for all users. We are already paying a steep price for what we do have and some can't afford the current prices. May small business will be hurt as will those on the lower end of the earning curve.

—Peg Herlihy, Newburyport, MA

Freedom of information

—Barbara Anello, New York, NY

Don't create another monopoly

—Charles Rush, Pineville, MO

Net neutrality is the main driver for innovation in the so-called cloud. It should be a primary priority of every country to safeguard net neutrality.

—Peter Calvache, ,

The NET must remain open and equally accessible to big and small voices. We can not establish a tiered system where money can buy greater access or speed. Let users determine what speed to buy from their carrier and do not allow content providers to purchase faster access methods.

—John Flynn, Washington Crossing, PA

freedom of choice, to view what I choose, what use is the internet if greedy big company's want to hog it for themselves and leave the rest to 95%.

—Peter Miller, ,

I do research and write, and I need resources that are not just entertainment. I believe in freedom of speech, not just speech for sale. I want to be able to see important and unusual things and to write about them and produce them without being relegated low priority and blocked or slowed. Often sites dedicated to obscure topics are volunteer who provide content not for money but for care and they cannot afford what pop entertainment companies can, yet they are more important.

—John Karl, ,

A non-neutral internet would destroy my business plans, and would further consolidate the media into the hands of a handful of gigantic companies. For a healthy flow of ideas, information, and entertainment, we need a neutral, level internet field.

—Paul Benson, Arcata, CA

Everyone shall be treated equal

—Robert Parment, ,

it is freedom of the press

—Dale Willis, Evansville, IN

Don't pull that slave trick on us.

—Pierre Halfquiz, ,

Surely it's obvious that net neutrality is essential to a fair and open Internet. Dual or multiple speed with result in no new start ups, elimination of choice, monopolies and total lack of competition resulting in stagnation rather than innovation in all areas of Internet design, functionality and commerce.

—Andy, ,

Not only is net neutrality an important concept on its own, it's also the foundation for the solution to every other big issue of the world we live in today. Freedom of expression, freedom of opinion and a global community and culture that allows us, as citizens, to tackle issues too big for individual efforts. Any attempt to undermine the Internet as-is, be it geographically limited or not, is fundamentally a threat to the larger concerns of humanity at large. I'm sure other people will give you largely economic incentives as to why restricting Internet freedom is a bad idea, though with the larger picture in mind none of that should even matter. Don't kill the future. Regards. /Daniel Lundberg

—Daniel Lundberg, ,

We must have level playing fields on the internet. It is good for customers and businesses. If the providers are allowed to create slow and fast lanes it will cripple our ability to continue to use the internet as it was intended.

—Douglas Gray, Melbourne, FL

There is a need for a level playing ground for internet-based innovation to continue. A 2-class system for internet users will inexorably lead to less innovation and more profit-taking, resulting in a net loss for users of both categories...

—Alain Feeny, ,

Providers have too much power now.

—Robert Pitman, ,

The internet was made to share information, to anywhere, from anywhere. It was not made to limit that sharing. MAke the right choice and save the internet.

—Russell Meister, Milford, CT

I am a software developer and small business owner and I depend on the open internet. Allowing corporate interests to control a facility developed for national defense with our tax dollars would be, simply, wrong. You have it in your power to reclassify the internet as a public utility and take it out of the hands of Big Telecom. I ask you in the strongest possible terms to do so. Thanks for your consideration!

—Rick Strong, New York, NY

Its the only place where individuals have a voice

—Catherine Griffin, Southbury, CT

every site is equal to the viewer. Stop gauging our freedoms for money!

—Michael Gomel, San Diego, CA

Net neutrality is important for free speech. One shouldn't have to pay to be heard.

—Laura Kushner, Mountain View, CA

The internet is for everyone.

—Kathy Schaffenberger, Eagan, MN

Global internet traffic passes through servers in the U.S.A. Much, if not all, of this traffic could be diverted into the slow lane, affecting nations and users that do not have the "slow lane" in place. Keep the internet fast and free for everyone. You can do this, have the power to do this, and it's the fair and right thing to do.

—Candace Carnie, ,

I am a small business owner. I have an online store. I am able to compete with anybody in my specialty. However, if pay to access good internet service is implemented, me and other small businesses will not be able to compete. Large corporations will own all good internet service. Eventually, under this scenario, small businesses would be wiped out. In any case, I am against a system for paying for faster lanes. Thank you.

—Steve McCann, Terrebonne, OR

The rules set on the Internet in the United States will effect users all around the globe. These rules should promote freedom speech and freedom of expression - ideals that the US promotes around the world - rather than limiting these rights only to those who can pay for them.

—Richard Hausauer, ,

The Net Neutrality is global. Changing to a so called Fast Lane changes the very face of how and what information will be given. Those that (have the almighty dollar) resources want to dumb down those millions who do not (have). Taking yet another chip of those individuals, retirees, businesses who will be left by the road. Net Neutrality provides all people information choices when we want them. Our right IS to information ... How we find that information and what we do with that information. Wars have and still being fought for freedom of speech and the rights of obtaining that speech. And the rights of all when, where and how often. Not when only the right is who pays more.

—Sage Johnson, San Francisco, CA

This would make it very hard for poor people to talk with loved ones put your self in our shoes. ..The hole government. ..on dial up! That's why we do what we do.

—Donald Redmond, ,

The Internet is the most easily-accessed method of communication that enables the world to stay connected and learn about itself. With policies that the Telecom companies would like to see enacted, we will be devolving, not revolutionizing, the world. The amount of money wasted on litigating this madness instead of putting in the above-stated policies makes even less sense. Even if the internet were to experience a slow-down lane, you can be sure that alternatives to the Internet will grow, whether it has to be from the ground upward or not.

—Matthew Kraus, ,

Information should not be restricted - it is unconstitutional.

—Deb Swanson, Ackley, IA

It has become one of the greatest man-made creations ever. We need to make sure that all men, women and children continue to have equal access.

—William Fenton, Philadelphia, PA

It's our freedom. Don't take it away from us.

—Cheryl Keefe, Salem, NH

Net neutrality fosters invention. Don't let big business control the internet!

—Janis A Kinslow, Aston, PA

Once internet has been provided a corporation should not be able to dictate the speed available to the sites i search because there can never be fairness is choosing which sites recieve greater bandwidth only corruption can be found in this policy.

—Ian Lewis, ,

Knowledge should be open and free. Do not let profits rule knowledge. Do not sell out the people to the Evil Corporations!

—Joe Walker, Memphis, TN

Very important to me!

—Elian Grigore, ,

The internet is the basis of how we communicate, to how we do business. I am a small business owner, and I make my living on the internet (I am a JavaScript Architect, and I sub-contract everything from design to product management). This will seriously hurt my business, as my clients will be limited, and won't want to take risks hiring us when they have to save money to fend off your attacks.

—Chris Keen, Gainesville, GA

I run a small business and rely on the openness of the internet every day. Do not take this away from us.

—Andrew Dekker, , provide equal access to all

—Judith Carmody, Wrentham, MA people before corporations

—Pat MacE, Lynchburg, VA

New innovative services need to be able to deploy and flourish without having to negotiate deals with every carrier.

—Warren Gallagher, ,

I want to continue to be able to use the internet without censorship, excessive advertising and more fees. I rely on the internet for my home business.

—Patricia Fiedler, Levittown, PA

Corporations will own the entire world if you don't take a stand!

—Lisa Ramaci, New York, NY

A free country cannot exist with a controlled media and the Net Neutrality is crucial to keeping us free..

—Gladys Schmitz, Mankato, MN

Fair, equal, superior quality access to information for all people.

—Bill, ,

Preferred access will cause most sites I use to be reverted to the slow lane.

—Timothy Young, Everegreen, CO

The internet is a utility and there shouldn't be any 'slow lanes', just like everyone gets the same electricity, not 120v for some and 90v for the rest.

—Rene Birzer, , to keep the net open to all not just a few that would be able to pay steep dollars by big telecom companies that are just looking to make more money and control from greed. Being a senior citizen it is my only method of communications . Now the whole world has access and that is the way it should be for ALL not where big corps make the decisions for the little guy.and access is denied to some. It should remain a place for free expression, economic opportunity, and innovation. not a place that would be dictated by a few for their greed and control it is my source of information to the world and should be classified a Utility.

—JB Marks, Tehachapi, CA

—Thomas P. Sheridan, Spokane, WA

Because the internet is an amazing tool that should not be manipulated in this way. This is going backwards not forwards for humanity.

—Rob Taylor, ,

My students around the world and I need to have access --and equally fast access-- to information and learning. It is essential in properly preparing our future generations. Do the right thing and support an open internet. Thanks

—Andrea Chitouras, Somerville, MA

I care deeply about the freedom the web offers us as citizens of the United States. I consider this attack on Net Neutrality an attack on my personal liberties and must with fervor oppose it. It is sickening to see the greed and pride of the few attempt to subjugate the masses who support them.

—Chad Clayton, Ivins, UT

Inovation; fair and unrestricted access for all regardless of economic status; America was founded on the principles of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. The U.S. Constitution says "We, the people ...", not "some of the people". We have a responsibility to make this a "win-win" for everyone.

—Gma Clare, Altoona, IA

Without an open internet, big corporations would have tight control over how we access websites and services. This will have a huge effect on small business and our economy.

—Travis Davis, Lanexa, VA

Would make the internet of things unfair and too costly to compete.

—Alexander Secoy, Essex Fells, NJ

Think of the liberating and enriching effect the invention of the telephone made to the lives of citizens, and the economy of nations; the internet is all that for the current generation, and more. Do not allow greed to interrupt the flow! S Grauer

—Sherrard Grauer, Duncan,

As a free country we need net neutrality for same reason that needs a free press! Our access to information cannot be regulated by the government or by big business.

—Pauline Wasserman, Providence, RI

The internet is being built and developed by people. Innovation comes from its base. Possibilities are greater the broader the base, so we will have a far more useful tool if developed by the people who use it. It is like language; that doesn't get developed by just a select few but rather by the people who use it. The more input, the richer and more depth to it.

—Karen Darnbrough, ,

I am the stroke - no speech. Internet 'is' to me!

—Laurie Pisarcik Connolly, Hummelstown, PA

The net shouldn't be slowed, blocked or interfered with by service providers

—Bob, ,

I do business on the internet.

—Piper Miles, Chico, CA

The Internet is speech. In this country speech is free. Hence the necessity for Net Neutrality.

—Gretchen Dunn, New Carrollton, MD

Half of my business is conducted online. I am a senior citizen and have few options left for making an income.

—Pamela Steele, ,

The Internet is an important factor in preserving the benefits of our democracy for the average citizen. Freely available use of the Internet allows access to information, communication, and the ability to have the individual and collective voices of the populace heard in a timely and effective way. In a sense, it is the ultimate tool for Democracy. I urge you not to let corporations spirit it away in the name expedience and the service of profit.

—Frederick Anlyan, San Anselmo, CA

Freedom!!!!

—Hermina Kann, McMinnville, OR

Because I shouldn't have to pay more than I already do for something. These greedy Corporations and their stockholders are not 'cutting coupons' like the rest of us! How much freaking money does any single person really need? It's not like they can buy stock in the afterlife. Tell them to invent the next big thing and they can overcharge the heck out of the public until the Chinese start cutting into their market!

—Kyle Kleckner, Berkley, MI

Although I pay for my Internet usage now, I can't pay what the big Telecom would charge if they get their way!

—Sara Lang, Columbia, MO

Network is growing all around the world, but nobody owns it. If you try to make two kinds of it that is against human rights!!! Do you mean that you are better than ordinary people???

—Mirta P.S., Zagreb,

Net neutrality is important in Canada and is not just for us, but for future generation to come. Stop taking control the web and we need to evolve than being in control state.

—Henry Wong, ,

The internet is a life-changing, class-lifting educational tool that could continue to share free education resources around the globe. It is information, knowledge gain, empowerment and the first access to wide-scale reading material millions have ever known. To take away the right to free information, free commons, the free right to freely pass comment, add information, be commented on, be corrected, to learn and become better human beings, would be a crime against all humans. The internet belongs to the youth who need to fill their minds with information they can get in no other way. The older generation has been able to learn at an unprecedented speed. The internet belongs to the people- of every country- and not to businesses who want to squeeze the wonder and life blood out of humanity's most wonderful learning aid.

—Lynda Jones, Locustdale, PA

It is specially important for a democracy.

—Ashwinee Sadanand, New Britain, CT

We should promote equality of opportunity in every field - not destroy it in one of the few spaces in which it is already happening.

—Patricia Esteves, ,

Because I use lots of different parts of the internet, and some of them don't get the traffic of others, and I don't want those sights to lose speed.

—Drew Harton, Powder Springs, GA

Please ensure the internet remains open to continue to drive new ways to connect socially and economically for most Americans.

—Mr. Scott Scheirman, Battle Ground, WA

...FREEDOM...

—Maria E Turner, ,

The internet is no longer a premium service. The internet is not the play ground for nerds or the affluent. Its a way for people all across the spectrum of wealth, age, location, and creed to share ideas. To give telecom companies the access to charge sites more to get the same speed as more affluent companies borders on the criminal. Its negligence of the highest degree. The internet is not just the domain of the telecom companies. Its the domain of the world. Telecom does not have the right to restrict access to it based on who pays them the most money. Net Neutrality is imperative to keeping the internet the haven of innovation it has been for the last two decades. This kind of innovation is needed to keep all of us moving forward to a better world. Please keep this in mind.

—Michael Green, Tulsa, OK

The Internet is about communication, free expression and the sharing of knowledge and ideas. None of these things should be monetized by big companies who only care for profit.

—Nikos Papakonstantinou, ,

The students need to use the net to access information to complete school assignments.

—Fred Rilling, Nokomis, FL

I do some research on the internet and need easy access to my sources.

—Wilfred Norris, Huntingdon, PA

We need to keep the internet free and accessible for all. Otherwise, it will be accessible for those who can afford it.

—Albert M. Bryson, Parkesburg, PA

Reclassify internet providers as "Common Carriers" immediately!

—Dorothy OConnor, Camillus, NY

Common carriage classification of last-mile internet services is critical to the health of our nation's broadband infrastructure. Please reclassify today.

—Haig Evans-Kavaldjian, Lovettsville, VA

Its simple, doing this will make new indie companies practically impossible to get any traction against a big premium speed site. Indie projects MADE the internet

—Tim Robinson, ,

ISPs are a natural monopoly. It's time to regulate them like one.

—James VanderZanden, Eugene, OR

Net Neutrality is the cornerstone of both Free Speech and Government Transparency in the digital age. If Big Telecom companies can impose these fees and/or limit access to certain sites, then they are effectively "censoring" Free Speech and ensuring their own Corporate view prevail.

—Hugh Montgomerie, ,

The Internet does not need policing from anyone but parents over child access, and what happened to overall freedom?

—Quentin Moore, Orangeburg, SC

As usual it's all about money; otherwise know as corporatocracy. Good for corporations ... bad for the public!

—Derek Spragg, ,

Common carriage fosters innovation and investment.

—Ian Scrimgeour, ,

Net Neutrality should be a basic human right, like water. Taking it away would be cruel, and will cause more backlash than you can imagine.

—Jamie Binger, ,

Because cable/phone companies already charge us too much they charge me for the modem, cable box, channels taxes, and more now they want more money for our usage and etc the same goes for phone companies all they do is lie to us and hide stuff from us like their prices and such so don't allow this save the net

—Joey Stevenson, Leitchfield, KY

Without net neutrality independent entrepreneurs will suffer at the hands of large telecom companies that now refuse to provide fair or competitive services. Hosting services already pay for their level of speed connection, why institute a second level of payments that will affect end users and independent business owners.

—Kevin Fawcett, ,

It provides a neutral platform for everyone and should not be contaminated by providing faster service for for some over others!

—Diane Sagil, Saint Petersburg, FL

Sprint has already buffered my data service and has not responded to my inquiries as to why. We need to maintain free and equal access to the Internet via a land line and via the airwaves.

—Pamela LaRue, Long Beach, CA

Competition on quality of Internet and the pricing.

—Michael T Casillas, Sacramento, CA

I live on a fixed income and cannot afford all the gouging that goes on now let alone more $$$$

—Paul Wood, ,

325-893-3314

—Richard L. Willis, Clyde, TX

It's called freedom.

—Tom Hayes, Englewood, CO

In my opinion restricting Net Neutrality is a form of censorship, which would result in unfair access favoring those who have the money. This is wrong.

—Elke Hoppenbrouwers, East Haven, CT

Users are already paying fees to access the internet. Sites are also paying fees to access the internet. Why should carriers be able to charge extra just because they aren't the ones providing the content? They are getting money from their users. If they aren't getting enough money then they shouldn't be holding fees artificially low. This is just another method to grab cash and destroy the rich content that we enjoy.

—Patricia Williams, ,

The web is part of the new infrastructure of society. It ought to become a common goods like roads are. Basic digital infrastructure should in my opinion not be owned by private companies any more than the millions of roads across the land surface of the planet.

—Sigfred Hauffen, ,

This is the one place where everyone has an equal opportunity for free speech regardless of wealth. If you adopt the telecom proposals the internet will fall under control of big moneyed interests at the peril of our democracy.

—Kathy Dasilva, Garden Grove, CA

It is unfair to smaller companies that cannot afford this fast lane service. And their success hinges upon fast accessibility.

—, ,

Those with the most money are not necessarily the best ones to control the conversation. Keep the internet neutral, an even playing field.

—Carmen Castaldi, Cleveland, OH

The internet is one of the few arenas in the 21st century U.S. where the ability to make your voice heard isn't heavily influenced by wealth. Losing that would be tragic.

—Gregg Goldberg, Beaverton, OR internet is a basic right please do not dilute this right. the united states leads policy on this please be for the poor the tired the hungry and keep this right unadulterated

—Kevin Thomas Henderson, ,

Freedom is not only vital , it is a human right

—Mark Neden, ,

The internet is a forum for the common man and not just a tool for the privileged few. It needs to stay that way.

—Dan Cosby, Columbia, MO

My internet is my radio of yester-year. Yes, I'm that old! How dare you initiate first step to take away my internet ! How dare you give Cadillac services to the powerful and Model- T services to the common citizen.

—Raul de la Rosa, Olympia, WA

The Internet is essential to functioning in today's society. In no way should Internet access or usage be tied to one's ability to pay the proposed premium fees. As we say in Vermont, "if it ain't broke, don't fix it!" Reclassify the Internet as a utility.

—Robert Salzman, Williamsville, VT

We already pay through the nose for our services to huge corporations making tons of money. Don't give them a way to further monetize traffic and gouge the consumer. I also don't want to be able to see content that can afford to get to me then everything will be homogenized and scrubbed to fit someone's agenda.

—Dolores Martinez, Collingswood, NJ

It has worked simply and perfectly in the past, and in order for it to continue working perfectly, please consider reclassification to Title II.

—William C. Black, Lehighton, PA

Freedom of expression, freedom of information.

—James Adamson, ,

I am a small social enterprise and Net Neutrality allows me to carry on with my work

—Matteo Bergamini, ,

Even as a non-American I see the double standard in this process. Save free expression.

—John McQueen, ,

Suppressing truth in any form is wrong. If you're afraid of it, then you're doing something you shouldn't.

—Gail Yborra, Wilmington, DE

Everything we have on the Internet today grew out of net neutrality. Wikipedia, eBay, Facebook.... Net Neutrality is the key to innovation. Pls keep it that way.

—Magnus Helander, ,

I want the choice of programming and content that only a fast, open internet can deliver.

—Al Hamilton, ,

This reminds me of the 1%. The gap keeps widening doesn't it? Most can't afford higher bills right now.

—Ginger Hill, Lyman, SC

The ability for all internet users to have the same access is essential in today's society. Internet access is and should be regulated as a public utility.

—Vernon Batty, Colorado Springs, CO

We need net neutrality for people to still have ideas, a place to share those ideas. Plus your divide and conquer is weak. Stand up for yourself and so no to the big for corporate lobbyist who line your pockets with dirty money.

—Stefan, ,

I bvelieve the internet providers and users have to right to freely contract with each other without any interference by government as long as no one's rights are violated.

—Michael Neibel, Roseville, MI

Open internet is an extension of the freedoms that make America so great.

—Corrin Whitener, Temple, TX

For learning.

—Nick Williams, ,

The internet is a beautiful thing created by humans. It has no biases unless we program them into it. All humans should be able to benefit equally from this beautiful and brilliant invention.

—Elizebeth Stewart, Winnemucca, NV

It allows me to explore and discover new and wonderful things.

—Michael Swiger, Ludington, MI

Don't interfere with our websites

—Margery Wry, Jupiter, FL

Net neutrality is one of the greatest benefits to all citizens, anf one of the most important technologyb drivers this country has ever seen. The large corporations did not develop the internet or the software that makes it effective. They must not be given any control that benefits them to the detriment of all citizens. Maintain net neutrality!!

—Ms. Murray Duffin, Sarasota, FL

Service providers should HAVE to provide bandwidth at a set price for all customers and remain agnostic to the traffic they host.

Furthermore, they should have to guarantee that bandwidth or provide rebates on fees paid for failing to provide said bandwidth. They need less power and more accountability, not the opposite, which this horrid decision would grant them. Kill this before it kills the goose that laid the golden egg!

—Stuart Holme, Charlottesville, VA

It gives me a way every day to get real news from the whole world. Then I don't have to depend on the ignorant and manipulated (bought) Main Stream Media (MSM).

—Robert Gammon, University Park, MD

Freedom of speech & access to information create a more intelligent population - which, in the long run, makes for a healthier world for you to rule.

—Sniedze Rungis, Kalamazoo, MI

Free markets are the foundation of democracy. Removing the open internet prevents individuals from fulfilling their manifest destiny.

Opportunity for business is what will provide growth, allowing scared corporations to remove opportunity because of protectionist thinking is bad for everyone.

—Lee Darke, ,

Don't destroy our access to the Internet.

—Kathleen, Petaluma, CA

It means a brighter and fairer digital future.

—Stuart Locke, ,

This is important because we are all equal. Money should not be a way to squeeze out people that can not afford to pay for it. It is our rights to free speech. I don't even see how they can suggest this. The internet needs to be free available to all fairly.

—Lindsay Smith, Everett, WA

An open internet that everyone has access to equally is incredible important from an economic perspective

—Douglas Anderson, Conroe, TX

Because freedom is important to me

—Cory Reid, ,

Because it's the most level playing field an entrepreneur can get to and a chance.

—Andres, Saint Petersburg, FL

To keep innovation strong and growing.

—Ruben Cerrillo, Norcross, GA

The only way to keep the Internet open...

—Mr. Neale Adams, Vancouver, BC

The net is the best thing that has ever happened to the average person and I strongly urge it be protected by classifying as a utility.

—J Stemmler, Renton, WA

Net Neutrality provides everyone equal access to information in an age when access to information equals knowledge, a key to equal opportunity for all people. Please don't take away this essential freedom.

—Julia Challinor, Naperville, IL

Equal rights for information exchange!

—Aleia Ruth, Albuquerque, NM

Democracy, equal rights to publish

—Hans-Henrik Jensen, ,

Your lack of concern for the all airwaves, radio, and television is obvious. Leave the internet alone and reclaim control of fairness and equal time on the former.

—Brik Blackford, Dixon, IL

The internet should be fair for everyone, without giving major players a leg up.

—Shawn Altorio, ,

Corporations are NOT people. They should be controlled, not be in control. The Internet MUST remain free and accessible to EVERYONE....

—William Van Ree, ,

To keep Canada in a position to succeed.

—Jordan Heidendahl, ,

Freedom of expression id our God given right.

—Wade Hyde, Atlanta, GA

We have a right to know about the lies and secrets we wouldn't know otherwise if it weren't for wikileaks

—Ryan Pereira, ,

The internet must continue to be available to everyone equally. We cannot allow big business to profit unfairly by charging users.

—Lois House, McAllen, TX

The neutrality of the means of communication is the basis for freedom of speech in a technological society. Let our institutions live up to their democratic claims.

—BONET Alain, ,

Don't change what is not broken. Give the little guys a chance.

—Caroline Begin, ,

You work for US! Enough said.

—Steve Burke, Redwood City, CA

Keep the internet open to all people! Reclassify as a public utility. The internet is as essential to us as water. It belongs to everyone.

—Tami Linder, Mountainair, NM

As a truck driver, I get my loads off the internet. Time is very important.

—Julius Cooper, Saint Louis, MO

The 'Net is the one place we can find the TRUTH, and NOT what the Lame Stream Media is trying to spoon feed us. I want the NEWS NOT someone else's "version" of the news.

—Mrs Carolyn B Kenney, Benson, NC

We are falling farther and farther behind in net neutrality compared to the rest of the world. The internet shouldn't be "owned" by one big corporation or another depending on where you live. In Tucson, I have no good choices or cost comparison for who I get my high speed internet access from. I am stuck with Comcast and that feels like a monopoly to me. Internet access should be just like land line access, open to all and leasable to the masses.

—Anna Patton, Tucson, AZ

The Internet functions as a utility these days and should be equally accessible by all as are telephone and power services.

—Barbara and Jim Dale, Decorah, IA

One of the greatest challenges facing the United States today is the danger of losing our democracy and becoming a corporatocracy. Granting special privileges to major corporations in terms of bandwidth and Internet speed is another step down this slippery slope.

—David Klassen, Hannibal, MO

The internet is the last bastion of equality in free speech.

—David Pilgrim, Saint Paul, MN

The US FCC needs to set the proper example for the rest of the world and not be the excuse other countries' ISPs use to abandon net neutrality.

—G Fraser, ,

Why third world countries get 100 times faster connections for fraction of cost of what it costs in US.

—Algirdas Blotnys, Saint Petersburg, FL

The history of the Internet is free & open access. That is the cardinal element of its success. To change that would be tragic.

—Ann Brameier, New York, NY

The internet should be an equal opportunity forum. Access and content should not be determined by those who could buy their control of the internet.

—Elicia, Minneapolis, MN

Net neutrality is important because it is the basis of functioning of the Internet. Everybody is equal here, and you should respect that.

—Jonathan Duranceau, ,

Net neutrality has been fundamental to the astonishing success of the internet over past twenty years. Don't screw it up.

—Stephen Melkisethian, Bethesda, MD

The Internet is global democracy with equality for all. Keep it that way. If the Internet becomes just another tool of corporate interests, then the rest of us will be left without any hope, a voiceless class that will have to find other ways to be heard. Let's finally learn from history rather than continue to repeat it.

—Linda Walz, Oakland, CA

We are growing tired of corporations controlling everything and dictating the terms to us. You are supposed to be on our side, working for us, not corporations driven solely by the profit motive.

—Faisal Azam, Astoria, NY

reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Shawn Kelly, Austin, TX

The internet in the Unoted States is slower compared to other countries, and I don't want t be forced to pay more for a be forced to pay more for an even faster Internet or else be relegated to the slow lane. This is ridiculous.

—Edna Isibor, Atlanta, GA

It's the foremost efficient means of communication!

—C Giffuni, New York, NY

monopoly electric distribution utilities must serve all their customers. Why shouldn't monopoly telecom utilities do the same. In this case, you are considering giving monopsony telecom utilities the power to crush small media producers. Please do not do that.

—Douglas Holmes, Danville, CA

Abandoning Net Neutrality is akin to censorship and there should be no censorship in a free society.

—Tom McGuirk, ,

The internet should be accessible to everyone without paying an arm and a leg for it!

—Jack Gladstone, ,

I want to express myself!

—Miller Williams, Fayetteville, AR

I'm on a fixed income and I use the internet all the time. I can not afford to have to pay for it. I would be lost without it.

—Susan Plubell, Clearfield, PA

All internet data traffic is the same. That's what allows for an open and competitive free market and spurs innovation for new and better internet services. Please keep the net NEUTRAL.

—Josh Larson, Des Moines, IA

Net Neutrality is the backbone of freedom on the Internet, allowing anyone to access whatever information they see fit in order to better educate themselves on any topic, issue or platform that they need or desire. Without Net Neutrality, the Internet will be extremely limited and only those websites with deeper pockets will be able to promote their message. To do away with Net Neutrality would severely handicap the Internet and the freedoms and ideas that the American people hold so dear and have every right to, it would be terrible injustice to limit the free flow of ideas and educational platform that we have come to expect from the Internet.

—John Jorgensen, Huntington Station, NY

NET NEUTRALITY IS VITAL TO ME. I AM DEAF PROFESSIONAL WRITER & SCULPTOR 82 YEARS OLD WHO CANNOT WORK WITHOUT FREE & UNFETTERED INTERNET COMMUNICATION.

—Philip Drumm, PATERSON, NJ

Why should the conglomerates that have the most money be allowed to control the way the internet works for all?

—David Burnham, Pompano Beach, FL

Please safe guard the last remaining commons from enclosure. Thank you.

—Julian Knight, ,

Don't let greedy corporations destroy access to fair and democratic communication.

—Margaret D Hurley, rochester, NY

Fairness is the hallmark of the American way...

—Ralph Guay, Helena, MT

Its American, no more control of freedom of Speech.

—Arturo C. Ibarra, Purdy, MO

The internet in 2014 is a basic utility that everyone should have EQUAL access to at a reasonable price.

—Barbara Jennings, El Paso, TX

We the people should own the internet, not comcast. Do the right thing and you know what big business wants is more money not to do the right thing.

—Martin Hennigh, Warren, MI

Net neutrality is a capital idea, that is to say, it is society's collective wealth of information. Don't reduce its value by giving away to the 1%.

—Carol Cairnes, Ketchikan, AK

It needs to be fair for everyone.

—Constance Garrity, Bridgeville, PA

It's important to keep the internet open and free, giving "premiums" is absurd as multiple people in families like mine have all different intrests. Making premiums means paying more than we already are paying as some people are paying enough to get enough internet for whatever they do. Don't ruin internet with this.

—Nick Deneve, ,

Everyone involved is doing this for strait greed. The internet AS IT IS should be protected by whatever it takes. WHATEVER IT TAKES.

—Steven Cioffi, Yonkers, NY

The ability to discriminate streams of data is very troubling because it seeks to dictate and penalize patterns of internet use.

—Doug Mesich, Signal Mountain, TN

I need equal access to promote my own work!

—Melissa M Nece, Palm Harbor, FL

The net should be a public utility - accessible to all equally. Rather than licence a cartel, the FCC should recommend public ownership of the net/fibre-optic system in North America

—Gary Hunter, ,

Seniors want fair treatment

—Laurel Colton, Matthews, NC

I know many small businessmen who rely on the Internet for sales. Slowing down their response time, because they can't afford to pay more for speedier access will cost them sales. These small businesses are the lifeblood of our economy. Don't relegate them to second class status. Regulate the Internet as a utility like phone service.

—Steve Boime, Arlington Heights, IL

I want free information and a transparent internet.

—Kenneth Dahlqvist, ,

I stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress.

—Taghi Abdolhosseini, ,

Unfortunately, Canadian policy is often dictated by American policy. If the FCC changes the rules so will the CRTC. Keeping the internet free from monetary influence is essential to its functionality. Please don't let this happen!

—Sean Booth, ,

Net neutrality is important as a basic freedom of speech, expression, and the right to knowledge.

—Steve Jonni, ,

Any small allowances that we give the telecom will be manipulated and abused. They have done it in the past and they will do it in the future. We need to ensure we are protected from their manipulative behavior.

—Andrew Kelly, ,

On top of the fact that the internet itself started through the investment of public funds from the USA channeled through defence department initiatives into an open communications framework a lot of the backbone hardware and software design was initially also handled through publicly funded research initiatives. The internet is a world connected entity and unilateral type decisions by a singular government organization that affect its nature globally should not be keyed towards the benefit of the few (aka corporations who will pull the speed strings) but rather towards the worldly interconnected good.

—Mariusz Musial, ,

This should be an easy, common sense decision to make. Of course broadband and wireless corporations would love to be able to charge customers (especially popular business customers) additional money for services they've already paid for. However, the end result of granting this ability to providers seems obvious, it will be abused and prices will continually increase. The real issue though, is a little deeper than that. Most end users have a ridiculously small choice for internet services, and this can also apply to many small businesses that aren't hosted in large data centers. At my home, I have 2 choices for internet services: AT&T DSL/Cellular service, both of which are pitifully slow - Or Comcast. While Comcast service is "usually" reliable, it is also ridiculously priced. I now pay over $80/month, just for a middle tier internet package...but I digress. Choices; end users and small business haven't got many and the situation is worsening rather than improving! Especially when you consider the constant consolidation and mergers of these large providers (Again with Comcast/TWC). Or perhaps their constant and shameless pushing in state/local governments to specifically prevent competition. So when companies like Comcast decide they are going to throttle back services like Netflix, Facebook, Google/YouTube, etc. what choice will those large corporate providers have? None. If they want their customers to receive their content at the speeds the customer has already paid their provider for, then they will ever increasingly have to pay what basically amounts to extortion money in order to simply give US citizens the services they want. It won't matter to Verizon, or Comcast, that both the end user/customer and the provider have already paid a fair amount for their services. It won't matter that providers in the US market continue to allow their infrastructure to stagnate while they continually charge more for the same services. Without restraints and regulations, these corporations will just charge what they can get away with. Most customers won't even have the option of switching to a rival service, and large corporations won't have a choice if they want to keep customers. Startup/small companies that might otherwise flourish and provide increasing jobs/profits (along with increased tax income for our society), would instead be struck with an additional monthly bill in order to continue reaching broadband customers, WHO ALREADY PAY FOR BROADBAND SERVICE THEY WANT TO USE!!! The choice is obvious, providers should be reclassified as common carriers, because that is what they are. Just as phone and TV service was common in the past, internet service is the common carrier of the future. A misstep in this decision will only delay the inevitable and cause problems for many, while increasing profits for only a few. Sadly, as with so many other areas of government, I fear that these large corporations simply throw too much money around, and our representatives increasingly serve their own selfish desires rather than honoring the office they are supposed to uphold and serve. Sincerely, Jaded citizen

—Benjamin Croxton, Jacksonville, FL

I don't want the fat cat providers to monopolize, raise prices and suppress freedom of expression.

—Brian Schill, Spring Branch, TX

The internet is important to me because it helps me keep in touch with my grand kids in Tennessee and California and the kids that live closer but too far to drive to see with gas prices the way they are. Please don't make the internet more expensive.

—Thomas Reid, Englewood, OH

Free for everyone

—Mr. Brent Lund, PASADENA, CA

It is difficult for me to imagine America and the world without a free and open internet.

—Dr. Fred T. Ponder, Houston, TX

Neutrality is always beneficial instead of one group that controls everything. I would hope that it would keep it fair and balanced.

—Mary, Devine, TX

A neutral internet is good for innovation and economic growth. Plus, it's the right thing to do.

—Daniel Marzani, Maplewood, NJ

The FCC, and other Federal regulatory agencies exist to protect the human person from the corporate 'person' and the demonstrated need to rein For Profit bodies which have repeatedly demonstrated a need to have outside restraint. Classify ISPs as 'common carriers'.

—Louis Rourke, Fall River, MA

Because it's fine the way it is. Get your hands off of it and leave it be.

—W B, Littlerock, CA

My work as an independent researcher absolutely depends on net neutrality and the free and open internet it facilitates.

—Jon Spitz, Laytonville, CA

Access to small news sources, my engineering business, research access to obscure articles. It's the foundation of our democracy to have access to news!!

—Karri Schlegel, SLC, UT

Freedom of speech and communication implies that there is no outside party controlling it. Compromising net neutrality is a betrayal of one of the fundamental principles of the American revolution.

—Steve A. Harness, Witter Springs, CA

Net neutrality is a necessity to protect our future liberty. It is the Paul Revere of our age. Without it we may slip into a feudal system requiring a bloody revolution to prevent our loss of liberty.

—Suzanna Davis, Medford, OR

The internet belong all human kind, yo can not make it slow, It has to be free and fast. I am totally against this slow lines.

—Johan Vargas, Schenectady, NY

Net neutrality is the only good way I know of to keep big money interests from controlling what we get to find and see on the internet.

Anything else is a slippery slope.

—Don Parker, Golden, CO

The Internet has been running along fine without any issues thus far. Why are we changing this? How is creating slower and faster 'lanes' of traffic going to be better for the consumer? Within reason, Site A should load as fast as Site B and neither should be allowed to pay more for a virtual 'fast lane'. If they want more speed, they can pay for a faster connection or migrate to another provider. It's bad enough we're letting the internet be accessed by only a few large providers, instead of fostering competition from dozens of smaller ones. Now we're going to give them the ability to arbitrarily decide what consumers can access? Make no mistake, this is the first step down that path.

—Colin Mackay, , the internet should be an equal ground to all. A global plataform where everybody can express themselves and offer services and products to whomever wants to acquire them. right now the internet is a strong tool for globalization and peace, lets not ruined it by removing its neutrality.

—Cristobal Elias Le Fort, ,

PROTECT NET NEUTRALITY!

—Dr. George B. Kauffman, Fresno, CA

Freedom of speech is a constitutional right - how can I speak freely if I'm forced to pay by what I say!?

—Jean Schwartz, Framingham, MA

Net Neutrality is free speech online. More and more freedom is being replaced by greed. It must be stopped.

—James Gillard, ,

It is fair and promotes commerce.

—Frank Paul Sabatini, Exeter, PA

Dear Mr. Wheeler, The words FREE SPEECH and MONOPOLY cannot comfortably co-exist. As the internet has largely replaced the hand held newspaper or magazine, it needs to allow the same content for the same price. When any person or group sent a Letter to the Editor or an Editorial was written, or a guest journalist was featured, the paper or magazine did not raise their rates based on the content. To do this on the internet would infringe on the rights of all to heard. We already pay a considerable amount to have Cable companies carry differing news stations, offering their views of the news. The price is the same for all those competing stations, as it should be on the Internet as well. We don't change the cost of postage depending on the content of the letter or magazine...and as such, the Internet is a comparable carrier. Please endorse Net Neutrality...preserving the long held right to FREE SPEECH...it is the foundation of our Democracy. We just celebrated the 4th of July...let Freedom ring across the Ethernet! Thank you.

—Lois Wilson, NOVATO, CA

Slow lanes will change the internet for what it really is, a great place for learning, opportunity and a chance for success. Allowing slow lanes will do the exact opposite, to only benefit the few who no nothing about the internet

—ben Livingston, Glasgow, Scotland,

No one should have control of the internet!

—Dragan Matijevic, ,

Inequality gap widens...

—Jason Brody, Escondido, CA

Net neutrality allows for creativity

—Hunter Hills, Solon, IA

Higher costs are a problem. Not being able to easily access websites. Greed, greed, greed has got to go.... Common carriers -- yes to that proposal...Internet should be universally accessible. And at a low cost so everyone can afford it. Should not be a vehicle to promote corporate interests only. Alternate points of view should be allowed. Yes, there are wackos, but we should have freedom of choice. Corporations & big business & government are infringing on civil rights and freedoms & higher profit margins seem to be the reason for this.

—Anne D. Novikov, ,

The common carriage rules make it possible for me to visit places and do things that would become nearly impossible to see or do if movies and other pay for play items are allowed a "special" access lane, with everyone else kicked over to the down town streets and alleys for their internet access.

—Chester Payne, Crocker, MO

We need an equal flow of ideas. Economic power controls too much of our society as it is.

—Trevor Murray, ,

No individual, company or group of companies should have priority for internet speed or space over others. The internet needs to remain free, fair and equal for all.

—Judith Levine, Drexel Hill, PA

If the net is not neutral, it would be manipulated by large corporations for THEIR benefit. No thanks..

—Marian Rowland, Barto, PA

Because I don't want broadband providers to decide at wich speed I can learn

—Frédéric Toulouse, ,

The internet was developed by the government with taxpayer money, companies that have gone on to modernize the internet and gone on to deliver huge profits to its executive management pay little or have managed to avoid paying taxes. The internet belongs to the public and each member of the public has the same right to have access to media access--let's not forget that electrical waves belong to all of us. The FCC is supposed to protect the rights of the public. Please do your job.

—Susan Goldstein, Danville, CA

First of all....DO NO HARM! That means let Internet remain FREE and OPEN!

—William Sollner, Arma, KS

Keep profit out of the last fully democratic space we have

—Mathilde Tardy, ,

The internet has been the spark of global innovation, inspiration and collaboration. attempting to control it or create preferred users would inhibit that. Don't thwart creativity and innovation!

—Hilary Samuel, ,

The internet is for everyone! Keep it open so the Googles and Facebooks of the future have a chance to compete.

—Candice Parlee, Attleboro, MA

Netneutrality is critical for human progress.

—Tobin Janz, ,

I don't want the internet to be surveyed. I want to be able to read things on the net without fear of being surveyed. I don't want others to choose what I can read on the net.

—Torill M Stenseth, ,

Because I helped pay for the development of the Internet through my tax dollars. I have as much right to the benefits of the Internet (if not more since I pay taxes, unlike some large corporations) as anyone else!.

—Marilyn B. Lee, Florence, AL

Net neutrality is the only fair and impartial way to run a network; those who want to charge, ALREADY do. They just want more money. Net neutrality is the only way to go.

—Patrick Brassil, St. Louis, MO

I don't want to see the Internet exploited and turned into another tiered source of money for telecoms. The real power of the Internet will be increasingly denied to people who need it.

—Bruce Bennett, Port Townsend, WA

My career has been spent cultivating the internet's potency as an essential, remarkable and fortunate way for us to create a level playing field, where each and every American can have equal, unobstructed access to all information and services available. Never would I have imagined we would be discussing the merits, or lack there of, of putting throttles, check valves and metering mechanisms in the hands of a few individuals and, consequently their organizations and allies. Do not give powers or leverage to anyone that may use it to breach the first amendment -- ie., choosing what I may access and receive and how often and how fast and how wellWe're heading down a road similar to what Orwell painted for us ... one that's not easily reversed.

—Christopher York, Oakland, CA

The Net was meant to be free and open for all. Keep it that way and keep big money out of the Net!

—Patricia Chambers, Winsted, CT

Keep your GREEDY HANDS OFF MY INTERNET!!!!!!!!!!

—Debra L Watson, Gering, NE

I am friends with people who are just beginning to make a place for themselves online, and some of them are struggling to keep up their business ventures as it is. An internet fast lane could very likely put an end to their online revenue.

—Joe Cascia, Milltown, NJ

The internet is now a basic human communication tool. It must be kept fair for all in a democratic society. The USA cannot afford to show the world that a 2-lane internet is what it believes in. It will press on other control-and-money hungry nations and corporates to further repress people freedom of thought, expression, and strangle new start-up businesses. It can't be good for the economy.

—Sam D, , why would we want to widen the gap between the haves and the havenots any further than it already is?

—Roger Schmanke, Oskaloosa, KS

Controlling the flow of information is a power we don't want to give to corporations. It gives them too much power, and power tends to corrupt people.

—Rob Frohne, Walla Walla, WA

It is fair and just.

—Tom Craig, Asheville, NC

44135

—Ron Thomas, Cleveland, OH

Corps don't own the internet.

—Michael L Pitsker, Livermore, CA

Free expression is essential to our way of life and country. Tiering the internet to throttle some forms of expression is extremely dangerous and completely unwarranted, especially given that ISPs are only one piece of the internet. Giving them special unwarranted and unearned powers over speech is insane.

—Steven Bard, New York, NY

That is the way how internet should be.

—Andy Lee, ,

The free exchange of information is essential to democracy.

—Thomas S. Meacham, Bowling Green, KY

The internet is, continues to be, and will continue to be a backbone of the modern world through the passing of information. It is a construct that is fed by people and consumed by people as a way to experience, learn and shape the world around them. It is a way to connect with other people anywhere else in the world, and facilitates relationships. By giving the internet a colour, it becomes something that does not work for the person that is using it; it becomes something that the user has to appease, or work within of confine of, and it no longer becomes a place of exchange. The internet has nothing to do with money and never should be. The internet should be a network of ideas and growth between people, groups, and countries, not second to the gains of anyone thing.

—Peter Chandler, ,

I don't believe that the internet providers share our interests and will screw us for profit given every opportunity. I believe the current plans would only raise prices and result in poorer service.

—Scott Newell, Moorpark, CA

The free and open Internet has become an important part of civilization. I want to be able to use it with the same freedom and everybody should be able to do so, because civilization matters.

—Cedric, ,

My access to what is a public utility should not be compromised by corporate monopolies.

—Cynthia Mace, Lake Forest, IL

The Internet must be kept as a level playing field for free expression, economic opportunity, and innovation.

—Douglas Buchanan, ,

Just another telecom money grab

—Len Croft, ,

we need net neutrality to protect freedom of speech, without it internet service providers are free to block what they disagree with, that kind of thing is the stuff that happens in North Korea and other dictator ships around the globe, we need it to be free and open, for everyone.

—Kyle McClammy, Hampton, VA

It would be impossible to do my job without it. Even my kids' public schools require this now. Please don't make this a victory of corporations over the American people.

—Ariel Ehrlich, Seattle, WA

The very founding principles of the internet, as cited and presently upheld by those who contributed to the creation of its base protocols, went from being undermined to outright assaulted. The process was purportedly for innovation and consumer defense, but lacks input from anyone but private interests and (former?) Anti-Net Neutrality lobbyists now in positions of power. We cannot abide by this.

—Nahuel Deamelio, ,

Open equal communications is what separates democracies from dictatorships. An unequal internet creates a dictatorship. Please don't let that happen.

—Mike Rosing, Madison, WI

I live in rural Minnesota and have had trouble getting a decent internet connection. Until recently I had to rely on dialup. I now have a wireless internet connection which is much better. I can't imagine how bad things would be if they were to slow down my internet connection because big companies could pay to get faster internet service. I think until the whole country is wired for dsl or fiber the big companies should have to use dialup.

—Richard S. Cardinal, Sauk Centre, MN

The internet is part of the commons!

—Jody L. Fritzke, Stacy, MN

Internet equality is key for the middle and lower class small business owners to not be even more overshadowed by big corporations.

—Benjamin Sawicki, Emeryville, CA

There is far too much government spying going on and it will come back to bite the US and Canada on the ass.

—Robert Dickerson, ,

Privacy of information is the number one concern for me.

—Tyler Ward, ,

Free Speech should prevail over profit

—Judith Schumacher-Jennings, Walnut Creek, CA

The internet was designed/thought up as a way to share information with the world, not as a way to line the pockets of greedy corporations.

Easy access for all!!!

—Rebekah, ,

The internet is the way I find out about the world, present and past, more often than any other.

—Jane Power, Washington, DC

Net Neutrality is a fundamental part of keeping the internet a fair and open ground to conduct business and for our fundamental freedoms. The world is looking to the FCC for guidance - where you lead, it will follow.

—Elad Yarom, ,

In my opinion the internet is freedom of speech. No one should have the right to control the freedom to speech ones mind. It is insulting that any one would think to agree to these changes so the big telecom company's can get richer by taking away our right to say what we want. We also have the right to privacy which they feel they should have a right to snoop into any ones personal life. You have to know that some Jerk is going to abuse that one and get inside info. that could destroy peoples lives and or lively hood. I say Stay out of my internet and my business.

—Dianna Wyatt, ,

As an unemployed college student searching for a job, net neutrality has allowed me access to the vast wealth of information that I need without being forced to pay more for higher service. Availability of information shouldn't be something for the rich.

—Jefferson Schaffer, Salt Lake City, UT

Net Neutrality is important to me because i believe that Internet is a free place to express and it is not legal to hold a free person from using Internet.

—Agris, ,

My voice is not to be diminished by the moneyed interests.

—Harry Swensen, Pensacola, FL

It makes the difference between democracy and oligarchy and fascism. Simple.

—Ellen Frenkel, Denton, TX

The internet is the backbone of knowledge and communication that has become more important than telephone. The world depends on the internet. It must remain neutral!

—David Murray, ,

See Atlas Shrugged. The TPP or anything resembling an internet slow lane will kill the internet along with the free market. I for one, will not subscribe with an ISP who enforces a slow lane and will use any alternative means necessary and available for internet access. ISPs that enforce this can say goodbye to my monthly cheque.

—Steven Dunsmuir, ,

Net Neutrality fights fascism. Whose side are you on?

—Charles Paul Becker, LITCHFIELD, CT

It means corporations do not have final control on information.

—Dean, Devon, PA

Please honour our constitutional rights and our democracy. Please do not allow this unethical invasion of privacy.

—Valerie French, ,

Corporations should not have the ability to determine what I can or cannot access on the internet or to charge extra fees for speedier access. They already control too many aspects of our lives. Access to information and news concerning current events should not be under corporate control.

—Joanie Vigh, Kentwood, MI

This needs to be a fundamental human right.

—Hiroshi Hyde, ,

I believe that the internet should be accessible to everyone regardless of their locality and that is why I support Net Neutrality.

—Carol D. Johnson, Winfield, IL

We need a level playing field to keep the internet impartial.

—Jonathan Harrah, Asheville, NC

freedom!!!

—Melinda Huntley, ,

Net neutrality is required for a prosperous future for businesses and individuals. Limiting speeds and allowing isp's to hamper companies like Netflix will only slow innovation down and allow the isp's to profit. The people paid for the majority of the cable in the ground, require that the carriers be common carriers like they actually are.

—James Barbu, ,

Already Pay High internet fees and do not need access to the internet blocked or slowed down to websites!

—Joseph Whalen, ,

Net Neutrality = FREEDOM!!! Eliminating it means small business owners, non-profits and American Citizens will be lost in the SLOW LANE and their sites effectively obliterated. DON'T TAKE AWAY OUR FREEDOM FOR CORPORATE GREED!!!! NEVER TAKE AWAY NET NEUTRALITY!!!! AND CLASSIFY BROADBAND AS A UTILITY!!!

—, Edmonds, WA

The internet needs to be an equal playing field, where democratic values are kept forefront, including equal access, uncensored content, big and small companies, individuals, major news channels and independent citizen reporting, all should be able to contribute and be seen equally. It is the governments job to make sure all communities have access to the internet and the same internet. It is the way we find jobs, network, stay connected to families, learn new skills- it is essential that we all have these opportunities. Government should help find a democratic internet, updating and regulating, so big business does not take over and protect there business interests only.

—Alyssa Dreyfus, Poughkeepsie, NY

Because this and other sensible measures would be one way to help prevent large corporations from stifling innovation. It would help keep the playing field level for future innovators. Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers post haste!

—Eric Blankfield, Portsmouth, NH

No one /nor any business should have more rights or availability for the internet then anyone individual . It is time for the constitution to be upheld !!!!!

—Dennis Shimmel, renton, WA

Keep everyone fast. There will be too much opportunity for abuse with a segregated Internet. SDD

—Mr. Shelley D. Dahlgren PhD, Issaquah, WA

Freedom of information is a part of a human freedom and human rights.

—Lena Savic, ,

: because without it the internet as a neutral source of information is sunk.

—Cheryl alison, Medford, MA

The divide between rich and poor is getting wider, and destroying net neutrality is a big step in that bad direction.

—Peggy Alt, Philmont, NY

The ISP industry is a huge gatekeeper for our communications and power should not be centralized to a single company and small group of companies. Already many do not have access to more than one ISP thus the customers cannot vote with their wallet to create a demand due to the limited selection and Internet access being a critical component of our society and life in the USA.

—Jonathan Brier, Ypsilanti, MI

The internet has become a totally unique thing in our society. Its open nature has allowed for us to create new things, foster new ideas, and has brought people together from around the world. The internet is the most potent tool the human race has for advancement, and the proposed "Internet Slow Lane" would do nothing but keep it from growing. It is nothing more than criminal shortsightedness to think that this is a fair trade to line the already thick pockets of telecom giants a bit more.

—Patrick Lindsay, Florence, AL

Equal Access is fundamental principle in a Democracy, so Net Neutrality must have the same equal access to the Internet as the News media the 4th estate

—Barry LeBeau, Providence, RI

As a small business owner just getting started, this could mean the matter of success and failure in my investment. Killing the neutral internet will take away my American dream I've worked 12 hard years to realize.

—Matthew L. Hart, Crested Butte, CO stop taking our freedom !

—Eugene O. Swartz Sr., silverhill, AL

It should be a level playing field.

—Stuart Neighbour, ,

The Internet has grown BECAUSE it is neutral. Please keep it that way. Bit Business controls TOO much already.

—David Harold, Portland, OR

Everyone deserves open fair access to the internet. It's in our best interest as a species.

—Lara Smith, ,

No one or organization should have premium access to the net. Net neutrality is crucial!

—Candice Schachter, ,

Rapid access to global communications and our global community should be accessible and affordable to all.

—Owen Abrey, ,

Net Neutrality is Important!!!

—Jane E Williams, Denver, CO

How fast content gets transmitted should not depend on how deep your pockets are.

—Steve Keil, Hermitage, TN

do not want large corporations destroying the opportunities, creativity and innovations that net neutrality fosters

—Sally Wadsworth, Santa Fe, NM

It's our right!

—Brandon Shelley, ,

For me this is just ANOTHER example of big corporations fixing things so they can control information and profits. We need to give the common citizens a chance.

—Donald Clauser, Elm Grove, WI

the Internet needs to remain accessible and affordable to all Americans and regulated by the FCC

—Jim Lyng, Hannibal, MO

Freedom of expression is at the heart of your Constitution and as such it needs to be protected into the future. Allowing multinationals and tyrannical governments to control the internet is the act of a frightened and coerced people. The people of the USA and the rest of the world deserve a free and open internet, to foster liberty across the globe.

—Richard Pearson, ,

Please do not let big money hungry conglomerates take control of our internet.

—Susan Heaver, Malvern, PA

As a writer, net neutrality is essential for reaching my reading audience and having a viable career. The idea that greater web exposure can be bought is chilling. Having a level playing field is necessary to achieve a level of recognition to achieve artistic success. Additionally, writers and other artists are vehicles for ideas and are cultural bearers that influence the ethos that shapes America now and into the future. Is what America stands for to be controlled by the highest bidder, that the flow of information and ideas is determined by who can afford to pay for “premium service” features? Equal access and equal internet speed should not be relegated to “special” customers. As an example, when I delivered newspapers as a kid, every household got the same news of the day, regardless of whether it was a household in an upscale neighborhood or low-income neighborhood. Some customers only wanted home delivery on Sunday, but they weren’t cutoff from the daily news exchanging of ideas. They could procure a single newspaper as needed, tune into the radio, TV, etc. Like utilities, the Wide World Web is by its nature “home delivery.” We all get electricity for the most part. How many appliances and lights we use are our choice, but the same kilowatt measurement is used by low-end or high-end service customers. Whether email is free or not might be optional, amount of storage might be optional, but how fast your email pulls in, how fast you get to a web address, and security over your personal information online should be equal. Otherwise, the “high-end customers” have unfair advantage and ultimately control what gets distributed as worthwhile news or “truth.” Net neutrality must be insured to insure that the inalienable rights of the individual are preserved. Equal access should not be for sale and neither should the FCC.

—Carl Hitchens, Prescott, AZ

The net is one of the underpinnings of our country just like the telephone. Creating a so called fast lane is another step on the road to oligarchy. We cannot have a "United States" dedicated to our constitutional values if the guys with the $ always win. Please do not let them win this one!

—Robert S. Thompson, Enumclaw, WA

The Internet should be accessible to all people and businesses at the same price for the same speed, anything else is unacceptable.

—Zvi Bassan, New York, NY

To preserve freedom of speech!

—Patrick Holden, ,

It should be a free and egalitarian environment

—Yaman Ogut, Grinnell, IA

Do NOT turn the internet into Cable TV. The Internet is a utility, and should be treated as such.

—Robert S Chimis, Elmwood Park, IL

Freedom of the individual against oppression by the wealthy and powerful.

—Janetr Robertson, ,

This is now crucial to everyone in the US, and should NOT be run by big, for to fit corporations.

—Allen Holloway, Phoenix, AZ

The internet started out as a tool to champion and spread education and information. This should FOREVER be the case.

—Rachel Crandall, ,

I am on such a tight budget thanks to politics, I cannot afford any extra without cutting back somewhere. Usually food and prescriptions are the cutback areas.

—Janice Thompson, Council Bluffs, IA

To preserve our democracy!! What could be more important? Net Neutrality MUST remain in effect! The health of our country depends on it! Additionally, corporations should NEVER be able to control in the Internet! It belongs to the PEOPLE of these United States!

—Patricia Amazorso, Cortlandt Manor, NY

I am a small business and need the Internet to be based on a level playing field like any other utility used in business. Do not give big business another advantage over small businesses like mine. Thank you.

—Robert Hennessey, FRANKLINVILLE, NJ

It is what is necessary to protect our rights.

—Wayne Hamilton, ,

It's necessary to drive innovation. Had these proposed rules been in operation before Google or Yahoo! we wouldn't have either of them or any of the other innovative companies like Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, Pinterest, etc. We would still have AT&T. Net Neutrality is the backbone of innovation. Kill it and you kill the Internet.

—Claus-Jürgen Kocka, ,

I work for a small business that is internet based. uBloom.com is a subscription based website aimed at people who love flowers and arranging flowers. This business cannot afford to buy into the proposed faster internet. A slower internet will hurt this business.

—Kelly James Blank, Comstock Park, MI

For the people it should be. Not soulless money obsessed corporations.

—William McNally, Portland, OR

Creating "fast" and "slow lanes" creates unfair and imbalanced access.

—Eric Johnson, Oak Park, IL

I stand for democracy, including digital democracy, and encourage you to do the same.

—Walt Barlow, Lexington, KY

Yes Net Neutrality

—Brennan J Baranska, TAMPA, FL

The level playing field is among the most important aspect of the way the internet operates. Do not make it unfair.

—Rolf Ehrle, ,

The internet is what it is because there is true equality between big companies and anyone who actually wants to be on the internet. The most interesting content comes from individuals, small people, non powerful people, and that is the reason it is so rich and useful today. If we re not equal on the internet then it will just be ruined forever.

—Romain Pitz, ,

My Radiation research work will save thousands of lives and I need the Internet to pass on information to the World. Willie Nelson

—Willie Nelson, ,

I live in a nursing home. I earn $35 a month from disability. I can't afford to go shopping on Wednesday outings. The house activities don't interest me, like bingo & bowling with plastic pieces. I depend on the internet to keep me informed & entertained. Please keep the net neutral.

—Laura R. Goldstein, Miami, FL

Net Neutrality is important to me and those I care about - we have the right to express ourselves clearly as long as we are not doing or causing harm. Why should internet access be just for the rich, and why should we be dictated to about what we can and can't do online, while doing perfectly harmless things?

—Llewelyn LaVista, ,

Net neutrality is essential to free speech and expression. Without it, the voice of America will be muted by interests with the biggest checkbooks. Without it, providers will inevitably favor their own content and services over those of competitors and the internet will devolve into a few powerful monopolies and the interests of the consumers will be lost. The internet has proven itself to be a positive force around the globe for decades ... let's not break it now.

—Daniel C. Kline, West Bend, WI

Because we - and that would be all 317,000,000 of us - own the Internet. Comcast does not own the Internet, Verizon does not own the Internet, and no one gave you - the FCC - the right to give it away. And if you do, know that we will hold it against you in perpetuity.

—Susan W. Kidder, Mill Valley, CA

Hello? You're going in the wrong direction. The internet is for the people, not just the corporations. Screw the short-term benefit you may get from kissing the corporations' asses and think of the beautiful future you could help create, with sensible laws.

—Tijmen Brozius, ,

The Internet is one of the last truly free forms of media available to all classes of America. This makes it a crucial resource for people to talk, forge friendships, and know of events taking place around the world. If you allow Net Neutrality to die, we will lose a critical tool that allows America to truly be a land where freedom rules instead of money.

—Fayten El-Dehaibi, Pittsburgh, PA

I want a even playing field

—Dr. Terry A. CoBabe, Point Pleasant, PA

Internet communications have been part of my business marketing plan since 1996. I trust that the interests of independent social enterprises are recognized and protected by America's FCC.

—Barb Allard, ,

Net Neutrality is vitally important to preserve the information sharing capability as a common asset. I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Miles Dempsey, ,

The Internet does not belong to the corporations. It was funded by tax payers and should not be handed over to corporations to molest and alter for their personal gain. Fast lanes mean slow lanes. Slow lanes are not what an open and free Internet are about.

—Mr. Alex Knapp, Lawrenceville, GA

ISP's ARE "common carriers". Please do not take away one of the few remaining avenues for actual people to address their needs.

—Yuana Blanke, Chicago, IL

As a piano teacher, I love being able quickly to research information for my students about composers and musical styles. I charge low fees so families can afford lessons, and therefore I could not pay extra Internet costs.

—Ann Cader, St. Paul, MN

Come on guys, don't enter history as a bunch of felons hypnotized (or worse) by rich corporate giants...

—Giampaolo Ferradini, ,

I think I, an individual citizen of the USA, am just as important as some large corporation and deserve to be treated equally!

—Mary Taddiken, Allen, TX

A full speed internet for the elite and a lesser internet for everybody else contradicts the principles of a free market economy and will slow economic growth and innovation. This approach benefits the few and hinders the masses and will hurt our collective future.

—Michael Kurylowicz, , please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality!!

—Juan Pablo, ,

We already have a sub-par system. It needs to be upgraded across the board, (competition perhaps?) not down graded or sectioned into slow lanes/fast lanes.

—Lou Mathews, Seattle, WA

Ney Neutrality must be preserved. Destroying it is not consistent with the intent of Congress.

—Ms. Harley Sebastian-Lewis, Sacramento, CA

The Internet is a neutral, level playing field of communication that allows people everywhere to connect and benefit each other and the planet. The Internet does not belong to the chosen few.

—Atli Hafsteinsson, Reykjavik,

The Interet IS public space. Congress agrees. Why is the FCC trying to allow manipulation that will only lead to dicrimination, and eventually "legal censorship" Likely, they, like all 3–letter agencies, they have to prove theis worth by spending their budgets, and collect "tributes" to stay in business.

—Fred Williams, Fullerton, CA

I use the internet and pay my provider, don't need to pay more.

—Robert Smith, York, PA

Net neutrality is crucial because it makes the internet available for all of us, on all income levels. It is an equalizer and a source of education for the young and old.

—Lore Weber, Granger, IN

Govt has no place involved in the internet in any way. It is a worldwide free information resource. The only exception would be for illegal activities such as terrorism or child pornography, and all countries of the world must be involved. It is not the job of the USA or any country to govern the rest of the world.

—R Whan, ,

This is supposed to be a democracy! Citizens should have the same access to fast internet as corporations. The internet has become more important than telephones! Don't let big money corrupt your moral obligation to citizens.

—Lois S Porter, Schenectady, NY

People need internet access for daily life. This would make it a utility and not just a privilege.

—Gina Ronyak, Warren, OH

The net should remain free, for freedom's sake. The free exchange of ideas around the World, must not be infringed upon.

—Guy McCoy, Springfield, IL

A level playing field means that there are always alternatives to big websites when said websites fail to satisfy their customers. Competition is the backbone of a free market, and selling the playing field - or easy access to it - to the highest bidder leaves new startups with new innovations and new services in danger of never reaching the customers they ought to. This will not be for reasons that are merely fate or luck, but will instead be the result of a third party enforcing a market that only favours the stale and stubborn. A market that is no longer free to participate in.

—Matt Grimsdale, Mountain Home, AR

As an independent professional, as an Artist, the internet has become an important tool for communication and to share knowledge and creativity, because I can make my own content and distribute it through. The end of net neutrality will mean that big companies will take advantage of it in the worst possible way, limiting my access to the means to share and administer my art and my content, and also setting the rules of the content I can post undermining my human rights, specially the freedom of speech

—Mauricio Ramírez, , the domination of lies by mainstream media is pathetic enough; we don't need even more dullards trying to control the 'net.

—Jay Crawler, ,

Net neutrality levels the playing field for large and small business. By reclassifying Internet service providers as common carriers it will ensure that Broadband providers will be unable to block, slow down or interfere with websites and content they do not like.

—Sandra Barnard, ,

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Stephen Chorney, Muskegon, MI

The internet started as a free exchange and grew to great benefit.....don't stymie it.

—Timothy Grier, ,

Please, just one thing that isn't corrupted by big money.

—R, Oberlin, OH

Creating 'slow' and 'fast' lanes for Internet will mean that those who cannot afford the fees will not have the same access as those with money. Internet has been and should remain open

—Phyllis Straathof, ,

Freedom of the internet even with the NSA listening and recording is important to me.

—Richard Knittel, Versailles, KY

Fast search results save time

—Matt Standish, ,

Internet should be reclassified as a common carrier. Please NO "2-tier" internet speeds...

—Mike Porzio, Waterbury, CT

We already have the slowest internet service in the developed world: net neutrality at least maintains that status, but giving over control to the communications giants would make a bad situation even worse.

—Michael D Boggs, Salisbury, MD

The net must be free and open.

—Patricia Dumais, ,

I live in New Mexico, my son lives in New Hampshire and my daughter lives in Great Britain! I am 80 years old so can't just hop a plane to make an afternoon visit. Further, current telephone rates to GB are high enough to make a gossipy phone call something I cannot afford! This means I use the 'Net to keep in touch with my family. And right now this is imperative, my granddaughter is in the hospital and the 'Net is the only practical way for me to find out if she is OK. I imagine she is pretty stressed as well as having physical problems. She, my granddaughter, is the Lead Lawyer in a fair sized law firm - so is suffering additional stress. If I lose the 'Net and have to go to Snail Mail I will not be in contact with my children - other than either very short phone calls - or letters that will be out of date when received! I live alone so am extremely reliant on the Internet so that I can keep in touch with my family. Also, at my age, as I said above I am 80 years old, keeping in touch is essential since I live alone - yes, if anything happens to me, how am I going to let my family know? I will use the Internet, of course, it is the best solution to my isolated state! Incidentally, my daughter can access any emails I send her on one of her electronic gadgets...which is more practical than trying to phone her! And quicker!!! If we lose the 'Net, we will lose each other - and I, a very old lady, may lose a lot more!

—Mrs. Nancy B. Lindell, Santa Fe, NM

Internet Neutrality is important to me because it is what unites the people. Everyone is connected, and virtually in the same room thanks to the internet. What every person in that room shares is available to the whole room/world. Will you allow the internet to thrive and flourish to a community that includes the whole world, and let it live without barbarous rule and become the infrastructure that connects us all? Or will you allow the internet to plunge into the feudal ages where every action has a tax or fee, and those who cannot meet those fees are permanently put out of rotation?

—Joshua Dow, ,

I'm retired and on a limited budget and I love having the Internet exactly the way it is! Please do not allow the internet to slow down but allow it to speed up when the technology allows it to improve.

—Douglas Lass, De Witt, IA

The net is free and should remain that way

—Noel Lyle-Stirling, Southampton,

I don't want censored information when I am trying to get information. I want every business to have an equal opportunity when I am searching for a service. Many small businesses depend on internet to grow their business.

—Karen Linn, Westerville, OH

Expression should be free - not available at the payment of a fee or dependent upon the profit-requirements of any corporation.

—Dave Emery, ,

As the owner of an Internet startup I can tell you firsthand creating a fast lane will immediately kill our business. All of our budget is currently allocated to development and we have nothing available for a fast Lane, which would be required for all businesses, especially Internet-based businesses. You will thereby be forcing us and many like us to immediately shut down, effectively eliminating even more jobs in an already weak market. Isn't our land supposed to be the land of opportunity, not just the land of opportunity for the rich, but the land of opportunity for all?

—Mark Mastro, Tracy, CA

As The Founding Fathers said, 'LET FREEDOM ring!'

—B Maddigan, Middleboro, MA

Don't restrict freedoms and the flow of information and ideas

—Mike Dodds, ,

Because it is now a right, as libraries became. Because I don't care about Tue rich getting richer. Because Comcast and TWC are in the wrong business if they have such terrible customer service and are complaining about profits. Because they're crying for nothing if they can spend as much as they did on lobbying the government.

—Darryl, ,

We are the United States, are we not? Land of the free. Does that ring a bell? I am outraged at your attempts to infringe on our freedom to make big corporations happy. I have several international friends on the Internet I like to conversate with, not to mention several hobbies I have on the Internet. I can't allow you to take one of my freedoms away.

—Brianna Barringer, Zephyrhills, FL

we all need to have equal and fast access to the internet. this access should not or will not be censored by companies that if pay more will have more say to what we see or how we see it.

—Nick Barulich, Redwood City, CA

Net neutrality is important to me, because they help me with my assignments, keep me sane and not lonely, and also they keep me entertained so I won't be bored pretty easily, but with you FCC around that makes me and everyone who loves net neutrality pretty angry, and you think that net neutrality is just a traffic, well it is 100% fun and free in america, and this fun and free thing in America has something to say to you. Knock it off and get a life will ya!!! there I think I made my point.

—Victoria Porter, Couer D Alene, ID

The big Corporate media has enough control already.

—Steve Kaplan, Zion, IL

Much better for Startups & Sm. businesses, The Backbone of our economy

—A Maddigan, Middleborough, MA

Equal access.

—Skip Cross, Windsor Mill, MD

We have six kids and they use the internet for school work.

—Jerold Dougherty, Woodbine, NJ

In a democracy, the free and easy access to information of the same quality and quantity is essential. Without a free and easily obtainable internet we will deepen the dividing line between those that have and those that have not.

—Paula Hagerman, Sheboygan, WI

The concept of freedom is supported by everyone having reasonable access to the same resources. Permitting companies to effectively restrict access to information, content, communications speed, etc., reduces access to freedom, equality and equity.

—Ernie Gorrie, ,

Does this even need to be said? Really? Government and corporations want to control freedom of speech and the free-flow of information across the Internet—this does not benefit public in anyway. Do the right thing.

—Andrew MacLeod, ,

Because the FCC shouldn't control the internet nor should corporations

—Andrew Sertich, Wood River, IL

We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality. John Gerber, Canada

—John Gerber, ,

I don't like the idea that other people could control the information I see just because they don't like or agree with it.d

—Malinda Jones, Nashua, NH

The Net does NOT belong to Big Business, which is already too powerful, or to Politicians, who have a vested interest in censorship. Please keep it neutral, so that we, the people, can use it as it was intended.

—Stuart Allison, ,

Dear FCC: We have seen the results when corporate imperatives are given free rein, whether in the financial meltdown of a few years ago, the many ways in which corporations avoid paying taxes, the loss of jobs overseas, and America's shrinking middle class. Allowing corporations to establish a two-tier internet will benefit the Internet Service Providers, but not the general public. I sincerely hope the FCC will not be swayed by the pressure and influence of these corporations to give them what they want, not what is need by ordinary people. Cordially, JR Wood

—J Robert Wood, ,

NO DEMOCRACY WITHOUT THE OPEN INTERNET!

—Bernhard Wahr, O Brien, TX

The internet is all about the free exchange of ideas, these laws destroy that.

—Phil Schreiber, ,

The internet is a public utility. The only reason to create slow and fast lanes is to profit COMCAST and VERIZON at the expense of the little guy. Please preserve net neutrality! Thanks

—Burton Smith, Sebastopol, CA

The internet is like libraries, everyone should be able to enjoy them equally.

—Rob Stonecipher, Portland, OR

This is the way to prevent the railway tycoon types of the past and maintain a fair market place.

—Anthony Ng, ,

Net Neutrality is important in order to secure that all web sides are equally good reachable and therefore dont break the balance.

—Elvin Radek, ,

Net Neutrality is the great equalizer. Those at the top of the food chain might not appreciate the need for it, but when too much inequality is imposed on us little guys, the less tolerant we'll be of exclusion born from corporate greed. Putting greed before people and democracy provides short term gain, but the long term results will be ugly, costly, and destructive for all. One only has to look at our dependance on oil and the rising costs of insurance, the increasing need for government aide because of natural disasters, and the negative long term effects on our health, food, animals, bees,...

—Carolyn Givens, ,

I rely on the internet for my business.

—Doug herren, Philadelphia, PA

It ensures the opportunity for success regardless of what is in the companies bank/coffers. Thus, it keeps the life line open for new innovative ideas, especially those out of startups, who may not have the capital that old outdated businesses may have.

—Will Hatoum, Palmdale, CA

The internet has become integral to many individuals and small business owners. Don't allow us to be locked out by big corporations.

—Brad Barrett, San Diego, CA

So that the Internet will remain free and available to all economic classes.

—Donald Grayston, ,

Destroying Net Neutrality will tip the scale of balance to those who have more money, and that is absolutely not OK. It branches away from what US stands for: free competition for market. Please keep your greedy hands away from what is already perfectly fine.

—Patrick Kang, Ann Arbor, MI

The internet should be a utility service just like electricity or gas or water. Not an entity controlled by corporations.

—Patricia Smith, Bradenton, FL

Net Neutrality is important, so that users will be able to view various unbiased sources of information.

—Michael Jozwiak, Houston, TX stop messing with something thats not broken

—Kamil Demich, Basking Ridge, NJ

Net Neutrality is important to me because I have limited funds and a good part of what I am able to earn is connected to the use of the internet.

—Maria Royce, Mission Hills, CA

I didn't like the very slow access of dial-up and I certainly don't want to go back to that slowness. I also don't want internet service providers deciding what I can access.

—Esther M. Leonard, Huntington, WV

The freedom and accessibility of Internet communication has been responsible for much of the technological innovation and social globalization of the recent decades. Granting the power for decisions on communication access to a few large corporations guided by private interests will not bode well for the future of this process. Providers for internet broadband access must be reclassified as common carriers to protect this important universal resource.

—Mr. Mark Stambaugh, Mesa, AZ has this administration chimed in on the proposal of common carrier?

—Mr. Mac mc cabe, N Y, NY

Because corporations shouldn't be in charge of my internet. They cannot be trusted with the public good; their only interest is profit.

—Bonnie Bayardi, Closter, NJ

Do the right thing, keep the internet neutral.

—John Richards, Wyoming, MI

It's our American right. Stay out of my life for your own gain.

—Bob rindahl, Duluth, MN

Preserve freedom of information!

—Phil Robertson, burnaby, BC

I am a customer of a smaller ISP who has been a great company for a great number of years. Net neutrality takes the ability out of the hands of the big communications companies to ruin their smaller competition. You have upheld decisions similar to this in the past, please look after the best interests of our public as most will not realize until it is too late.

—Steve Booker, ,

I've shared my concerns about Internet neutrality with the FCC on many occasions now, but I'll do it again, this time by emphasizing reclassification. It would be so simple just to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers. Why can't that be done by the FCC instead of changing current open, affordable access to the Internet?

—Dr. Sandra H Cooper, Wheatland, WY

Every business and every citizen should have equal access to one of our prime communication tools. To do otherwise puts small businesses and private citizens at a distinct disadvantage. Please keep the internet a level playing field for all who use it.

—Chris Sandow, LaFayette, GA

Internet is for all, not specially tailored to make things easier for the few. Leave it alone.

—Eugenia A. Patterson, Kingston, WA

Preserve freedom of information!

—Sandra Robertson, ,

Taxpayers funded the internet, yet large corporations want to control it. The fair and democratic thing to do is to keep net neutrality!

—Carol Birkenhead, Bellingham, WA

Freedom of information is one of the cornerstones of a good democracy. He who controls the information controls the world. Nobody should have that power. Allowing a "fast lane" lets people/corporations with money to squelch competition by slowing down or eliminating access. This does not sound like it's fair.

—John Molinari, Las Vegas, NV

Big companies making selfish decisions keeps the world from advancing.

—Vincent Fayle, Fairfax, VA

Internet gives me a chance to catch up with family and friends that live far away. I am disabled and cannot travel easily so I need the internet. Thanks for reading.

—Priscilla Drake, Penn Yan, NY

Access to everything on the internet is what makes it so useful. It's not right for providers to decide what I can and cannot do on the internet based on who is willing (or able) to pay them for MY right to access it.

—Barbara McDonald, Wyandotte, MI

Preserve freedom of information!

—Jeff Robertson, ,

I need an equal playing fields for the startup I am doing....

—Dan Tan, Chicago, IL

Preserve freedom of information!

—Jordan Robertson, ,

Preserve freedom of information!

—Bruce Robertson, ,

Because Freedom is one of our basic human rights.

—Suzanne Liscomb, Worcester, MA

Because the freedoms and voting power in this country should belong to the people rather than the corporations.

—Scott Daniels, Santa Clara, CA

Ending Net Neutrality will allow internet service providers to provide less and charge more. It provides no benefit to consumers, but allows large ISPs to use their virtual monopoly to more effectively extract income from their customers. Any charges to content providers will have to be passed on to consumers. The move away from Net Neutrality will allow dominant ISPs to provide a 'dumbed down' internet that focuses on paid content of popular media.

—Jason Webb, ,

There is a zero percent chance this will not end with the complete obsolescence of our internet and the creation of a new one by a foreign power - or at least a coalition of international powers. The FCC gave the order to ISPs to enforce bandwidth limits on the American public to protect it's big business assets, and what happened next? The average citizen can't even watch a single movie via Netflix without incurring overages charges. You can NOT trust ISPs not to act in a way that won't maximize their own profits; regardless of how bad it is for the average American. And it is, bad for them. Very, very, very bad.

—Avery Lewis, Las Vegas, NV

I do not want information controlled by corporations and the financially elite.

—John Lehman, Bethlehem, PA

Small non-profits, small business, and individuals would be damaged by the passage of a bill which would allow telecoms to block or slow down traffic to websites.

—Steven M. Cooper, Portland, OR

Net neutrality is about saving democracy. It is that simply. The corporations already control most of our lives, I don't want them to control what I read.

—Terri David, Venice, FL

I'm on a satellite connection. I could certainly use more bandwidth instead of being arbitrarily restricted.

—Thomas Pritchard, Milford, NY

The internet should not be just for the wealthy or for big corporations. It should be for everybody equally!

—Judy Stanhope, Hampshire, IL

You only need to look to radio and television to see what happens when access to communication is "owned" and not open to the public.

—, Belfast, ME

I, as an internet user, am just as important as any other person or entity. If I, and many others, stop using the internet then many of the so called important users will no longer have the audience they need to survive!

—June Klosz, ,

Telecoms must not see the Internet as a big money making technology. They are already getting paid in fees by all users, now they want to also get paid by those that provide content. they are turning into the largest middle men history has ever seen. Say "NO" to telecom - if they invest in technology for better service then let them, that is the price anyone would pay to provide better service. To charge to use the same pipe at different prices just because you can is capitalistic but wrong.

—David Pierri, Port Washington, NY

I'm usually dealing with sites of which probably 80% is not able to pay for a "fast line" and furthermore I don't think it is a good idea to split up the people in first and second class people, specially not on the internet of which everybody says it is very important to mankind.

—Robert Gosewehr, ,

Being an older citizen I do everything over the internet. Pay bills et etc. If the internet gets layered all extra business costs will be passed onto the consumer. I can't afford it.

—Trina Priest, Elk Grove, CA

Leave the internet alone. There are already plenty if ways for the rich to get richer.

—Joanna Farrar, Atlanta, GA

The internet should be a utility, not privatized for the profit and benefit of a tiny, undeserving, uninvolved number of people. The internet was developed using US citizens' tax dollars. Why are big telecom cos. allowed to seize control over something that doesn't belong to them, something funded by US taxpayers? This kind of interference in free speech by the government is reminiscent of China. You are encouraging the chilling of free speech, possibly intentionally. Does this strike you as what is best for the people of the US, or best for your pockets, and those of your cronies?

—Naomi H Tiscione, Salt Lake City, UT

The rights and efficacy of individual citizens is being trampled by the mis-perceived "personhood" of multi-national corporations. Citizens have a right to equal access the Internet. If internet access is based solely on money, then none but corporations and the richest among us will have full access to the Internet. Without access to the Internet, citizens will lose any impact they might have on policy, politics, and business. It is impossible to fully access all these avenues of action without complete access to the Internet. Preserve democracy by preserving freedom of access to the Internet.

—Lisa, Stow, OH

I teach GED and literacy, and the websites I use for school are not high-profit ones. If high-profit websites are the only fast ones, I will have far less information. Teaching already requires a lot of unpaid preparation time, and I'd like to use that time as efficiently as possible. I am also concerned about the censorship powers broadband providers would have to make some websites inaccessible or very difficult to access.

Please keep the Internet free!

—Donna McMillan, Chattanooga, TN

Net neutrality treats the rich and the poor alike.

—Larry E. Taylor, Shenandoah, VA

It allows everyone a level playing field. The rich companies already have many advantages.

—T, Willow Grove, PA

Net Neutrality is important because we all deserve a level playing field. Forcing those of us without the resources to pay high fees for fast, reliable service is an injustice and causes serious imbalance in the way the world operates.

—Karen Sampson, ,

I'm a small business owner who operates primarily online.

—Melisa Ford, Denver, CO

I am disabled and soon as my condition worsens I will need to be monitored by my family and friends through cameras installed at my residence. These cameras transmit live video over the internet to my family and if i get put into the slow lane it could prevent me from getting emergency care in a timely fashion. I live on a fixed income and CAN'T pay any more without jeopardizing my health further. Please, please, please don't let this happen, I beg of you.

—Daniel Barker, Melbourne, FL

I need equal access to information from whatever source without a "value judgement" being placed on that access by a corporation, ISP or government. That is, freedom of access to information, something for which all democratic peoples must strive.

—Ross Boughton, ,

I pay exorbitant rates for add-on cable internet access to my already high cable bill. I should not have to pay an additional fee to content providers so they can pay the ISPs again!! Not only that, but non-profit and volunteer projects would be greatly impacted by having their traffic slowed by ISPs who are failing to provide adequate bandwidth to protect their profits. They need to be reinvesting in their infrastructure.

—Berton Stevens, Las Cruces, NM

It's like charging for the air we breathe.

—Chris Hughes, ,

Freedom of Speech, Freedom of Expression. The Internet represents these Freedoms better than any other medium. The more any single company can dictate who can do what, the more these freedoms are gone.

—Wesley Hague, ,

We need Equality for Everyone not just a chosen Few!

—Nancy Gates, Haverhill, MA

FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers"

—David M. Hill, Parma, OH

The internet needs to be classified as a utility. Large corporations should not have control of this resource. Please do what's right for the citizens of this country. PLEASE!!

—Mary Driscoll, Denver, CO

The more important thing that internet has, is the Net Neutrality... if we lose that, we are bitches of the big companies... YOU FCC will become the companies bitch.

—Francisco Laferrière, ,

Hello - my name is Kimberlee Spillers. I live in Iowa, where we have more fiber in the ground than paved roads because our 130 locally-owned telephone companies have invested billions of dollars to run fiber to homes and businesses to promote commerce and connectivity. With an Iowa legislator, we are working on a two-prong approach to repopulate rural areas with the foundation of our Internet connectivity as a key drawing card. We have proposed to our Iowa rural caucus to 1) launch a global search for people with Internet-based businesses to consider relocating to rural areas - beginning with west central Iowa - for safety, great schools, excellent business climate and connection, clean air and water, low crime, to name a few reasons. The second prong is to prepare communities to welcome, understand, comfort, and appreciate people who likely will not sound, look like, and share their personal and community heritage. We see this strategy applying across rural areas of the entire United States to relieve over-crowding in metro areas and supply blessing in the form of home- and Main Street-based businesses to smaller communities. Net Neutrality is critical for the success to revitalize rural Iowa. We're involved. If you'd like to partner, reach out to me, Kim, 712-250-0275. www.bewuca.com. Thanks for all you do - take care and Be WUCA! Kim Spillers

—Kimberlee Spillers, Atlantic, IA

The internet is part of the commons, - it belongs to the people equally, - therefore the FCC must uphold net neutrality and forbid providers from blocking, slowing down and interfering with content, websites and applications they don't like.

—Christine Roane, Springfield, MA

The word is called 'freedom' - Freedom for all!

—Richard Martin, ,

We need free and open internet to preserve our democratic values and processes. Don't cave in to corporate interests!

—Annick Smith, Bonner, MT

How are the unemployed supposed to look for work if they can't afford access and most companies require you to apply online? This is just one of countless examples!!

—Jeff Schweizer, Ladd, IL

The Internet is a platform for everyone. The only reason to give control to private interests is private greed. Slow lane internet would impede true economic growth for everyone, and would impede the networking of new ideas, the very stuff we need to repair and expand the world we all share. Please say NO to the slow lane rules and yes to classifying broadband carriers as common carriers.

—Jean Rajotte, ,

Without net neutrality, innovation is likely to stagnate due to lack of funds to pay for the fast lane, eventually resulting in monopolies on pretty much everything as tiny startup companies sell their ideas to already-established industries since they're too small to keep themselves afloat. You can't have decent business competition without competitors, and instead of destroying competitors, I suggest you find a way to deliver a better product.

—Tom Bater, ,

Freedom.

—Paul Huang, San Jose, CA

The internet should always be free and equal. I request the FCC to think about the hindering the little guy. Innovation from individuals small and poor will go down the drain. Only well funded groups will reap success on the internet. This is much bigger than a ruling. This is the future of information at stake. It's akin to creating a class system. I can envision slow lane users not having access to the same content as "regular" users. This is not where we want to take America.

—Stephen Quarles, Atlanta, GA

This is the one playing field where equality is still prevalent. We need to keep it fair, keep it open to everyone on the same level. This is critical for news, information, connecting and creativity. Please honor the will of the people and keep this open to all.

—Holly Mae, Alexandria, VA

I am now a widow, my three children and I try to communicate every day, most often by internet, I need Net Neutrality.

—Eleanor McNair, Charlotte, NC

Free Speech

—Keith C. Schnip, Warrenton, OR

Net neutrality is what ultimately allows free speech and free trade on the internet. This cannot be destroyed in the interests of greedy, large corporations.

—Tiffany M. Rapplean, Westminster, CO

I do not want the communications company dictating more of my personal rights than they already do--directly and indirectly.

—Heidi Sieberts, Talent, OR

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—John L. Giacobbe, Dublin, OH

It is world-wide network. Anything we do to injure it will cause us to be backwatered, at a time our economy could not stand it.

—, Houston, TX

As an internet user and concerned citizen I would like to request you to resist the pressure of big corporations and big money which is detrimental to the rest of us as internet users. Please ensure the Net Neutrality by reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers." Thank you.

—Mason Amin, Fair Oaks, CA

This is not a resource to be exploited, it's a tool to be cherished. Leave the internet alone.

—Derek Samuelson, ,

As a small business owner I depend on fast internet access to complete research communicate with associates and clients. I do not want to end up with a slow lane impeding my work and restricting access to information in any way.

—K Nilsen, Ben Lomond, CA

There should be no tampering with the ability to access equal internet performance for all people.

—Gerhard Paasche, Scappoose, OR

It is important that the internet remain an open structure for the free flow of ideas and commerce. Dividing it into 'tiers' would enable the activities of those who wish to use the internet as a means of creating division and exercising control.

—Mr. Joel J. Lawlor, Timberlea, NS

Fair market for any and new innovation. without net neutrality and give more power to the big companies and slows down the evolution of technologies and new ideas

—Miguel Fortier, ,

I believe everyone should have equal access to information on the Internet. The rich and the poor should have equal opportunity to access information. I have a limited income and depend on the fairness of the Internet when I need to access information to support decisions I need to make about my health. Democracy for everyone -- not just the wealthy.

—Claudia Frantz, Fair Oaks, CA

We need to be more than a product to be sold to advertisers. The internet needs to stay collaborative, communicative, and free.

—Joel Horkoff, ,

Free and cheap access to knowledge is a cornerstone of democracy. And whatever happens in the US regarding net neutrality will impact the rest of the world.

—Eric Harlaux, ,

It sickens me that the freedom of expression, innovation and community that the current Internet has is being abused not for legitimate reasons, but merely by greed of those who don't think they're getting a big enough piece of the pie. The providers of the gateways to our entire communications suites - including internet - should simply be that, providers. They shouldn't be the ones who also police and regulate. That would make them a dictatorship. I believe the power should be removed from the greedy providers and put them in their places...to only be providers. Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—James Holmes, ,

Dear FCC, I really don't think you want to be remembered for firing this very public shot in the class war. Use your authority to reclassify broadband Internet as a common carrier service under title II. NY

—Neil Youngberg, Jackson Heights, NY

Because freedom of speech is what this country is founded on. I am tired of you people trampling on my rights. Leave the internet the way it is and back off with your tyrannical corporate agenda.

—Key Kronebusch, ,

We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: -Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. -Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. -Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. -Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. -The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality!

—Vik Verplanken, ,

The internet is a big part of my life, being able to access information and services, especially for someone like me who has a physical disability and cannot get a job, is important to me, and me and my family have struggled for years with our internet service provider to get acceptable service with our internet, and disallowing net neutrality is only going to exacerbate this. Please do not let the big moneymaking corporations have any more control over the internet than they already do, I beg you.

—Billy Neil, ,

The internet currently represents opportunity for all kinds content creators and an unprecedented freedom of information. Anyone. regardless of privilege is offered equal footing, but ruining the neutrality of it would make that impossible.

—Mr. Johnathon Rowley, Nelson, BC

Net neutrality is consistent with democracy. Don't take it away

—Art, ,

The internet belongs to everybody, not just big telecom corporations.

—Keyon Jeff, Houma, LA

No one should be able to decide what I want to look at on the internet. If someone else can slow, stall, or block what I view, that's censorship. If the FCC reclassifies broadband providers as common carriers, Net Neutrality - something the FCC has said it would do - would be preserved.

—Sharon J Smith, Evansville, IN

Big telecom is already many enough profit from us, keep the playing field level.

—Gary Baribault, Aiken, SC

As a whole, we Americans use the Internet as much(or more) as we use services as cable/satellite or telephone. It's free, which is helpful to keep equality for everyone that have come to depend on using it. Please keep it free so we all can continue to use it as we have.

—Jamie Braun, Raymore, MO freedom is the highest good!...

—Jan Frankl, ,

Having equal access to information makes us better citizens. If you end Net Neutrality, it shows that you are cowards who fear an educated, informed populace.

—Pam Bowyer, ,

The awesome power of the Internet is its accessibility to ALL. Don't destroy this by creating a tiered system that penalizes those with less ability to pay.

—Marial Shea, ,

As an individual, I have as much right as large corporations to speedy internet access, without paying a toll.

—Peter Maniscalco, Manorville, NY

Net Neutrality is important to me because it lets people learn new stuff, understand the others and make the Fear weaker. Strong people are people with knowledge and consciousness. Having a biased Net will make knowledge more biased than it is today. Knowledge should not be something we should monetize or jeopardize. Please reclassify Broadband providers as common carriers.

—Robin Kheng, ,

Free speech over corporate interests.

—Mahassen Farah, Beverly Hills, CA

The Internet has been an incredible engine of economic development and political diversity. That we would risk altering that dynamic to satisfy major power elites is beyond comprehension. And don't kid yourself we know what this is all about _ money and who gets it.

—Catherine Trainor, Livonia, MI

It's the commons and we're not digital serfs.

—Alexandre Castonguay, ,

GET OUTTA MY INTERNET!!!

—Kate Mullen, Dallas, TX

Trying to turn the digital super highway into a toll road and selling access to the highest bidder is not free market capitalism, it is corporate monopolism. And the collusion between ALL the carriers to maintain high price points so there is no real competition is obscene.

—Henry Mah, ,

My small web design business relies on equal access to the net, not a two-tiered setup where those with money can have and those without cannot. Most of my customers are small business who do not have big business money, and they would be those who cannot.

—Iain Scott, ,

Because it gives Telecom giants the ability to funnel small users to their Corporate programming sites.

—Mr. Andrew Lane, Stockton, CA

I already feel that my supposed high-speed internet access is slowed down. please don't make it worse for people who pay good money for the service.

—Vera Cousins, Grinnell, IA

Now days, internet is a must have. Day to day activities relay on it, therefore everyone should have easy access to high speed at affordable rate without being taken advantage of by Giant Telecom companies.

—Mohamed Mahrir, ,

Because setting up our communication so one voice can be heard over another is an affront to the very idea of democracy.

—Dustan Grant, ,

It's a means of communication to the world. It's used to help and to connect us as a people. The internet is used to uplift, to encourage, and to promote change. It makes no sense to try and fix that something that isn't broken to begin with.

—Kareemma Bernard, Newark, NJ

The internet has become a common, everyday tool that millions of people in this country depend on. Internet service should be classified like telephone service and electricity, and regulated as they are. It is wrong to allow a few companies to decide who can access the internet.

—Nick Tsihlis, Buffalo Grove, IL

The Internet stands as a true beacon for freedom of speech and innovation. Please keep the Internet free to allow ideas to grow and develop through cooperation. Do not allow Telecom companies to cripple this environment.

—Miguel Ruiz, , not your right to censor without consent from the people

—Marie Carson, ,

As as teenage boy, the internet is going to be a thing when I'm older. 80% of businesses are predicted to be digital. If there is no net neutrality these businesses can't grow as they won't be able to afford the fast lanes. This will cause economical across the world especially in the us.

—Josh Bosman, ,

We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—William Giannopoulos, Chicago, IL

Let Us Free Net

—Emanuele, ,

It should not be for privileged few who can afford it. It should be made available for everyone.

—Patricia Lintner, ,

Just one more process big corporations want, to control to add to everything else they control including our government. It's all about greed and what they can take for Joe citizen to put more money in a few pockets. I'll stop there.

—Michele Sievers, Mohnton, PA

i wonder why you want take away net neutrality?

—Donald Mckenzie, ,

Without Net Neutrality you will loose all your Server business to Europe who has Net Neutrality.

—Angus Bissell, ,

slowing down the concentration of power in "big telecom"

—Richard Sandmeyer, Nampa, ID

They call it democracy.

—, ,

It's important to anyone who wants their freedom to express themselves without monitoring also we don't need the kind of control they'd want. I appreciate your support in this matter.

—Carol M Kite, Chittenango, NY

fairness

—Rick Foster, Lynch Station, VA

I believe in freedom to decide for myself if i want to go to a site or not my options should not be filtered to suit the needs of others. I should never be slowed down because they don't like how i use my bandwidth

—Mark Ward, ,

Net Neutrality preserves a level playing field so vital to the success of small business and the personal freedom of all internet users. Stop preferential treatment for those with deep pockets who can afford to drown out those who cannot afford to pay for higher speed access.

—Thom Reece, Appleton City, MO

The internet should be regulated as a public utility with full access to all.

—David M. Justice, Colorado Springs, CO

free is better

—Julien, ,

because i like freedom

—Andrew McClure, Center, CO

Net neutrality is essential for growth and freedom

—Rick Short, ,

The internet has become a way for ANYONE to put forth ideas and share products with everyone else. Please don't limit who can reach the masses.

—Holly Hapenstance, Portland, OR

Stop corporate takeover of my rights

—Rev Joe Futterer, Topanga, CA

We need to keep the internet open to all for the greater good...not closed and controlled so the few at the top get even more wealthy.

—Tim White, ,

Freedom of speech and sharing of information should not be limited in any way or form except if it's illegal. For all other content, there should be equality in sharing.

—Emad Ali, ,

An open internet is the most important source of information (among other things) that would otherwise be inaccessible to regular people like me, too important to let anyone (especially corporations) control it.

—Herman Diaz, Brighton, MA

Please continue the very American policy of an open Internet - no charge for "premium" service.

—Selma Goode, Redford, MI

It is the only ethical solution, and the right thing to do for ALL freedom-loving Americans. It will show the strength and the leadership of this administration. Thank you.

—Charlie Anderson, Silver Springs, FL

Please leave us something, make the internet a public utility.

—Ms. T Crugnola, Revere, MA

I think it's dangerous to put control of flow of internet into the hands of big business. I've yet to see corporations put the interest and protection of individual citizens before their profits or bottom lines, so I don't think it will begin when they have control of our free and open internet.

—Jason Paulick, Madison Heights, MI

We need net neutrality as an open forum for everyone, not just those who can afford to pay the highest premiums. Net regulation should not be a money grab!

—Helen Tarzwell, Boston, MA

The internet. Websites. Social Media. Etcetc. Should remain free to all viewers/ participants. We (Canadians) already pay exorbitant amounts to gain access to the Internet. Having Net Neutrality taken away will only stifle content and eventually create a Have and a Have not state. Unacceptable.

—Gary Cooper, ,

Net Neutrality is the basis for the internet and spurs innovation! Keep it open.

—Patrick Gregory, ,

I'm an aspiring venture capitalist, and in order to support my goals, I need an environment where I can send my information at the same speed as everyone else, not a payola environment where rich people can get faster access. In order to protect this principle, I urge you to reclassify broadband as common carriers under Title II to end this farce.

—Connor Williams, Sturgeon County,

An open Internet fosters democracy and many sources of independent media, not just big telecoms. The Internet should be reclassified as a public communication system, and remain a level playing field for all.

—Victoria Crampton, Bozeman, MT

It is important to keep it a level playing field to allow equal opportunity.

—Kara, Snohomish, WA

Net neutrality is key to the economic dynamism of the post-industrial nations. Current plans that would see the principal of net neutrality eroded would harm our long-term economic future in favour of a rent-seeking approach to the telecom economy. This is sheer folly, and I encourage you to reconsider your current, misguided course.

—Blake Richards, Toronto,

No one wants some to have fast Internet still the expense of others who get slow Internet service.

—Joanne Brininstool, Austin, TX

I am sick of this tyranny

—Nick Pollard, ,

Everyone needs to have access to whatever we deem to be important, not what someone else tells us is important and for what price. And keeping an open internet means keeping up with innovation, not stifling it.

—C Petticrew, ,

The net is the new medium of free press for the world. We must have equal access for all to make it a truly free press.

—Coat Cooke, ,

The Internet should remain a territory of freedom, not of corporate interests!

—Clayton Mendonça Cunha Filho, Fortaleza,

Get fucked. Net neutrality or protests.

—James Steele, ,

I do not want to be nickel and dimed for my internet. I believe there should be no cap

—Jeff Norris, ,

To allow companies to self promote their content or favor content from paying developers over content that is not paying them a fee is not fair or right, either morally or economically. That will set up a system of have versus have not.

—Chris Coote, ,

The Internet is the purest form of Democracy in existence. It needs to stay that way.

—, Calais, ME

Personal privacy is a basic right!!

—James Chadwick, ,

I write this to you as a web developer and a human being very interested in the effect of networked digital technology on our collective evolution. The internet is the most powerful medium of exchange and interaction in human history. It has made its way into every corner of society and every area of human knowledge. Given previously unheard of opportunities to interact, the human race is beginning to open its eyes and see its true potential--to be connected as one with the simultaneous freedom to express ourselves as individuals without fear of repercussion and to exist as we see fit without bowing to the legal, social and ideological oppression of parties who would keep us as dumb and disconnected as is necessary to maintain an agenda over large groups. The nature of medium through which we communicate, as I'm certain you know, is of utmost importance. We come now to a choice that must be decided as a global community: do we allow free expression? Or do we allow tiny portions of humanity to decide what ideas are exchanged and therefore the operation and routines of humanity at every level and on every scale. Together as one we are more powerful, and our interactions more beautiful than even the best intentioned small group. Such a manner of exchange is messy, its incomprehensibly huge and it will sometimes be frightening to behold its unstoppable force. Corporations will crumble and governments will cower in fear but what truly matters will prevail--and that is the collective will of humanity. The alternative to a free and open network of communication and exchange is a globally enforced system of oppression, suppression, censorship and special privileges for those who do not deserve them (a group which should be understood to include every human being on the planet)--but from the perspective of the vast majority of humanity it would simply be the panopticonic method of enforcing slavery and imprisoning their minds. I'm not even sure that my message to you and your response will have any affect on a series of events already in motion. We've already acquired quite a taste for the internet, perhaps we're already in motion -- hiccups excluded -- toward the free network that I, personally, hope to see on this planet. Would you put freedom of expression above all else? Or would you put power in the hands of groups who would force their own ideas and tolerances on all of humanity?

—Charlie hunter, Saint Paul, MN

Free access to information. It's everyone's right!!!!

—Normand Lessard, ,

You will be guilty of the crimes they commit because you know that they will commit them if we you give them the power to abuse. Stop being afraid of what they will do to you if you don't vote for what they want. They only have the power you give to them. Stop this insanity it is never too late to say NO, when it is the right thing to do.

—Jeanette Raper, Ventura, CA

Freedom it's important to everyone

—John Eddy, ,

Everyone deserves equal access

—Stephen McIntyre, ,

Stop giving away the resources to profit mongers who rip us off even now

—Julie Adelson, Santa Monica, CA

It only makes sense for everyone.

—Elizabeth Elizabeth Dodd, Boca Raton, FL

I do not want the websites that I use to be slowed down by the telecom companies.

—Tom Hoffman, Pearisburg, VA

I am a web and desktop software developer and my livelihood depends on the internet functioning as designed.

—Jeffrey Philipp, ,

The internet should be for all.

—Rosario Aguilar, Tucson, AZ

The intent I Internet should be a level playing field where no matter how Rich or poor, or how large or small you or your business is. This is the big economic attack on our country by the very few to pad their pocket books. I'm outraged that this is even possible.

—Todd Christiansen, New Ulm, MN

Because it is a medium of un-inhibited communications - The only one that has ever existed and the only one we have. Stop trying to bend it to the law of the dollar and leave us our net freedom and equality.

—Lev Arris, ,

Keeping the internet neutral is essential to ensure freedom of speech and equality among all internet users.

—Colleen Hamilton, New York, NY

Freedom to freely access information and to communicate.

—Laura Borst, Houston, TX

Freedom of speech

—Trina Patton, Wheaton, IL

Because the Internet should be available to everyone.

—Matthew Clive, ,

My family markets their business predominantly online we deserve to be able to do that without big companies pushing us around

—Alexandra Stoltz, Johnstown, CO

imperative we keep the internet neutral for democracy.

—Victor Vuyas, San Francisco, CA

it's important to keep the internet access the same for everyone

—Rafe Moran, Highland, IL

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Shem Spillane, ,

Keep the playing field level! Corporations do NOT own the internet! Thank you.

—Van Welborn, Phoenix, AZ

Freedom of speech, education, and expression!

—Arbou, ,

I stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—John Cuzzola, ,

The corporations are making plenty of money and have plenty of control. Block the merger of Comcast and Time Warner while you are at it.
—John Golowenski, Oklahoma City, OK

Please, stop letting corporations tell you what to do.
—Steven J Hill, Cedar Rapids, IA

A free and unrestricted internet allows for small businesses to flourish and survive with the big companies.
—Corey Canadian, ,

I use the internet every day for business as well as personal communication, and as a low income semi-retiree, I cannot afford higher fees.
—Sarah E Hostetter, Hingham, MA

I don't want the big cable companies deciding who gets faster access. All information must be equally treated.
—L Glasner, New York, NY

Tom Wheeler is a corrupt bastard and needs to be launched into the sun.
—Justin Legros, Oakdale, CA

The net is too important for freedom and commerce to be the property or tool of a few giant companies!
—Reg Danford-Cordingley, ,

I hav. Twice.
—Brian Losee, Danbury, CT

Net Neutrality preserves equal access and service speed to all Internet users, rather than preferential treatment for those who can pay high fees.
—Doug Musick, Walnut Creek, CA

Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers and save the internet from fees and slower speeds. Save us from Big Telecom!
—Stefany McLain, Morriston, FL

Net Neutrality is important to me because I don't want to have to break out the pitchfork and torches. Have a nice day.
—John Adams, Southington, OH

Net Neutrality, the internet belongs to the people, the users. Not the fat rat conglomerates. We are really sick of these shills trying to control every iota of our lives. Net Neutrality is the only right way.
—Barbra Morman, Mount Pleasant, TX

The Internet must remain free and uncensored. This is a beautiful thing and no one person or group of people should be allowed to ruin it for profit or greed.
—Sheena Jardine, ,

The Internet is a free and equal resource!
—Taha Mehdi, Latham, NY

Corporate interests do not represent the people. Our legislators are supposed to represent the people. Do the right thing and restore the internet to what it should be. Throttled speeds is just cruel and unnecessary.
—Brian Ouellette, San Diego, CA

Being a small home based user, It's important that I can still get reasonable speed, even if it's just mostly personal e-mail to family and friends.
Thank you.

—Jolene Darnold, Weatherford, TX

Big telecom is too attached to several big power in hollywood who have a vested interested in making sure I see whatever they want.

—Jacob Blaustein, Eatontown, NJ

Hands off.....

—William Evans, palm harbor, FL

There are to many people right now with out internet because of total cost, computer, internet. This shall grow the population of non-internet users because price with remove low income families barely making it as it is!

—James Butts, San Bernardino, CA

The internet is still new, it is still growing and changing. Openness only aid those who want to see it flower into the bright new future it can bring for all people.

—ben Ross, ,

It is fair for American citizens

—Elizabeth Floersch, Goodlettsville, TN

last area of freedom

—Peter Havener, Orlando, FL

Corporations having the right to force people to pay to have their voices heard is an insult to the ideals of freedom that our nations are supposed to stand for.

—David Woodley, ,

As a 72-yr old I depend on the net for medical info, financial info, news and entertainment and I can't afford to pay a premium, on top of my already high bill, to get the speed I need. The internet is a utility and should be regulated as such.

—Larry Needleman, Sebastopol, CA

True democracy means free access to informatioin and freedom of expression.

—Barb Ryeburn, ,

It's been that way since its inception. Should stay that way...no matter the reasoning against it.

—Bill, ,

Net neutrality is the free speech battleground of the 21st century.

—Eric Schmitt, Charles City, IA

Don't allow Big Telecom to put its foot on the neck of the Internet.

—John C Peterson, Carmichael, CA

I like being able to say what I want, where I want, without having to wait an age because big corporations want more money than they already do.

—Andrew Finch, ,

You will lose your games either way as it will turn against yourselves!

—Egidijus Musvickas, ,

A free and open internet is the single greatest technology of our time, and control should not be at the mercy of corporations. Without an open internet, big corporations would have tight control over how we access websites and services. Please do your part to keep the internet a cornerstone of freedom and opportunity.

—Reuben Torres, ,

The internet is - and must remain - a place free from corporate control.

—Andrew Seel, ,

I am a small business owner and slowing down my internet would be detrimental to my business model as I wouldn't be able to maintain a competitive stance with big business in remote administration and repair of my customers equipment.

—Jason Gyurkovitz, Oceanside, CA

I view Net Neutrality as Free Speech and as such an important privilege.

—Robert Tait, ,

Net Neutrality is of the utmost importance, for me.

—Mr. Claude Gelinas, Levis, QC

Free Internet is every Americans right.

—Jeaneen Andretta, Florham Park, NJ

everyone is equal on the internet...no slow lanes and fast lanes...

—Bill Shy, Minneapolis, MN

Nothing has had a more transformative impact on society than the internet, and it will lose much of that transformative power if net neutrality isn't maintained.

—David Harris, Houston, TX

As an American, we are already victims of propaganda called news and it is increasingly difficult to stay informed, a basic tenet of being a responsible citizen in a democracy. Not to mention that corrupt corporate power unleashed on any country guarantees a regressive society, which we already have in the U.S. Stop the lies, stop the manipulation, stop the controlling bastards, and throw out the legislatures who cave every time to them.

—JoAnn Bruns, Portland, OR

We built it, we funded it, we own it. They are paid to maintain it not to warp it into their own asset like they did with T.V.

—Chad Smith, Portland, OR

The net is a public utility; there is no option, and it MUST be operated in the interest of the maximum number of people. Which is not the big corporations. It is US. No preferential treatment, no fast lane. Equal.

—Judith Gottlieb, McHenry, IL

Net neutrality is true equality, freedom of expression, democracy -- it promotes sound business practice.

—Michael J Paul-Martin, ,

Net Neutrality is the closest thing we have to pure democracy. It must be preserved.

—Conrad Willeman, Newburyport, MA

I believe in equality. On the internet all people and all companies should be equal. You shouldn't be able to be faster because you have money.

—William Janzen, ,

The internet is the last purely democratic system still in existence. The scourge of financial bias on this century's most important invention must not be dismissed. It is bad enough that monetary influence is unrestricted in every day life, but for the internet to become the next victim of the greedy and selfish would be a true disaster for all man kind. Please say No to corporate influence in all its forms.

—Michael Schmid, ,

I know that this is just a "form letter" that probably carries little impact, but it expresses my feelings perfectly.

—Dennis Ivy, Atlanta, GA

It is crucial that Internet access is available to everyone, equally. No one should be slowed down!

—Sylvia Kedzierski, Carlsbad, CA

In the internet age we are all members of the press and segregating the internet is the same thing as removing the right to a free press, technology marches on and the internet is the new printing press you CANNOT REMOVE THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS, WE THE PEOPLE WILL NOT STAND FOR IT!!

—Ruben Ledbetter, Venice, FL

We can never just have nice things without corporations trying to make a buck off of it.

—Noland C. Ardis, Brooklyn, NY

Tired of big business running this country and of politicians who help them do it

—Chris Caruthers, Portland, OR

We need to preserve the Internet as a truly level playing field--one of the last--for all Americans. As a small business owner the quality of my customer interactions would be deeply affected by the current proposal, while the corporate behemoths grab yet another piece of the access pie. Keep the promise, opportunity and resource of the Internet equally available and accessible to all--common carriage!

—Querido Galdo, Oakland, CA

Any control of the internet will ONLY decrease the livability of the internet because it WILL discourage innovation into NEW and BETTER internet provisions. The internet WILL wither and DIE if the government has its fingers anywhere NEAR it. The internet will just become just another political oriented information funnel of the political party in POWER. Businesses that contribute to the controlling political power will flourish and those that do NOT contribute will DIE because they will NOT be able to advertise on the internet because they will be CUT out from advertising because the ruling political power will shun them.

—Donald McCormick, Fairview, OR

Internet should be accessible to all. Without being nickel n dimed just to get to content we already use.

—Ismael, El Paso, TX

We already pay a lot for the service in the first place, I don't think we should have to pay more to use what we are paying for already.

—Barbara Kantola, Niles, MI

Do NOT do this!!! :-(

—Egypt Williams, South Bend, IN

Net neutrality is important to me because I don't make millions of dollars to pay for stupid prices!

—Christopher Bruce, ,

What happens in the US usually soon happens in Canada. I want Net Neutrality in Canada, but if the US does not go that route, there is little chance that Canada will.

—Allan Reid, , the net is for all the people not just a few people with big bucks.

—Bruce Ross, Boulder, CO

This would would allow Big Telecom to charge steep tolls for premium access — and block or slow down websites and services that can't afford the new fees.

—Todd Wiltz, Breaux Bridge, LA

Freedom of Speech

—Edith Chaplin, ,

It's the only information medium left which is not completely under corporate control.

—Ernest Capeci, Long Island City, NY

Don't let this powerful and revolutionary technology succumb to the likes of cable television, etc, with its differing packages, rates, and offerings according to the prices individual users are willing to pay!

—, Solon, OH

My small business is Internet-based.

—Ms. Peggy Ross, Decorah, IA

I rely on the internet for news, commentary, and information. I require these resources to be untainted by the demands of big business.

—William Thissen, Palm Bay, FL

The internet is my other voice. Why would I want you restricting what I can say or how I say it? It's not broken, so don't 'fix' it!

—John Burr, ,

Net neutrality is important because it help keeps the internet free while also providing streaming services that we probably wouldn't have

—Sean griesbaum, Columbia, MO

Neutrality is needed to maintain balance. Thank you for balance!

—Jamie Kindt, Ashford, WA

Everyone has the right to access all of the internet

—, Carlsbad, CA

Net Neutrality fosters innovation and investment.

—Joshua Stoll, Kansas City, MO

Neutrality is needed to ensure information and services are accessible to everyone. Focus on compression of data if it's a question of how much a pipe can handle.

—TJ Phillips, ,

No one should have that much control of what we consider public information.

—Don Cote, Geneva, IL

The internet is the most powerful vector for free speech on the planet. When that vector can be controlled by for-profit companies with their own messages and agendas, free speech suffers drastically. The diversity of creative output suffers remarkably. Please, protect net neutrality and the internet as we know it by reclassifying ISPs as common carriers.

—Chris Law, ,

It is a basic human right for human beings to communicate with each other without interference from organisations...

—Ardella Nathanael, San Rafael, CA

I believe we have a right to fair distribution of services. Companies who may find themselves unable to pay for said "fast lanes" will suffer, which will have an adverse effect on competition. Also, I believe that consumers already experience price gouging and I only see this negatively impacting the prices I pay for my Internet connection. Please do the right thing and protect net neutrality.

—Caleb Imler, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Messing with Net Neutrality would be destroying the Internet.

—Dan Farley, Wolcott, CT

Please protect the user from the provider.

—Peter Hillis, ,

The internet MUST remain neutral ground for everyone - it's the one great equalizer!

—Gina Longo, Durham, NC

This allows freedom of choice and freedom for good access to the net!

—Walrus Crane, ,

Net Neutrality is important to EVERYONE.

—Darriald Morgan, Anchorage, AK

The 4 points given in the text for this petition are important. The concept of a common carrier is one I wish was better held in my own country, where utilities are rife with price-fixing and monopolisation. I know for a fact that this is the case for the US' ISPs, and they ought to both actually compete, and accept that net neutrality is more important than their immediate profits (not that I believe any loss will be made otherwise, without terrible management)!

—Sam Fisk, ,

Big business is taking too much control of our lives and we have no say in it. This is an opportunity for the public to say "no".

—Polly Hearsey, ,

I'm a small business owner and rely on the internet for my video editing/web-related services. The corporations who want to impede the online economy by charging more for "fast" communications will destroy this public utility called the internet. Please tell these corporations to STFU and reclassify broadband providers as common carriers. Thank you.

—Kevin West, Austin, TX

It is a cornerstone of the free world, nothing less.

—Nik Flegar, ,

Equal access of the internet is imperative for small business innovation and an even playing field for all!

—Andrew Patton, Columbus, OH

Making second class citizens on the internet is just wrong.

—John MacAuley, ,

The Internet has allowed many small businesses to take off, but this has only been possible with net neutrality, please don't kill innovation by destroying net neutrality.

—William K Foster, Saratoga, CA

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Catherine Poitras, ,

We don't need ISPs imposing additional fees for internet access, have them slow down net access for a majority of their users and have the ability to restrict access to net services for reasons that don't have to be illegal and entirely to their descretion.

—Lancelot Kline, Newhall, CA

Equality for all net users

—David Tagliente, Parkville, MD

BECAUSE IT IS IMPORTANT!!!!

—Rick Nixon, McCloud, CA

Equal dissemination off information

—, Lutz, FL

Keep the internet the way it is please please

—Jane Clark, Grand Prairie, TX

#NetNeutrality ICANN and what sites load faster than others or is there a new internet package coming soon to an ISP near you because i do not want the internet if i can only read facebook and twitter without subscribing to the browse the rest of the internet for an extra 20 in fait charge from no net neutrality.

—Tyson Dodge, ,

Freedom Comes First.

—Jerome Jenkins, Palatine, IL

Freedom requires access to information.

—Herb Hill, ,

Everything these days relies on the internet, from entertainment sites to government. Government should be working to ensure that it remains an level playing field to ensure competition and growth. Companies that exist as oligarchies with their "competitors" are threatening to destroy this now essential service.

—Mitchell MacQuarrie, ,

NO ONE should have preferential treatment on the internet.

—Chuck McNevech, Lexington Park, MD

Free internet is the last place in the world that corruption can get its dirty hands on. Allowing anyone to police something that is free is only for control purposes. Why would we let that happen?

—Chris McNally, ,

freedom of speech

—Curtis Crumrine, Far Rockaway, NY

It is an open playing field the way it stands.

—Steven M Travers, Wahpeton, ND

Too many educational sites may be affected and students will suffer.

—Jeffrey Hemenez, San Ramon, CA

Corporations should not have the power to control the free flow of data and subject certain entities to better bandwidth while depriving others of the same bandwidth. It's just that simple.

—Theodore Summers, Springfield, OR

The simple fact of the matter is nobody needs self-appointed decision-makers acting as a big brother. There is the whole freedom of speech thing etc. This is nothing more than a money grab. Governments o will allow this money grab by telecoms in exchange for the telecoms technology to spy on their populations. Your greed is showing and you could be a lot more subtle about it. You greedy bastards are not making the world a better place and if you focused on making the world better for the average citizen things would go your way a lot easier.

—Charlie Heater, ,

Keep Net Neutrality!!

—Jean Hopkins, ,

Net neutrality is important to me because I have friends and families who use the internet for their businesses. It is also how I stay in touch with very dear family and friends, and how I make myself known as an artist and as a writer. I want things to stay this way.

—Carling Kirby, N/A,

Foster competition & innovation, independent of financial backing

—David Bray, ,

Free and open communication drives innovation and evolution. Restrictions on this freedom will destroy this very profitable medium concentrating wealth with the least innovative and eliminating the swaths of small business that have been created during the period of freedom of the Internet.

—Neil Vora, ,

Building our future!!

—HP Müller, ,

This is my right to speak my mind. I believe this is an attempt to control our information and our freedom. REMEMBER NO ONE OWNS THE NET OR THE PEOPLE!

—Victoria Hay, Warwick, RI

The internet is supposed to open! It's no place for government involvement. Shame on the FCC for even considering this.

—Harinder Thind, ,

Net Neutrality is the most important possibility for true democracy. Those who act to end it will be responsible for helping to destroy the best things about being an American.

—Christine Campbell, Santa Cruz, CA

Neutrality is important because it fosters innovation and investment. Abandoning net neutrality will enable Internet Service Providers to exploit their customers.

—Omar Elgazzar, ,

I've already sent in my comments.

—Joanne Kelly, Seattle, WA

We must stop corporations from building monopolies which invariably removes competition, innovation and consumer choice. It is the FCC job to protect consumers.

—Dan Hendricks, Little Rock, AR

The internet works very well the way it is, so leave the cronyisms out of it.

—Mark Clairmont, ,

Telecom giants like Comcast, Verizon and TWC do not own the internet- they are the gateway providers. They want to take full control. This would limit innovation of start-ups and do nothing but line their own pockets. Please listen to the people!

—Alfred Berowski, Herkimer, NY

Please don't take away net neutrality. Our young and seniors (me) will be exploited. I have a low income. The second companies will exploit us and take away one of our freedoms of speech and knowledge making it exclusive. Please don't do this to us.

—Evelyn Palder, Rockport, TX feel the freedom of expression....let others to enjoy it...

—Chandrababu, kollam,

Do not allow this corrupt act to occur. It is just another corporate attempt to control the public for their own greed and personal gains.

—Fredric-frank Myers, Apache Junction, AZ

The Internet is the world's primary communication network.

—Subrata Sircar, Sunnyvale, CA

This is actually how you kill the internet - take away its neutrality, and suddenly everyone's forced off it by big companies. Which would likely kill the profits those companies used to enjoy...

—Lambert Muis, ,

Very important. It's in no way fair to anyone, to allow big telecom companies to take over the net!

—Mike, Brooklyn, NY

The Internet, and global, unbiased access to it is and should be equal to the global, unbiased access to electricity or water. It's a public utility - not a luxury. Imagine if the electric company charged you more for using a Microsoft X-Box vs a Sony Playstation, or more for using an off-brand coffee machine instead of a Keurig. Ludicrous! So is the Internet slow-lane.

—Brandon E.B. Ward, Dallas, TX

Net Neutrality must ensure equal access for everyone, rich or poor.

—Leslie Gold, NY, NY

There is NOTHING more important than the freedom of information and news. Net neutrality by reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to preserve this freedom. I don't want the internet to only be for the rich and run by corporate greed.

—Karen Learmonth, ,

Will keep start up and innovation productive

—Jerry King, Atlanta, GA

Because big money is destroying the world. Greed is NOT ok!

—Rick Micciulla, Melrose, MA

Hey Mr. Harpy, tell your Government to stop spying on me. Stop trying to control my life. Stop censoring the Internet. Stop sticking your nose where it does not belong. Just stop, and start doing your job instead. Okay? Thanks a lot.

—Derek Jones, ,

All bits should be equal on the information highway!

—Scott Abercrombie, ,

Data should all be treated the same. It is critical for innovative businesses to have an open, level playing field for the Internet. The ISPs should not, under any circumstances, be allowed to choose the winners online. They have already been proven to be untrustworthy in this regard. Just look at history with Comcast blocking/spoofing traffic for BitTorrent or anything that looks like it, and the recent issues with Netflix. And that's just one example. All the large players have been involved in similar bad behavior at one point or another. We would never have tolerated the Bell company preventing phone calls to certain companies. There's no reason we should tolerate the ISPs from doing the same thing to the Internet. It is FCC's responsibility to prevent this sort of thing, please do so now.

—Travis Tabbal, Herriman, UT

no one should be entitled to special treatment just because they have money

—Mrs. Rita Levy, Princeton, NJ

The internet - if it ain't broke, don't fix it.

—Jesse Thompson, ,

Don't let big business screw the little guy--again. We as attorneys utilize the internet in many ways but we're a small user. We don't wish to see productivity lag because we can't afford to pay jacked-up rates for faster access.

—Elizabeth Herbert, Topeka, KS

Complete net neutrality is the only fair outcome.

—Rev. Jim Hyland, Long Beach, CA

Equal access to communication. It is a matter of freedom of expression.

—Anne MacKay, ,

Why create a hierarchy? Why not have equal access for all?

—Andrés Steinmetz, Bisbee, AZ

The Internet has become a utility and should be treated as such, with equal access for all.

—Richard Boyce, Cincinnati, OH

Web pages were originally created so scientists, university students, professors and researchers could share information to further research. The internet was created to keep lines of communication open between various branches of military and government in the event of a nuclear war. Both intended as things that basically for the betterment of mankind/society. Things have evolved, and I understand the need for corporations to make money. But this is beyond ridiculous. How many billions a year do they need? The internet and information should be treated like libraries... FREE.

—Dan Schwartz, ,

It is obvious that big telecom is already gouging americans,when you compare rates with other developed countries. A fast lane would give them another tool to stop competetion and rip off the public.

—Steve Walker, kansas city, MO

Net Neutrality is key to freedom of speech.

—Wei-Quin Wong, ,

The internet is one of the last bastions of innovation, Net Neutrality fosters entrepreneurs and offers a level playing field for individuals to bring their ideas to the world. Having a faster pipe which can be paid for will stifle this innovation; a company like Twitter would never be created under these new rules...

—Dennis Kneebone, ,

This attempt to regulate the free internet universe, is just another attempt for big business to prove that the worlds citizens have no voice. Please stop the slow lane and leave the last place of freedom, free.

—Dustin, ,

No one should have the power to block, slow down and interfere with websites, apps, and content they do not approve of!!!! Exploitation is nothing to be proud of!!

—Miriam Neff, Dana Point, CA

The internet should be a level playing field for all participants. There should not be a "better" or faster tier just because some business is larger and more established and able to pay more to get special speeds. Stop breaking the internet please. Show some backbone and reject this 2-tier proposal

—George Richards, ,

The internet is the world's biggest library, news source, political venue, art museum and gallery as well as so much more. For ourselves, for our children, for our neighbors, or past and our futures and our past, what the Internet is now is something we must protect so that it can continue to be a useful tool and accessible record of our world.

—John Brown, Tucson, AZ

It's time to stand up for the people and not for corporations net neutrality is important for consumer pricing, small business and for freedom of expression and thought, please don't ruin that for us and add another reason why we are becoming a mockery of a free nation.

—Kevin Gracey, Satellite Beach, FL

It is important to have Net Neutrality so that competition remains healthy and common people have a fighting chance of obtaining the necessary resources they need to communicate, learn and grow. Placing the Internet into the hands of big telecom companies is going to stunt the growth of this nation as a whole and overall damage America. The Internet is a freedom that needs to be protected from tyrannical monopolies like Comcast, Version, and Time Warner.

—Lisa Kirk, West Chester, PA

Internet service providers should not have the right nor power to make the content they like load faster than the content they don't like
—, Ludowici, GA

The Internet is more than information. It is a communication tool. With snail mail fading everyone should have equal access to email and internet

—Arek B, ,

Net neutrality is everything to it's integrity; to undermine it's neutrality would be to undermine the entire entity.

—Craig W, ,

EVERYBODY SHOULD HAVE THE SAME ACCESS

—Larry Hradek, Fort Worth, TX

The internet is the only place not controlled by big corporations - this will change without net neutrality.

—Paula Wyche, Fort Worth, TX

Because I love W. Wrigley Jr., Henry Ford, Roy Thompson, and all the other little entrepreneurs who started small and made something of significance and the Internet as is today gives debuting entrepreneurs a chance.

—Clement Tagney, ,

Net Neutrality gives me an open forum to access and send information, and quickly. Generic letters aren't going to do it, Tom Wheeler. You must support Net Neutrality. And that means leaving the Internet the way it is, not having it as a venue for private monopoly.

—David Starr, Derby, CT

It's WE THE PEOPLE not we the corporations. Hands off our free and neutral internet! If anything the FCC should be regulating Telecom providers like all utilities.

—Chris Carter, Santa Rosa, CA

I want my freedom protected, and everyone should have equal access to the internet.

—Ted Brooks, ,

No one should be paying additional fees (in either direction) for what has become an essential infrastructure.

—Mandi Paton, ,

Please protect Net Neutrality. It is important to have access to information and content without having big corporations deciding what content is more important and which is less important based on the ability to pay for "fast lanes." That is innately unfair and undemocratic. At least, it was before Citizens United and McCutcheon.

—Gerald T. Shaia, Sun Valley, CA

It gives the people a powerful voice to save our democracy.

—George Bullwinkle, King of Prussia, PA

Fairness to all rather than corp et al

—M R. DePrey, Roseville, MN

It is an extension of freedom of speech

—Patrick Tang, ,

This is the one remaining true freedom for all. If we are to be a free nation we must lead the way.

—Amy Golden, Minneapolis, MN

The Internet gives us access to content that is not limited by our ability to pay. This is a foundational component of education and knowledge for people all over the country. This should not change.

—Matthew Recla, Boise, ID

It is the future of industry currency and communication

—Connor Wood, ,

My husband and I both work for Internet startups and net neutrality gives startups a chance to compete with wealthy corporations. Don't ruin it for the little guys! Keep our livelihoods safe and reclassify the Internet.

—Valerie Champagne, Brooklyn, NY

It is only fair without paying!

—Haueter, Berkeley, CA

Equality for all!

—Deborah Stirling, Chesterton, IN

You can prevent further inequality. Net neutrality is akin to freedom of speech.

—Marv Funk, ,

Internet providers are not like a waste disposal service where you get to pick and choose. They cut a district out for themselves and say "This is my spot and no one else's." So if my Internet provider decides to cut my bandwidth in certain areas, I can't switch providers. Net Neutrality ensures that my provider has to give me the same service as every other provider.

—Nathan Yen, Hacienda Heights, CA

Democracy, progress and creativity

—Luc Suer, Durham, NC

Since it's inception as a open free provider of intellectual and scientific thought, the Internet has united the world of knowledge and thought. Do not let big business and media moguls take it over. If that happens it will become nothing more than another advertisement for stupidity. It's already flooded with junk. We not only don't need anymore of this. We definitely do not need to be surveilled from every key stroke.

—Claire Carsman, Palm Springs, CA access to the internet and the speed utilized should be free and equal for everyone

—Leo Percy, Tallahassee, FL

Fuck Comcast, that's why.
—Rebecca Hampton, Elk River, MN

The internet as we know it, an engine for innovation and change will be lost without net neutrality.
—Gustav Sallas, West Palm Beach, FL

Equal rights to the internet
—R W, ,

The Internet has revolutionized every aspect of human communication. It has helped to advance understanding of ourselves. Turning the Internet into a glorified cable TV system would be devastating. It would create a dark age.
—Phil Jones, ,

So much of our lives connect through the internet, that if you start forcing people to pay for premiere service you only are going to further exacerbate the already atrocious inequality of socioeconomic classes and further enrich already fat corporations.
—J+s e, Hamden, CT

Keep the internet as it is . these big companys are already rich , when is enough enough.
—Charles Hickey, Fitchburg, MA

We The People built the internet with our tax dollars. Now the profiteers (Comcast, TimeWarner, etc.) want to claim it for themselves and further monopolize it. They cannot do that. Because we paid for it, it is part of the Commons. It must be designated a common carrier like the phone lines.
—Carol Krez, Langley, WA

why would it not be!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
—Robert Arendt, Pittsfield, MA

Common sense and the reasons listed above.
—Ernie L. Williams, Bainbridge Island, WA

The internet represents the collective evolution of humanity, the establishment of a planetary nervous system that will eventually unify our race. Any actions that compromise a free and open internet are tantamount to crimes against humanities future.
—Ben Kugielsky, Waterbury, CT

you guys are some greedy assholes.
—Nabil Ahangarzadeh, Mansfield, TX

Because it should be 'open' to everyone-not just corporations and 'Big Business!
—Kit Thomas, Marietta, GA

As an internet start-up entrepreneur, I need an open and neutral internet to compete with the big companies and to create innovation in the field.
—Mazdak Gharibnavaz, ,

The Internet should not be controlled by a select few providers. They have only shown to hinder actual innovation as they attempt to preserve their own power structure. They don't offer true value to the consumer, only "bones to the dogs".

—, Miami, FL

Net neutrality is essential for free speech and a competitive economy.

—Thomas Wilson, Colorado Springs, CO

Dear Federal Communications Commission: We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Carlos Tapia, ,

Keep the internet free from government interference.

—Hashim Khawaja, ,

We already pay too much for internet and to allow the large Telecom Companies to charge whatever they want for premium access and to slowdown or block anyone that can't afford to pay the high fees is wrong. I am totally opposed to this outrageous proposal and vote for the "FREE PRESS" plan.

—Dickie Carter, Richmond, VA

As the 21st Century equivalent of newspapers and other information exchange media, it's critical to have equal and open access for all users. Winners and losers should not be selected by ability to by access. Thank you.

—Mr. Marvin Westen, Waynesboro, VA

Net neutrality is essentially freedom of speech. If ISP's can charge content providers for access, then large ISP's can censor a content provider by forcing them to pay higher fees.

—Jim Czenkusch, Round Rock, TX

I don't like the government impeding on my access to internet

—Casey Williams, Charlottesville, VA

Why now do we need a 2 tier system? Just so big corporations can make more money and the consumer has to pay more for services that have to pay to use the fast lane? Not fair at all.

—Barbara Zechlin, Villa Park, IL

Privacy is a basic human rite. It is correct to put into place mechanisms that help apprehend criminals and prevent victimisation, but not at the cost of invalidating innocent people's basic rite to privacy. It is also important that internet remains affordable to everyone, as it is increasingly becoming vital to life in today's first- and second-world societies, and inevitability will become vital to life around the world, regardless of where one might stand in relation to the poverty line.

—Justin Henderiks, ,

Then companies can't charge rates and have a monopoly on the internet.

—Liz Holborn, ,

Why do ISP's have the right to decide what I can or can't look at on the internet, it's disgusting, all for greed at the expense of the people who put you in these positions in the first place.

—Bill, ,

The internet is the last great equalizing tool between the classes, also anyone starting a small business is greatly helped by the internet... Allowing it to be segregated into a machine for the wealthy will end any real hope a human has to create wealth on their own.

—Gary Ammirati, Los Angeles, CA

A free and open internet is critical in preserving free-speech, knowledge, and understanding. Net neutrality also encourages real business, not big business, and helps our economy grow.

—Michael Beehler, Brush Prairie, WA

The people need at least one medium to communicate freely if we are to have any kind of rule by the people.

—Kathleen Maher, Ocean, NJ

Over the past decade the internet has evolved from a playground for the tech savvy into the primary avenue on which Americans work and conduct business. It is now as vital to our economy as electricity and telecom. It needs to be reclassified as common carriage.

—Alexandra Sobczak, West Chicago, IL

Allowing carriers/providers to charge extra for faster service would be a tremendous advantage to corporations which have abundant funding and could destroy smaller organizations with limited funding. These smaller organizations frequently provide services, information and points of view that the large corporations will not disclose. Also, slower service could seriously harm the free open source software movement.

—Mr. Robert Clyne, Yale, MI

Phone companies don't have the right to delay telephone calls, why should they be able to do so with internet data?

—Ryan K Poulter, ,

The internet belongs to all, not just to the few. It cannot be censored or mangled by greed and idiocy.

—Daniel Pollman, Shelbyville, IN

It means freedom!

—Mary Gregory, Valley Village, CA

No censorship of the Internet, please!

—Paul Morsey, Owensboro, KY

It's important for innovation and expression to continue!

—Arthur Cochrane, ,

Freedom.

—Giorgio Constantine, ,

Not having it would hurt my business, my clients, and me.

—Francis Gulotta, Fresh Meadows, NY

Putting control or power in the hands of corporations tends to go against the common good. These corporations will find their profits sure enough without more limits being put on internet access. Please keep the populous in mind as you make your decisions. Put the people's best interest before the best interests of corporations.

—dave Franey, Nashville, TN

Simply, because it's fair.

—Robert Colasacco, New York, NY

It's obvious - this isn't meant to only be useful to elites in business! Forget that, hands off, listen to people!

—Elizabeth Marriott, ,

The internet is a public need and should be regulated as a utility.

—Amanda Smock, Brooklyn, NY

Everyone needs equal access.

—Audrey Brown, Charlotte, NC

Net neutrality is important for all small businesses and entrepreneurs to survive in this country. Please do your job which is to keep it fair and accessible to ALL! Thanks.

—Gay E Crusius, Santa Clarita, CA

I rely on the internet for more business than the telephone, additionally the resources to gain information is necessary to compete in my career field. Any multi-tiered system will hurt the middle class at the expense of the elites. I believe our public policies are already slanted far in favor of protecting interests of elites at the expense of the majority of citizens, this is a no-brainer.

—Vernon DeWitt, Leander, TX

It is a democratic thing!

—William Nerin, Gig Harbor, WA

How much further behind other countries do you want to bring your own citizens? A level playing field for all companies and users alike is vital for the health of the internet, and of the nation.

—Evan Koester, Nottingham, NH

The Net Neutrality is very VERY important to us

—Robert, Fowler, CA

Like many Americans, I enjoy playing online video games and streaming movies and TV shows. If my ISP were to be allowed to create a "fast lane" for businesses they like and throttle everyone else's connections, they would do it in a heartbeat. They would charge exorbitant upgrade fees no one except the upper-upper echelons of society could afford to pay. When faced with criticism, they would brush it off as meaningless gibberish or even punish us further for speaking out by further throttling or cutting off our connections altogether. I cannot afford to live in a future like this, and neither can anyone I know. Every other civilized nation has measures in place to prevent such large-scale exploitation by Internet service providers; the United States has a duty to its citizens and to the world at large to follow suit.

—Rachel Dwight, Richardson, TX

It is we the people who pay for service, we chose what we want. We are tired of being dominated and dictated too by corporate tactics. Enough is enough.

—Ray Macbiatiagh, ,

We are all equal, the internet should be the same. Corporations should not have the power to tell us what websites we can use!!

—Sarah Parr, Towson, MD

It's freedom of the Internet! I have my rights to the Internet, if you take it away from me, then you are violating my right as an individual.

—Gabriella Brown, Chicago, IL

Equal access for all -- that is an internet principle.

—Eva Landeo, New York, NY

The WWW is a public service and must not be controlled by private corporations. It was developed by CERN for communication among scientists working at institutions world wide. The CMS project has over 3000 scientists involved and it is essential that we have access to data and collaboration on an open and timely basis. The other projects at CERN also have thousands of scientists working on them from all over the world and communication among them on an open and free WWW is essential.

—Patricia aRuudner, Cypress, CA

Equal opportunity to access information. The internet needs to be re-classified as a UTILITY. This is quite obvious to the American people. We also see that the big media corps are looking to profit in the long run. They need your OK for this. Please don't give your OK!

—Cynthia A Burnham, hardwick, VT

The Internet belongs to all of us, not just the corporate media giants. The FCC must stand up for America's citizens.

—M Garrett, South Jordan, UT

I began a new career after I suffered a personal tragedy which destroyed my former livelihood. I was dead broke and could not have afforded to pay 2-tier prices. It is essential for millions like me that the internet remain open, free, and unobstructed by corporatist looters and monopolists.

—Alan D McLemore, Beaumont, TX

I am seriously committed to open and free use of the Internet and oppose any controls which would reduce access to available content.

—Michael Ballin, ,

FAIR PLAY & EQUALITY....

—Rob West, Los Angeles, CA

Private for-profit interests shouldn't be governing the exchange of public and not-for-profit information.

—Dave Luck, ,

Level playing field without financial domination

—Larry A. Ewashen, ,

Service providers have the wrong motivations. They want to create an internet slow lane that will disrupt the internet as we know it.

—Dustin Sedlacek, Bartlett, TN

There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Ron Iacopucci, Redondo Beach, CA

Open access to all, real creativity and communication are the lifeblood of compassionate and sustainable community.

—Sarah Moor, Asheville, NC

Broadband helps all of us to be equal, using it as we wish, without constraints by corporations, the government, or anyone. Is is, indeed, a common carrier and should remain as such.

—Jan and Larry J. Slobin, Portland, OR access to basic civic infrastructure like The Internet and World Wide Web have become cannot be subject to profit interests

—Nathan A., Santa Cruz, CA

Net neutrality is vital for education and an open democracy.

—Isabel Charleston, North Hollywood, CA

This big brother inflated cost garbage is going too far. Please allow the net to be used as it was meant to be: open and equal.

—Bryan Otteson, ,

a small worthwhile non-profit should have the same speed as a large, wealthy entity. The Internet, which was invented by the United States government, should treat all people equally

—Barbara Wallace, Grand Rapids, MI

Truth availability to all citizens - equally!

—Donna Alger, Ocala, FL

Keep internet open to all americans

—Steve wand, Dickeyville, WI

I need the internet to work!

—Haydn Huntley, Makawao, HI

The Internet is a global resource that serves people the world over - it needs to remain an open infrastructure and not the private territory of any corporation or country.

—Lee Herman, Chicago, IL

YOU PEOPLE ARE AS CORRUPT AS ALL OUR POLITICIANS.... YOU ARE NOT WORTHY OF YOUR OFFICE..... YOU NEED TO RESIGN.....

—Toni Garmon, Dawsonville, GA

Because it should be free for everyone.

—Dana Dodge, Newark, CA

Because the Internet is the only thing dragging us into the future

—Tibi Fodor-Jordan, ,

As a web programmer, I recognize the need for an even playing field in my profession.

—Mr. Craig Baker, Pendleton, SC

Because everyone deserves free equal access to everything out there. Big telecom has enough fucking, start protecting us! The REAL American people!

—Justin Santana, Lockport, NY

Content should be neutral, I pay my ISP for an internet connection, content providers pay for their connection. Who are what I decided to view/download is irrelevant and no one else's business.

—Neil Shephard, Sheffield,

It is the link to information on a moments notice for a senior low income person such as my self

—Richard Stoflet, Vesper, WI

We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: 1.Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. 2.Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. 3.Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. 4.Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Michael E Hubbard, Saint Petersburg, FL

Big money does not make for solid commitment and dedication to freedom, liberty or democracy.

—Jon laubertBarack Obama's not so smart., Albuquerque, NM www.econimixcomix.com/home/net-neutrality Enough SAID!!

—Mr. Todd Gutierrez, Yuma, AZ

Open public utility status prevents manipulation and allows for a recourse to regulator capture, should that occur (if it hasn't already!)

—Kevin O'Connor, Hyattsville, MD

It is very important to me as a developer, so that I can compete in a more free market and does not favor bigger companies more than it already does. This allows small startups to thrive, and compete. This is one of the key values of the American society that make it great in respect to technology.

—Justin Casey, Prairie Village, KS

Because the internet should not be controlled by big business!

—Richard Paperno, Somerset, CA

The little guys should have as much of a voice as the big guys.

—Mr. Nate Lieby, Santa Cruz, CA

The internet is the last place where everyone is treated equally. We need to keep it that way.

—Meachel Slaughter, Omaha, NE

I, along with millions of other, depend on the internet for my job, for my news, for my communications, and for my entertainment.

—Jennifer, Fort Lauderdale, FL

No killing net neutrality!!!

—M Pattemore, ,

cuz

—William M Richards, Hazel Park, MI

There should NOT be any interference of any sort, by any one!

—W de Vries, ,

The internet should be administered for the good of all people, not just the corrupt and well-connected few.

—Lee Pittmon, Coeur D Alene, ID

I use it every day for information and communication. It is too slow as it is. The ISPs charge too much for performance that is far too poor. The telecoms are gouging us.

—Norm S Conrad, Seattle, WA

A free an open internet is essential to our democracy. The giant telecom companies already control all of our news. The internet is a necessary utility.

—Alan Barthel, Fairfield, CT

The Internet has become, in first world countries, a basic means of interacting with society. As such it makes sense to provide equal access to everyone. As third world countries continue to move onto the Internet we need to think first as a global community, not as businesses looking for a profit or advantageous business model.

—Kirk Bridger, ,

The Internet is one of the last bastions of free speech. It should not be monopolized by a few giant corporations.

—Leigh Lehman, Hillsdale, NJ

This is truly an attack on Freedom of Information and Free Speech, and the public must be allowed to access information in a working democracy. The phrase, "Class Warfare" is tossed around the country on a daily basis, but when citizens have to pay for access to information that will educate them and assist them in making reasoned decisions for themselves and their families (and some will be unable to afford "upper tier" Internet), that is taking away their freedom.

—Christina Hicks-Goldston, Pleasant View, TN

It's such a useful tool for people to have. Getting and sharing information is the beat part!

—Nancy Farha, Wichita, KS

Keep the internet free and flowing as an undammed river! It is truly already a common carrier like radio & TV!

—Margaret Hadderman, Silver City, NM

Fair. Equal. Ethical.

—Campbell Peters, ,

Equal opportunity should be a human right. A tiered internet will wreak all kinds of havoc on equal opportunity.

—Alexander Kennedy, Brooklyn, NY to maintain a free flow of human creativity

—Peter Lisicin, ,

We don't need to compete with the big corporations to get the info we need. The internet is a source of information for all, not an advertising tool!

—Dorothee Custer, Merritt Island, FL

I depend on the internet for my health issues and for research. The internet is for all of us equally. Please reclassify all internet providers as common carriers and keep the internet equal for all of us. Thank you.

—Stephen Girard, St Louis Park, MN

I believe in a Fair price for every internet user

—Randy Seegobin, ,

The internet should be a public utility, not a for profit business

—Joanna Soren, North Bend, WA

A free and open internet is important for equality and innovation.

—August Birk Olsen, ,

Net neutrality is important to me as it is the last remaining equal ground where everyone can speak freely

—Chad Augustin, , equality

—, Longmont, CO

The proper role of telecom providers is providing internet infrastructure. They should not be allowed to control or prioritize the contents of internet communications via fee scales.

—, ,

It will make the internet as unfair as most of our Supreme Court's decisions and benefit only the wealthy as currently usual. I have hope.

—Don Geckle, Southington, CT

Any two or more tiered system is antidemocratic.

—Alan W. Olson, port aransas, TX

You can suck it! The FCC and CRTC should be abolished. They serve no useful purpose except to help giant telecom companies rape the little guy. When is enough huh? Like really fuck off and maybe people will pay their bills, but they sure aren't if you keep raising them, and they will continue to find illegal ways. You all a bunch of greedy slobs who deserve nothing.

—Brent Warren, ,

I, like millions of other Americans, use and depend on the internet everyday. Please do not destroy Net Neutrality!

—Kevin, Euless, TX

It keeps me connected to the outside world.

—Kay Roberts, ,

Because under the thumb of private ISPs, the Internet has veered from its original promise and become hardly distinguishable from TV. PJB

—Peter Bearse, Danville, NH

Freedom of speech and affordable for everyone without having to worry about speeds only obtainable by someone in a different tax bracket (rich people)

—P Bond, ,

The internet belongs to all people on the planet equally and is vital for the free flow of information. Leave it alone!

—Michael Nisbet, Dacula, GA

The internet should be free, open and fast for everyone. Not for those who can purchase it. Eventually all of mankind's knowledge will be on the net and it will be a crime to restrict it to few who can afford it.

—Lowell Gilbert's Gilbert, Moline, IL

I own and operate a small business, I need to protect my business and my 15 employees. A large percentage of my new clients find us on our web site. Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Nicole LeGault, ,

Freedom of speech is part of a free society not a repressed one .

—Ray Hanasyk, ,

Enables my small business to compete.

—, Mililani, HI

The internet is not for rich corporations to control any more than the air we breathe.

—Ian Stedman, Phoenix, AZ

Internet access is crucial for millions, keep it accessible or lifelines will be lost!

—Jay Wolfe, Pepperell, MA

When the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were written we were many, many years from the invention of the internet. BUT, I believe the founding fathers would agree that free internet would fall under the Freedom of Speech intent they insisted on. Power to the common people! We must quit allowing greedy corporate interests to destroy our democracy...if we don't, there will be a revolution by the masses.

—Lin DeMartini, Scappoose, OR

Please maintain net neutrality to protect consumers from large telecom providers.

—Bruce Little, Tulsa, OK

We need an open internet so that everyone can have equal access to what's important to them.

—Robin Pasholk, Neenah, WI

We all need a level playing field!

—Brad Patterson, Dunkirk, IN

The loss of net-neutrality will allow undue corporate influence on the internet.

—Harold N. Lazar, LaBelle, FL

Free and open access to information provided by the internet is a must for all people, not just a privileged few.

—Sybil Schweitzer, Beverly Hills, FL

I've noted an inverse correlation between the budget of a provider and the intelligence of its content. Eliminating net neutrality would be tantamount to giving an even bigger club to the Internet's Fucking Moron Contingent, and the club they wield is already far too large.

—Peter Watts, ,

NO TAXES on the internet!!!

—Sandra Wilkes, Perth Amboy, NJ

Let's go Tom. Time to put your money where your mouth is and put an end to this. ISP=common carrier. Just do it.

—Chris McGratty, Charlotte, NC

stop the slow slide into global fascism! keep the internet accessible to all! corporations receive enough perks.

—A Conroy, ,

We would not have Google, Spotify or Amazon, as they started from scratch with the freedom of net neutrality. What companies of tomorrow starts from scratch today? Without net neutrality we may never know.

—Thomas, ,

Eliminating Internet neutrality provides no benefit to end users; all benefit provided by the currently proposed changes go to large telecommunications companies only, and damage the internet as a whole in the long-term.

—Nathan D. Rice, Ypsilanti, MI

Protecting net neutrality protects freedom of speech, as guaranteed in the Constitution. Destroying it simply to provide media companies large profits is an act against our Constitutionally provided right.

—Karen Kirchdoerfer, Orefield, PA

Why would you give it to the big corporations?

—Williard Smith, Abingdon, VA

We have to have rules that keep the big telecoms from gouging us for more and more money, as they've shown a wont to do time and again.

—Shawn Pickett, Indianapolis, IN

The UN has declared the Internet a basic right, why is there a push to continuously limit the public access?

—Bhaven Kapadia, ,

It's our collective future.

—william Scholle, Orange, CA

Net neutrality is important to me because, I feel that it would be un fair to charge citizens more for the speeds we deserve. Second, it would be treating the less rich like second class citizens, thirdly punishing the poor for being poor isn't right, taking away the means to or at least inhibiting would make it even more difficult for the less wealthy to improve their situation. Thank you

—Shaukat Khan, ,

It should be important to EVERYONE. To not keep it neutral is to toss the entire thing into the pocket books of those that only wish to abuse it for profit

—Glenn Johnson, Niagara Falls, NY because the internet needs to stay neutral..!!!

—Carol Cetrone, LA, CA

Don't stifle innovation! Help the economy!

—Cinnamon Crake, Santa Rosa, CA

To create prioritization of network data based on whether or not provider are willing to pay would be the end of the internet as we know it. How could a quickly growing service manage these challenges with so many different ISP's. This basically leaves content providers at the whim of the ISP's as well as making it extremely difficult for new companies to compete with the likes of Google and Netflix. This issue is at the top of my priority list for how I consider political candidates and I would make serious efforts to see people who support a free and open internet elected to government if we were to lose internet freedoms.

—Tylor Bradbury, ,

This technology belong to ALL of us, EQUALLY!

—Milena Placentile, Winnipeg, MB

The internet stands for freedom of expression and is a level playing field for EVERYONE. Let's keep it that way.

—Sarah Diggins, ,

Do you really want to drive the internet underground? Does the NSA really want ALL traffic to become encrypted? Stop trying to destroy something great.

—Michael Baker, Ocala, FL

I am a single-person user of the Internet and I appreciate the current openness and freedom of the Net which allows me to access any web site anywhere in the world for any information I may need. Restricting that freedom will effectively bump me and every other single-person user off the Net. Privileging corporations over people on the Net is yet another example of restricting civil liberties. Please respect people, not corporations.

—Ramola D, Quincy, MA

Stop trying to allow multi-national conglomerates to monopolize the internet!

—Thomas va de Steeg, Saint Petersburg, FL

This is very much a free-speech issue, in my view.

—Charles Kuttner, Portland, OR

There should be NO "class structure" to information. Wall Street should not have quicker access to critical information than a 99%er. The mere suggestion of a "caste system" casts you in suspicious light.

—Carol Sheppard, Fanwood, NJ

Information flow should be free an uninhibited. The best aspect of the internet has been the ability of anyone to either access or provide information. This would be a huge mistake.

—Scot Morrison, Jensen Beach, FL

This is part of the core of our democracy - equal communications capability. "Common carrier" applies to this issue

—Paul Lerman, Wyncote, PA

Open and equal access for all

—Douglas mckinnon, ,

I wanna be able to use the Internet the way it is now - full of freedom. I don't want it to become a commodity.

—, ,

IT IS VERY IMPORTANT TO HAVE NET NEUTRALITY. PLEASE SUPPORT IT. THANK YOU.

—Mrs. Little, Winston Salem, NC

Net neutrality is democratic

—Martin Davidson, ,

The Internet has always been a tool for a free exchange of ideas and information. DO NOT let corporate interests ruin this!

—Dave Garfield, Firestone, CO

Everyone should have same access and rights not those with the most money

—Kathryn Mosher, Eagan, MN

Well internet is now a public network. We are already paying a load of money for it. No way we should pay more for more. And control we should download. Be creative lower your prices, make it irrelevant to be illegal. Because it is to cheap to have it, it won't make sense to be illegal about it. Think!

—Martin Dumais, ,

The internet was created for everyone, not just the rich. Creating tiers of internet access will effectively allow major corporations to decide what can be seen and thus control the world's knowledge. This cannot be allowed to happen.

—Carys, ,

I do not want to be on a slow lane because i am in a rural area.

—Terry Raper, phil campbell, AL

No toll gates for the net...only the strong will survive and free speech will be relegated to the very "slow" lanes then eventually after the net has been transformed into a giant TV Network we will all be locked out. Net Neutrality now and forever please...thank you

—Chris Ducey, Woodacre, CA

Communist apparatchiks drove in special "fast lanes". We don't want communism on the net. We want a free market, not one stitched up by corrupt insiders.

—Dennis McKay, ,

This's the best platform for free expression and information sharing...

—Pradeep Kiran Jakka, ,

Net Neutrality is most important to me and will not tolerate these changes. Leave things alone. This is my right. I depend on the internet for my freedom of speech and to express my artistic talents.

—Mike Wilson, ,

Preserving net neutrality is crucial to maintain and grow global democracy through unfettered citizen dialogue. Corrupting this potential for the sole purpose of corporate profit would inexcusably compromise freedom and justice.

—Andrea Mann, ,

The government should never hide behind 'security' as a guise for limiting the rights of it's people.

—Aaron Centeno, Albuquerque, NM

Why should big money Telecom companies have control and be able to charge huge fees for something that has been free for all of these years? What is happening to our freedoms?

—Eric De, ,

WE, the taxpayers, paid for the Internet to be built. It came from our funds. It was privatized ILLEGALLY by George H.W. Bush. Since it is the collateral for BONDS that were sold, it could not actually be privatized without the consent of the bondholders for whom the Internet was a substantial portion of the collateral for bonds. DO NOT MAKE THIS MESS WORSE BY ATTEMPTING TO FURTHER WRING PROFITS OUT OF SOMETHING THAT SHOULD BELONG TO THE PEOPLE OF THIS COUNTRY WHO PAID FOR IT.

—Gina de Miranda, Austin, TX

It is important that all citizens are able to stay informed by accessing information available on the internet.

—James Heller, Chicago, IL

A 2-tiered system of internet access is deeply unfair. We need and deserve Real net neutrality.

—Shelli Netherton, Saint Louis, MO

Big business will take advantage

—Kim Fleischer, Huntingdon Valley, PA

rural residents, like myself, already have very few choices, if any, for internet providers. Plus rural areas have limited speeds available at any cost!

—Randy Norton, Milton Freewater, OR

Don't let big business appropriate what academia built.

—John Lovrich, Richboro, PA

Block or slowing down websites and services that can't afford the new fees will destroy small businesses and make it really hard for the customers like me to support them. Also, losing net neutrality will raise the prices on the internet for all users, directly or indirectly - I am voting against this.

—Elena Popova, ,

Uphold common carrier status for Internet providers so we can all enjoy the same access.

—Christi DeMark, Hoboken, NJ

It will destroy shopping, research for students, and online business.

—Elaine Elaine Laisure, Weatherford, TX

This is about freedom of speech and freedom of the press, two of the most important safeguards for democracy.

—Paul Busch, Saint Paul, MN

When freedom of speech and inquiry are taken from people, democracy is gone. Corporations are not people! They have no right to control what we see, think or say.

—W Jean Rohrer, Southwest Harbor, ME

Because information is power, and if you cut off our reasonably easy access to information, we become powerless. One wonders if that isn't what the people who want to restrict the internet are trying to do.

—Christina Maris, Albuquerque, NM

The internet should be free and available to all.

—Doug Roberts, ,

The US is not the only country on the net. Take a step back and see how you guys being so monumentally retarded is damaging the worlds progress. Think progress not money, think of your children not yourself.

—elliot Blackburn, ,

Isn't it obvious?

—Robert Cullen, ,

It's important because it's fair for all as it is if it changes however it will be favoring companies over regular people, increasing happening these days

—Gary Ellis, ,

The internet is a tool for everyone! One of the only things left in this world that has not been harmed by corporations with lots of money buying their way into our lives. Keep it that way!

—Dan Oke, ,

Equal access for all

—Wayne Matthews, ,

Net Neutrality is important because it provides a fair playing field for the best ideas to win. Anyone in their garage can start a company that can compete with giants. They don't need to pay for a fast lane, their aren't financial hoops to jump through, their aren't taste makers deciding who win's and who loses.

—Ryan Fannon, Columbus, OH

Corporate interference in what has been a system that has worked so well will result in a loss of internet freedom.

—Don Robertson, Puyallup, WA

I'm retired on a fixed income. I have come to depend on the Net for much of my information and social life. I could not afford extra fees extracted by corporate robber-barons.

—Ronald Berman, Saint George, UT

Net is our, not these big companies, they are providers, and that is all.

—Nebojsa Cekrlija, ,

Internet is culture and knowledge, it should be free and neutral.

—Daniel Segarra, ,

Please do no shut people out with this proposal to slow internet for the average person. Internet should remain as free as your people claim your country to be.

—Michael Egerszegi, ,

The Internet is for the people and build by the people, not by the big TeleComs.

—Romy Boreiko, ,

Net neutrality allows EVERYONE to access information equally.

—, ,

We need free speech and communication or we will not have a free world.

—Allen Wheeland, Portland, OR

So I can contact various government agencies that concern my retirement.

—Ernest B. Montoro, Cleveland, OH

Net neutrality is the fair policy!

—Adele Gladstone-Gilbert, Amherst, MA

Neutrality is needed because everyone deserve equal access to the "fast lane".

—Simon Desrochers, ,

Net Neutrality is part robust innovation, economic competition, research and more.

—Karen A. Scofield, Kenosha, WI

This is a First Amendment issue. Internet providers are telecommunication companies have no more business interfering with the flow of information across the Internet than they do with the flow of information by telephone.

—Rhonda D. Wright MD, Atlanta, GA

We live in the United States, land of the free and home of the brave. The internet should stand for freedom and expression.

—Michelle, Ridgeland, MS

The FCC,s current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality

—Shirley Ford, ,

The internet is a great revenue for business, so an internet that's open to everyone is important. If slow lanes are accepted, it'll be harder for the average person to view sites and advertisements and it'll hurt sites like Youtube who rely on ad revenue to stay afloat. Not to mention it'll become harder for small businesses to stay afloat, as they'll have to keep paying to stay in the fast lane.

—Jacqueline Bondurant, Melbourne, FL

It is wrong to impose a two-tier internet. It was a gift to the world and is not meant to be carved up by private corporations.

—Mrs Felicity G Radfordd, ,

High speed internet access should be a right that is available to anyone who can connect to it - not just rich people.

—Dave New, San Diego, CA

The internet is now the place to get information. Corporations have enough control over the news and information. They do not need more power.

—Barbara cooper, Anacortes, WA

Only way to have us to strive and thrive in this world.

—Shannon Callahan, San Diego, CA

Why? B/c the internet should be a free open access resource and not be monetized by big telecom companies.

—Rob Michaels, ,

Why is Net Neutrality important to me? Because the United States is important to me. Because democracy is important to me. Because life without our corporate masters is important to me.

—Robert John Bennett, Honolulu (Absentee Voter in Germany), HI

At this point in our culture, the internet and open access is a basic human right. Restricting the net and access in such a manner is tantamount to restricting who can get which books at the library, or who can go to the best schools. The net must remain open and free!

—Miles, ,

Taking away the power to use technology from ordinary citizens, so corporations with large financial resources can have more exclusive access to that technology is taking giant steps backwards away from a democratic society.

—Hadi Farahani, ,

The control the Big Business has over our daily lives and commerce must be stopped!

—Richard M Vartanian, Pasadena, CA

Freedom.

—Sean Doherty, ,

Its important because its the first and only thing to bring the planet together and money has no place in it. Just cause a company supplies u a key to the door doesnt mean they choose your doors.

—Zack martyn, ,

I like fast, free, open and safe internet practices. Don't limit my access or speed of my access thanks.

—Tyler Beddall, ,

To guarantee widespread advantage from this new and basic communications technology.

—Robert Sitton, Portland, OR

Net neutrality is the very essence of the freedom to live.

—Anthony Egorp, ,

Unrestricted internet access is fundamental to our countries principles of free speech

—David Eastman, Newton, MA

People Don't Need More Corporate Giveaways and Subsidies. People have a right to freedom of information and communications. STOP THE SELLING OUT OF AMERICANS.

—Crystal Rose Starheart, Malo, WA

Customers need options

—Tim Linerud, Belmont, CA

Its freedom!

—Haider Bilal, ,

We need it!

—Edna Rossenas, Sausalito, CA

Do not allow big telecom the in to charge for Internet use. There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Linda Wittig, ,

The internet should not belong to any one group or corporation. Access should be equal and fair.

—George Yuri Ripeckyj, Eau Claire, WI

A free and open Internet is important to me because it's current bandwidth provides the services I require at the download and upload speeds available to all Internet users without actually favoring any. Additionally, being relegated to a slow lane would not provide the service I need; I am retired and on a fixed income and cannot afford to pay for high speed access. Please maintain net neutrality for me and thousands of others who have similar needs and limited incomes just like me.

—Andrew Ritter, Deland, FL

America needs fast and fair axss

—Georg, Buena Park, CA

The internet must be available at a reasonable cost or free to all American citizens. Schools need the internet to educate, students need the internet to learn, citizens need the internet to be informed citizens as the founding fathers envisioned.

—Cynthia Johnson, Park Forest, IL

Net Neutrality should be treated as a public good - water, electricity and the Internet should be equally available to all and not co-opted by private interests who don't have the public interest at heart.

—Chris Bocking, ,

It is a right to have the previous access that we always have had.

—Jay Gramlich, ,

You cannot bottleneck the internet. We cannot move forward without it.

—Mr. Steve Calandra, Levittown, NY internet is free forever...

—Wr Ricardo Ortega Noguera, funes,

Net Neutrality is important to me because Abe Lincoln did not say, "the nation shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the Corporations, by the Corporations, for the Corporations, shall not perish from the earth." The free exchange of ideas that Net Neutrality brings is all about the people, not the greedy few. It's hard to get more democratic than that.

—Marc Pendergast, Chapel Hill, NC

Innovation is key and the ability to share, learn and express should not be limited. It is hard enough for most as it is and this would further retard growth.

—Louis Freeman III, Mentor, OH

Do not destroy the Internet. Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real neutrality. Thank you

—Shirley White, Birmingham, MI

I am not a heavy user of download capacity on the Internet, but I do not want to pay inflated prices for the times when I may need to download a larger file.

—Martin, ,

All users should have equal access to information and communication, which is what the internet is about.

—Craig Turner, Chapel Hill, NC

Because everyone should have equal access to what should be a utility.

—Eric Dick, ,

It's more democratic and fair.

—Michael Whitehead, ,

The Internet stands as one of the last things with equality. DO NOT destroy this.

—Ray Knauss, Rancho Palos Verdes, CA

I have a very tight budget. Internet is vital for my everyday activities. I can't afford to be paying extra for something everybody in America needs. Preserve net neutrality.

—Varick Thompson, Kissimmee, FL

I think untiered, neutral Internet access is vital to democratic access to information.

—Gerard J. Mitchell, Philadelphia, PA

I believe that, contrary to what Internet providers say they'll do, small businesses that are in competition with large corporations will have their websites buried as much as possible to try to eliminate competition. I'm also worried that any political websites/forums that are not in line with the views of the leaders of Internet providers (or the views of those with enough money to influence the leaders of Internet providers) will also be buried in any way possible in order to try and keep their views from spreading.

—Dean Clous, Battle Creek, MI

The internet provides a resource that allows many people to improve their lives. Changing internet access affects their choices and the ability to make the world a better place.

—Adrian Kwaan, ,

The internet and world wide web are easily some of the most important innovations in human history. To allow this great tool to be restricted by one industry would be a grave mistake. Economic repercussions for our country and our world could be catastrophic in the long term. We need entrepreneurs, new business, innovation, and untethered open communication for business and interpersonal relations. Please do not give this small consortium of corporations the opportunity to undercut the public's access to this tool so necessary for survival in the 21st century. Thank you.

—Andres Feliciano, New Orleans, LA

Currently the airwaves are a no contest, non compete service that if leveraged against its users would only make a financially difficult world more difficult. This would be corruption

—Bernard Lipari, Sunnyside, NY

Charging more for more content will kill the internet for all but those who can afford to kill the small creators of products and ideas

—A Andalaro, St louis Park, MN

Too much power in the hands of internet providers and not enough to the general public - the internet is a public good

—Lea Katsanis, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me because it is a free expression of the collective consciousness, which is bigger then anything else in this world. Join us to be free to.

—Jean, ,

I have a small online business. Net neutrality is the only way I'll continue to be able to support myself.

—Lin Mullins, Mayer, AZ

I work online.

—Lopi Mackenzie, ,

The free internet is the only way I have to promote my work and conduct research.

—Patrick Cannon, Tucson, AZ

I have seen communications grow and get faster and carry more since the days of 300 baud modems! All the while the old players complained that data was to hard to carry and the equipment was strained to keep up. I have been using the internet since 1994 and I have seen little ideas and little companies rise and fall and and some of them have gone an to become industry giants. But all of the innovation may go away if artificial roadblocks to speed and bandwidth are placed in the way of the next big things. Don't force us to stay in the past by preventing the next big thing to protect the old things! The incentives for the internet to to grow faster and carry more must continue!

—Bradley Johnston, ,

It's crucial that there's freedom of information and speech for all people.

—Susy Joy, ,

Our freedom depends upon net neutrality. Do not destroy this.

—Jeanne Parsley, Essex Junction, VT

Equal access is essential and will stimulate commerce

—Gabriel Morner, Rutherford, NJ

Reclassifying Internet service providers as "common carriers" will allow you to treat the Internet as a public utility. I am fearful of allowing our world to be controlled by those who have the greatest market power. There's nothing wrong with free enterprise and that's exactly what will be stifled by the largest carriers and providers if they are allowed to gain control. Greed always outweighs civility, at least until we have evolved a bit more. Please reclassify providers as common carriers and treat them as public utilities. If you hesitate, we are lost.

—Todd H. Crawford, Holly Ridge, NC

The internet has fostered tremendous innovation and interactivity precisely because it has offered a level playing field. We cannot afford to trash this goldmine. Carol Cantrell

—Carol Cantrell, Fort Collins, CO

It's all about equality! Everyday people can use the internet without interference by big Telecom! Stop the privatizing of America! Keep the internet free, the way it is supposed to be!

—Charlene Boydston, Pahrump, NV

Net neutrality is important to me, I use the internet three times a day, every day. Don't destroy what I have in order to make life better for corporations.

—C Nichols, Chandler, AZ

Uncensored communication is the greatest right we have as Americans.

—Derek Onysko, Park City, UT

Because it's common sense, dammit. Not everything should be for sale!

—Steph Moore, Socorro, NM

Free society and democracy demand equal access to information and data.

—Dean R. Sigler, Aloha, OR

This nothing more than an attack on freedom of speech; you are handing over to big corporations one of the greatest mediums of information sharing in the history of humanity.

—Jamie, ,

Everything should not be a commodity to make someone else rich.

—Sixto Melendez, Van Nuys, CA

An open internet with free and equal access to all has become as vital a part of most American's lives as electricity. Don't screw it up. Keep it free and open to all equally!

—Edward Colley, Ellensburg, WA

Not having net neutrality gives companies too much power to be able to prevent smaller companies, who can't afford to pay whatever price is set, the ability to have a proper presence on the internet. This basically amounts to legalized racketeering.

—Al Hutchinson, ,

ISPs already have considerable power over the Internet. They don't need any more. And net neutrality is essential for web start-ups to be able to grow and thrive.

—Harvey Picker, West Hartford, CT

We pay you to keep the "Airways open" ! Not give away something we paid for. ! Don't destroy the "Net"!

—Douglas D Houston, Houston, TX

I'm 80 yrs old so I depend on the Internet for my contacts but I can't afford to pay more for my communications than I do now.

—Marianne A. van Ophuijsen, Amsterdam,

It would be much harder to be in touch with my friends and relatives if I couldn't reach them on the open internet. Many of them wouldn't be able to afford higher fees.

—Linne Gravestock, Sacramento, CA

say, NO to the Fat Catts. YOU, Mr. Wheeler, MUST take your place in History on the MORAL side of the issue. Say YES to Net Neutrality --- or live in infamy janet-in-wisconsin

—Janet, Watertown, WI

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Andrew McCrodan, ,

I want to make sure that my Internet experiences are not based on whatever corporate infighting or backroom deals may be going on. The only reason why an end user individual should be throttled in any way is because that individual was involved in illegal online activities.

—Jeremiah Brown, ,

The internet is truly the last free place on earth. Don't make it about money. An open net will bring many benefits in the future and shouldn't been seen as anything other than a place for free expression, innovation, and commonality.

—Brad Carpenter, ,

Abolishing net neutrality gives some businesses an unfair advantage over others, and will hurt the quality, capability, and future of innovation of the Internet.

—Jesse, ,

Because internet should be free!

—Max Lindén, ,

It is a utility no different but as important as phone and pwer utilities since it has become a necessity in this modern world.

—Ray Couture, Seattle, WA

I'm one citizen, with a limited amount of money. No way can I compete with corporations if they are given preference. We must have net neutrality.

—Mildred Meyer, High Falls, NY

Creativity, innovation, and democracy flourish under the common carriage system. In a knowledge based economy, we can't afford to lose the benefits that accrue from an unfettered Internet. Be on the right side of history: protect Net Neutrality by reclassifying broadband suppliers as common carriers.

—Judith Ince, ,

These companies can choose to slow down traffic to people with opposing political views and websites of same. It's unamerican

—Laura Webb, Lakeland, FL

We want freedom of information for the betterment of us all as a species, you want better profits, it's time you stepped back and realized it's obvious which should take priority.

—Gordon Willard, ,

The current "fast lane" proposal will destroy the free and open Internet. Just reclassify the Internet as a Common Carrier and regulate it accordingly.

—Paul Horne, Boynton Beach, FL

In a world where the divide between rich and poor is widening at a gallop, they want to insert a further divider; between those with money for fast fees n the leftovers.

—John Cronin, Lexington, KY

This will hurt small businesses such as mine that rely on internet to advertise.

—Dawne Eisenberg, ,

I don't want to pay extra to watch what I already pay to watch.

—Rosa Antoine, San Jose, CA

Fairness for all, not just those who can pay exorbitant fees.

—Katherine Scott, ,

My education relies on a fast connection at home, and I can't afford the extreme price we would pay for this connection without Net Neutrality.

—Patrick Bryant, Lake Ariel, PA

An open internet is the only way to protect consumers and to promote democracy

—Walter Dullemond, ,

Freedom of speech for all

—Anthony Meoni, Highland, MD

The internet has always been open, should always been open. ISPs shouldn't have control over access to content, it's not a private service or club, it's the WORLD WIDE WEB.

—Jonathan Pay, ,

So we can all have equal oportunities.

—Angel Elizeche, ,

Being a small business owner I need a level playing field in order to survive on the web.

—Myke Bakich, ,

Freedom of expression and democratic rights!

—Ann T., ,

The last solid piece of this economy.

—Samuel Delesque, Brooklyn, NY

It allows me to do my work on an equal basis.

—Ed Betterley, , becouse power in few rich hands create abuse.

—Walter Covanti, ,

The Internet is my primary means of communication. As a poor person, I can't afford to pay for "fast lanes," and neither can the small site owners and other content creators who make the Internet a more culturally enriching place to be. Please reconsider.

—Kamaria DeLaForce, Bogart, GA

The telecom companies are going to charge the consumers more money. They will choose to block the content they want and that is not fair to us.

—Jeremy Pisano, Hollywood, FL

Had the internet existed in 1777, net neutrality would have been in the Bill of Rights.

—Lawrence DellaMattera, East Newport, ME

Because it is freedom

—catherine Kaye, ,

Worldwide freedom

—Sophie Lamping, ,

We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Mark Feldman, Santa Rosa, CA

We've GOT to stop government interference!

—Diane Coogan, Berwyn, IL

It permits the freedom of people to communicate. It has been proved that the reduction of communication is never a good thing. To inhibit this medium of communication in anyway is an act of suppression on the people of America and will have the effect of inhibiting it's communication with fellow Americans and the rest of Mankind.

—Graham Joy, Great Falls, VA

Content, and equal access to content, should be enjoyed by all.

—Royale Schulze, Tucson, AZ companies like google wouldn't grow to exist under these new proposed laws. the more restrictions placed on web use will only slow innovation and result in a decline of economic security of nation who go down this path.

—Simon, ,

Why bother you puppets don't give a damn what we want anyway . This country has been seized by tyrannical power hungry corporations. And your biggest threat is the last bastion of free speech we have...The open internet.

—Arthur W. W.Simmons III, Absecon, NJ

Net neutrality is the foundation of a free and open internet. A slow lane would stifle free speech as well as innovation. Do not let this shameful power grab go through. Be on the right side of history, not on the side of power.

—Ryan Francis, Portland, OR

Everyone DESERVES equality.

—Justin DuPree, Waukegan, IL

Corporations, spin masters, etc., already shape entirely too much public information. Additional filtering under the guise of higher speeds only exacerbates the gulf between rich and poor, profit-minded versus public-spirited, and so on. All the FCC needs to do is declare the internet a public utility. Just do it! Please!!!

—Luisa Guidi, Feeding Hills, MA

For smaller businesses to operate and exist.

—George Hindley, Minneapolis, MN

The Internet has the capability to give small businesses the tools it needs to create jobs. Allowing large corporations an advantage that they do not have will only hasten the day when the American middle class collapses. Keep the playing field level for the benefit of us all.

—Ronnie Bolling, Ormond Beach, FL

It's important to have the same access to information as the big corporations. It helps level the playing field.

—Christine Staight, Cottage Grove, OR

Access to information should not be censored for profit. Net neutrality MUST be preserved.

—David Zabriskie, Hawley, PA

The internet is a public resource and should be equally available to all.

—Tim Covey, Fleming Island, FL

As a public-sector research scientist I am quite conscious of the essential value of openness and transparency of communication and of data-handling efficiency without obstruction. As a citizen, I take great interest in everyone having equal opportunities in all respects, and most especially on the internet, where all can access the same material with the same efficiency and communicate at all levels likewise.

—Edward Coe, Columbia, MO

The internet under the principles of net neutrality, helps protect democracy and free speech. I believe that the internet should be reclassified as a utility.

—Theodore Gorney, MPLS, MN

I am an avid user but not able to stand up to the big users--I am 81 and need good access to sites that help my health.

—Patricia Beyers, Pipestone, MN

As a retired person, I am able to watch a lot of TV. I want net neutrality to ensure that I can continue to watch my favorite programs.

—Elmer M. Tory, ,

Corporations are NOT people: do not allow them to control free and open internet access for those of us who are flesh and blood.

—Joan M. Walker, Bell, FL

Without net neutrality, you will allow a major means of communication to be dictated by the richest and most powerful. You'll start America down the road to where China is now. Don't do that to us. Net Neutrality MUST be maintained.

—Daniel DeSantis, Williamsburg, VA

Dear Mr. Wheeler, You say you support Net Neutrality. Let us see the proof of your statement. Time to reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers". Thank you

—Franklin White, Birmingham, MI

Big Telecom cannot be trusted with the power to interfere with websites and apps millions of people use every day. In this world of innovation giving Big Telecom this kind of power will ultimately make it harder to regulate the internet because people will find ways around the broadband carriers. Supporting Net Neutrality and reclassifying Internet service providers as "common carriers" is the only way to safely satisfy all interests.

—Brigid McKenna, , people should have an equal opportunity to use the net not just the people who can afford the premium access costs.

—Sandra Miles, ,

As a voting adult citizen of y country, free access to the internet should be maintained and I should be free to visit whatever sites grab my fancy and to be able to reach family and friends wherever they may be - and a number Are AMERICAN citizens. Therefore - NO CONTROLS!!!!!! Ernie Lacasse

—Ernest Lacasse, ,

Too much control is never a good thing.

—Kevin Woo, ,

Freedom is important to all

—Raphael Na, ,

Because influence is all about money. Moreover, small companies the engines of job growth need to have the same footing as big companies. How else will they make it?

—Elizabeth Molsen, Newtown, PA

Comcast has historically and repeatedly slowed down my Vonage voice-over-IP phone connection. Without common carriage, Comcast could force Vonage (and me) to pay extra to receive the quality over service I already pay for to receive an Internet connection. By degrading Vonage and touting the reliability of Comcast's own VoIP offerings, they can limit free market competition, strangle innovation, and price gouge consumers left with no other choice. They can also unilaterally change business agreements (as they did with my Comcast Business Class Internet connection) anytime they choose forcing my to pay outrageous and inflated rates for simple service add-ons like a static IP address. The current proposal will be an added way for Comcast to extract additional money from Netflix and others which will ultimately harm consumers.

—James Clark, Lake Stevens, WA

Bandwidth "throttling" will hurt businesses and entrepreneurs, and further reinforce a monopoly control of information. This is unacceptable, and will only further demoralize our ailing economy.

—Anthony Koerber, Chicago, IL

Freedom of expression

—Jodie Bowmaster, ,

We need to keep the internet fair and balanced. Letting big telecom industry take that away from us will cause a lot of backlash and we will not pay for these new services.

—Eric Olguin, West Des Moines, IA

The Neutral internet allows bright people to find each other and exchange ideas which result in valuable resources of one kind or another. The education of our populations and the resulting productivity are infinitely more important to the world than increasing the profits of already very profitable telecoms companies. I implore you to reclassify the internet to protect it from this assault. Thank you

—Ilsa Pole, ,

Net neutrality. Is important to me because I want to set up a small business and with pain these outrageous fees it could damage my prospects

—Callum, ,

It's the right thing to do!

—Mark Porras, Palm Desert, CA

it's important to me that my children are exposed to a world of knowledge and TRUTHS. Slowing, interfering with, and hindering websites via telecommunication providers can be easily compared to burning books. Knowledge is about having all of the information, not just the information that you choose for me.

—Mallory Harris, Spring, TX

Everybody deserves a fair playing field.

—Lou Henley, ,

I'm 75 years old and spend about 4 hours a day on the internet. While this is expensive for me, it's worth it. The internet has been the ONLY PLACE that I've been able to find THE TRUTH, or at least what's closer to the truth than from my own papers and TV. I believe that is the main reason corporate entities want to take it over. DON'T LET THAT HAPPEN!

—Ms. Beverly Williams, Medford, OR

Capitalism has become out of control. This government of, by, and for the people, is anything but. Stop favoring the select few who line your pockets.

—Jason M Heller, Sacramento, CA

So the rich can't buy up all the bandwidth.

—Carey R. Carlson, Minneapolis, MN

It's about the principle of equality.

—Todd S Phillips, Middleburg, VA

Ability to get information should always be free.

—Helen Yeomans, Overland Park, KS

There is no practical reason to creating a higher cost, high speed lane beyond finding a way to bully and bleed the customer and smaller companies. These rules are nothing more than a money grabbing scheme and should not be allowed.

—Marc A Case, Walla Walla, WA

It keeps my job as a web designer and a web developer hopeful for the future. It allows small businesses who can't pay big cable have the same access and speed as big corporations, keeping the internet equal for all.

—Jonathan Klein, Eureka, IL

Access to the internet is for people.

—Peter P.Cefalu, Saint Francis, WI

This is my 1st Amendment right

—Catherine Adams, Seattle, WA

Net Neutrality is important to me because it helps level the playing field. A level playing is needed to stay in competition. If this doesn't happen. The net will lose it's appeal altogether. Creating fast and slow lanes is not fair. For one, it'll cause trade/commerce to slow down and it will destroy the confidence people have. For you the FCC to even consider this is an ABSOLUTE SIN. For me, and several others, Net Neutrality is what help brings us together for talking, business, and play. To take it away because of greed shows where the FCC's priorities are at. You should be for the 99%, not the 1%. What do you want to be remembered for? Heroics or Greed. Don't take this away, if you do, it'll be YOU left holding the bag IN THE END. So think carefully, and thank you for your time.

—Jawara D Pittman, Atlanta, GA

Everyone should have equal access to the Internet.

—Steve Daniel, Florence, AL

The loss of the open net would devastating. It was never intended to be controlled by moneyed interests. Keep it free and open,

—Donna Bogren, Asheville, NC

I do not have the ability to pay more for "highest" functionality in order to live my life. Due to health issues, I am particularly dependent on the internet to do much of my business ... and need Net Neutrality in order to continue doing so. Thank you.

—Gwendolyn Doebbert, Sacramento, CA

I need net neutrality to keep the playing field even. I work for the railroad and everything we do for our contact with work is through the net. I don't need a slower internet because some huge company wants to charge more money for a fast lane and if you don't believe that will happen, I have a bridge to sell you!!

—Loren Molling, Onalaska, WI

The free exchange of thoughts and content on the internet is crucial to democracy! Corporate media cannot be allowed to control all access to information!

—Robert Kimble, Junction City, OR

This needs to be a Public Utility for for common welfare the public trust, the public good. Big business will Put Profit before what is the common interests of the people.

—Cynthia Davey, Kendall, WI

The internet should be open and free to everyone. Making an individual pay for faster internet speeds is wrong. Every one needs the internet for one reason or another, and penalizing internet speed for people who cannot afford to pay a higher cost is despicable. These actions are preying on people who are struggling in this economy.

—Gary Faulds, ,

Net neutrality is important for two reasons. Number one is that the internet remains a neutral place and everyone has equal opportunities to hear and to be heard about whatever they want. The second reason is because I'm tired of being screwed over by big business and the FCC is just being a puppet for media conglomerates and that needs to stop.

—Devan Jones, Bonney Lake, WA

I could no more afford to pay for Internet use than I could for private medical care. I am on a fixed income and a privatized Internet would be beyond my means.

—Michael L. McQuown, Philadelphia, PA

I live in a rural area with poor TV service. The internet is essential to my keeping in touch with friends and family. I am on a fixed income and cannot afford extra fees

—Elizabeth Perkins, Shutesbury, MA

Things haven't been going good for 'the people' lately. Policies that were put in place to protect certain rights and freedoms have slowly dwindled due to sheer greed and corruption at every level w/in our government (i.e. local, state, and federal). Please stop feeding into this Gilded Age system, if only to protect our future generations.

—Nichole Wicks, Newark, NJ

Net neutrality is important to me because every website deserves the same level playing field. Content should be the deciding factor in a site's popularity--not loading speed.

—, Harrah, OK

Most of my news and information comes from various UNBIASED sources on the internet because 'mainstream media' no longer is balanced.

—Brooks Rollyson, Waterford, MI

Its a civil right. It helps small businesses have a fair go at growing if net neutrality is kept.

—Todd Augustin, ,

The means of communication afforded by the internet is vital to a free society and should not be left in the hands of the capitalists.

—Leslie Cassidy, New York, NY

The internet is much bigger than the pipes it runs on, and the innovation and growth it has facilitated thus far has happened primarily because, unlike other media, control of its content has not rested in the hands of a few small companies. To allow it to become so would be to take a huge step backwards.

—Brook Jones, ,

I use the internet daily to learn and to be entertained. I don't live in America, but the effects of premium access will affect which users go to which sites, and will ruin communities across the internet.

—Mircea Taras, ,

Considering that from here on out, most innovations are going to take place on the internet - please keep the playing field level.

—Randy Katzen, Columbia, MD

Religious freedom and other first amendment issues

—Rev Jim Joseph, Two Harbors, MN

it's called freedom of speech. to me that means accessing the information i want to, not the information that someone else wants me to.

—D T Ptak, delevan, NY

I am a senior and can't afford cable or even newspapers I depend on the net daily for news information and entertainment.

—Judith Bodie, Bloomingdale, IL

The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress.

—Charlotte Bednard, ,

Because, freedom.

—Carlos, Humble, TX

The way America goes is often the way the rest of the world goes. Hopefully the FCC will be a leader in Net Neutrality.

—Frank French, ,

There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Michel Beluet, Saint-Jean Richelieu,

Equal access to all internet content is important especially for small businesses, artists, and musicians to spread the word about their offerings, and also to students and researchers who rely on the internet for access to myriad sources of information. Common carriage is essential for keeping the internet a level and affordable playing field for sharing goods and services and gleaning information. Thank you.

—Mike O'Neal, New York, NY

The open accessibility to everyone. This allows free choices and more of an open and fair place to play, work, etc.

—Brian Harrison, ,

It represents transparency and democracy for everyone!

—Rob Short, Greeley, CO

Corporations should not control information content or access.

—Herbert W. Myers, Menlo Park, CA

this is the only way to achieve a peaceful world, open communication between all nations and all peoples. with out it we are blind to manipulation, and corrupt interpretation of the truth, no political spin doctors needed, I want the truth from the proverbial Horses mouth.

—Gary Toole, ,

We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Manon Laverriere, ,

VERY IMPORTANT

—Suzanne Kuffler, Woods Hole, MA

it was started with the armed forces and passed down to the public, it is not to be made into privately owned commercial entities just for the asking. It belongs to all of us..

—Ann Buxbaum, buffalo grove, IL

The net is my news source and my reference library for investigations. The current FCC proposal would allow people with enough money to buy positioning in my news and investigation library and effectively seal out sources that I need and trust.

—, Colorado Springs, CO

It's important to me because it's in everyone's best interest including the long term health of the internet.

—Darryl Fierling, ,

Net Neutrality is the future of innovation in this country. This is mob extortion plain and simple. Prove you're more than a mob lackey. Prove you're an American. Restore Net Neutrality.

—Matt Clements, San Francisco, CA

I am very involved in the Indie music scene. The bands I love do not have the financial backing to pay for high speed access to their customers. Please don't let this happen. The internet as we know it will be ruined.

—Corey Jansen, Oregon, WI

Please don't do this.

—Dylan Cruse, Shawnee, KS

I am one of the little people most affected by this proposal and yet, as a creative mind, shouldn't the world have an opportunity to benefit equally from all inspiration.

—Robert Weaver, ,

Equal AND open access
—Paul Nelson, Twain Harte, CA

The Net gives me a voice, whereas so called democratic governments are allowing corporations to take that away. Please don't let them.
Thank you.
—Julie Partridge, ,

If ISP are allowed to throttle internet traffic, it will be used as a tool to stifle competition, and ultimately stifle innovation. The technology sector is one of the few areas of major job growth in North America, and a net neutrality is a key part of that innovation and job growth.
—Mikhail Klassen, ,

The net is working fine right now! Don't screw it up!!
—Dale Mackie, ,

I cant afford this to happen,
—stewart Hill, ,

I am an IT professional and how fast I get answers to my clients is crucial, if you vote against net neutrality you will be placing a large burden on small PC repair shops because of the new "slow lane" and the fees included in the cost of being in the "fast lane". Please vote to save net neutrality.
—Noah Stines, Statesville, NC

The internet is about freedom not just commerce.
—Ken Todd, ,

The internet is vital to the future of our country, and need to have free access. In rura areas, which big business and those inside the beltway don't realize is MOST of our it country, the internet is pivotal, providing information, news, research, social connectivity, and entertainment. It's already difficult enoug to a get internet access, with companies like Cox, and Time-Warner only providing cable service wher it provides sinful profit. Reasonably priced rural and small town Wi-Fi needs to be developed. PEOPLE FIRST!
—Darby Tarr, CARTHAGE, NY

I am sick and tired of big money taking over everything. It is a disgrace for you to even consider changing the rules to favor the rich and powerful.
—Janet Ginsberg, Escondido, CA

Net Neutrality is essential!
—Jacqueline Karsemeyer, ,

Open Internet is the only thing standing between Big Corporations and Total Control over the nation, if not the entire planet.
—Kevin Krywko, San Marcos, CA

Everyone deserves equal access. No slow lanes on the Internet. It should remain open to all on an equal basis.
—Ann Bracken, Columbia, MD

Para que la informacion corra por el Mundó llibre
—Montserrat Riu i Jover, Barcelona,

It already seems as if corporations, rather than governments, run the world. Allowing them to block or slow down certain websites crushes the freedom of every individual and small business.

—Judy Pettersen, ,

Consumers already pay for bandwidth, and should be free to choose how it's used. Charging content providers for transit is nothing less than double-billing!

—Dave Suffling, ,

The biggest trait of internet services is the speed of Net access for all users. Any and all attempts (by network providers) to develop separate services based on data rate MUST be challenged and thwarted. If network providers develop service rates based on monthly data throughput (ie. the more data one transfers the more that user pays) is OK. This systems is easy to implement and fair. But the use of 'Throttling' techniques (where users are charged for the speed of Net access) is more difficult to administer and not fair to those who's usage is low. The international Human Right Code states that all people must be treated equally and with dignity. This should be the guiding principle when establishing cost-for-service models for internet usage.

—Dennis Choptiany, ,

I want the internet to be available to everyone ... not just those with money

—Mr. Jeff Bell, Friday Harbor, WA

Let's keep a level playing field. Creating a two tier system is prima facia discrimination.

—Penny Peters, Edmonds, WA

Because freedom is man's first right and internet connects the whole world together. So freedom of internet means alot to us and the coming generations!

—Vishwas Kini, ,

Net Neutrality is needed to ensure equal access to all media

—Glenn Taylor, ,

The internet needs to be available to all people, not just the wealthy.

—Patrick E. Cameron, El Cajon, CA

I want free choice with my internet, not pipelined media. I have a right to choose what i want at my max speeds not by anyone else

—Rommel Fernando, ,

In the electronic age, net neutrality is essential for democracy. Equal access to the internet should be a fundamental human right and not subject to corporate control and interference.

—Neil St. Clair, ,

The internet, like the postal service, was set up to run as an equal service for all users regardless of income. It should not be degraded for the benefit of the wealthy.

—Philip Barns, ,

My husband and I manage a not-for-profit organization (LivingTheCRWay), whose mission is health promotion to help people – ordinary people, exceptional people, all people – increase their healthspan. This will allow them to have more healthy years to be productive and to enjoy their lives and families, along with a shorter period of avoidable ill health. This will be good for them, good for the economy, and will put less pressure on our overburdened illness care system. This is a big idea with big positive effects. So far our organization is a small one, though, and unable to pay high fees for Internet use, which is essential to our operation: It's how we transmit information and other benefits to our members. Providing longer healthspan to everyone who is interested is within your power – right now: Reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality allow LivingTheCRWay to continue helping people to live more years in good health work longer retire later need health care service later and less intensively Thank you for reading this and understanding how important it is that you reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II.

—Meredith Averill, Ossining, NY

Net Neutrality is very important to provide equal access to everything available on the internet. Restricting total access to only those who can afford steep tolls is making access to the internet a two tiered service - i.e. inequality based upon income.

—Kathleen Henderson, ,

I am a small business owner, physically disabled, and a homeschooling mother. I use the Internet as a source of income, a source of socializing, and a way to tell my child "I don't know. Let's find out." I met my husband on the Internet. I found my doctor on the Internet. I learn techniques for improving my skills in metalsmithing on the Internet. I found music on the Internet that I had never heard, saw trailers for movies that interested me. I use the Internet to learn gardening techniques that help me feed my family. I used it to build our emergency kit. I use it to keep my child clothed and shod. I used the Internet to find support from other disabled people with my condition, so I didn't feel so alone. I used it to learn about treatment options so I could advocate on my own behalf. Last October, I used the Internet to save my child's life when she developed a sudden pain in her side, and I first diagnosed her with appendicitis using the rebound test I found online, and then looked up the nearest ER to which we could take her. This past weekend, I used the Internet to determine my need for emergency treatment. I am writing this from my hospital bed, which I might not have seen if forced to wrestle with an Internet that was not open. My liver enzyme count was over 900 when I was first tested. Is that high? Check the Internet for normal levels in 35-year-old women. My marriage to my husband would not exist without the Internet, as we were 1720 miles (I looked that up online) away from each other. Without a chance encounter on a small online social network, I would have never met my truest partner and best friend. I use the Internet to stay in touch with the family I left behind, to share pictures of my child with her grandfather and great-aunt. I use the Internet to stay in touch with friends who have left me behind. I use it to talk to people on different hemispheres of our planet. Since I was sixteen, the Internet has been a part of life that has enriched me in so many ways. Classifying the Internet as a public utility is the only way to preserve it for my child and for the world, and to hand it over to be ruled by four corporations will destroy it. I support Net Neutrality. You should too. G. Rowan McIntyre Cinquefoil Metalworks Chicago, IL

—G Rowan McIntyre, Chicago, IL

The Internet is the only place where "FREE EXPRESSION" currently exists.

—Nancy Baer, Sedona, AZ

A free and clean internet is the only way it should continue, if it is controlled and filtered by big business, they will end up with more power than governments and nobody should have that kind of power, especially with no accountability.

—John Neish, ,

I want to be able to find new and intriguing content and be able to get this content without any extra costs to the provider of the content.

—Matthew Bennison, ,

As a self-employed author and historian, i depend on the internet for my research and writing. Many of my sources are on the web and if there were a slow lane it would make my livelihood more precarious because my access would be much slower. Also much of my professional correspondence is now by email, not postal service. And as a person with health issues I depend on the internet for such sites as Medline or the websites of such institutions as the Mayo Clinic, the Cleveland Clinic, and others. And, as an active participant in our political democracy, I use the internet for my political information and for much of the political action I do take. Hence the only reasonable solution to the current crisis is to reclassify the Internet as "common carriers".

—Hamilton Cravens, Minneapolis, MN

Remember, you work for the people, not the corporations.

—L John Keller II, Hudson, NH

The Internet has brought a new age of industry with a neutral Internet

—Myles Dobson, ,

Why do you feel like you have to regulate everything? I want the FCC to know that net neutrality is important to me! Keep your hand off our internet!

—Jill cubio, Cape Coral, FL

If a fast lane is introduced, it will become the de facto standard. The conversations and emergent communities that are the internet's lifeblood will disappear, and we would all be poorer for it.

—Ingrid Sakrison, Sussex, WI

Real Net Neutrality should be important to the U.S.A. otherwise they will fall behind in technological advancements.

—Yvan Rivard, ,

The internet is for information, not profit.

—Chris Resleff, Seattle, WA

as a homebound disabled senior on a fixed income(which includes food stamps) who cannot afford either cable or much of anything else, and who depends on internet access for everything from household supplies to information, i don't know what i am going to do if net neutrality goes away. it's my copnnection to the world- and it's expensive enough now as it is to be connected at all.

—Joan Langue, New York, NY

The internet is synonymous with "free speech". Free speech should not go to the highest bidder. PERIOD

—Scott Cottrill, Albuquerque, NM

Its too important to not be neutral.

—, East Islip, NY

Net neutrality is absolutely necessary for a free and open society.

—Vasu Murti, Oakland, CA

Net Neutrality guarantees equal and unbridled access to the Internet's engine of opportunity, leveling the playing field so that we all have a chance to be heard.

—Janie S. Lyle, Federal Way, WA

ISPs cannot be allowed to let some content move faster than others. It would create chaos on the internet.

—Keith King, Ft Madison, IA

our speech, your curiosity, our interests, our access to other people and their ideas; should not have a price and priority placed upon it by people who's sole intent is to force us to pay them for access. speech is not a commodity, it is a right; the first right, the for most right. this plan will be an abject failure. Instead of giving them more access and control, they should be broken up as monopolies should be borne up when they threaten the lively hood of people and nations.

—gregory Severson, Lynnwood, WA

I work for a small business we'll be among many not qualifying for the pay-to-play "fastLane"

—G Hardiman, Tucker, GA

It's important to me to continue to have a voice to propel my precious thoughts that's potentially as discernable and available as that of the biggest giant company.

—James Hufferd, Adel, IA

It's right to be able to source many different views on various subjects. Don't like being spoon fed. Thanks.

—Maria Plakakis, Johnstown, PA

Net neutrality is a vital way It allows citizens to communicate with others. It also is a major route for commerce. Neither of these should be infringed.

—Kathryn Caperton, Florissant, CO

My life is controlled on the net. I get bank statements and bills on the net. My social security card doesn't even send a statement. The net is my only way to check my account. I pay my bills online. I shop online. Another thing to consider is the economy. If big business can pay for faster internet it will damage those smaller ones who can't. Also, our election process will be ruined. Big money will pay to control the process where most of get our info. Just reclassify the net as a common carrier and let us have the net we love. It is the right thing to do. The people lose nearly every battle against big money. We will not stop until we win this battle.

—Diane Hendricks, Olney, TX

You know why, do the right thing for the people.

—Joshua Singer, Shelton, CT

Equal access is essential in order for the small guy to compete with big corporations. This fosters competition and creativity.

—Ken Liddon, ,

The internet was built on equal access. Please don't allow companies to prioritize traffic for a fee over others.

—Joel Hopkins, Richardson, TX

Leave the net alone!

—David Gileo, ,

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler claims he supports the open Internet, but his proposed rules would allow Big Telecom to charge steep tolls for premium access — and block or slow down websites and services that can't afford the new fees. There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Dusty R Parrott, bellevue, WA

I am a rural resident of the U.S. The telecommunications industry already serves us poorly. The lack of cell phone coverage, homes too far apart to support cable TV, even as recently as two decades ago we had party lines on our land line telephones, and it wasn't that long ago that an internet connection was dial-up, or nothing at all. I dread a decision that would allow the telecommunications industry to serve us more poorly, or more restrictively, than they already do. Broadband providers should be classified under Title II as a public utility. Net neutrality matters; particularly, when other avenues of access and participation are already so poorly delivered.

—Mary Woodward, Greeley, CO

We don't need a slow lane. A slow lane will end innovation!

—Clifford Johnson, Minneapolis, MN

For someone with my issues this is the key to my freedoms, It is a scholar's and student's and the world's platform, it should stay neutral. It is one of our freedoms, do not let corporations control it or the point of our constitution is lost.

—Sonya Kuykendall, Salem, MA

I make a living on the internet. And even if I didn't, the slow lane policy would have disastrous effects on the internet as we know and love it today.

—Young, ,

As a former professional educator, I know how open, easy and effective access is necessary in research for students as well as educators.

—Joyce Stoffers, Sun City, AZ

Freedom of Speech and Freedom of Assembly

—Gary Hudson, Lakewood, OH

The internet is amazing and allows individuals freedom of expression that was previously hard to obtain.

—Peter Tosi, ,

This is allowing corporate interests to run roughshod over free speech under the guise of protecting their profitably and thus their shareholders. Approving this in effect delegates non-corporate citizens - the majority of the population being non-shareholders - to the status of 2nd class citizens. And the start of censorship is the beginning of the end of free speech and free thinking.

—Daniel Tobin, ,

Continuing Net Neutrality is essential in promoting free expression, innovation and economic opportunities for everyone, not just a select few!

—Gaya Covington, Salt Lake City, UT

Maintain and protect Net Neutrality for the public's common good/benefit .

—Alan Hollis, New York, NY

Freedom of expression should be free

—Robert Lopez, Happy Valley, OR

Without net neutrality, more money would be needed, more jobs would then be needed, we all know that unemployment is at a all time high and we really don't need anything worse than a lack of money and jobs in the world along with a lot of unhappy people

—Jacob Newbury, ,

WE ARE SICK AND TIRED OF THE NET BEING RUINED.

—Stewart John Carr, ,

It's a simple matter of fairness, especially for low-income people who cannot afford to use the "fast lane."

—Thom Lufkin, Olympia, WA

Freedom and privacy go hand in hand

—Mike sariego, Philadelphia, PA

Because net neutrality keeps our internet free and never be slow.

—Aaron Cordero, Weslaco, CA

I believe net neutrality is essential to the inovation and growth of the Internet. The Internet should be an equal playing field for all users and not in control of a few communications conglomerates. Telecommunications companies have proven they can't be trusted in the best interest of the public. Please do not allow these companies to provide a fast lane to the internet for rich at the expense of the poor.

—Ron Cox, ,

I pay MORE then Enough for my SLOW internet I pay $211 a MONTH for my internet / Phone and Cell Phone / Tablet Bundle and my internet speed is slower then 1 mbp/s I'm on a pension I get fortnightly the internet is my way of reaching out to the world MY ONLY WAY OF "GOING OUT" for Myself.

—Peter Clifford, ,

It's the heart of what makes the Internet the great engine of innovation that it is. If net neutrality goes away it will become nothing but ad space dominated by big companies. All the unique and wonderful things about it will be gone.

—Richard Alexander Pelphrey, Louisville, KY

Net neutrality is absolutely essential for the protection and strengthening of a fully democratic society.

—David Boyer, Belfast, ME

For keeping in touch with friends and family and ten thousand other very good reasons.

—Melynda Taylor, Bristol, VA

It is important for democracy

—Harriet Hall, ,

Innovation comes from the "little guys", who won't be able to afford to get exposure in the online space if it becomes controlled/owned by the "big guys".

—Russell Montgomery, ,

I don't want to live in a world moderated by CNN any more then it is already.

—Aidan Foster, ,

We are in a free country, let our freedom be true. Let us navigate the web without having to pay more. Don't let our freedom be restrained by Big Telecom.

—Joel Tremblay, ,

Net neutrality is a crucial element in protecting our first amendment rights. No one entity or group owns the internet, therefore no one entity or group should be allowed to have control over how users interact with the internet. It has been hailed as a platform for the free and uncensored spread of ideas and information, but this will no longer be true if ISPs are allowed to control connection speed at their discretion. I ask you to please rethink this action. Do what is in the best interest of the American people.

—Kyle Bragdon, Laurel, DE

Trying to patch the internet instead of evolving the infrastructure is rolling the technology backward. Not forward!

—Jérôme Poulin, ,

We need a free internet to support our Democracy.

—Judith Green, Bellingham, WA

I guess more correctly; We DEPEND ON YOU to watch out for the PEOPLES best interest. Gotta warn you I hear a lot of talk about torches and pitchforks out here. Maybe this is a good time to look again at who you work for.

—Cliff Wells, Lynnwood, WA

I'm a book editor, and I use the internet constantly for research, much of which comes from educational, social, and history sources. Speed is important to me.

—Ann Featherstone, ,

Attempting to close the internet will fail and the FCC will find itself on the wrong side of history.

—Will Gorenfeld, Novato, CA

Keep the internet the way it is! Keep the money out of this!!

—Steph Trujillo, Des Moines, IA

I can not believe we need to have this discussion. NET NEUTRALITY in its obviousness - access to information - is a human right. The privatization and control of our resources (including information) is a crime against the very people that make up our world. ALL information/content and required for us to re-invent / disseminate / rebuild / and innovate - thereby stimulate prosperity. There has been a slow and systematic destruction to our rights under the names of security and profit - and it's beginning to chip away at the foundations of what our nations were built on - information MUST remain open to all without interference. ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!

—Dave Taillefer, ,

Free access to information is essential to a democracy. It is the means by which citizens can inform themselves about the issues.

—Helen Ible, ,

Broadband Internet is a basic human right to me, and shouldn't be subject to restricted speeds just so telecommunications corporations can make more money.

—Jeff Donnelly, ,

I've used the internet since it was invented and it is a great system. Why destroy it because of the corporations? Giving in to the corporations isn't in the best interests of Capitalism. True, the corporations are pure capitalists and our country operates under that. But U.S. government is supposed to be for the people, by the people - not corporations. If the President and Congress caves in to the corporations, then we no longer have a democracy, but something quite insidious (actually, I am worried that the Hobby Lobby situation may actually be the beginning of true corporate government of the U.S.). Where's the Roosevelt's when we need them...?

—Mike Bilbo, Fort Stanton, NM

The Net belongs to no one person, corporation or entity. Net Neutrality MUST BE KEPT so that EVERYONE has fair use of it. RECLASSIFY INTERNET SERVICE PROVIDERS AS 'COMMON CARRIERS'.

—Ms. Holly McDuffie, Los Angeles, CA

The internet is already much too cluttered with commercials.

—Roman Fruth, San Antonio, TX

This is what I believe and see the internet as.

—Nathan Bedrick, Woburn, MA

Internet neutrality is essential for freedom of expression.

—Christopher Male, ,

Get off our internet. We're not paying above and beyond what we pay our ISP. We don't want extra fees.

—Michal Augustyniak, ,

Hey, the FCC! It's our - Net Neutrality is important to us! Don't put your long nose in somebody else business! By doing so you are trying to make us slaves (by taking away our rights) and we won't let you do that! You took a bribe from someone to close it - shame on you!

—Margarita A Ivanova, Seattle, WA

This should be a service open to everyone, without any restrictions. We pay enough already, too often for poor service.

—Judy Genandt, East Dundee, IL

Net Neutrality is in the best interest of the consumer.

—Daniel M Sylvester, Madison, WI

When I pay for my internet service I have the expectation that ALL the information and services I access will be provide to me at the speed which I have paid for without the ISP deciding which one comes to me on a fast lane or slow lane. I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers and keep the internet "Net Neutral".

—Richard D Stewart, Mill Valley, CA

you're supposed to protect us from monopolies and unfair advantage

—J Talbot, austin, TX

I have a small online business and I don't want to be put out of business by big corporations who can pay to get special treatment.

—Christie Bradley, Defuniak Springs, FL

It opens the whole world to allow people from diverse backgrounds to hear all sides of issues. It prevents governments from tailoring the message to their agenda.

—, ,

Leave well-enough alone.

—Michael Kasino, New York, NY

Enough is enough. We have been providing subsidies to these billion dollar companies. This needs to stop IMMEDIATELY!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Franco Luz, Leesburg, VA

Hey, the FCC! It's our - Net Neutrality is important to us! Don't put your long nose in somebody else business! By doing so you are trying to make us slaves (by taking away our rights) and we won't let you do that! You took a bribe from someone to close it - shame on you!

—A M Johnson, Des Moines, IA

As technology improves we should not be imposing more costs on the people to use them. It will only slow any transition into fully realizing the power of such technologies. It is unfair price gouging to raise profits.

—Joshua Vamos, ,

I like alone in rural America far from most people, businesses and medical services, so the Internet is my connection to the outside world. I need it to be fast and inexpensive so that I can reach other people when in need or in trouble. I cannot afford to pay high prices for a necessity that is far from a luxury or for entertainment purposes

—Jacquelyn R. Downing, Scottsburg, OR

Currently I can access sites run by huge corporations, sites run by small businesses and sites run by non-profits with equal ease. Allowing the channel providers to pick and choose among content providers based on their ability to pay, and even allowing the channel providers to completely choke off independent voices of those who don't have the funds for steep fees, further tilts the economic playing field in favor of those who have already succeeded in amassing great wealth, and even threatens to cut off the free speech that democracy depends on. This makes it even more difficult for my colleagues who are trying to be seen on the Internet to gain the attention of more eyeballs. The economy of the United States now depends on the Internet. Don't break by giving the channel providers even more power than they now have.

—David Simen, Highland Park, NJ

Net neutrality is the biggest issue that no one's taking about enough. My internet is a gateway to a world of content that survives NOT on a payola type scheme, but on the MERIT of the content. If all content is to be given a fair shot at the market, net neutrality must be maintained.

—Kurtis Douglas, ,

The internet is a tool that provides information to all citizens who need it, for children and adults in school, those of us who need it for many reasons, for elderly who need and want communication ability--of whom I am one. The internet must not be tampered with so corporations can control yet another tool that the rest of us need as much as we do, and they have no right to demand--as they have been doing about everything else lately--priority access, leaving the crumbs to the rest of us. Greed and power are ruining this country. The few want everything and couldn't care less about all the rest of us. Please do what is necessary to retain the internet equally for all users. This is the right thing. You know it is.

—Juli Hennessee, Morganton, NC making a world of have and have nots at the expense of corporate greed is morally reprehensive.

—Kevin McDonald, ,

Fast broadband should be available to all.

—Derek Marcus, ,

Without it my husband could not do his job. He works from home and WE pay for the faster internet. If we could be throttled unless we pay more he would be losing money.

—RG Tuomi, Thousand Oaks, CA

Stop corporate take overs!! We need a neutral net! Put your big person pants on and take a stand for neutrality!

—LeeAnn Gibbs, Rock Island, WA

Most of my business is Web Based. This is very important.

—Cindy Larson, Highland, CA

I don't want any websites on the interwebs to be blocked; I want freedom of choice! Please reclassify ISP's as "common carriers" to save the great information highway from being choked to death!

—, Long Beach, CA

Comcast is my ISP, and they're renowned for poor service and pricing, thanks to too little regulation. With the USA, inventors of the Internet already lagging behind many developed countries in network speed and connection quality, can we really afford to leave ANY more control in the hands of large ISPs? They argue that regulation will stifle innovation, but we've already seen venture capital back away from Internet startups, afraid of what slow lanes will do. Comcast and Time Warner aren't interested in competition. They've already won. All they want are the tools to keep it that way. Support net neutrality, and support those companies that make the Internet useful.

—Aaron Mitschelen, Frederick, MD

Without the internet, we here in Africa would not have the chance to get to the level of IT development that has been possible until now.

—Donovan Solms, Pretoria,

Freedom of expression is worth more than big business

—Anthony Gaunt, ,

freedom

—Mark McWilliams, Tucson, AZ

What can be missing for a house to be considered unlivable by many people? Heat, electricity, running water, Internet connection. Please reclassify ISPs as common carriers, because this is what they are.

—Vladislav Zorov, ,

we need freedom of speach

—Tom McDonald, Kamloops,

By limiting access like this, you're going to cripple America's innovation. The internet has always been open for us all, and it's part of the reason we're still one of the leading nations in the world. We're free to communicate and create as it stands now. Changing that is going to make it difficult for a lot of us to do so, and we'll lose that leading edge.

—Leila Wilson, Pomona, CA

The net provides me with a fulfilling and informative life in retirement.

—Peter Barnett Peter, ,

The only truly democratic policy.

—Mary T Slayter, West Dennis, MA

A fair and neutral internet is critical to the integrity of the free market. As a university professor and faculty member I recognize the importance of equal access to information.

—Alexis Franzese, Hillsborough, NC

What you're trying to do here with these new laws will only come back to bite you in the ass. I look forward to the day when (you) the lawmakers are put on the chopping block for their greedy and misguided actions. You work for the people, not the people for you. How your able to keep your jobs in office clearly shows that our entire government system/body is corrupted. So badly in fact, that only an internal civil war will be able to undo the damage you and your big business partners have caused. You like to point the blame finger at supposed "terrorist" but in reality, you are the terrorist, and you seem to get off on terrorizing regular American citizens. It isn't enough that your robbing the country blind in broad daylight, but now you have to find a way to stick it to us even more. NO SIR THAT WILL NOT DO! We don't want or need these laws but apparently you do, and you do so at your own risk. Remember your just as disposable as the poor folks your targeting with these laws. If its all about stopping piracy of commercial TV shows, software, etc. Then you better find a different approach because no matter how slow you make the internet for the poor people, they will still find a way to over ride and by pass your control methods. The only way to stop it at this point would be to make the internet itself illegal and completely take it offline for everyone. I'll bet it would actually help the country as people would finally have to get out from in front of their computers and pay attention to what your all about, and the crimes your committing everyday. I'm asking you as a sovereign citizen of the United States to cease and deists all talks or proposals that will directly impact the already weak and unstable economy. By charging more money for something that already works as is, you will no doubt cause many people to simply stop using the internet. Perhaps that's what you want and it would probably be for the best, as those you seek to control would be free of the excessive extortion your trying to induce on them. Sincerely, Britton Burton

—Britton Burton, Danville, VA

Net Neutrality is for everyone. Paying a higher price to keep from slowing down is greedy and desperate on the providers part. And is feeding the gap between the have's and have not's.

—Marilyn Blalock, Cocoa, FL

The Internet is the last refuge of a free press that is guaranteed under the US Constitution, but has been slowly eroded over the last 20 years. Don't kow-tow to the wealthy foreign owners of arch-conservative media.

—CPA Barbara J. Vicent, Edmonds, WA

I'm a graphic designer and work from home. It's absolutely critical for me that the Internet be considered a common carrier. It is no longer a luxury to have a freely-accessible Internet. It's as essential a commodity as electricity.

—Irene Gurley, Gardnerville, NV

Don't fix what isn't broken!

—Gordon Scott, ,

Please support People over Profit. The internet in every way shape and form is a utility and to preserve america's freedom should be treated as such.

—Sean R Pierce, Portland, OR

Because a free and open internet benefits the lowest, poorest person yearning for exposure to the wealth of human knowledge.

—PharmD Edward Champion Cooper, Austin, TX

Net Neutrality is essential to promote equal opportunity and allow new innovations to flourish. If you make it prohibitive to get to an audience, you'll kill many ideas that could greatly improve our world before they have a chance to attract people's attention, and create monopolies that damage the economy, free speech, and innovation.

—James Keys, ,

V4A4P1

—Suzanne Bedard, ,

Freedom and exchange of information is priceless - it ain't broke - don't fix it!

—David McGinty, ,

Free speech and access to the free speech of others is my human right. I do not wish this to be eroded by Internet service providers being able to slow up or otherwise affect my internet access.

—Bridget Murphy, ,

First Amendment rights, anyone? Corporations are NOT people, in spite of what the Roberts Court has ruled.

—, Alameda, CA

A free Press and Internet are integral to a society that values true democracy and individual human rights.

—William Hynes, ,

Net Neutrality is necessary for freedom of speech

—Angela McClendon, Corvallis, OR

I recently had a row with Time Warner Cable driven by one principle: I paid Time Warner Cable to channel content of  my  choice. Time Warner Cable's corporate capitulation to Comcast (which does have a history of coercing its subscribers to its preferred content/web browsing techniques) has made it clear that TWC views its customers as cash cow slaves; if that were not the case, TWC would have already rejected the merge offer. Net Neutrality is the ability for the end-user to (metaphorically) grab an uncooperative Internet service provider by the scruff of its collar as the prelude for a very unpleasant »or else« if a request for certain content is ignored. More to the point, we also need to have more anti-trust civil litigation to break up big companies like Comcast and TWC so that we do not have this situation again. Nobody pays an Internet service provider to have his web browsing decided for him.

—Damon Mason, Balcones Heights, TX

Privatization of the common good leading to extraction of further income from already hurting families will eventually lead to revolt and revolution..And it will happen here too.

—Clifford Krolick, Parsonsfield, ME

We paid for that internet, not the corporations.

—Frank W Conway, Albuquerque, NM

My life style depends on an equal, free and open internet. That means no monopolies and no price gouging.

—William G. Willmon, Fossil, OR

A free and open Internet has been one of the great innovations of our times; and it should continue to be so for everybody, not for corporations or "privileged" groups.

—David Zielke, San Francisco, CA

The Internet is the only apolitical, censorship-free forum for mass communication within and between states and nations. It must remain free of commercial and political influences which limit our freedom of expression.

—Richard Lamma, Missoula, MT

Because a free and open neutral internet is important to developing technology and how how people communicate.

—Samantha Tengroth, ,

I use the internet almost everyday, and I'm a senior on social security retirement benefits. If I were a college student I would need the internet even more.

—Anita Alcantara, Chicago, IL

Freedom of speech should be free!

—Tom Rikard Ostad, ,

Democracy, equality, innovation, citizens' right to access information,

—Linda Naiman, ,

Net Neutrality is vital for innovation and good service with healthy competition.

—Nate Frey, Chicago, IL

ALL DATA under one speed.

—Nick Dziejulski, ,

There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Ron Saeger, Fargo, ND

Broadband providers should be reclassified as common carriers under provision of Title II. It is important to me to be able to have access to the internet without being gauged in price, and without having to make do with slower speeds. To me, this is just another ploy to put corporations ahead of "the people".

—Ramona Thompson, Birmingham, AL

Internet access should be regulated as a public utility. Tax subsidies paid for most of the internet backbone infrastructure.

—Donald Holden, Cartersville, GA

Maintaining entirely equal treatment of network traffic on the Internet is of utmost importance to the future of the United States economy. The US is already behind much of the developed world in terms of Internet access speeds which puts us at dire risk to be overtaken in development of new technologies and services. If ISPs are able to make extra profit by charging service providers for faster access to end users, the ISPs will be disincentivized to improve network speeds because they will then lose that profit if their networks become fast enough that the "fast lane" isn't necessary. It will become necessary to keep US Internet speeds low enough that basic access is inadequate to provide services in order to maintain that line of profit. Additionally, innovation will be stifled by the high cost of competing with established rivals. If a business requires huge amounts of money in order to reach its potential customers effectively, it will be extremely difficult for new players with new ideas to enter the market.

—Jonathon Merz, San Francisco, CA

First of all, I'm on a fixed income and live in a very rural area, so higher fees for internet would make it harder for me to enjoy all of the content that the internet offers. Second, I'm TECHNICALLY already in the internet slow lane now, which stinks to high heaven, so adding another layer to that would only make using the internet that much more difficult for me, as I cannot afford higher access fees. Honestly, I can barely afford what I'm paying now, and my internet is terrible. (Imagine having to FREQUENTLY reload the same page repeatedly, just to get it to load PROPERLY, and you get some idea of just ONE of the issues I deal with as a dial user...) Please protect net neutrality, kill the whole "fast lane, slow lane" concept once and for all, and reclassify the internet as a common carrier as it should have been in the first place.

—Bradley Reedy, Jefferson, TX

Net Neutrality is the last bastion for the free exchange of ideas and communication without the overlay of commercial profit structures. Data packet is a data packet is a data packet. We should resist the notion of prioritizing data packets for profit. As it stands, the USA is already behind the rest of the world in terms of how we implement the internet and how we charge its citizens. Let's stop the further decay this medium of free exchange and save Net Neutrality.

—Donald Limcaco, Frisco, TX

Neutrality is the cornerstone of a free society and free speech.

—Allen Frechette, Hampton, NH

Enough of our "freedoms" are suppressed upon as it is, the internet needs to stay neutral so that the flow of information is always accessible to anyone and everyone

—Jocelyn, ,

the internet is first of its kind the only medium that has brought the true day to day global public opinion/expression to the decision makers in real time. " you can fool some of the people all the time..." but you can't fool all on the internet all the time not even some of the time.

—Munir Uriell Shohet, ,

We, the real people demand that our voice (which is by far in the majority) is heard and followed in regard to protecting Net Neutrality. Cable companies already have a monopoly and have proven they are only motivated by greed. Don't think for a second that we aren't watching!

—John Pizzulo, Kernersville, NC

Net Neutrality is a safeguard for freedom of speech.

—William Leavy, Santa Fe, NM

This is your chance to prove that people are more important than corporations in America.

—Mary Rowley, Hettinger, ND

I am a senior citizen with limited income. Chairman Wheeler's proposals are not compatible with my research needs to lobby DC on policy issues & enjoy other Internet resources. Thank you very kindly for your time and attention & that of your staff. Yours truly,

—Mr. Brett A. Greisen, New York, NY

It works well like this

—Mr. Paul Heydemann, Miami, FL

Net neutrality is important to everyone, becoming corrupt only stands to hurt everyone and dampens the innovation that the net is renowned for.

—Randall Johnson, Fort Wayne, IN

The internet is one of the greatest accomplishments in technological history. It allows us to communicate world-wide & distribute information & ideas at a rapid pace & makes for quite the 1 stop spot for entertainment as well. Besides, the internet doesn't belong to any one group or sovereignty, therefore no one has a right to regulate it or try to control or censor it!

—Bryan Jarrie, Marysville, CA

The internet was not created by and for the large telecoms to make more money off the masses. It was created as a linking system for the planet to connect together freely

—Remi J Chretien, ,

My small business depends on genuine net neutrality.

—Kathleen McSweeney, Midlothian, VA

why are people going to go hide from corps, and gov.? to have freedom?

—William A O'Rourke Jr, Xenia, OH

The internet is a way of life in the 21st century. It can't be controlled by companies, it needs to be open and free for the people.

—Harrison Metzger, Chicago, IL

I am exploited enough by the big telecom corporations. Enough is enough. And Tom Wheeler's claim to support open Internet seems to mean "open it for further corporate exploitation". Not good.

—Skip Roache, Oakland, CA

Net Neutrality is important because it allows for the free exchange of information and ideas -- something that is essential to the functioning of a free and democratic society, and something that facilitates advances in all manner of human endeavor, be it science, literature, art, etc.

—Phil Capone, ,

Freedom of speech is supposedly one of the defining characteristics of USA as a nation. Anything that interferes with freedom of communication is Unamerican.

—Wayne Choquette, ,

Because taking action against Net Neutrality defeats the very purpose of the current internet structure, where free speech and and equal access are what make it what it is.

—Andrew, ,

The internet is a wealth of information entertainment and our way of life now. It should be open without restrictions for everyone.

—Tony Hamilton, Seattle, WA

We already don't get as good internet service as many other countries. This will just make it so much worse!

—Stephanie Farkash, Aurora, CO

The internet has been my main source of news, knowledge and entertainment. I want everyone to have a free, open, unhindered internet, where no one has to worry if their favorite websites will be slowed down my this "fast-lane" profit maker.

—Debbie Dominguez, Malden, MA

This is the best free speech tool we have ever had. We need to keep neutrality out of corporate hands.

—Richard Karpinski, Oakland, CA

At every turn we are victimized by big money. This move is downright unAmerican!

—George Payerle, ,

I

—Bob Downs, San Tan Valley, AZ

I make a living using the internet. Small-time operations need to have a level playing field with big telecom, in order to prosper.

—Adam J Morton, ELDORADO, IL

You must make ISPs into common carriers.

—Jason Bettineski, Portland, OR

The Net should just be a passageway, where ones and zeroes freely flow, regardless of what they represent, where they come from, or where they are going. I buy bandwidth. It can't be "Cable TV 2.0" with "basic", "full tier" and "premium" packages. A 1 is a 1 and a 0 is a 0.

—Marco Niese, ,

Equality is essential for progress

—Jerone Brown, Chicago, IL

It maintains an open forum for public debate and criticism, essential to a healthy democracy.

—The Rev'd Kees Zwanenburg, ,

Seriously Guys and Gals, this plan your trying to implement along with TPP will destroy this wonderful tool we call the internet. Instead of finding innovative ways to make the net better your really selling it off to the highest bidders. I urge you to do whats right and dont let your decision be based on who pockets are deep.

—Andre Gary, Chesnee, SC

I am handicapped, home bound, and use the internet daily to have contact with the outside world of friends, family, and caused. Also I am a painter and am hoping to sell paintings and prints of my paintings on the internet sometime soon. Because I live on a modest, mostly fixed income, high prices for internet could stop me from using it entirely or limit my use severely. That is not right for me or for anyone else.

—Marlene merck, Greenville, SC

It is time that the people be served and not just a select few people who are filling your pockets and providing jobs once you are done with your so called service. You every commissioner owes your allegiance to all of the people. It is time to step up and keep the internet open to everybody.

—Robert Aguirre, Flint, MI slippery slope

—Tom Walsh, Burbank, CA

Frankly, it works well. We require unencumbered communications, period.

—Henry Armitage, ,

Net Neutrality enhances and protects democracy by assuring equal access by all. Equal access is critical to equal opportunity and economic justice.

—Allen Gibas, Minneapolis, MN

Net neutrality is the fundamental reason why internet works. Don't mess with it.

—Derek Geary, ,

poor disabled, net is primary communication

—R Kim, ,

Net Neutrality is important to keep the Internet open to innovation.

—Bruce Smith, ,

Net Neutrality=Real Democracy!!

—Christian Schroeder, ,

Because small players have equal rights as players with big money.

—Thomas Pryds, ,

Don't fix what isn't broken! The telecoms are making unprecedented profits from broadband internet fees! Why do we need to give them a new revenue stream? It's robbery. They should not be allowed to dictate the nature of the internet.

—Mr. Paul Bourque, Moncton, NB

Suppression of the Internet is a fascistic policy that destroys the free market.

—Steve Turnbull, ,

I just wrote a letter to the Chairman a few minutes ago.

—Sherrie Pizzo, Elmira, NY

The power of corporations over our lives and our freedoms must be reined-in!

—Jed Flechtner, Granville, OH

It's vital to preserve freedom and neutrality, and maintain the usefulness and speed of the Internet for everyone!

—gordon Thornett, ,

We deserve an open internet. Everyone should have the opportunity to grow, learn, and research. The internet should not be something that is only given to those who can afford it most.

—Matthew Menter, Baltimore, MD

There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers.

—BrendaLee Lennick, Tallahassee, FL

Keeping the internet open, unrestricted, uncensored, and free for all to use is important to me, because like the majority of US population, the internet has become an integral and very necessary part of my daily life. It is used for everything from paying bills, staying in touch with friends and family through email and social media, to staying informed of news, both local and global, to keeping up with events my kids school, as well as their grades, to checking the weather and staying informed and safe during severe weather events, to checking performance of performance of financial markets/investments, to job searches and applications, to making purchases for my home, movie, theater, and concert tickets, to homework help for the kids, to making healthcare appointments, business appointments, as well as providing the ability to work from home, to starting/maintaining a webbased business, to keeping Informed on any subject under the sun, to providing a source of entertainment, the Internet plays a vital and unnecessary role in me and my families lives. If I could not afford access to the internet or speeds slowed to such a degree as to render it usable, it would have a dramatic impact on my life and my children's lives and directly impact and drastically limit our ability apply for a job, earn a living, to stay in contact with family and friends, to stay informed of global and local events, effectively marginalizing us from society, and robbing us of the ability to sufficiently support ourselves economically. Keeping the internet open, free provides a level playing field for myself and my family to live productive, meaningful, and impactful lives. Classify the internet as the essential public utility that it is, and allow myself, my family, and future generations of Americans to thrive in as well as advance a growing, and relevant society.

—Kelly Wright, Frankfort, KY

Freedom, murica.

—Miles Aikens, Ann Arbor, MI

It is important because we all need full access to all websites across the globe. The U.S. invented the Internet. It is time for this nation to stand up and maintain the genus of the original plan and implementation.

—John Ardner, Gresham, OR

Net Neutrality contributes to equal access to information and knowledge which is one of the most essential pillars of healthy democracy.

—Juhana Harju, ,

For Freedom's Sake

—Brian Zwergel, New Kensington, PA

Don't mess with a good thing, FCC.

—Ted Bois, ,

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—C Laberge, ,

Net neutrality is the reason why the internet is so successful the way it is today. Without it, it would just be another platform where people say it just rots the brain. Net neutrality on the net is the uncensored collective human soul, the human soul should not be censored.

—David Jatzak, ,

The Internet should be free to all peoples in all nations.

—Brookle Hodson, ,

A level playing field is needed for innovation and to allow small Internet business' like mine to survive. Neither will be possible if the Internet principals the Internet were founded on are cast aside and true net neutrality is lost.

—Mr. Robert Candelmo, Vernon, NJ

The net has worked best by being neutral. It has spread throughout the globe because it is neutral.

—Mr. Simon Gibson, Hertford,

We the people are entitled to privacy and free speech. We won't tolerate this insanity. I promise.

—John Michael Osterhoudt, Sellersburg, IN

Don't limit the availability of our greatest information resource!

—Evan, Grass Valley, CA

Your actions will have repercussions for billions of people who aren't even in the US. It's imperative that you protect the internet from corporate interests.

—Greg Gaiger, ,

We need an open internet. Leave it alone.

—Richard L. Wosylus, Smithton, IL

The Internet is, quite simply, how people talk to each other today. Old-style telephones are no longer important the way they once were- it all happens through data traded online. Therefore, the Internet MUST be treated the way telephones once were- common carrier status is the only reasonable way to go.

—Brian Waak, Aurora, IL

The Internet is the most important tool for our day and age. I refuse to let anyone try and control something that should be provided FREE to every human being on this Earth.

—Bryan Palacio, Miami, FL

Liberal containment area

—Isaac Giroux, ,

We taxpayers paid for the creation of the Internet. It is OURS, not the telecoms'.

—Ron Marr, Albuquerque, NM

I've articulated on many occasions the importance of net-neutrality. But the attempted removal of this portion of our commons by the ruthless interests of corporations and the wealthy, is just one more of their concerted efforts to take away our collective voice. Our collective voice and efforts at securing solidarity and support, you see, threatens the corporate & wealthy interests to secure easy flows of capital & labor without having to answer to We The People. I hope that FCC Chair Wheeler will exert the courage in which he's abjectly unfamiliar; to listen to objective net-neutrality testimony and decide on preserving this precious aspect of Our Commons, so that We, in turn, may act together in preserving our larger commons of climate, land, sea, and air. Respectfully, Christopher Preston

—Christopher Preston, Centennial, CO

I use the Internet for esoteric research, so the wider and more open, the better. There is more to the Internet beside porn and funny cats.

—Melissa cooper, Cottage Grove, OR

For my bussiness and for political activism an open internet is mandatory.

—John Seibert, Columbus, OH

Keep it free how it was intended to be

—Wayne Blair, ,

The broadband providers are, in my opinion, a bunch of crooks to begin with. The FCC is in place to protect the citizens of this country... NOT the broadband providers. They NEED to be classified as common carriers.

—Frank Jarvie, Mayer, AZ

It doesn't take a genius or a rocket scientist to see the doors swing wide open for internet abuse if this change occurs. If we take away net neutrality, it will be another victory for big business and another defeat for the individual. When will people be considered ahead of big business?

—Elon Abrams, Paradise, CA

Provides hope and innovation for advancing society and education.

—William Branton, scituate, MA

I can't afford to pay extra prices to be able to see sites I want to see, that may not be coming from wealthy corporate interests.

—Celeste Leibowitz, Brooklyn, NY

Net Neutrality protects the innovators, the "little guys", and the newcomers. Without Net Neutrality, only established companies with deep pockets would ever be able to succeed online. This is not the kind of internet I want to be a part of.

—Pat Williams, Hopkins, MN

Net Neutrality is needed for an open, uncensored society.

—Chris Fox, ,

Maintain our freedom of communication.

—Rex Benning, Santa Clara, CA

The FCC is responsible for keeping the playing field LEVEL !!!! Net Neutrality is LEVEL - anything else tips the scales to "the bigger the badder" !!!!!

—Richard G Simon, Kansas City, MO

I don't want an internet of the "haves" and "have nots"

—Alberto Camargo García, ,

Net neutrality will help foster a competitive environment allowing for greater innovation.

—Marc Roy, ,

There is no other resource where you can find information with out corporate spin. To me it is the end of the internet. I will cancel my service and leave it to the spin doctors

—Marvin Schnell, ,

The Internet is critical to the future of our mutual countries and to our children's future. Don't hinder our ability to compete and succeed in the future by limiting options, increasing costs, or putting the needs of big business ahead of our families. Stand strong...make the right choice.

—Steve Lloyd, , freedom of speech and the right to gather online are essential to restore liberty

—Charles Winder, ,

Because it's one of the few private places I can ever go to anymore

—Matthew Shalovelov, ,

It is obvious why real net neutrality is important for everyone and that your stance and proposal is completely biased by lobbying money and special interest groups. Remember that you are there to serve citizens, not corporations. Because of the position of the U.S. in the world, the policies that you put in place have an effect on the whole world. You guys are your lobbying money are running it for everyone.

—Etienne Ringuet, ,

I don't want to be in the slow lane.

—, ,

the internet is an even playing field... keep it that way.

—Shawn Perolis, Akron, OH

It's the internet, leave it alone

—Virginia Stringer, Cherokee Village, AR

Net Neutrality is important because there are no realistic competitors in most markets, so consumers do not have any option if a broadband provider decides to block or slow down content that is unpopular or controversial. At it's heart, it is the same issue that the founders of this country protected with the First Amendment.

—Jeffrey Greenaway, Seattle, WA

It is patently obvious that the Internet has matured to become an actual utility, just as water, sewer and electric service have long ago. Moreover, in the twenty-first century and forward, this utility will continue to grow in importance, indeed as a necessity, to individuals, companies of all sizes and government -- in short, society as a whole. The U.S. already has one of the weakest systems of Internet connection -- and highest prices -- in the world. Making our domestic Internet a two-tiered (and, eventually, multi-tiered) system will once again benefit large corporations at the detriment to everyone else. It is morally wrong and must not be allowed, period. The Internet must be classified as a utility, which it most clearly and obviously is, and regulated as one IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST, a phrase the Commission should recognize -- and follow.

—AJ Averett, La Mesa, CA

As the internet is a public, social, interactive platform - and there by much different than other platforms like television, net neutrality is a matter of free speech. To pretend otherwise is a blatant obfuscation of our social reality.

—Malcolm Sutherland, ,

Because the experience should be the same for everybody!

—Ivica Krsteski, ,

We are the USA and not China. As the country keeps taking away our freedoms I am embarrassed to be a citizen of what was formerly the best country in the world.

—Andrew Leca, Johnston, RI

Because the most important content will suffer the most. Scientific data, small scale websites, small business, entrepreneurial persuits etc. all these which don't garner huge traffic will be pushed aside by unintelligible add ridden filler sites in an effort to boost profits. Why should these sites suffer because big telecom deems them less profitable.

—Matt Dube, ,

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Ronald Matthews, Marlborough, MA

I feel net neutrality is important because it enables us all to have equal ground. Without neutrality, the internet would become divided and segregated, and many people would lose the freedom that they can enjoy online.

—Daniel Reeder, Farmington, UT

It should be up to me--not my ISP--where I go online. As a Ph.D student and a college instructor who must access scholarly databases from both home and campus, this is of the utmost importance.

—Jessica Cresseveur, New Albany, IN

Because my livelihood depends on it!

—Lori Waltenbury, ,

As an American, I believe in equality of opportunity, access and experience, all of which are threatened by this greedy grab at Net Neutrality. Reclassify Internet Service Providers as common carriers -- which is what they are, nothing more nor less, and what they should have been all along.

—Russell L. McCollom III, Twin Lake, MI

Because of the free flow of information that mankind needs right now.

—Anders Austlid, ,

Neutrality is similar to freedom of speech and the press. This is just another one of Obama's road toward Socialism.

—Mary Hull, Weatherford, TX

It's just good sense, for individual consumers and for the economy at large, for today and for our future. As a government agency, you're supposed to work for the people, taxpayers like me, for our best interest. Do it.

—Nicole Barbeau, Arlington, VA

Shame on the FCC for even thinking about taking this freedom away from us, the disappearing middle class.

—MaryLou Benigno, Tucson, AZ

We need Net Neutrality so the internet can continue to be a tool to advance democracy.

—Craig Decker, Lewiston, ME

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Dro Green, Lowell, MA

Because I am deaf and email and FB is important to me.

—Michelle Trzecinski, Mukwonago, WI

The internet should be open to all people, at the same rate or speed!

—Louis Hopcraft, ,

it's the only thing remaining ov our so called "free country".

—James Hewitt Jr, Tucson, AZ

Net neutrality is the only sustainable way to make the internet accessible to the world.

—Hari, ,

equal access to the internet for all, forever. Anything less is unfair to all of us.

—Guy Parsons, ,

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Rang Ma, Putney, VT

Because I support small, independent websites.

—Jennifer Harper, ,

Net Neutrality ensures that nobody can take a monopoly over the internet simply by being a wealthier company/group which can pay for the costs of service to send data to providers. The internet is our library to the world, our international resource. It has helped shape policies, ensure fairness and equality for people around the world by sharing knowledge without censorship or stigmatization, and marginalize oppressive forces which have affected civilians and communities around the world from learning about the rest of the planet and what it means to be alive. To take away net neutrality would be the equivalent of making libraries the stockpiles of authors and companies willing to pay to put their books on the shelves, rather than allowing information to remain free and public for everyone to share. Please, do not let these pleas fall on deaf ears. Ensure you are making the right choice, and are working with (and listening carefully to) the people who care about how the internet works for everyone. Ultimately civilians around the world depend on you (the FCC) to get it right.

—Brook, ,

Killing Net Neutrality is the equivalent of allowing only the elite to have access to Johannes Gutenberg's printing press in the 15th century. Without open access to the printing press the Enlightenment is impossible and the Dark Ages never end. Without Net Neutrality the 21st century elite will sidetrack the new Enlightenment. Over and out.

—Richard F Faust, Minneapolis, MN

The last vestiges of democracy will wither and die without real Net Neutrality.

—Steven E. Sanderson, Hastings, MI

As an Autistic person, I rely on the Internet for all meaningful social interaction. Without the small support websites I use to befriend other Autistic people, my life would be next to meaningless. Please prioritise the needs of citizens over those of psychopathic corporations.

—Lewis Hailey, ,

I'm an 89 year old woman. Don't get out much, but I enjoy shopping, email and voting via the internet. I don't want to be in the slow lane. It's been years trying to speed the dang Internet up, now you want to slow it down for us and give the big Corps the fast lane. Why? Is it money ? Why do you want to do this? I assure you, the people you are hurting will somehow retaliate. Either through elections, or what ever other means we can? Do not do this to the American people!

—Terry Greene Harvey, Green Valley, AZ

We want our freedom back and we want it now !

—Gabriel Borsodi, ,

If we can't get the Internet onto an agreeable plan we are going to war.

—Daniel Morrissey, Petaluma, CA

The US often leads on telecoms policy, and I believe it is important that ISPs are treated fairly and classified correctly: they have historically carried all data equally, the Internet has grown up based on this principle, and its future would be threatened by abandoning it.

—Paul Chaplin, ,

I am disabled, housebound, poor. I rely on free Internet to communicate with doctors, family, friends, to shop for food and necessities.

—Marilyn Shapiro, Lansing, MI

There is absolutely no sane reason to favor corporations over the general public .

—Mrs L Leon Trumpp, Seedalia, MO

The internet is now our source for information as newspapers and other traditional sources decline. A key pillar of democracy is free speech. We need to make sure that there is still freedom on the internet -not that it becomes fully commercialized or dissenting voices squashed.

—Sue Maxwell, ,

I don't want a corporation, who's only interest is profit, to decide what websites I will see.

—Patrick Divine, Hopkins, MN

Keeping all speeds consistent and similar, regardless of who pays more, is the key to keeping the Internet open and free.

—Robert Krikourian, El Dorado Hills, CA

Any outfit like PBS and its stations would be left without usable program streaming. Would replays of news programs continue to be available on-line? I use them extensively when I am traveling.

—Robert Robbins, Saint Paul, MN

Abandoning the neutrality under which the internet currently operates is foolish. This would give large companies total power to muscle out small start-ups, and existing competitors. The world relies on free market competition, not monopolies.

—Elia Tarasoff, ,

Democracy and Neutrality, Freedom of speech a necessity as it is the base of all.

—Luca, ,

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Matt Edwards, Marlborough, MA

Internet is a fundamental need

—Jean-Francois Renaud, ,

The Internet is perfect the way it is. It does not need to be changed.

—Michael Hart, Torrance, CA

I want choice when choosing my internet sites. I don't want bigger sites to have the opportunity to have more access and better services simply because they can pay for the ISP for faster speeds. Providers like Comcast and Tim eWarner already have too much power and control of the market. And because of that customers like myself suffer. I do not want them to have more control over the internet. Please reclassify Broadband providers as common carriers.

—Thomas Lopez, Kalamazoo, MI

As an Independent Contract Designer, working from home, I could not support myself and my family without access to a free and fair Internet. My career sustainability depends upon it.

—Debra Cosentino, North Fort Myers, FL

It is the only way the net can thrive and remain able to support the economy that exists and is continually growing...keep it neutral please!

—Chris parsons, ,

It is the one thing that fosters a true Democracy. Think about what the Internet has done in developing countries, and how it is the best hope we have to create lasting democracies in the Middle East.

—Lenny Segel, Farmington, MI

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Mzd Brown, Marlborough, MA

In a world where profit is everything and everything is profit, damn you who desires information as anything but free.

—Tina Smith, Saint Peters, MO

I can only imagine what garbage big business will force on us if we allow them control of the internet. Why not just let them have the Post Office and the FCC while your at it?

—Kevin Gettmann, Cathedral City, CA

The internet was developed with public money. Only the public, not corporations, should benefit from its use.

—Doug Jacques, Ottawa,

No corporation should own the internet.

—Marvin Schrock, Asheville, NC

The internet is the only place where regardless of class, height, skin color, and wallet size, you have a equal voice. Please hierarchize the last truly democratic forum.

—Jan Petrykowski, ,

I can barely afford internet access where I live as it is, allowing them a license to extort from those who cannot afford higher fees for usage is unfair

—Brad Baker, Greeley, CO

We already have very slow internet compared to many other countries in the world. Creating an even slower, less fair system is pushing us futher into this strange oligarchy that corporate america has created, we don't want to live in the movie 'Brazil'. Stop the greed now please.

—, Seattle, WA

All should have equal access to the internet, regardless of ability to pay. Premium access is not equitable!

—Erika Bartha, ,

Re-classifying broadband is the only way to guarantee Net Neutrality. Why haven't you, Chairman Wheeler, already done that? What is your reason for not doing that? Your reluctance to take action makes me think that you have a special relationship with service providers! Say it isn't so Chairman Wheeler!

—Joseph Spiezio, Clearlake, CA

Net neutrality is the only way to let the market grow. Big telecoms will do only what is right for THEM - not the users.

—Peter Jewett, Boerne, TX

In this country, we deserve access to a free internet. Only those who oppose that are the enemies of the future. You will not be able to prevent what is coming, if you oppose what is inevitable.

—Kate McShane, Wayne, PA

I want a free and safe internet.

—Carlos, ,

please don't the Internet be divided up into have and have nots. a bit is a bit is a bit. all traffic should be equal. isps are providers for a service. not gate keepers.

—Colin Watson, ,

Net Neutrality is the right thing to do. Corporations have enough of our money. It's time to stand up for regular consumers, particularly in this time of deep recession.

—Kathie Wilson, Warrenton, VA

Keeping the net neutral is absolutely vital to its continued existence. We cannot keep the internet we all know and love going without it. Any censorship will plunge us into a dark age, similar to countries like how the Chinese government has handled searches for "Tiananmen square." I should not know more about this nation's history than its own people are allowed to.

—Sarah Ashley, Altadena, CA

Do not destroy the internet as we know it!! Keep the internet NEUTRAL!!!

—Catherine Lanzl, Encinitas, CA

There are too many anticompetitive fiefdoms already with Internet providers. Lets level the playing field and give all American consumers a real choice in Internet services they pay for by formalizing Net Neutrality and giving access to all.

—Raleigh Stout, Greensboro, NC

We need to keep the internet from becoming monopolized. It is crucial that it remain free from corporate censorship. Furthermore, we cannot have the internet under corporate control in the US and free from corporate control globally.

—Marian Samuelson, Reno, NV

Probably one of the biggest mistakes the FCC has made was relaxing the limits on ownership of over-the-air broadcast stations. Now the public is threatened by the rapid consolidation of broadband cable and cellular communication corporations, including even control of the NBC networks. The FCC does not have responsibility for enforcing antitrust laws themselves, but can stand on the right side by classifying broadband providers as common carriers.

—David B. Chandler, Newark, DE

Net neutrality must be preserved because it is the only reason the internet can work as it is intended. To allow even the chance of anything but pure neutrality would mean the stifling of innovation, the hindrance of free speech, and a monopolization of information. We as a country need net neutrality so everyone has a seat at the table, not just the privileged few that can afford to pay extortionate fees to reach an audience.

—Mr. Robert Leeper, Plano, TX

I want freedom of speech in a democracy, not a plutocracy!

—Carol Bradstreet, Broadlands, IL

Dear FCC, I've seen the age before the Internet existed and have lived through the years and watched it grow. I was first intrigued by it as a 7-8 year old kid when my mom first brought home a thinkpad laptop. It was bare but interesting. I knew then I wanted to build a website one day. It wasn't until I was 13 or 14 when I had my chance. I used the Internet to learn HTML and built my first website using free education available from small websites whose authors were offering to share their knowledge. I am now 27, and a full time web developer. I have built many small company websites and a couple web applications. I know PHP, ajax, Java, C and many more. But I always look back to that time when I learned HTML by myself as the driving force behind it all. Although some of these were taught in school. I am constantly learning new things and techniques from the Web to make myself a better developer everyday. It's an ever changing industry where I must constantly keep up with the trends. Those small blogs that may be slowed down due to this proposed legislation may not be viewed suppressing the creative ways we solve ideas for programming. Or that one kid may not be able to afford a subscription to a Web course because they have high priority traffic over free ones. The Internet is a place to start learning and sharing information, not for providers to control what I can see and what I can't. Thanks, Renee

—Renee Au, ,

Without net neutrality, large corporations will control access to content. This is against everything freedom is about

—Robert Thompson, Blacksburg, VA

We have a fascist in power in our government that has put greed and corporations ahead of democracy, we don't need it on the internet too !!!

—Jesse Aaron Colvin, ,

I pay enough for the speed I want and I know others do the same. It would be ridiculous for only multinationals to have the right to speed, when others clearly can't afford to compete. We always hear about how great competition is, and yet our government promotes giant corporations not only over people, but other small businesses. The Internet should not be throttled. There is much more fiber that is dark and not being used... probably paid for by the citizens. This is nothing more than control and money. Infrastructure of the US is now build upon the Internet. You don't regulate the cost of fuels, even though that is infrastructure, but you should. You need to keep this Internet as common carrier and if they want to leave because of this, which they won't, then so be it. Others will stand up and take their place as providers.

—Dave Jecker, Frisco, TX

The US remains the leading nation amongst nations. It was founded on ensuring basic rights and freedoms. In the 21st century, discriminating against citizens in favour of faster access for corporations or those that pay will be a retrograde step for rights, small businesses and democracy in general. Please support net neutrality.

—Morgan Jenkinson, , freedom of the press

—Beth Boston, Decatur, GA

I want my news first, on the net, not third hand & stale on TV.

—Jean Cameron, College Station, TX

In these days when media consolidation is controlling what we read, see and hear, the Internet is a bastion of open and free access -- a library of the air. I rely on the internet for many things -- like information about treatments for health conditions and connecting with others who share my interests. The commercial-dominated media can never reveal things which go against their corporate bottom line. That's why we need the Internet to remain free and open. We need the Internet to remain free and open. BTW, I pay over $160/month for Comcast. That's $1,820/year. In five years, that will be $9,100. Paying for Comcast services will soon become out of reach for me.

—Wendy Tanowitz, Olympia, WA

The internet is the most important form of human communication since the development of written language. Please ensure that it is as open and available as possible to everyone!

—Tadd A Morgan, Seattle, WA

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking and slowing down some content and promoting other. Failing to make broadband providers common carriers will undermine innovation, creativity, and communication.

—David Faust, St. Paul, MN

Don't Destroy the Internet

—Plumo Paranto, ,

The internet should be about equality, education and innovation. Placing any sort of limit on the accessibility of websites and internet services is placing a limit on the future of the world. Hiding content behind pay walls and premium access fees only serves to hinder us as a whole.

—Teresa Blake, ,

We have too much corporate control of the rest of the media. Keep the Internet available for everyone.

—Kathryn Horvat, Salt Lake City, UT

No Country has the right to dictate to the world how it express itself.

—Chris Fraser, ,

Lack of Net Neutrality can sink the economy. That would be really detrimental. Will the FCC be a hero or bear the guilt of criminal behavior?

—David Atwood, CHicago, IL

Fairness and equity are essential if the United States is to thrive and continue to be the super power that it is today. The gap between rich and poor is growing, and ending Net Neutrality would only serve to exacerbate this trend. We must remain a meritocracy if we are to thrive. Please SAVE Net Neutrality!

—Michelle Steger, Longmeadow, MA

It's pretty obvious why.

—David Zaccagnino, Diamond Bar, CA

Look at the overpriced disaster you made of Comcast and cable tv !!

—dg vanArsdale, Burlingame, CA

It's a common interest thing. If everyone has access to this powerful resource equally EVERYONE benefits, both in the long term and the short term.

—Mr. Christopher F. Kennard, Dover, DE

It is how I can keep in touch with family & friends. Also do some shopping on line.

—Joan Parker, Colfax, NC

Free access to information that will enrich my life, educated me, help me discover new ideas and make me a better person, is very important to me. Keep Net Neutrality

—Patricia A. Haumann, Oberlin, OH

Information should be free and available to the people.

—Colin Spencely, ,

The people are being battered and beaten down on all sides. Costs & charges keep increasing while service diminishes. Corporations are taking over. This must stop. It is unsustainable.

—LK Woodruff, Rosemount, MN

Net Neutrality is crucial to my teaching in a high school social studies classroom!!

—Katie Hauer, Mason, OH

Net Neutrality is so important! Please don't let it be deformed and twisted by these huge companies with their greed for profits and their eyes only on the bottom line. The Internet is slowly becoming the one place where everyone is equal, anyone can start up a website with the hope of it becoming successful. Please don't let these money grubbing corporations take that hope away by charging ridiculous fees for everyone. Protect the Internet for the people you are supposed to, it's users, NOT the companies. Thank you for reading this.

—Danielle Walters, Glendale Heights, IL

Economic and political power are accruing into fewer and fewer hands. I view this trend as being disastrous for our democracy. Abandoning Net Neutrality would greatly exacerbate the problem and accelerate our backward slide toward feudalism. Reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers"!

—Tom Cushing, Cashmere, WA

They know damn well why it's important to me, and us, and all of humanity. They are ruining mankind's greatest invention. Humanity can't strive forward with these ridiculous money-grubbing limitations. THINK, before trying to rob our every penny, for fricking sake!

—Jo Lemmens, ,

Big money should never trump common sense policy.

—Geoff Armstrong, Las Vegas, NV

I will never have the money to get out of the slow connections that will develop if you allow this to proceed. As a net "surfer" or as a website owner

—Richard Johnston, Turlock, CA

Net Neutrality should be for everyone no matter how much money they have or who they are. Everyone from private citizen to major companies should have the same access and speed. There should be no favoritism due to anyone on the net. It should be across the board connection for all users.

—Samuel Croft, Washington, DC

Free and public expression

—Trueman MacHenry, ,

We need liberty not censorship. As an artists its important to expresa un freedom.

—Alan morales, ,

I am retired and have limited income.

—Joy, Grafton, WV

Everyone benefits

—Magnus Mulliner, Manchester, CT

WE ALL DEPEND UPON A FAST INTERNET TO GET THE INFORMATION WE NEED AND TO CONNECT TO OTHER PERSONS. OUR INTERNET ALLOWS VASTLY MORE CONNECTED CITIZENS OF THE WORLD AND GREATER AWARENESS OF WORLD ISSUES. NONE OF THIS WAS SO PROFOUNDLY ENHANCED BEFORE OUR INTERNET WAS DEVELOPED. PLEASE REMAIN STALWART IN ACKNOWLEDGING THE VITAL IMPORTANCE OF A FREE AND OPEN INTERNET FOR ALL CITIZENS OF THE WORLD - NOT FOR A MERE FEW. DEMOCRACY IS BEING THWARTED FROM ALL ANGLES, BY DARK SELF-SERVING FORCES. OUR CONSTITUTION IS EVEN BEING NEGATED BY SHADY PERSONS WHO DON'T WANT DEMOCRACY. ENDING EQUAL ACCESS TO OUR MOST NECESSARY INTERNET WILL ONLY AID AND ABET THE DISMANTLING OF OUR DEMOCRACY. TOM WHEELER'S POSITION, ALLOWING FASTER INTERNET FOR CORPORATIONS, IS A HUGE MINORITY WHEN YOU CONSIDER THE INTERESTS OF BILLIONS OF PEOPLE ON OUR PLANET WHO DISAGREE.

—Sarah Reid, Ithaca, NY

it is an imperative

—Darlene Young, Kailua, HI

The internet is every ones verbal highway - why would we wish to slow it down for our individuals to give big companies a fast track to take advantage of "we the people"? Please do not do that.

—Ken Wilkins, Black River Falls, WI

Free access for all
—Lisa Caryl, Colo, IA

We pay enough for internet now, don't restrict it anymore!
—Gary Mullenhoff, Hull, MA

The internet is a common carrier. Make it official.
—Allen Royer, San Jose, CA

I see it as taking part of my freedom away and forcing me to pay extra money to have something iv already had all my life. Fast Internet speeds that is.
—Victor Skårerverket, ,

Being retired and an invalid, the net is my "window on the world"; please leave it be.
—Robert Greene, Orlando, FL

The Internet should be regulated as the utility, that it is. "Everyone" has to use it.
—, Sacramento, CA

Fairness.
—Miyako Sawada, Oroville, WA

Everyone in Canada deserves the same access to the internet.
—Michael Mader, ,

Freedom of information in reasonable time is a necessity to our society as we know it today!! It benefits people around the world.
—Kevin Bissonnette, San Clemente, CA

We run a business entirely on the Internet; it is our only source of income and we pay taxes on that income. Giving the Internet which our tax dollars paid to develop and which rightly belongs to all of us to a few private companies to plunder as their own is illogical, immoral, unfair and undemocratic. The Internet is part of the public commons, not yours to give away.
—Marlena Machol, Glendale, AZ

It's fundamental. Back in the days of letters, to which many of us will be returning if you get your way, neutrality was called privacy and dignity. If post offices had tried to open letters, their executives would have been imprisoned or killed by the public, and that is what you businessmen will have to dwell on.
—Peter Wix, ,

Reliable and affordable access to the Internet is critical to the future of our countries and our youth. Protect the right to access information without impedance.
—Cameron Wright, ,

I believe in freedom. Freedom of speech, freedom of information, and freedom to entrepreneurship. The Internet is the greatest tool of freedom that the world has soon since the printing press, and I truly believe that limiting this tool in any way is socially, morally, and criminally wrong. I hope the FCC has the courage to do the right thing by giving common carrier status to ISPs so this incredible tool of freedom can continue to fuel progress and prosperity around the globe.
—Dennis Scheffer, Livermore, CA

I am a small business that already works under a disadvantage to larger corporations but I do represent the backbone of world employment which is small business. Please do not make small business obsolete. This is in nobody but the very few's best interest.

—Vicki Pearson, , we are all born equal.

—Martin Holland, ,

The Internet is the most powerful tool we have to stay connected and share information with one another. Without Net Neutrality our ability to do both of those things will be in peril.

—Brainard Frazier, National City, CA

Because it will affect the job market in my industry and affect my personal life as well. It is the only place left with an equal playing field and that needs to stay as it is.

—Tracy Trathen, Beaverton, OR

I think net neutrality is the best.

—Pelham Cort, ,

Net Neutrality is essential to democratic process. Corporate control over access and speed would undermine democracy and allow for nefarious use of that power.

—Greg Billingsley, Jacksonville, OR

Net neutrality is important because it is the best way to ensure equal access to what is becoming the major source of information, and information is vital to a free society.

—Virginia Cameron, Hatboro, PA

We don't throttle schools or universities for the content they provide, why throttle the internet?

—Chris Stymiest, ,

net neutrality is more democratic

—Carole Ferrier, ,

The web was evolved with taxpayer dollars -- not industry investment. As a taxpayer, I insist on access purchased by my investment. Also, it is the greatest tool of democracy the world has known. Protect democracy!

—Buddy D. Ratner, Seattle, WA

I'll repeat. "If you give them an inch they will take a mile".

—Jim Huffman, Salem, OR

Net neutrality is absolutely important because the internet is truly a public utility and should thereby be regulated as one. Fastlanes will either cripple or outright destroy small businesses and nonprofits that cannot afford those fastlanes. Please keep the internet open and free for all people in perpetuity.

—Thomas Scarpinato, Portland, OR

Net neutrality allows more innovation and choice in what will be available.

—Dean Roess, Santa Ana, CA

Just tired of corporate interests being put in front of what's good for the American people by lousy puppet politicians. Elected official = liar and crook. - disgusting and sad. :(
—Ryan Robinson, Kalama, WA

Everyone should have the same internet speed. There should not be two classes of people using the internet.
—Patricia Cibula, ,

Maintain net neutrality!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
—Jim Fering, Eau Claire, WI

All learning in this day and age takes place with the use of the internet. Everyone should be able to have the access needed to enable this learning.
—Samuel A. Midcap, Garden City, ID

There is only one internet - like the gas company in a city it is a monopoly like the gas company and needs to be declared a utility and regulated, not sold to the highest bidder. Reject the greedy telecoms outright. There should never have even been a question about this
—John Harris, Lansing, MI

Affordable high speed access for everyone.
—Michael Henze, ,

It is important that citizens have access to information to be able to research and communicate. This is a fundamental right in this country, and was awarded to us by the founding fathers to ensure that we remain free and have access to information.
—Amy St Lawrence, Scottsdale, AZ

What kind of world do YOU want to live in? Your decisions have consequences, and we all have to live with them.
—Chris Uzdavinis, Chicago, IL

It enables start up businesses the anility to become viable. Without it Google, linked In or Facebook would not have been possible.
—Richard Dutra, Cupertino, CA

STOP DESTROYING MY INTERNET EQUALITY
—Jason Toabe, NAPLES, FL

Real democracy depends on the free flow of information and knowledge, not just what the plutocrats and oligarchs want us to know. Its our internet, not theirs to own or use as a weapon to destroy freedom for profit. This is a hostile takeover and you must not let it happen. Or one day, you will wake up to the horror of what you have done to the world for money's sake. Don't do it. Be a real human being, acting on behalf of real people. Larry McFall
—Larry McFall, Santa Cruz, CA

I don't want carriers to impact the success of burgeoning websites/businesses/etc. by limiting access speeds.
—McLennon Wilson, ,

Internet is one of the last places where human expression can be told. If you destroy this, you destroy what our very own race is. Do not put thoses law projects on the table.
—Gabriel Girouard, ,

Net Neutrality is the best thing for the success of all business on the Web. Businesses that currently oppose Net Neutrality are attempting to legislate themselves an unfair advantage. While this is typical in an undemocratic society like China, it is completely inappropriate in a democratic capitalist society like ours.

—David Taubner, ,

There is too much government regulation as it is; they need to stay out of the Internet. It works fine just the way it is. We don't want to end up with a controlled Internet like North Korea or China! We have the right to unlimited free information! Stay out of the Internet; leave it alone. If it isn't broken, don't try to fix it; you'll only make it worse!

—Amy Haaland, Michigan City, IN

I find it increasingly important to have access to the internet to do ordinary activities, such as shopping, getting directions, communicating with friends and colleagues, conducting research and doing business as a doctor, and countless other activities. For the above reasons and more, I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II.

—Lara Wright MD, Albany, CA

Big business getting into the internet does not support freedom.

—Scott Mack, Indiana, PA

So much media news available today is partisan and biased. The internet is one of the few public sources where a wide variety of information can be gathered in one's home. Real net neutrality is an essential service for access to vital information.

—, ,

Basic Human Freedom

—John Arvidson, Des Plaines, IL

The internet has become such an integral part of so many lives, not only here in the US, but around the world. It is used more as a basic utility than a true luxury for many and it needs to be regulated as such. We need to protect Net Neutrality, not only for the sake of internet users in our country, but also to keep from setting a dangerous precedent. Please hear out the experts asking for reclassification as a common carriage and truly listen to their opinions.

—Elisha Hamilton, Lynnwood, WA

Instituting slow lanes on the Internet will essentially destroy the last 20+ years of work the global community has put into making the Internet great.

—J, Woodinville, WA

At 66 years old, I would not appreciate one more common advantage being taken away by major corporations because they can afford to buy whatever they choose. Please choose the people over corporations. Thank you.

—Patricia Kivlen Duckrey, Marlton, NJ

The network provides virtually independent and free communication to all citizens of the US and world. Any constructs that hinder that aspect will limit prospects for survival of civilization.

—David Hawley, Lake Oswego, OR

Net neutrality is important to me so that everyone can freely enjoy the benefits of reasonable priced internet for reasons of their own choosing. Be it to learn, play, express themselves or to connect with their friend's family and other like minded individuals.

—Andrew McClure, Troy, MO

My income should NOT determine my level of access to information!

—Tiffany Jenkins, Rockmart, GA

I think that net neutrality is important because I already get spied on by these companies and now they want to slow down "rival" companies to get money. What a joke. The internet is one of the only free places with total liberty and they want to take this away from us. Who cares if they lost some money due to certain sites they make billions every year while a scramble for every last penny to use this amazing beauty that is the currently free internet.

—Maceo Joseph, ,

Marketing segmentation by provided rate is not justified by resource utilization

—George Gavaras, West Long Branch, NJ

Please don't let the most powerful tool for free speech and innovation ever designed by mankind to be compromised by corporations out for profit and control! That would be the opposite of what the people of the USA want, and a violation of the duties of the office of the FCC. Common Carrier classification NOW!

—Tobias Carrier, Bend, OR

I use the Internet daily for personal and business needs. It needs to remain open and fast.

—Heather Gilson, Wilmington, DE

I want access to ALL opportunities and information equally and fairly.

—Billie McFadden, Las Vegas, NV

The concept of "...by the people, for the people..." should apply to all policy governance. After all this is the principle of why this country was founded.

—, Arlington Heights, IL

I have. Repeatedly. We paid to develop the net. We pay to receive it. No private interest should have direct control over how the net operates, or who is allowed to use it for what. If private corporations wish to profit from adding value to a public resource— And the net is a public resource crucial not only to commerce but to the conduct of civil discourse— Then it needs to be treated as the privilege it is.

—Mr. Murray Jankus, Morrisville, PA

Individuals shouldn't be taken advantage of by large corporations! Fair is fair.

—, Elk City, OK

I'm homebound and the Internet is my primary link to the world.

—JM Lavassaur, Norristown, PA

The internet likely is a more significant mode of communication than the traditional airwaves. And its prominence will only grow. We need it to remain unfettered by the whims of politics and big business to assure a free flow of information to the masses.

—Terry Whitaker, Gilbert, AZ

Well, I do not need the internet I teach at a college that allows me full access, so my attitude to Hell with Corporate idiots

—Professor Emeritus Peter Bagnolo, Wheaton, IL

I use the internet every day for my work; I do not use it to watch movies. My company is a cleantech startup that cannot afford to pay more for decent service. Which the big cable providers are deliberately not giving us so as to create a "crisis" that they can exploit to exploit the rest of us! For God's sake classify the internet as the common carrier that it OBVIOUSLY is!

—Timothy F. Havel, Boston, MA

I'm a little guy. I believe that what I have to say is important, even if I don't have the money to prioritize my information. This is the spirit upon which the internet has grown into such an integral part of our everyday lives.

—Eric Lambart, Portland, OR

Catering to corporate interests so that they make more and more money makes the United States more of an oligarchy than a democracy.

—Ms. Maureen A. Griswold, San Jose, CA

Because it helps the little people.

—Dick Gray, Montrose, CO

Net Neutrality is key to ensure that the Internet as a whole, with it's associated cultural, economical and social implications, will strive and develop further with ordinary users in mind. It is key to restrain companies and industrial lobby forces from exerting too much unwelcome force on the rights of individual actors using the Internet. Net Neutrality might carries a bad side as well as a good side, but it is essential for the growth of the Internet as we know it today. Thus, it should be protected from harmful regulation which is only in the interest of large, monopoly-holding, wealthy telecom or media companies.

—László DARÓCZI, ,

No company should be able to decide what information I can get and how quickly I can access it. This is freedom of information.

—Megan Mooha, Chicago, IL

The Internet must be a level playing field for free expression, economic opportunity, and innovation.

—Douglass Reeves, New York City, NY

The internet was originally a publicly funded project. We built it. We contract with private companies to maintain the connections, but servers and content are private. Originally, transmission was over phone lines... Would the FCC allow them to favor one phone call over another? We the consumers pay the telecom companies to deliver content. It's not for them to decide if they feel like doing the job they're paid to do.

—James Watriss, Arlington, MA

I wold like the internet to remain free and open to everyone without any Big Brother / Government interference.

—John Brink, , this is important to me so we can ALL have access to everything on the internet!!!!

—Jan Combs, Fort Lauderdale, FL

It's how the internet was designed, open for all on a level playing field.

—Gary R Keim, Lansdowne, PA keeps the playing field level--as it should. more and more freedoms are being removed from ordinary people and this is just one more attempt by the hierarchy to control the masses.

—Diana Skill, Kansas City, MO

Free and open Internet is the modern day freedom of the press. Protect this important function in our society.

—William Brock, La Mesa, CA

It is just good old common sense, isn't it ?

—Jacqueline Lavanchy, ,

Equal access for everybody!

—Dallas Windham, Dallas, TX

Stop trying to "fix" what wasn't broken, to the detriment of users and financial boon of Comcast. Also, fire Tom Wheeler and get someone in there who actually cares about the consumer more than ISP monopolies.

—J Duncan, San Francisco, CA

The internet is a public utility--to treat it as another but that will destroy it, modern life, and American innovation.

—Renee Deljon, Scottsdale, AZ

It's the basis of the free and open internet. Please protect a true level playing fields for all actors.

—John Lafleur, ,

As a deeply engaged citizen, I find an open, free and equal internet a great boon to American democracy.

—Michael Mc Carthy, Poughkeepsie, NY

The Internet is today what it is because of the software that was freely given to the people. The Internet is the people, not some cheap ass hardware that some damn company decided to use for a profit. To fucking bad they aren't getting their investment back. To bad, so sad. To take the Internet away from the people and shove them down to using slow lanes will simply cause them to circumvent it and rebuild another network, one that belongs to them and that you can't touch. The people will not be fucked with by corporate greed, they will simply stop using the fast lanes. Just because you invest some hardware into the system does not give you the right to take the fast lanes away, turning them into the slow lanes. You will go down in history as the assholes who ruined the Internet for the people, or you will go down in history as the ones who saved the Internet from big bucks and business,, leaving it open for all who use it as a neutral net. The choice is yours. A revolt world wide from the people or the thanks of people around the world. The decision is yours. Asshole or hero. You choose your destiny, so will the people.

—Al Eisentrager, Annandale, MN

As a daily user and a senior citizen on fixed income, I cannot afford changes to cost, access, speed or confusing features.

—Felicia Bruce, Fort Pierce, FL

The internet should remain open to everyone- not owned by corporations! Access to information should remain open to all.

—Jim Vogt, Saylorsburg, PA

I am having problems finding money being retired. We pay more for services in Canada than many other nations. I think better service at less cost is only fair

—Ed Cave, ,

The Internet is the ultimate venue of free speech and should never be corporatized.

—Maureen Peterson, Saint Petersburg, FL

We're in a golden age of information, technology, and growth. Do not let the people at the top cripple that growth. Humanity deserves to advance; do not let large companies use their money to compensate for the fact they cannot advance quickly enough to survive by hindering start ups who would build our next future.

—Douglas McNeill, Allentown, PA

We have too much corporate takeover of America. We do NOT want the Internet taken over. It needs to be reclassified as a common carrier. There is NO reason for you not to do it.
—Merry Foxworth, The Woodlands, TX

I use the internet everyday in order to stay informed on critical issues in our democracy. Slowing down my access to information is very important to me.
—Bonita De Trinis, Lyndhurst, VA

Start-ups will have difficulty competing with entrenched rich corporations. The consumer will suffer as they will have less access to information from smaller companies.
—Ms. Lenore Suttle, Sarasota, FL

Open and free communication is that hallmark of an open and free society. Restricting it is the hallmark of a fascist society. Seems pretty straight forward.
—William Foley, ,

You are there to represent the people of the United States. Do your job and keep the internet open and free, the way it was intended to be.
—Tom, Springfield, VA

Wheeler keeps saying he's all for the "Open" Internet. Of course, that's easy to say -- if the Internet were not "open", then nobody could use it. It's just an easy catch phrase that sounds good, but is meaningless when the real issues are considered. As a teacher I know how valuable an Internet with EQUAL access and performance is for ALL users - this is the goal we want to maintain. NO "Lanes" of any kind - NO selective, high-priced "fast lanes" and NO "left-over" slow lanes for the rest of us who are not part of "Big Money". The public, especially the Internet-using public, is NOT stupid. We know the positive origins of the Internet - that it was GIVEN equally to all users as the magnificent resource it is to provide information, collaboration, grass-roots organizing, immediate news access, and creative/interactive initiatives to educational programs. Not just to those with Big Money and Corporate contacts, but to the whole world to connect and innovate to solve our problems. Do not mess with the Internet -- just leave it alone (!) as it is, with ONE WIDE LANE of equal access and performance to all!!
—Kate MacDonald, Cambridge, MA

Freedom of expression, must not be truncated based solely on the security of the few, when it was the many who have created the community within it. To carve that away is like removing one of the senses from a person. Which one did you want to live without?
—James Gauthier, ,

We should all be equal on the internet—and elsewhere!
—Diane Spear, New York, NY

Corporations should not be allowed to determine which information need be most accessible online. It is not up to them to determine which content is vital and which is not either. All users should be guaranteed neutrality, period.
—Joshua Sirt, Chicago, IL

The net needs to be free like public roads.
—Ray Cole, Fort Collins, CO

Because I don't want corporations deciding what I can and cannot access.
—Virginia Grant, ,

I want the innovation found on the internet to continue. Much of these new applications were only possible because of a level playing field. Keep Net Neutrality by making it a utility or the same speed and price for everyone. Information Technology is the only product we still make and excel at in America, don't let the European Union beat us by their comparatively better internet.

—Sara Garcia, Garland, TX

Keep things simple, open and distributed. Nature will make its way

—Peter Green, La Jolla, CA

It is what makes the internet the internet. Take it away and you will stop the growth of smaller groups that may come along in a favor of the big guys that can pay for the fast lane.

—Jonathan, ,

Our constitution guarantees us a free press. The internet is the only news source left where all sides can be presented, and access to information is not in the hands of corporations. I don't agree with everything I read on the Internet, but don't take away my right to have equal access to all avenues of information. We are losing our democratic rights at an alarming rate. Please don't take this away from us also. Thank you. Harriet Rzetelny

—Harriet Rzetelny, Dennis, MA

As an 80-year-old retired veteran, on limited income, I need the open Internet to maintain contact with family and the world, and don't want to deal with added expense or worse service.

—James J. Boone Jr., Malden, MA

The internet was not created and subsequently commercialised for the sole benefit of the big corporates who have carved themselves some large niches. I have no problem with them making a fair profit from their activities, but it is NOT fair to give these corporates a legal way in which to artificially increase their profits at the expense of other users. ISPs ARE common carriers and to legislate otherwise will do a great disservice to the internet and all of its other users.

—Nigel Hamlin, ,

Because as of now the net is the peoples voice and communication do not turn it over to Corporate entities which will surely happen if you change the net.

—Jerry Beardsworth, Albuquerque, NM

We want a real open Internet, not one with fast lanes for big business and the rich and slow ones for everyone else.

—V Naegle, Martinsburg, WV

Net neutrality is equal to freedom in the Information Age.

—Charles Morris, Shepherdstown, WV

Monopolies should not be allowed to exist to begin with let alone have control over the modern day tools for free speech and information.

—Randy Grafton, Vancouver, WA

This decision doesn't just affect the USA - people around the world are concerned about their local providers following the same pattern, and it's up to the FCC to take the lead and show that common sense can prevail. Please make the right decision, and follow these recommendations, for the sake of democracy and free speech everywhere. Thank you!

—Mike Torr, ,

I don't want the carriers being able to control what I can access

—Les Arms, El Paso, TX

Net Neutrality is one of the core principles of the Internet, which made it into what it is today. It must be preserved at all cost.

—Daniel Flores Tafur, ,

Having net neutrality will not allow abuse by the big companies to ask content providers to pay just to have their content delivered to consumers faster. With net neutrality, smaller companies have a chance to compete against the big corporations. Net neutrality is fair, and it encourages competition. By destroying net neutrality, it will only harm the consumer in the end, for we would have to pay higher costs for our internet content.

—, Pearl City, HI

It's a question of fairness in the marketplace. It's all just electrons. Why discriminate between them, except to give advantage to some users at the expense of others?

—Don Schwartz, , being neutral on the internet is not yours you do not own nor can you it is intellectual property belonging to the people who worked to build it and make it what it is today!!! you can't just come along and start dictating who should have what where and when, let these big businesses build their own system put in the hours work at it then you can do what you like with it but hands off ours "the people's" work alone

—Michael Wilkins, ,

One of the basic tenets of our country is freedom of speech, and I fear that we will lose our access to express our opinions and share them with others just because one person may disagree. I also feel that the internet is an important source of information for many people. As a person who worked as a teacher, I see the role technology plays for many students - it would have been extremely helpful for me, had it been more advanced when I was writing my thesis to graduate college. I used the internet extensively when I was in graduate school to earn my MBA. And I can definitely say that I would not have been able to afford to pay extra fees to be able to access the wealth of information I needed for these projects. With children being tasked to learn to use technology as early as 2nd or 3rd grade, it is important to keep the internet as easy to access as a public library.

—Heather, Fountain Valley, CA

Companies can't be trusted to not abuse this, it's really as simple as that.

—Mark Greig, ,

as a 71 y.o. disabled, the free access to good internet is vital.

—Leslie Thompson F.I.S.T., ,

Desired services should not be penalized for being so desired that they take extra bandwidth. Even if it never made another cent, Big Telecom makes enough money to last a thousand years, anyway.

—Myra Teaters, Virginia Beach, VA

hi fcc please stop telecom mess with open part internet because very important to everyone because shop online find new can do and game and talk online basic is that the internet does a lot cool thing please protect open internet stop telecom.

—Chad, Brockton, MA

Please reclassify internet service providers as common carriers so all may continue to enjoy & afford the internet.

—Alice Weissbecker, Southern Pines, NC

Any kind of barrier to access for the internet is a step too far. It was never imagined to be so tiered, stop being greedy cunts.

—BWhite, ,

Broadband internet providers must be classified as common carriers. It is the only policy that makes sense socially and economically. Without this key protection, ISPs will have the power to restrict competition and free speech through their pricing structures. As the majority of internet service is provided by a few huge media corporations, policies allowing internet 'fast lanes' and 'slow lanes,' or even censored content, would give big ISPs power to severely restrict access to content from competitors, critics, political groups, or anyone else they choose to target. Even if they have no plans to abuse this power, we cannot afford to create the opportunity for such abuse. Please keep the internet open and neutral by reclassifying broadband internet providers as common carriers.

—Devin Reed, Kanab, UT

Net Neutrality = Free Speech "Stratifying" the Internet is the first step down a slippery slope. Before we know it, the voices with money would be the only voices heard. It's anathema to innovation (individuals and small start-up businesses), competition and a democratic Internet. Our society is already too stratified. PLEASE don't magnify the problem by adding a stratified Internet to the equation.

—Catharine Garber, Alexandria, VA

Freedom of expression, truth, knowledge, helping people, and many more are all reasons that free and open internet is important

—Brian Doucet, Wauconda, IL

Common carriage fosters individual creativity. Keeps speed consistent. Reasons too numerous to type!

—Kristen Michaels, Bellvue, CO

It's essential for the protection of the free use of the internet

—Sigberto Alarcon Viesca, Stanford, CA

A free Internet promotes economic balance. Corporate control will stifle economic growth.

—Rick Brady, East Berlin, PA

Necessary to sustain our democracy

—Martin Feinstein, chapel hill, NC

This would bring back a class system. Those with money can buy influence. Net neutrality protects our economy from monopolies by protecting equality for all on the internet.

—Hillary G. Buckingham, Hastings on Hudson, NY

We need open access to all websites and services regardless of popularity. Research sites for scientific and other knowledge services must be accessible to everyone.

—Michael Spitzer, Durango, CO

I don't want smaller websites to be lost. I want to be able to watch youtube without paying extra to my ISP. I want freedom to surf the internet without "channels".

—Chris Hall, ,

corporate control of media is not democracy

—Robert Schultz, Lake View Terrace, CA

The Internet is a necessary part of my career and an important part of my life. I don't want it taken away from me by a corporate takeover.

—Taylor Smith, New Carlisle, OH

I'm fed up with being ripped off and abused by the price-gouging monopoly broadband ISPs that the FCC's policies have allowed to emerge. And it's not just the extortionate pricing I object to. When Comcast began sabotaging BitTorrent exchanges, my BitTorrent downloads of various Linux distributions took over 24 hours to complete. After Comcast was outed and stopped the practice, the same downloads took around 15 minutes. My father canceled his Netflix subscription and no longer tries to watch Amazon Prime movies because Comcast's throttling made them unwatchable. As a final insult, I was repeatedly blocked from posting a public FCC comment regarding your fast-lane/slow-lane proposal until I did so via Tor Browser, which hid what I was doing from my ISP. Enough is enough. The current administration may turn a blind eye to revolving-door payoffs like the ones Michael Powell and Meredith Atwell Baker took, but I guarantee you, the people will not.

—Peter Craig Martin, Seattle, WA

Everyone should be treated equally and fairly.

—John Gibson, ,

the internet was not developed for private use, it is and shall remain a public commodity

—Ed Wilder, Hood River, OR

Freedom

—John Wayne, ,

We don't need to further increase the access gap between the wealthy few and the rest of us. It's bad for everybody, this gap.

—Cecily Dell, Longmont, CO

The internet is changing how we gather information, do our jobs and spend our free time. Any thing that would alter this would wide public media would stifle growth, economies and freedoms world wide. Some one telling me what I can and can't view, read or not read and then charging me a fee to do these simple thing is an abomination. It slaps the face of every one world wide. Stop this insanity and freedom altering action now. You are not only effecting the USA but the in tire world. The internet is become a public media and should be free open and be able to run at maximum speeds without making money from the log-on. It is now time to protect the Net not allow a few greedy companies to alter what is a good thing and corrupt it for greed.

—Kenneth Mastin, O Fallon, MO

Net Neutrality is important because it's the last bastion we have for information. The 1% are desperately trying to control what we see and hear and this is how they plan to do it.

—Cindy Abernathy, Midvale, UT

So that Neoliberal Nazis don't control the whole world

—Dann Zealley, ,

As an internet marketer I find it hard enough competing with others in my niche. Giving other sites the ability to load faster would destroy any chance of my business ever succeeding.

—Bruce Desrosiers, Colfax, LA

THE KYOTO PROTOCOL???

—Dimitar Dolnooryahov, village of strelets, IA

Please, do not sell Internet to corporations!

—Arkady, Gainesville, FL

Cause it's none of your busyness what I do in the privacy of my home

—Bryan Mallon, ,

Net neutrality is important because it's the right thing to do.

—Mr Metcalfe, ,

The free exchange of information is crucial to the growth of economies and society as a whole.

—Steven, Woodstock, GA

Imagine the day when you have to explain to your kids and relatives why the Internet didn't suck back in the day.

—Brad Hewitt, ,

We the people must have free access to information. It is our right. Don't let big money govern our lives.

—Bill C Leikam, Palo Alto, CA

I am a distance learner. I live in Alaska. Alaska has vast wilderness. The internet is the only means of getting a degree for some of Alaskans. Further more the remote villages in the bush rely on the internet also, for education, and contact with the outside world. If the internet becomes a "common carrier", it will affect a lot of Alaskans. It will increase the cost of those of us who wish to further ourselves and get degrees. It will also violate our first amendment rights to freedom of speech. We have the right to say what we wish and we have the right to access the internet form what ever websites we wish. Corporations do not have any business censoring the internet to their liking. No one does. The Hobby lobby decision did several things when the ruling came down. Women's rights is obvious but the second is it allows for religious and private beliefs to be forced on others. The same thing is happening here. "Big telecom", will decide for us who gets what on the internet. My distance fee will cost me more to finish my degree. There are a lot of remote places on the earth that rely on the internet for information that is other wise unavailable to them. Further more, it seems like "big telecom" is just trying to make more money off of the consumer. This wreaks of corporate greed. Once again this will cost Americans job loss. We cannot afford to keep putting financial gain before jobs. Please Mr. Wheeler support the open Internet. A lot is at stake here. Thank you, Angela Ferrari The other problem is the burden it will place on small business services that cannot afford the fees.

—Angela Ferrari, Anchorage, AK

The internet is my livelihood. This is how I pay my bills. If you take that away from me and let them with their billions of dollars destroy my work and my life, what will you do then? Will you pay my bills? I'm disabled, but I don't ask for anything---just to be able to work. If they are allowed to "own" the internet, they will run me out of business and ruin my life. Don't let them do this. Make them play fair for everyone---not just them. I don't have billions of dollars to bribe you with. Just my plea that you won't let them destroy the lives of millions of people just like me.

—Laura Haskell, Denver, CO

I enjoy the feeling of freedom that a neutral internet provides, and once you allow the telecommunication industry total control, and rule, of it, you will be taking away a vital pathway of free speech. You'll be allowing Big Business to govern over us, and that is NOT democracy!

—Penny Lambert, Huntington, IN

Please classify Internet service providers as "common carriers"; Preserve net neutrality and avoid mischief through blocking. & other interference with content and websites. Value free speech and right to know.

—Donna M. Bening, Plano, TX

It's a basic principle of the internet

—V Stone, Cheltenham,

FEAR GREED!!!

—John Franklin, Spokane, WA

Net neutrality is as important as free speech. Having money does NOT give you more rights than others!

—Mohrgan Pratten, ,

Net Neutrality must be maintained! Big Telecom will most likely charge steep tolls for premium access and block (or slow down) websites.

—Johanna Elias, Brooklyn, NY

We want REAL Net Neutrality

—Andrew Turnham, ,

Reclassify & leave alone , it's working fine !

—Tim miller, Mesa, AZ

The internet was born under the promise of everything being neutral. Why should business be protected from the internet if they can't learn to adapt to this technology?

—Mark, ,

Stand with the public as the founders intended, not with corporations.

—Ms. Diane radovich, miami beach, FL just more interference in our lives and rights

—Bill Frohlick, ,

I don't want the internet providers being able to block or slow down access to websites based on their criteria. It will lead to higher costs for Internet users as they will have too much control of the internet. Please classify internet service providers as common carriers.

—Ken Shearsmith, ,

I say NO to differential internet speeds, selected by content providers.

—James B, ,

Not everyone can afford to pay $100 a month for Internet access. Some of us rely on the Internet for everyday things like banking, shopping, etc. - and if the current regulations pass, my banking and shopping may be abruptly halted or curtailed. The Internet doesn't belong to Comcast, AT&T, or Verizon. Please reclassify the Internet service providers as Common Carriers.

—James O. Weems, Avondale Estates, GA

It is important because it is the only place (the internet) where you have the right to communicate your opinion and bring other types of information that you don't get in the news to the people and to yourself.

—Katherine Otico Bonilla, ,

I don't believe it's in my best interest to all of large communication companies to remove competition by way of content filtering and service degradation. Please do not allow this to happen.

—Marty Atherton, ,

Freedom of communication. No monopolies on information dispersal.

—Charlotte Helen Williams, Calistoga, CA

The internet began in Universities for the dissemination of human communication and knowledge. It was never intended to be a marketing tool for Telcos and Corporates. The Slow Lane proposal will crush its heart and destroy innovation, science and human progress in the special ways that both use the internet.

—Dr. Patrick Maher, ,

I require full speed access to uncommon protocols using encryption to perform my job. I use Encrypted VNC and SSH to connect to servers that I manage all over the world. ISP's the world over have shown tendencies to throttle any traffic that they cannot recognize/decrypt. Making them Common Carriers would make it illegal for them to do this. It would also forstall the effort by the large media corporations to stifle competition from Video Streaming Services like Netflix.

—Amos Weatherill, ,

I need to be able to stay in touch with my children, who are literally scattered around the world. I also take educational courses online with large assignments that are due within a certain time frame. A slow internet would greatly hinder my contacts abroad and my education. It is simply not fair for large entities to slow down communication for the rest of the world. If you can't use your power for the good of all, you do not deserve to have it.

—Mrs. Nancy Ratliff, Hattiesburg, MS

It promotes free speech, entrepreneurship, and creative output, as well as giving voice to a plurality of viewpoints.

—, Los Angeles, CA

Stand up for the people...

—Laurie Buckley, North Hollywood, CA

We cannot continue to create a tiered class system in this country that segregates the poor and middle class from access to information and equal opportunity to communicate, do business, excel, and create wealth. Net Neutrality preserves these rights for all. Do not bow to corporate control. Preserve Net Neutrality.

—Gail Manahan, Hereford, AZ

If it don't need fixing then don't try and fix it, it's working just the way I like it and I'm not able to be spending more just to be able to use the web. Please do the right thing it's what we the people want.

—Warren Bye, Kingston, NH

Our margins are already tight. My business needs affordable, open access, like millions of others!

—Matt Van Slyke, Grayslake, IL

Making companies pay for higher speeds/ bandwidth is absurd and unfair. It's detrimental to internet start ups ,and hurts innovation. Internet speeds should be equal for everyone. Please reclassify the internet as a common carrier under title II. It's just common sense.

—Alex Bishel, Raleigh, NC

DON'T FIX IT IF IT AIN'T BROKE! It has worked very well for years. Why change it just to create a fortune for a few greedy gatekeepers.

—Mike Walter, San Diego, CA

If we value free speech, then we need to back it up with policies that actually protect our rights. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and that is completely inconsistent with the intent of Congress. Common carriage is the only solution which will foster innovation and business growth. I strongly urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II. This is the only way to protect Net Neutrality.

—Eva Chan, ,

It's called freedom to be a human being!

—Becky Biehl, Spring City, PA

We need open internet for everyone in the world.

—Dorothy Marion, New York, NY

I am retired and I believe in an open internet. To change it just so that greedy companies can take more money is outrageous. I am on a fixed income and I don't need to stuck in a slow lane because a can't afford anything else. It is just wrong. Keep the internet free. This action is just about greed.

—Marlyn Haber, Altadena, CA

The internet is a great open tool that allows creativity and innovation through those that can harness what the free internet offers. The internet is the future on how we are able to communicate, and how we are able to interact. It's now easier to communicate with others, and to be able to enjoy whatever entertainment it can offer. Because of cable companies fear that they are losing business, they are forcing us to continue to use their services, when the people who understand what's going on only want internet service because they can get all the content without spending more for TV and phone. They won't be able to count on those that don't know better, and when word of mouth spreads, only the internet will suffice.

—Juan F Castillo, Port Isabel, TX

If we don't keep the Net Neutrality completely intact, not all traffic is treated equally and thus is delivered slower and this bias may and is going to grow over time. If the data load from (for example Netflix) is too big, the companies need to charge more for a certain bandwidth or add an upper limit on data usage to in turn get more money to invest in a better infrastructure.

—Serge B., ,

The internet should remain a free and uninhibited form of communication.

—Andrew Johnstone, ,

No brainer

—Mark Magee, Tualatin, OR

If we are striving for true democracy for ALL, then we must have free and equal access to all sources of information. The internet is a vital piece of this and should not be for sale to increase profits for a few greedy avaricious undemocratic corporations.

—Annette Hartshorne, Fitchburg, WI

If not, it is just another way to enrich a few at the expense of many and to reduce the quality of life for those who are disadvantaged. Your nation was, theoretically, built on the theory that all are equal, though in actual fact the only ones who are equal are the wealthy and those in power. If you wish an example of what happens with inequality, look to yur north and how our telecommunications industry, with the support of the federal government, is pricing cell-phone use so that many Canadians can no longer afford it. Why should I have to pay, circa $1,000/year for spotty-to-non-existent service to receive, at most, 2 phone calls per month and an interent that is very difficult to access within a city of 1,100,000? Now you wish to impose limits on the only source of democracy left on this planet, because you wish to support the greded of corporations whose only purpose is to super-enrich a few and provide non-useful work to retired politicians? Shame on you.

—H Richard Esslingen, ,

We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Frederick Arnold, Brewer, ME

The internet has shown itself as a great 'equalizer', allowing everyone to participate equally, regardless of economic or class status. Access should remain open to all at exactly the same rates and bandwidths.

—Steven J. Prchal, Tucson, AZ

Mainly because the internet is a tool for everybody to use, it's for information and it should be available for everyone to use on an equal opportunity playing field. It is not there for people to monopolise or create an unfair, unbalanced advantage through out bidding. The smallest carpenter or chef or wool store should be just as easy to find/access as a chain store or restaurant. Why should walmart or dupont be first on the list just because they have more money. That kind of thinking already ruined governments right across the world. Big business already runs America and the same elitest dynamic is creeping into Canadian government. Enough is enough, equality isn't just a dirty word or loser concept that governments are trying to sweep under a rug, it is the only concept that keeps us from total kaos. No one person or company or website is more important than another. The internet is one of the few remaining equal opportunity entities out there.

—Kiran Mehta, ,

I do not want myself or other organizations I support to be relegated to the slow lane.

—Eleanora Tevis, New York, NY

openness is life-enhancing

—Duncan Harper, ,

This is crucial for businesses and citizens worldwide.

—Alex Vinall, ,

It is not right when you will place financial interest and monopoly against or before people. I am sure, you are against racism. However, current initiative is direct act of racism.

—Alexandre, , freedom of spech

—Francisco, ,

Because the internet should be for everyone.

—Libby Smith, ,

No one owns the Internet is should be free for EVERYONE!

—Cathal O'Cathain, Dublin,

The internet needs to be treated like a utility with equal access to all.

—Claudio Andrade, Glendale, CA

If corporations pay for faster internet than I have they will pass the cost on to their customers. I referee high school sports and need fast internet for time and field information and weather info.

—Dennis Kneip, Hampshire, IL

To allow new business to innovate. There would be no Facebook or Google without the innovation, and big telecoms risk loosing business's by bit embracing new technologies and changing their business model. Anyone remember AOL or Kodak?

—Ryan Gagne, ,

I use it every day, it needs to remain neutral.

—Sheila K. Schmeling, Englewood, CO

Many states have instituted computer harassment laws but I was charged under that statute in Fairfax County Virginia on a FB site called Paris Barns by a Martha Boneta although she was not online at all when I was cyberbullied by one of friends for making a few snarky but not lude or threatening remarks at some photos that were posted on the page. It was a single occurrence and 1 night for less than an hour while a person kept going you are batty are you drunk. The case was not tried by prosecutors and the judge adjudicated this non case a year. It was like putting me on probation. The point is that there are government stalkers because she is a Teaparty member that are trying to curb free speech and WE NEED TO STAND UP FOR 1st Amendment rights and civil liberties all over the world on the internet to keep ideas alive and minds open to expansion.

—Charlotte Gedney-Pezzelle, Warrenton, VA

Doing away with Net Neutrality would be a significant step backwards in the historic path towards progress-- we know that an informed populace is key to a healthy democracy. Given that the internet has become such a vital source of information for citizens and consumers alike, trusting that a handful of conglomerate corporations with it's speed throttles is not in our best interest.

—Alain Derbez, ,

Corporations are getting too much power at the expense of our democracy.

—Isabel Kimble, Ojai, CA

It's vital for no one to be left behind and in the dark simply because someone with money says so... Might, financial or otherwise, doesn't make right.

—Anne Samson, ,

Everyone should be treated the same for the internet use

—Howard Thornton, ,

Corporate interests are not in the public's best interests.

—David Bunn, Laramie, WY

I can't read books or magazines or newspapers anymore. I have a hard time watching tv. But with my only expense going to hardware/software/services off the internet I would be greatly harmed in corporations are allowed to restrict what, where, when, how I get access to internet life lines. Money isn't everything, stop this madness to CONTROL.

—TLDarby, ,

PLEASE!

—Rev. Michael Joyce, Albany, NY

just is

—Melanie Lynch, ,

FREEDOM

—Daniel Jackson, Yucaipa, CA

Y'all don't own the internet

—Eloisa, ,

I am disabled. The Internet and its endless variety is a main source of entertainment. I can barely afford it now. If the FCC caves to the large telcos, innovation will be stifled and the level playing field will be gone. It's time for someone to stand up to the corporations and do whats right for the people.

—John Kephart, Cathedral City, CA

Free and unfettered access to all information online must be maintained permanently, and this reclassification is vital to ensuring such freedoms.

—Sheila Ryan Hara, Medina, WA

Free speech is everyone's constitutional and human right

—Andy, ,

Because it's the only source of education and communication for many.

—Emma hart, ,

Net Neutrality is a driver of small business, a large job creator. It also is essential for education for all.

—Ben Z Cooper, ,

I run a small business on the internet that will be damaged if my access is in any way limited..

—John Townsend, Los Angeles, CA

Please leave the internet as is is.

—Alma Leon, Waldport, OR

KEEP THE NET NEUTRAL!!! Because I use and enjoy NetFlix: I pay my internet provider (Comcast) a premium for "extra" High Speed Service so I can watch these movies...Now the internet providers are also charging NetFlix more money to provide them with the ability to send out their service, after already gouging their customers to receive the same services. The fact that these two are in direct competition for Video based customers is being given too little consideration? Comcast should never be allowed to purchase Time Warner, as their greedy monopolistic practices will just multiply! KEEP THE NET NEUTRAL!!!

—David Neckolaishen, Aurora, IL

Net Neutrality is important to me because I value the freedoms of democracy. There is no place for censorship in America and these fat-cat telcom companies are so greedy, they will sell out their own country to support their sick desire for money and power. What they are proposing expands their price fixing and gouging, takes away fair competition from small businesses that are and have always been the innovators and job-creators in this country. They already censor internet users, invade consumers privacy and sell our information to other fat-cats; they are in bed with rogue government agencies. (Let's hope the FCC isn't one of them.) These bastards are out of control and the American people as well as all peoples of the world need protection from them and need to ban together to break up the monopolies. Chairman Wheeler, do your job! You are being paid by the American tax payers, not big corporate tax dodgers. Everyone should be able to access all information; everyone should have an even playing field to start up a business and bring their creative ideas to market.

—Kim McCormick, Rancho Cucamonga, CA

Net neutrality is essential to a strong Democracy--something the US is in serious danger of losing!

—Carol Romie, Centerville, OH

Knowledge is power. All people need access at the same speed and level to how we communicate and process knowledge in today's world. Thank you for keeping the internet free of special lanes for the wealthy elite.

—T Hetzel, Ann Arbor, MI

The internet is the replacement of the "phone company ". It must be fairly regulated for the equitable use by all>

—Thomas Blackwell, Austin, TX

Big Corporations already own the government. Don't let them take control of the internet too.

—Ken Marion, Tampa, FL

I believe in Right and Wrong, and keeping Net Neutrality is just right.

—Jaad Coles, Troy, NY

Equal unfettered access carrier boundaries adds more intrinsic value to the internet. This also makes for simpler edge to edge connectivity from carrier to carrier.

—James Tyler, Wesley Chapel, FL

The Internet is only a democratic forum because all content is created equal and accessible. Creating a tiered system means that money will determine what is available. Not only will the telecommunications companies extort money from other businesses and individuals, it is just another example of the destruction wrought by an ethos where money equals speech. The loudest are the most powerful, but you have to pay for access to the volume knob.

—Jeb Kendrick, Austin, TX

equal access

—James B Dowell, HARDINSBURG, KY

Control begets more control until freedom of information is a thing of the past. God help us.

—Frank Gonzales Jr., Plymouth, MI

Net Neutrality is one of the most important factors in keeping the Internet a safe place for free-trade, and fairness. Creating a "slow-lane" would be like building a government-funded bridge from the mainland into Manhattan, that only Donald Trump and Richard Branson are allowed to use.

—Gabriel Falconberg, ,

We need to protect net neutrality for all!

—Kate Brogan, Leo, IN

I have a right to equal access to whatever sites I want to visit.

—Tina Martin, Rochester, NY

The internet has to be an open place! As long as there is no government behind it, there shouldn't be capitalism as well!

—Oliver Friedrich, ,

There is NO freedom in this country without the freedom to communicate. Our democracy depends on it!!! This is for my children and grandchildren and the generations to come. Please do the right thing!!!

—Pat Bakalian, Sacramento, CA

The internet is far greater than you or I understand. It is not a thing, it is a global communication platform for the entire human race. It is all of us. Net neutrality is in fact synonymous with freedom.

—Ian Newkirk, ,

I have many medical conditions and therefore live on a small fixed income. I use the Internet for many answers to my medical questions. Without true Internet as we know it I will not be able to afford it.

—Barbara Hobbs, Redgranite, WI

Free expression, reasonable access cost.

—Chandrakant B Ghate, ,

I'm calling on you to reclassify the Internet as a telecommunications service to obligate ISPs to deliver all data on the Internet without discrimination. Please do the right thing: let corporations know that the Internet is not for sale to the highest bidder. Thank you for preserving a free and open Internet.

—Marianne Robinson, Berkeley, CA

The internet should not owned by anyone in order to protect free speech and maintain a level playing field among individuals.

—Tony Ferrante, ,

It is the only way that I can communicate outside of my home.

—Hugh Hampton, Tucson, AZ

Maintaining net neutrality is important to protect smaller web hosts and to keep all of the internet accessible to everyone.

—Rik Boerma, ,

It protects free speech

—, ,

Encourage innovation. Keep playing field level for ALL internet providers. People can continue to be free to make internet entertainment choices unhampered by the greedy policies of the big Telcoms.

—Edna Smith, ,

Equality is a necessity in the world, lets keep the internet equal. Thanks!

—Nathan Beers, ,

I prefer that we didn't jump onto a slippery slope.

—Kristian Williams, ,

Corporate interests are stifling individuals worldwide. Stop it!

—Tony Murray, ,

I do ALL my banking and bill-paying via internet. I conduct other business transactions as well. I do research, both academic and commercial via internet. I am not alone in these usages. None of these will be possible in you do not protect actual Net Neutrality. Internet as it is now is already outrageously expensive. If you do not reclassify broadband providers as common carriers, then the internet will become basically worthless. If instead you do your handlers' bidding and allow Big Telecom to create multi-tiers of service, then you probably will not have a cushy job to go back to as more and more people avoid Big Telecom.

—John Allen Kumor Ph.D., Pueblo, CO

I don't believe that Internet providers should control what I am able to see or how fast or slow I am able to see it. This type of control in the hands of a few runs counter to any sense of fairness that may be left in this country.

—Dennis Humphries, Chapel Hill, NC

Free speech is a right, not a privilege.

—Dan Lind, Logan, UT

Corporations should never dictate social policy, whether it has to with the Internet or any other aspect of our society. Keeping the internet free is keeping the people free.

—Nicholas Graves, ,

IT ENSURES BOTH PARITY AND FAIRNESS!

—Mart Duffy, ,

Everyone deserves equal access to the internet, regardless of income!

—, San Diego, CA

As a Internet entrepreneur myself, the neutrality of the Internet is of utmost importance. To pave way for control of the Internet is a slippery slope, and the powers bestowed to the ISPs can and will be abused. Freedom of expression, and freedom of information are at stake, and as we all know the United States government isn't exactly friendly towards either core principle of modern society. A free and open Internet is crucial for innovation and the progress of the human species at large. The Internet is one of mankind's greatest accomplishments, and to corrupt it's core principles for the greed of the few is an action that will be condemned by generations to come.

—Claus Nurro, ,

It is against our constitutional rights to do this.

—Joel Giovanni, Milwaukee, WI freedom of speech and the exchange of information.

—Geoff Moseley, ,

Why should trans-nationals, other corporates and power brokers benefit so greatly above and beyond the ordinary citizen just trying to make ends meet and forge out a healthy and sustainable living environment within community as a whole? Shared information should benefit all mankind and not just somekind.

—Kellie, ,

I am an American citizen who lives in the UK. I use the internet to communicate with my family in America and to buy things I can't get over here. I do not like the idea of the government being able to block sites I frequent in the belief that they might be doing something wrong, or to have my ISP direct me to site I don't like because they are paid to. I also don't like the idea of having everything I do on the net recorded forever. The internet needs to stay free and neutral to continue being the social force it is today.

—Julie Jones, ,

I enjoy the freedom of the net as it is now

—Marla Wyatt, Yucaipa, CA

My life has been severely impacted by the increasing concentration of power to larger and fewer corporations. what is necessary is divergence, competition, corporate downsizing, antitrust prosecution. Do not relinquish the property and the power of the people to fewer and fewer large greedy and amoral corporations. Just say NO.

—Arnold W Levi Sr, Santa Barbara, CA

I use the Internet daily, frequently visiting sites of smaller companies and organizations.

—Bert Goff, New Milford, CT

The idea of paying steep tolls for premium access that WILL be passed on to consumers or blocking or slowing sites and services that can't afford the new fees is ridiculous and unfair to consumers who already pay far too much for too little "service" in this country. ISP's all DO the same things and carry the same bits and bytes, they're really nothing more than common carriers just like the phone companies used to be. They shouldn't get to determine who's Zeroes and Ones are more important or costlier to handle.

—, San Diego, CA

Do not stifle innovation! The internet must remain 100% neutral. No fast or premium lanes!

—Nick Spence, Pheonix, AZ

What does this bullying by corporations actually accomplish? This mad desire to control everything has over shadowed the fact that we could be a strong and vital country by keeping information available to everyone. We all knows this. Grow some balls fcc and stand up to these bullies with money.

—Michael Smith, Winchester, MA

I use the internet to enhance the quality of my life in a way that your proposed Net Neutrality will destroy. The internet should be a tool to be used by all of humanity so please stop trying to take these tools away from us. If you care at all about the future for your childern(since they may blow all your money one day and be poor like me :) you should strike this down, please.

—Justin William Long, ,

Because of the freedom to make new friends and it's an awesome source of information.

—Michael Seelen, Babbitt, MN

100% of my favourite websites - the most popular ones - probably would not exist without net neutrality.

—Daniel Hough, ,

Keep the Internet neutral.

—Theodore Charles Atkinson, Bow, WA

Net Neutrality will continue to inspire innovation in technology.

—William Maguire, Orlando, FL

The Internet has facilitated a global economic revolution as powerful as any technology ever has. Free and open use by everyone ought to be encouraged not restricted. The telecoms make too much money already. Consider forcing price reductions not new ways for them to charge more.

—John Mann, ,

Please leave the internet free of slow traffic lanes. For once do something for the people and not the corporations that want to take it over.

—David Lutz, Lake Oswego, OR

Economic success and civil liberties depend on freedom of information. Choose a better future for everyone.

—David Laycock, ,

Because Net Neutrality is important to me, keep the net open for everyone and we don't want fast lanes or slow lanes. We just want Net Neutrality because fast lanes, Slow lanes and take over the internet will destroy the Internet

—Charles Roberts, Detroit, MI

I use netflix, and with an open internet, I won't have to pay more for it. Big telecom just want's more money from netflix users. I say nay.

—Steve Franks, Tucson, AZ

Leave the internet neutral to all users. Keep the hand of big business out of the business of control. Out of my pocket.....

—Ira Kaplan, Grand Junction, CO

It is essentially a public service and should be treated as such.

—Charles Singer, Marblehead, MA

I already pay a lot of taxes! Don't be greedy!

—Adrião Neves, ,

Anything big business wants is almost always just a way to make things worse for the individual.

—Bruce Butcher, ,

It's a public service like clean water or electricity. Should be equally accessible to all.

—Remko Popma, ,

This is part of my life and should be treated like utility. Not in hands of big Telecoms!

—Dave Smith, Monterey, CA

I want the Internet to stay free and open to the creativity of artists, authors and innovators no matter whether they have lots of money or not.

—John Fisher, Fort Worth, TX

As a senior on a limited income, the internet is my lifeline to the world. Please don't let me lose it.

—Claire Pirie, Berkeley, CA

It's the best way to maintain a healthy competitive landscape on the internet.

—Alex Boisvert, Novato, CA

Fast lane model is open to exploitation of consumers, in an industry where we are already behind in technology and wildly over charged.

—Travis Juffinger, , human rightfully...access for all!

—Jude MacGowan, ,

Access to open internet is a requirement to live in todays world. Closing this system and allowing a small number of people to have absolute control over its usage will negatively affect us all. It will destroy the idea that the internet is the delivery device and not the product. It will stop new and interesting companies from having the opportunity to compete with the established order. Finally it will impede North America when competing with the rest of the world. Open access to information give us an advantage over the rest of the world and taking that away is a reckless and short sighted decision.

—Coby Brittin, ,

Because I'm interested in ultimately starting my own company at some point. With the laws that are being passed, the incumbents will essentially control all access to internet traffic, creating a tiered system that doesn't allow startups to compete.

—Zachary Showers, ,

No one talks about post office mail neutrality. Artificial fees to make telecom companies rich will hurt the economy.

—Craig Howland, Fremont, CA

Net Neutrality helps balancing the playing field for private citizens, small businesses and big businesses alike.

—Jefree Anderson, San Francisco, CA

Neutrality is everything...

—L-M Pichette, ,

the first step in feminization therapy is determining at what the individual had to come to the us for complete feminization and desired a medical programs that would achieve their goals quickly while maintain ones good health naturally in day to day practice there are many variations on the theme here are looking at the typical regimens that being complete feminization the maximum in the shortest period of time the undesirable side-effect both physical and emotional when looking at the process achieving female attribute such as element development fullness in the hips softer texture in the skin etc and ridding oneself of male attribute such as excessive muscular upper body development body pattern hair loss of scalp beard growth etc resources for transgender healthcare programs job placement iam experiencing discrimination support group network group www.thetransgendercenter.com web-site register /commonwealth of va 211586771/administration/agent/ grand opening of legends/804-728-7706

—Diane Nero, Richmond, VA

Internet access must be open equally to all & at a moderate price.

—Carol Trevor, Portland, OR

It is free speech, it is the freedom to knowledge. It is the hallmark of a civilized society and a true democracy.

—Vanessa Lasko, Virginia beach, VA

You have no moral or ethical right to give our internet to big business, they would suppress our free speech if it went against their morals or politics. The internet belongs to everyone. It's unfair that you want to slow us down. You going to contribute to in a lot of unemployment. Most small business will not be able to afford the fees for fast broadband, give us back our internet. We have a right to cheap affordable broadband.

—Michael McGee, Montgomery, AL

Net neutrality is our right!

—Laureen McMullan, ,

This is simple common sense, if you let the money do the talking, then you should prepare to do the walking.

—Robert Henderson, Battle Creek, MI

Internet is like secondary heart of my life...Please don't ruin my life!

—Rajesh Magar, ,

I am starting up a small, online business and this could have serious consequences to me and all small/medium businesses. That just doesn't feel right and I feel it will have larger consequences on the global economy over time.

—Ileana Grgic, ,

Human right must not be violated.

—Celso Mendoza, ,

Companies of any size, especially big ones, don't need more ways to squeeze more money out of individual people.

—MacDougall Palmer, Missoula, MT

I use the Internet for fast reports to to my financial accounts my family and my internet suppliers. Please reclassify the internet as a public utility and keep its neutrality!

—C Ingham, Crown Point, IN

I don't know the who, why or how of this situation but do feel that there is no need to change. Unless, greed comes into play, that would make sense, sure. The simple answer is that it is morally and ethically wrong for a few chosen to make a decision that will impact billions of lives worldwide!!! And, the Internet, is NOT a utility!!! Thank you for your consideration.

—Theresa M. Campbell, Madison Heights, MI

The internet is my only access that I can afford to the rest of the world, if you take it from me I will have nothing left to communicate with my relatives, friends, coworkers, information, news, entertainment, support, job search, ...

—, ,

The internet is amazing in the freedom it allows for people to communicate, share ideas, and generally move society forward. Allowing big telecom an even greater monopoly would not only stymie the expressive powers of the internet, but also hinder those with smaller wallets from accessing and competing fairly in the global marketplace.

—Clinton, Oak Hill, OH

Because corporations and governments should not be deciding the quality of the service for us. Why is internet service faster and cheaper in many other countries? This is wrong.

—Katrina Child, san francisco, CA

Internet service should be the same for EVERYONE !

—Joanne Bilodeau, ,

Please protect our best invention and tool.

—Arsham Skrenes, Washington, DC

Can't afford to pay more for internet access. Consumers are constantly being bombarded with telecom fee increases, especially in Canada. Wish my monthly pension would increase proportionately, however it doesn't.

—Allan Paakkola, ,

Because an equal internet for everyone is vital for democracy

—Andreas Hall, ,

Neutral networks allow small startups to reach consumers on the same level as current companies. By allowing a tiered network young startup companies can take off and grow like Google and Facebook have done. If the network favours current market leaders, it will further entrench them stifling innovation. Please strongly consider reclassification as common carriers to protect consumers and small companies. Allowing a monopoly on residential internet that can decide who is on each tier will limit the growth of changing markets. The world is increasing globalized, this decision will have implications beyond American borders as the US serves as a central hub for the internet.

—Andrew Post, ,

The internet has become a defacto necessity in our modern age. It is where business and community exist. We need to reclassify broadband internet as common carrier. If a "fast lane" is allowed, carriers will invest there, leaving everyone else in the dark, forcing consumers who already have little to no choice in internet service to purchase internet packages priced - illegitimately - like cable tiers. This is unacceptable. Please ensure this vital resource is open and equal to everyone. Make it Title II. Common carriers for the common citizen. Thank you.

—Brian Driggs, Glendale, AZ

Everyone should be treated the same.

—Paul Zendzian, Worcester, MA

Neutrality is important, thanks to that there are people with employees also this is a way of free speech a right that we have thanks to the constitution.

—Carlos Mojica, ,

I can't afford to pay more!

—Mary Rojeski, santa monica, CA

Without Net Neutrality, free speech will become inaccessible. An internet provider will have the government's approval to restrict certain types of information on the internet. In an election year, a telco who follows one political party may restrict bandwidth to the opposing party. Targeted ads can become worse than that of tv. I pay each month for a download rate (high speed) and for so much data (gigabytes). The telcos determined the deal and I agreed to pay. I and everyone on the internet expect to get access to the legal data I want at an unimpeded rate. If the originator of the data cannot provide it fast enough, then that should not be reflected on the telco. The telco must not be a bottleneck below the agreed upon data rate for the deal which I pay in full every month.

—Shawn Leggott, ,

Free communication and open discussion are essential for democracy.

—Raj Patil, ,

The internet should not be restricted, especially by large companies that are doing it to make money

—Chris Toth, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me because I use the internet. It is that simple and that obvious.

—Ms. Linda Krueger, Hales Corners, WI

Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness means an open and free internet.

—Ronald Dysvick, Blue Springs, MO

THE INTERNET is a communication ,information highway that connects all nations ,people and to start charging for d/l speed will alienate those least able to express or see and get information. This is contradictory to the ethos of the internet. Its neutrality should be a right and not a profit point for Big telecoms to exploit. Keep the internet free and flowing for everyone, not just the 1%

—Diana Warwick, ,

Freedom of information and speech are First Amendment Rights. They are not to be bought and sold. I am outraged that a corporate takeover of the internet is even under consideration.

—Linda Sotis, Greenwich, NY

It's time to support the people who help pay your bills and not the giant telecom corporations.

—Hon. Britt Turner Kelch, Davenport, NY

We need to keep it open and as low cost as possible.

—Jim Brooks, Golden, CO

I am an Internet user, not a business owner, just a private person. Net neutrality is key to my ability to use the internet freely. Please protect net neutrality so that everyone has a level playing field.

—Diane Watters, Simi Valley, CA

Internet is like a library. Would you agree that the richest can borrow a book a day before the other?

—Jim Tremblay, ,

I fear the power already inherent in the current state of limited internet providers. This power would degrade service, limit access and effectively filter out content to average users like me.

—Kathleen Lowney, Issaquah, WA

We don't even know what new innovations the current proposal might stifle. But we can surmise that if this were in place 2 decades ago, the internet landscape would look vastly different than it is today. Net Neutrality is important to societal progress and technological innovation. When the tech industry was born, it created a golden age for the economy. Why risk stifling the next economic boom for a few incumbent companies? The closest parallel that I can find is the ice cellar suppliers / ice mining companies. We could've had refrigeration decades earlier if not for their stranglehold on the market... It nicely parallels the Cable companies and ISPs of today. -Marky

—Marky Herkel, ,

Equal access for me is equal access for all is greater opportunity for freedom.

—Donald A Gladstone, Los Altos, CA

The Internet fulfills an important function in our society, as long as it is open. The proposed changes will change that, and naturally, not for the better for ordinary people.

—Beverly Welber, Marathon, FL

Freedom

—Michael Robinson, Seattle, WA precisely because it is currently a level playing field

—Mrs. Diane Masters, Durham, NC

Net Neutrality allows for everyone to have an opportunity to do something innovative on the internet. It allows all citizens to have freedom of speech and communicate with everyone in the world.

—Brad De Sousa, ,

Information & communications need to remain free & equal to all. Otherwise we are on our way to be another China.

—John Provencher, Norwich, CT

Because it is TODAY- 2014, the 21st CENTURY a reflection of TRUE DEMOCRACY and FREEDOME of EXPRESSION for the ENTIRE PLANET !!!!!

—Margaret G. Rego, ,

It's our freedom

—Gloria Jackson, Fredericksburg, VA

The internet is a complex part of society, but needs to continue to be a level and open playing field.

—Elizabeth Moak, Roanoke, VA

"Net neutrality" is a fundamental part of a healthy technological society. To remove it in any way that would stifle innovation.

—Mark Swanson, ann arbor, MI

T V news cannot be trusted to reporting the truth but on the internet one can get different points of view and then decide on an opinion.

—Mr. Arthur Brunet, Danvers, MA

Because the little guy cannot afford the new fees that would be charged for premium access, and that is NOT fair...

—Carolyn Simms, Republic, KS

The premise of net neutrality is what the founding fathers fought for and believed in... We owe our nation at least as much.

—Chris Sataua, Naples, FL

I do not trust corporations to act in my best interests. They will certainly manage the internet to help silence my voice and criticism when it comes to activism.

—Peter Lockwood, Patagonia, AZ

Please don't let them put in a slow lane the cable internet in this back woods of MN is already so slow it's like the old dial up. They have been slowing our access down for months now and we pay almost a hundred dollars a month now for phone and internet. if you let this pass we will no longer be able to afford internet. because they will charge so much more for fast internet. Please for once let the consumer not get f-----d . Thank you

—Charles Davis, Bemidji, MN

I prize the right to access the internet without interruption from corporations to manipulate it for their profit. I am a person, just like you. Please do not take away my right. Thank you

—Ryan Walters, Austin, TX

Because I don't pay more for fast water/electricity/POTS.

—Eamon Courmane, Somerville, MA

Net neutrality is absolutely essential to the fundamental architecture of the Internet, that is the internet which has incalculably democratized knowledge and information and made it the potent accelerent of change, much of it promoting egalitarian aims and igniting the opportunity for political liberation across the globe. There are powerful entrenched interests who would like nothing more than to end that internet. What we're facing is a crucial step towards that goal of taking the people's internet away from them forever.

—Erik Bloom, Baltimore, MD

Keep the Net free. Stop the greedy corporations who value money over freedom.

—Ann Lalish, El Cerrito, CA

Fairness is the American way.

—Lou Rowan, Seattle, WA

As a software developer, just being able to put some code up online and have people find it and improve or comment on it is huge, and this could easily destroy that ability to find any random thing some software dev did for fun or boredom.

—Nick Donais, ,

Everyone needs equal access to the Internet. The purpose of the Net was for everyone to share information freely - creating another forum for inequality, the "haves" and "have nots" is unethical and does not help to better society.

—Courtney, ,

The Internet is an equal opportunity for all, we shouldn't have to pay to have an advantage

—Andrew Oneski, Malden, MA

Everyone deserves easy access to the internet. Some days it's my only connection to the world. Keep net neutrality, it should be available to everyone.

—Stephanie Eckard, Fair Oaks, CA

Our democracies, to be effective and representative of its citizens depends on a level and open access to the Internet. Thank you for your positive considerations.

—Charles Schofield, ,

A free and open internet protects freedom of speech, stimulates ISP competition and promotes innovation.

—Carrie Barclay, San Francisco, CA

This is a step backwards for all of humanity.

—Daniel melo, Hudson, MA

Very simply, Net Neutrality is fair and right!

—, Belmont, CA

Access to a diversity of services such as health care, education, commerce, and helpful information that is not published anywhere else or accessible. If either I as a user or my provider has a slower internet "path," I am therefore not able to get the services or information I need soon enough or perhaps at all.

—Angela Munoz, Oakland, CA

I pay enough for internet as it is and NOT paying a Dime more period!!

—Barry Deist, Chambersburg, PA

Net Neutrality is important to everyone because there are many extraordinarily selfish organizations who are more than happy to send the world retrograde just to indulge their greedy gluttonous interests.

—Marty Ozols, Point Roberts, WA

because otherwise the internet is useless

—Katrina Sauve, ,

Without it, the internet will die. I really shouldn't have to explain why. Free hosting, sharing and viewing is essential to the development and growth of the internet.

—Anthony, Denver, CO

Proposed rules would allow Big Telecom to charge steep tolls for premium access — and block or slow down websites and services that can't afford the new fees.

—Wendy Both, ,

In order to support new small businesses, which is supposedly a goal of the government's Economic Action Plan, you cannot be allowing Big Telecom to charge large fees that would stifle new businesses' ability to compete! And since Canada still claims that its democracy is a representation of the people's wishes, stop kowtowing to large corporate interests! Thank god corporations have not been given the same rights as people in this country, and I hope they never will. So stop acting as though their rights supersede ours!

—J Chesson, ,

People who can afford a certain amount to have access to the net should not be penalized or slowed down for lack of money. Whole universities have students who rely on the net for communications with their professors and many other things. College is already expensive enough for them. Equality for all on the net is only fair.

—Sheila Swan Laufer, Eugene, OR

The contrary will go against everything I believe in and fight for...

—Evelyne Lapouge, ,

Companies should not have the ability to regulate or censor internet traffic.

—Emily Messina, District Heights, MD

The internet is meant to be free to all people on the planet not to just those who can afford it. We have had enough of all the inequalities in the world. It is time for all people to share equally and for the big corrupt corporations to take a flying leap.

—James McConnell, Glendale, AZ

At this point, it's abundantly clear that the Internet should be treated as a common carrier. Do the right thing.

—Dan Henkoff, Lowell, MA

I want an open internet to uphold 'equal opportunity' for business, education, and the collective human experience -- not to widen the gap of the haves and have nots.

—Lauren Barnett, Brooklyn, 2A, NY

Free speech is the backbone of democracy. Let Big Telecom throttle or edit web sites they disagree with and democracy is dead.

—Mr. Peter Adams, Framingham, MA

It needs to be neutral. No one is any better than someone else. I'm on a fixed income and use the internet for everything. Leave it Neutral for all.

—Donna Schreck, Phoenix, AZ

Don't hurt the people who use the internet every day. The big Telecommunication companies don't need the extra money. You will just allow them to get richer and richer and we won't be able to afford their fees and more will leave the internet. We don't need them to slow it down either. You must reclassify Internet Service provider's as common carriers.

—Doreen Mann, Lisbon, ME

Keep internet open for the people! We have to rely on free and open internet for modern life!

—Mitchell Cripe, St. Louis, MO

I have long believed Internet should have been classified as Common Carriage from the start.

—Curtis Schroeder, Atlanta, GA

Decency. Period.

—Vine Madder, ,

1. freedom of speech, access, belief, and personal control of one's environment without infringement by more powerful and wealthier corporate entities 2. empowering and supporting small businesses as the primary drivers of a healthy economy

—Stefany G. Burrowes, Santa Fe, NM

The Internet should remain ungoverned by Telecom Giants! They have more than enough bandwidth to fuel our usage - and thus, do not need to trim our access to it for additional profits.

—Paul Mathieu, ,

Of we want this country to survive, if we want a country for ALL the people we need NET NEUTRALITY Don't sell our country out to the corporations My family fought for this country and its values; it is about time the people in power start doing the same

—Earl and Mary Shumaker, Sycamore, IL

Free expression, unfiltered access to information, and equal opportunity are critically important liberties and hallmarks of Western Civilization. I urge you to stand against the attempts by a few powerful, greedy corporations to destroy Net Neutrality and interfere with, block, and slow down websites and content they don't like. Leave such practices to totalitarian states such as China. They don't belong in America.

—Scott Holder, Mission Viejo, CA

A free internet is as essential as free speech. We need freedom to pursue new lines of communication, industry, commerce, science, etc, and bottlenecking or regulating that will hurt our growth as a culture and a nation.

—Adam Bradley, Berkeley, CA

I want to research for sites not to be limited to what others set up for me, and as a professional researcher, net neutrality supports my job and me.

—Denise Marshall, East Hanover, NJ

As other countries (i.e. Brazil) have recently moved against these kind of inside deals with Telcos, it would be ironic for a 'democratic' country such as Canada to do the opposite. This would be a very backwards step.

—Marc Dube, ,

Incumbent telcos and cable ISP's already hurt their users with data caps and slow speeds for outrageous prices. The US is already among the slowest and most expensive internet in the world. Don't make it worse with slow lanes.

—Adam Gabel, Nashville, TN

Keep the internet free! I want the right to keep learning whatever i want or relaxing without having to worry about if I'll have to pay extra to access websites.

—James T. Church, Nampa, ID

My business relies on equal access for all Americans to the internet.

—Karen Kovick, Floyd, VA

Net neutrality is good for innovation and future work places!

—Lars A. Frøyland, ,

Most of the organizations that I support and the media that I depend on are small and not funded by mega-corporations. I do not want them to be reduced to a second class internet because giant corporations can afford more. I consider any attempt to stratify the internet to be an assault on free speech.

—Ann K Brady, Saint Paul, MN

I object to being manipulated.

—Carie Saville, ,

If passed it WILL destroy all hope for the small business man across the globe! It WILL stifle what little free speech we have left! It is time to stop cowering to big business and do what you were appointed to do maintain open and free internet.

—Tom Yeaw, Naples, FL

People have to know the truth ABOUT EVERYTHING!!! Up to nobody rule of us not by law.

—Maya Gorina, Kensington, MD

I live on the net, it is where I work and go to school, it is where I communicate. This bill to add a slow lane will not only hurt me but will hurt business in general. Nobody should be deprived of an open and free net and all this will lead to is more stifling of innovation and a further decrease in the US economy.

—Timothy Millikin, Springfield, MO

You should not be putting Big Business and their money ahead of the rest of the world ...here in America we are supposed to be a Democracy which treats everyone as equals, Big Money should not be entitled to a "Fast Lane", everyone should have the same service as the Internet is a vital part of everyone's life.

—Valeri Fornagiel, Wellsboro, PA

EVERYONE EVERYWHERE SHOULD HAVE EQUAL ACCESS TO THE INTERNET AND NOT HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT THE SPEED BECAUSE OF GREEDY CORPORATIONS!

—Teresa Mays, Glendale, AZ

I use the internet often I need the high speed with low cost. This service should be available to everyone equally.

—Walter Denton, Nineveh, NY

It is a life line for those with minimal income.

—Margaret Ananda, New York, NY

We have enough to contend from big groups without another interference. The internet is in some instances people's only connection with the outside world. The companies that do most transactions online, small websites that generate $$$ Children learning. Keep the net clear of big guns and bullies.

—Christine Haney, Salem, MO

This is just a no brainer. Please reclassify the internet as a public utility and save Net Neutrality. Thanks!

—Jo Sanders, Rocklin, CA

We must protect Net Neutrality -- it is the FCC's job to represent the people on this, not corporate interests. We have the most expensive and slowest internet as it is and this will make it worse if the FCC ignores the public interest. The added feature is the threat to democracy itself as with those with the most money will be able to control what the rest of us read and know. In the end this is not a small issue and I expect the FCC to do its job FOR THE PEOPLE of this country.

—Shelley Snow, Paso Robles, CA

Neutrality is basic to human freedom, respect for the rule of law & individual freedom fought for in World War 2 and democratic life

—Dr Rev'd Stephen Thompson,

Without Net Neutrality corporations will be able to control speech, thus taking away the right to free speech. Jerry Rubin said, "The power to define the situation is the ultimate power." DO NOT give corporations the power to define the situation, i.e., our lives.

—Huey Alcaro, Roseland, NJ

I depend on the net for fast, inexpensive access to economic opportunities and educational services.

—Lee Musgrave, Lyle, WA

I can not afford a fee to get what I have now. I do not want the internet to be censored. It is not broken, so does not need fixing. Leave it alone.

—Ann Weinhausen, Whitmore Lake, MI

The internet is a universe of true equality. Don't let big business start controlling the signal! They haven't the right!

—Christopher Tobias, Pittsburgh, PA

I do NOT spend my time on line in the interest of supporting big business, or the politically, power-mongering, wealthy and/or corporate elite. My primary interest is NOT in purchasing the "latest and greatest gizmo" NOR is it in getting the news from the CORPORATE dominated news media. I do NOT want an internet that contributes to further corporate domination of my public interests and life and livelihood. I do NOT exist in this world as a corporate CONSUMER ENTITY, and I am sick and tired of them viewing and treating me as such. I do NOT want to be further subjected to their constant bombardment of commercials pulling and pushing at every need they can think of and attempting to create within a person. INSTEAD - my experience is that I find ENDLESSLY MORE personal respect, integrity, honesty, reliability and creativity from the small businesses that exist on line. These represent people who are out to truly serve in the public interest and make a difference for the better in people's lives. These are people who give value added services without trying to squeeze every penny out of your wallet for dumb, stupid, worthless and often even very harmful products as with so much of corporate America. The wealthy and/or corporate elite do NOT need any further advantages on the internet. They have far too many advantages as it is already!!!! What are we doing cowering and catering to their demands???? Their interests herein are NOT in the best interest of Americans. This is their own SELF-CENTERED, SELFISH, SELF-INTERESTS here at work. Where is their high-minded spirit of public service here? How about some civic-mindedness here! Put these smug, pandering, glad-handing, tightfisted, tightwads in their place and make them compete on the same level playing field with the rest of us. Let's take a stand on principle - indeed on the founding principles of our Country for EQUAL FREEDOM AND OPPORTUNITY for ALL - and stand tall and fearlessly and unapologetically so. I am tired of seeing our public officials cow-tow to the whining demands of the "poor, downtrodden, abused" wealthy elite of this country. Give us a break from their smothering, ever-present influence and presence in all of our everyday affairs! Please! I much more prefer the opportunity for easy and open exchange with the average people of my own kind. I don't want for this to be relegated to some kind of second tier level of opportunity. Let the wealthy whine! So what! They are NOT being discriminated against! They have NO reason for needing SPECIAL PRIVILEGES on the Internet. Tell them to "Buck up." This is America. Land of freedom and equality. If they don't like it, LEAVE. Your best option would seem quite obvious in reclassifying all ISPs as common carriers. I can't see any sense in doing otherwise.

—Craig Schuster, Holland, OH

The Internet was created for everyone to use, for everyone to share, and for no limited subset of people to govern or control.

—Jordan Longstaff, ,

Our democracy is served best when all have an equal platform and access speed.

—J Spicer, ,

The current internet of Net Neutrality is what democracy is truly about. The everyday American is on equal footing with the wealthy and powerful. I have searched but have not been able to find any rational argument for turning the internet over to the money talkers. Stand up for the many over the few!

—Harry Michaels Jr., Fort Collins, CO

The internet is the most important tool ever created for the human race. It must remain a fair tool for everyone and not turned into a money making tool for the elite few. Leave the internet free and open to allow innovation from all levels of society.

—Steven Cheal, Logan, UT

This is absurd. There is no problem with the way the Internet is set up. By giving priority to Corporate America, the FCC is going to crush small businesses. So forget allowing people like Jeff Bezos to build a company from their garage or Steve Jobs, for that matter. America will fall even farther behind in developing technologies and innovations if the Internet is changed to having fast lanes and slow lanes.

—Tyler Sullivan, Oklahoma City, OK

Because the internet is the last frontier where humanity can innovate and connect without commercial restrictions. It gives a voice to the poor and it empowers the disabled. It is the ultimate equalizer

—Robert Sebestyen, ,

There is more than enough inequality in our society without make the most accessible portal for information exchange unequal as well.

—Connie Griffiths, ,

Do not sell us out to big business! Leave our internet open and free, it is not there so big business can make more money and pay bigger bonus to the CEO.

—Kenneth Hyche, cullman, AL

The Internet is the most significant advance to the dissemination of human knowledge since Guttenberg invented moveable type. Imagine if big corporations had limited the use of the printing press. Where would we be now? Don't let big biz choke off the flow of knowledge to the people who need it and can put it to work.

—Tom Rush, Norwich, VT

Net neutrality has and continues to be the only sensible way to go. Giving the "big" internet companies the right to charge for "premium" access and control bandwidth of websites and services that will not be able to afford those new fees goes against the principles and intent of Congress. Reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers"!

—Wayne Parks, ,

Allowing "deep pockets" and "politically friendly" users to get better access and service would be like giving commercial vehicles access to high speed lanes on highways and making private vehicles stay in one, lower speed limit lane, or WORSE... preventing us from even using the roads during "business hours"!

—Jon Stewart, Ipswich, MA

This must be allowed to continue.

—Peter Ajemian, Bridgewater, MA

Without net neutrality, content will be juried by financial consideration that should only become a factor after exposure on a level playing field. This would deny the "essential" quality of access required by living in the moment and the future.

—David Burkett, Eugene, OR

The bigger a company gets, the more they abuse their power.

—Calvin Azzola, Kalamazoo, MI

Information on the net should be free and available to anyone that seeks it.

—Kris Kelly, Petaluma, CA

Do not cater to big Telecom any more than you already do, please.

—Colleen Kearney, ,

The gap between the haves and have nots is broad enough. Don't perpetuate and grow the gap by adding a fast internet speed for those who can pay for it.

—Debora Sayre, Pinole, CA

It is a more fair and equitable way to do it.

—Georgena Murtland, ,

July 14, 2014 Federal Communications Commission ("F.C.C.") Washington, DC ATTN: Office of the Commissioner Dear Sir: 1.) Maintaining "net neutrality" is vital for everyone on the planet if only as a means to speak freely - something the U.S.A. was supposedly founded on. You continue to rail against China, Cuba, Russia and all of those countries where "Freedom of Speech" does not exist or, as when the Red Cross was allowed to tour Hitler's "specific" concentration camps on "specific" days, only exists at those times and only to suit the needs of those corrupt countries, but now you are going to what, "help" the rest of the planet by allowing giga-com communication companies to "tax" our usage - to one or extent or another? Who are you fooling? Or, more likely, who is fooling you into believing that they will be helping the rest of mankind? 2.) May I remind you that the FCC's mission, specified in Section One of the Communications Act of 1934 and amended by the Telecommunications Act of 1996 (amendment to 47 U.S.C. §151) is to "make available so far as possible, to all the people of the United States, without discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, or sex, rapid, efficient, Nation-wide, and world-wide wire and radio communication services with adequate facilities at reasonable charges." The Act furthermore provides that the FCC was created "for the purpose of the national defense" and "for the purpose of promoting safety of life and property through the use of wire and radio communications." Sir, if you can't recall what the FCC's initial mandate was instituted for in the first place, please note that your allowing giga-com's to essentially "tax, monitor, impede and/or curtail" our internet usage at will would likely NOT endear the USA - possibly the most hated country on the planet already - to the rest of the internet users herein. Yours very truly, Gary David Brown, Station Attendant Emeritus Toronto, Canada C: Office of the Chair, C.R.T.C, Ottawa : Et. al. /E. & O. E.

—Station Attendant Emeritus Gary David Brown, ,

Please maintain the current true net neutrality.

—Gaius Poehler, St. Paul, MN

No entity or person should have more priveledges than others in the use of the internet.

—J Miskelly, baltimore, MD

The Internet belongs to We The People. Not big telecom.

—Kimberly Shaub, Ewing, NJ

I use the internet to keep in touch with my friends!

—D P, Madison, WI

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Vitaly, ,

No Internet user is more important than another.

—Ari Meyer, Austin, TX

Speedy access of information that will greatly be impinged upon by fast and slow lanes plus you are introducing a way for people to have to pay for every Internet transaction.

—Mark Coates, White River Junction, VT

Democracy!

—Kathy Shimizu, ,

Don't mess with the Internet!

—Psühho Punk, ,

Because Korea and France have internet without oligopoly, they get faster connections at a lower cost. Same with cell service. Please stop serving corporate America and start serving people.

—Mark Dempsey, Orangevale, CA

It should be important to everyone.

—Stephen Parkin, ,

Please keep it fair. Thanks.

—Araelia Murphy, ,

There are too many reasons why this is important but a main reason is that corporate might should have nothing to do with what I see. Freedom of information please.

—Kristen Knudsen, ,

Freedom of Information

—, Springfield, MA

Net Neutrality is what keeps the Internet a level playing field for innovation. If the incumbents have their way, they will stifle all competition to increase short term profits; dampening the long term benefits of increased innovation that is critical to the growth of the wider economy. Big corporations do not innovate because it's too risky. They'd rather preserve their golden towers by co-opting regulators and lobbying for legislation that serves only to protect themselves. Don't increase the barrier to entry for the Internet... it does not serve the best interests of society.

—Mr. Josh Wisniewski, Cambridge, ON

The internet should be open, and you should get what you pay for without data caps,slow downs or throttling.

—Robert Ritter, Cleveland, OH

Freedom and stability of the internet should be a global right.

—Ryan Gonzalez, Somerville, MA

We're going backwards with this process. The little guy (aka people like me) are sick of being screwed by big business over and over again. It's time for the people to get their way and big business can take a back seat. What have they done for us lately? The answer is they take, we give and We, the people are the ones who lose out. Time for that to end!

—Tim Snack, ,

Internet access should be available and affordable for everyone.

—Alex, ,

Net neutrality is important to me because with it I am allowed to see anything possible if the right situation happens for big telecom they will be able to control what I view and I personally find that to be quite unfair and unjust to these citizens of the US.

—Garrett Neff, Wichita, KS

The internet belongs to us all not some corporate entity looking to make millions at the expense of access
—, Danbury, CT

The internet is a utility, and no one, surely not the carriers, should have the right to interfere with websites.
—Joanne Osuna, Tucson, AZ

I prefer to know why some Internet users should be entitled to special treatment.
—Paul Korrol, North Babylon, NY freedom is a right not your hands on our privacy

—Andre Paradis, ,

Being a retiree and a big fan of the internet I need net neutrality to keep the internet affordable for those on a fixed income.
—Al Buitenwerf, Worth, IL

Carriers shouldn't be able to both charge me to receive content faster, and charge producers to send it to me faster. These services need to serve as common carriers if we don't want the internet to go the way of radio and television: another bland, one-to-many medium which cannot drive innovation, and serves only as yet another way to deliver ads.
—John Doucette, ,

"Slow lane" is extortion: there is no slow lane, just a paid lane and a dead lane.
—Joran Dox, ,

We need to keep the internet accessible to all.
—Vicky White, Langley,

It is much fairer way.
—Donald G Salisbury, ,

The internet is the last widely used medium not completely under the control of the plutocracy. So called "fast lanes" may be the last significant nail in the coffin of our imaginary democracy.
—, Woodridge, IL

The internet should be the same for everyone.
—Janelle Barton, Forest Grove, OR

We do not want to do anything that would suppress access to market place of ideas, goods and services by creating classes of operators on the net, especially when there is no reason whatsoever to do such a thing except for the very, very short term profits of a few outrageously profitable providers. In other words this is about greed and if the FCC does not protect the interests of the vast majority, it is by definition not acting as a "public" entity but rather as a tool of the few wealthy and powerful. Of course, the precedent set by the FCC will have repercussions, one way or the other, globally.
—Gordon Durnin, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me, because it the best way to express my disappointment in government or point out the stupidity in the ISP or in general. Its how I get news on what's happening in faming, politics, and so on. It censor freedom would be the most dishonorable thing to do. People wouldnt be able to speak on things that are wrong that need to be paid attention to. If you censor then you basically saying to people that, your not important and you need to shut your mouth. That's tyranny the internet needs to remain open so people can chat and discuss things

—Peter Monte, Pittsford, NY

The internet and online social net work has become one of the most common and extensive forms of public expression in this era. The internet has become whether for better or worse a integral part of a large majority of citizens and businesses alike. The purposed bill can and should be seen as unconstitutional intentionally limiting or restricting public opinion and speech, limiting access to information or services that a group of self interesting persons decided they dislike. It opens the doors to massive and extensive abuse of power. As of yet the american public have not had information censored, books banned or etc. this is much the same if not as obvious.

—Steven Henderson, Elverta, CA

the modern internet is absolutely vital to democracy!!!

—Shirlene Harris, San Antonio, TX

Freedom of information shouldn't be a business. Allowing control of the flow of information robs everyone of equal and fair footing in one of the few mediums where such a thing is still possible.

—Samuel Williams, ,

Everyone pays bills online to some extent (others do it by mail sometimes), do research for anything (research papers for school for example), networking (finding new friends and reconnecting with familiar ones in various social media sites), online shopping, and anything else to be done for convenience. Thank you. ,

—Andrew Costigan, Norwood, MA

we need less corporate control of our lives . . . not more.

—Iris Harrill, Sarasota, FL

It is my main source of communication and news, as I am on a limited income. Retired.

—Gwen Purdy, Poulsbo, WA

I am already exploited by VERIZON!

—Joyce Goodman Willard Goodman, Bethesda, MD

The Internet facilitates innovation and entrepreneurship. Without net neutrality it would be more difficult for smaller startups to compete in their market place.

—Valentin Staykov, ,

I want a free and open internet!

—Amy Takken, Loveland, CO

I work in community media. As TV moves from over-the-air delivery increasingly to Internet delivery, the ability of individuals and communities to create and share content freely will be threatened if there is an Internet 'slow lane'. ISPs should be common carriers. Ideally, they should not be allowed to own content creation entities as well. Distribution and content creation should be separated.

—Catherine Edwards, ,

The Internet is so important to the world so that its management should change hands, from the US to the UN. A move from an equal plane field for all to a slow lane for the vast majority will eventually produce a global reaction that will end up affecting seriously those who strive now to play dirty by considering what is a common good as private property. Nor the Internet nor we, the people, are toys to play with.
—Alexander Forsyth, Miami, FL

My small business' survival completely depends on this.
—Ms. Debbie Kirchen, Playa del Rey, CA

My software startup depends on equal treatment to have any competitive chance.
—Robin, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me as it enables me to communicate with relative ease with those who live a distance away from me, allows me to study using sources that are very official and also off-the-wall, and generally allows me to continue my lifestyle.
—Blaise Collins, Midlothian, VA

The market forced us to have computers. We rely on them now. Please don't allocate the Internet based on rich vs poor.
—Donald Kipper, Le Mars, IA freedom for all

—Mike B Gentes, , sick and tired of government putting the interest of big money corporations over the people's —Byron Tabor, Dallas, TX

Having an open internet is vitally important to the equality of all citizens, and businesses, in this country!
—Lane B Adams, Louisville, KY

Wellbeing of mankind depends on it.
—Alex Corona, ,

Net neutrality says America is equal for all.
—Regina Kolber, Brooklyn, NY

I am a senior with a fixed income. I believe prices will go up for companies as well as consumers if your proposed fast lanes become a reality. Please do NOT let this happen.
—D Bell, Veradale, WA

Net Neutrality affects those in Europe as well the US, due to popularity of certain websites (such as YouTube and Netflix). These new rules can potentially stop European companies breaking through into the American market, and therefore stop innovation in the US webmarket.
—Ramsay Smith, ,

We need the internet to be equal for everyone.
—Russ Grubbs, Burbank, CA

It allows the poor to have equal use, the poor are just as important as the rich when using the internet, the rich of this world never have enough wealth and the internet is just another item they want. They won't improve anything, they just create laws that allow themselves to charge for what is free now. Where do these people live. That's what the general public is increasingly asking. Protest camps at their front doors where they live sounds good. Lets start with Tom Wheeler

—John Downey, ,

I do business and interact with others over the internet.

—Ken Terry, Banning, CA

Don't create a two-tier internet. Innovation and freedom of speech should preside over big corporate interests.

—Michael Richardson, ,

It's about the last free level playing field on the planet I'd like it to stay that way.

—Tim Cockhill, st leonards,

Because you can find unbiased, unthreatened information from all over the world.

—Marcel Langevin, ,

Don't let the Internet go the route of our public airwaves which are now controlled by corporate giants. We want an Internet available to all citizens, uncontrolled and manipulated by those who have the money to have it their way.

—Mark Scardello, Petaluma, CA

The internet has become an educational tool for both my children and myself. Putting this tool out of reach you will be creating a nation that is uneducated and unprepared for the world to come . Taking us out of leadership roles in the world "As we KNOW it "

—Reyaz Rattan, ,

Access for all encourages and stimulates innovation which encourages investment. Big Telecom must not be allowed to dictate access for their own monetary benefit.

—Patrick Maloney, ,

Equality, Equality of service and equality of information. This country foundation is based on equality!!

—Vicki Shalhon, Brooklyn, NY

I like to have the freedom to browse the internet as I have walking down the street and choosing a store I like, not who pays the most! Thanks.

—Greg Young, ,

To stays connected with my families my boyfriend, and my friends who were distance and rarely local for my hometown. Using Facebook, Skype and any of the other websites that I used daily that makes it easier and more happier in my life.

—Colin S., ,

As a website developer, it is extremely important for me to see the internet as a level playing field with no content providers seeing priority over another.

—Brendan Coffey, ,

Speed and COST

—Gerard J. Mc Cormack, ,

The internet is becoming a replacement media for verbal & written communication (phone, mail), research, news, art, innovation, education (documentaries), entertainment (tv, movies), employment, investment, financial and retail opportunities. It is the backbone for convergence. In other words people are becoming more reliant on the internet every day and are finding themselves at the mercy of fewer and fewer suppliers. We must establish a foundation built on fair and equal access to stop these service suppliers from taking gross advantage of their monopoly situation.

—Donna E Baylis EXP, Creemore,

Internet access is one of the commons protected by our founding fathers, like our water and the air we breathe. Equal time on television has already been taken away for candidates running for office and now our elections are not fair or equal. This would take that a step further. When has the market been fair to all the people? Please protect net neutrality.

—Nancy S. Cole, Laguna Beach, CA

Allowing greed to govern for greed's sake only continues to diminish our nation's edge. We're already ranking poorly in bandwidth received for service price, don't make it worse. Consider all the giant businesses that have grown and all the jobs they now provide, and how at one time they were small, too small to have survived if slow lane bullshit was in place before their birth. That is the growth this nonsense will hamper. What will grow into the next eBay, Amazon, Netflix? We'll never know if you kill the seeds.

—Hunter Whitener-Smith, The Colony, TX

The internet is the greatest tool for democratization ever created. It can only remain useful to promoting human freedom and equality if it is prevented - by law - from being dominated by those with wealth and power. Net Neutrality is required to slow the increasing gap between the elite and the majority.

—Kyle Ellefsen, Irvine, CA

Like air and water internet must not be restricted for profit.

—Peter Ross, ,

When created the Internet was intended to connect the world so everyone could share ideas and knowledge regardless of the borders they were within, in it's infancy it connected places of higher learning in several countries throughout the globe. Big telecoms Didn't invent it, IT professionals did. The telecoms have made a fortune on taking an idea that they didn't create and was never meant for profit, they should be happy with what they have got but enough is enough, it's time it took some direction as originally intended.

—Glenn McDiarmid, ,

Small business can't compete when the affluent are preferentially stacked against the rest of the internet users. No competition, no business!

—Axel Meier, Oakland, CA

I would like to ensure that the internet remains a service that operates on a non discriminatory basis allowing over the top players to develop new services without having to cope with an entry fee and allowing consumers to select any possible over the top service on a non discriminatory basis.

—Sergio da Silva, Dudelange,

The internet was designed to be available to everyone and controlled by nobody. Making decisions that will affect the way the internet is used will have far reaching implications for all countries and isn't limited to the United States. The internet is information. Implementing any kind of restriction is censorship and it should be up to the users of the internet to govern what they want and don't want to see. Not some arbitrary decision made by a small group of law makers on behalf of what they think is everyone. They don't speak for me and I believe that the internet should be open and uncensored and not restricted in any way.

—Simon Leech, Vancouver,

I paid for the internet as a taxpayer. It belongs to me.

—Karen Hedwig Backman, Federal Way, WA

free speech is a basic human right. in todays day and age, net neutrality is fundamental to retaining free speech as a basic human right.

—Prasad Wielenga, ,

I deal with slow speeds and crashes all the time and my internet is not cheap now you want to make it worse for low income people like me?
I'm stretched to the limit as it is please put a stop to this growing greed.

—Paul Boyce, LA, CA

Freedom of speech, freedom of expression and above all else the freedom to explorer any content one chooses too.

—Mike Brisson, ,

Large corporations already control our elections and our government, to a great extent. Please leave the Internet free and equally open to all.
Don't corrupt yet another successful communication platform by allowing large corporate control of our access and speed.

—Charlotte M Fremaux, Harpers Ferry, WV

Net neutrality is a highly important issue, it fosters creation and allows people the freedom they expect in a democratic country. Allowing the slow lane policy to become law would effectively be a form of censorship, and not even one due to illegal content or secrecy, but one due to corporate greed if not enough money changes hands. The internet has always been a fluid thing, where great new ideas can rise easily, gain popularity and become the next big thing. The slow lane would take away from that and make it a constant and outdated structure. You can be sure that if you allow service providers to break the internet, people will find a way around it - global peer-to-peer networking is far from an impossibility, and at that point any hope of regulation from the government becomes lost. So please, handle this with grace and intelligence, keep the internet fair and free so the people don't have to fix your mistakes. Thank you, Gareth

—Gareth Yawching-Rickwood, ,

I should be able to express my opinion freely on the internet. I don't plan to anonymously bully people.

—Anatolie Pihut, ,

Allowing Internet fast sets the playing field for giant telecoms to dictate prices on favored websites thereby hindering new upstarts, as well as schilling customers with higher fees to access services which are already paid for

—Ronald Singh, ,

Innovations by small firms or individuals cannot compete in a divided internet. YouTube for example wouldn't be founded in a 2 class internet. In order to get more money, providers should work efficiently or make the internet access more expensive. The USA are fond of the achievements by individuals so why limit the possibilities for them?

—Jens Kutschera, ,

Taking away Net Neutrality is similar to taking away an individual's freedom of speech. It is unconstitutional and against what the founding fathers believed in. When on the Internet, I want to be able to do or say whatever it is that I want to do or say without having to be censored or prevented from doing so. Net Neutrality must be preserved.

—Kevin Poon, ,

the internet is as important to me as my telephone, if not more so!

—Bettemae Johnson, Albuquerque, NM

Its important for innovation and access

—Dr. Kanti Bansal, Houston, TX

Freedom

—Kathy wArd, , freedom of expression and commerce.

—Jeremiah Lance, Mesa, AZ

I should be able to make my choices, I pay for what you do and I don't like what your plans are.

—Peter Buchanan, ,

We don't need Big Corp manipulating more of our world than they do already.

—Keith McMillan, ,

Why this is important to me? Hmm... Not really sure I like the idea of a gated internet the same likes as Cable TV... The Cable TV business model is dead... Get with the freaking times already —John Frerichs, ,

Net neutrality is important because democracy depends on it.

—Mervyn Eugene Nicholson, , neutrality promote a healthy mind, advocates freedom and human awarness, in one word evolucion

—Maria A Santander, Pittsburgh, PA

Destroying our voice & hope might cause an awakening and some blow-back

—David Thacker, New Braunfels, TX

The Internet is our true fourth estate, being our only recourse in keeping the government honest and fighting back against the conservative voices of Big Media. With Internet fast lanes, its ability to do this would be highly crippled and it would become yet another vehicle to empower the people who are already in charge of this country.

—Jeff Hankins, Oliver Springs, TN

Net neutrality provides a level playing field for free expression, economic opportunity, and innovation. the increase in cost for plans would put the internet out of reach of many innovators and the disadvantaged.

—Michael jebb, ,

Consider what the facts and peoplle suggest!

—Neil, Grants Pass, OR

Premium access for the rich equals a two tier society, when will the USA catch up to other countries in internet service?

—Joe Schwirian, Stockton, CA

The thing that seperates the civilized society from the uncivilized is the freedom of speech. It ignites discussion, develoment and innovation. Taking it away will only bring it misery to internet platform and people will start looking for new means. As young as it is, the internet will be doomed. I can not understand how people can be shortsighted to undermine their own business for cash and lobby interests.

—Umut Sayin, ,

I live in the countryside. I can only get the slowest DSL speed, because AT&T refuses to run any fiber optic lines to any places that have any kind of Internet services. This includes people who still have only dial-up systems only. AT&T will only run fiber optics to new developements in the state of Georgia. Peasants with dirt floors in South Korea have faster Internet services than I can get in the U.S.A. America is a stagnant nation right now. Unless we keep up with the rest of the world, our nation will soon be a declining one.

—Mrs. Marsha Minnick, Madison, GA

Unfree internet will lead to permanent two-class society, one without access, rights, eco & social freedom: slave society.

—Frances Hoenigswald, Philadelphia, PA

Dont let corporations who make TRILLIONS in profits destroy the internet..Those of us who depend on it can barely survive as it is and can barely afford the fees charged now to access the internet!!!

—Gina Caracci, Cocoa, FL

What is free speech without internet? The UNCENSORED internet.

—BOZIDAR KORNIC, North Port, FL

I pay for tiered Internet Access from the evil empire known as Comblows. Content providers also pay for speed tiered internet to provide their content to their paying customers. What big ISP's i.e. Comcast would like to do is essentially create a market from a fake problem (I laugh at their network congestion issues, which they can't even prove.) I have personally owned and leased content servers to third party individuals. Even for those servers I leased, I still purchased a dedicated line from one the big internet backbone companies e.g. level3. Servers that had dedicated Dual-OC48 lines to provide the bandwidth needed for my customers to get their online playing needs. Please don't buy into all these ISP companies fake issues. These companies have the abilities to monitor their networks so closely that if they indeed were experience network issues from the increase amount bandwidth required due to netflix (lol) they could easily have monitored it and provided evidence to backup their claims. But they won't let anyone see what their network usage really looks like, because they know it's all a farce.

—Robert Ayala, Houston, TX

A free internet is essential to democracy. Governments and corporations should not be able to determine which websites make it to my browser.

—Patrick DeRochie, ,

I work in the computer industry, and tell people a lot that you don't fix what is't broken. The Internet is working. The proposals aren't addressing a problem. The problem is a few companies wanting to charge more for what they already charge for. The ISPs need to be classified as common carriers -- because that's exactly what they are.

—Jonathan Latimer, Kihei, HI

The Internet should be a place where persons can practice their free speech, assembly, and creativity. No person, government, or corporation should deny or limit access or give special access.

—Deborah Randolph Bratcher, Lubbock, TX

Don't let the large companies forge the internet to better suit their profits.

—Christopher Mcneil, Ellabell, GA

we need to stand for the people, not wealthy corporations

—Mr. Mike Kappus, san francisco, CA

The open internet is an important tool in petitioning our Government and participating in our Democracy. Please reclassify the internet as a public utility. "Which side are you on?"

—Cathy L. Brownlee, Paragould, AR

I want freedom f the internet, as it is supposed to be.

—Ralph Cosh, ,

This is important to me because once priorities are given to certain users, it will be the end of the internet for average people.

—Raymond Comeau, ,

The Internet as a common carrier promote small business, innovation and creativity, the backbones of our national economy. Other developed countries know the importance of the open Internet in international competition. Why doesn't the FCC?

—Thomas Eugene Musselman, Tucson, AZ

Make internet cheap and fast for everyone, and help small telecom businesses compete with the larger ones if possible.

—Ben, ,

I guess corporations are people.....do you have any idea how totally frustrating it is to fight every day of our lives for fairness and just plain common decency from the uncontrollable and unconscionable 1%??!!

—Marian Puglisi, Duluth, MN

The internet changed my life forever by providing me access to other like minded individuals and providing an outlet for my voice. Through the contacts I gained through online job experiences and personal encounters I was able to move from Midland, TX...a land of uber-conservative thought and practice to northern CA. It is not a minor change, it was a personal and professional transformation. The internet can be the new 'Great Equalizer' which the rich and powerful do not, and have never, wanted for those who are 'less' than they. But it is a core principle, a core value, of the American experiment!

—Paula Kline, Rohnert Park, CA

Let's keep freedoms protected for ALL people and not just those that can afford it!

—Ruth Kellogg, Dublin, CA

It is no longer a novelty - it is a necessity for commerce, communication, and information. Allowing a business to decide what is/is not important, or which items/concepts/positions take precedent over others is simply wrong.

—James Soares, Everson, WA

Please don't Destroy the Internet.

—Marek Borik, ,

Creating an internet "fast lane" is actually creating an internet "slow lane". It's the best way for the current monopoly powers to keep competition out of reach in the same way they did with the cable TV business by agreeing to not overlap in their service areas so they never have to compete on price or service quality. Please keep the internet a free market! If these companies provide a good service at a good price, they will do fine. Competition will only improve the internet for everyone. Let the free market reign!

—Justin Newton, Cincinnati, OH

I'm lucky just to be able to afford internet service. Adding a "fast" lane for extra money will ruin it for me, and a lot of other people. Please don't allow the telecoms to do this.

—Kathryn A. Burns, Austin, TX

Net Neutrality is needed to stop providers from exploiting their market power

—John A Davis, ,

It is only fair for the consumer

—Irene, Boca Raton, FL

So many of us can't afford anything more than what we already have!

—Debra A Myers, Bath, NY

Net Neutrality is important to me because I think information should be available to anyone without limitations or constraints.

—David, ,

It is important to our nation's founding principals to allow equal access to all.

—Jennie Kosko, Sunnyvale, CA

I strongly urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality!

—Jeff Jurgensmier, Tolland, CT

I don't think the internet should be controlled by large corporations that continue to limit our choices of what we want to do.

Invent, watch, browse or anything that will stimulate lots of competition with lots of choices without being forced by a handful of companies that control everything like the cable companies do now.

—Gerald Rolfe, E Greenwich, RI

I don't want to be targeted by advertisers more than I am already.

—Brian Wrigley, ,

freedom of speech, leveling the playing field, access to information, goods and services. ETC.

—Michelle M Powell, Brightwood, VA

The internet should be open and free for all users and not restricted by mega communications corporations that seek to eliminate the consumers' rights of access.

—Alan Oresky, Laurel, MD

The internet has been an open and unbiased communications medium for roughly a quarter century, and it has worked wonderfully well. I'd just as soon it STAYED that way, free from monetarily influenced favoritism.

—Loren Miller, Bedford, OH

Net neutrality is important to me because it is probably the only reason the United States has not had an economic collapse. Capitalism is a bad thing but for some reason the government loves it. This entire situation was caused by capitalism and the entire situation pissed off a lot of U.S. citizens. Without net neutrality poor people like me will be screwed over much further than we already have been by some of the governments' other "bright" ideas. Speaking of bright ideas, without net neutrality it will be super hard to use and share ideas online. Right now I could start a company that makes websites and the people of the internet get to decide if it's good. But if you go through with the government's dumbest decision ever made, people will either have their websites blocked, have extra fees to pay to keep the website up, or have their website be on the slow lane. I will end this with a simple FYI. The internet is not pipes!

—Nathan Bright, ,

The Internet works fine just the way it is now--no need to change it in this way.

—David Tucker, Boone, IA

We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: 1.Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. 2.Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. 3.Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. 4.Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Kimberly Hall, ,

So we do not over paid for the net.

—Karl Boerger, Beatrice, NE

You need to keep the internet affordable for all. Allowing providers to slow down website and servers will only affect the ones that can least afford it

—Pat Suddes, ,

Open, unfederred, and widely accessible. That is what the internet should look like.

—Matthew tucker, ,

Corporations control enough! Don't give up internet control to them too!

—David Beaudin, ,

We Do Not Need Big Corporations Taking Over The Internet, Period

—Henry F Balgemann, Mesa, AZ

The internet has been doing fine for almost two decades. It gives everyone a forum. Please just leave the internet alone!

—Elizabeth Ishmael, Eden Prairie, MN

Keep the internet the way it is they make enough money from us .

—Keith P Wise, ,

Internet is a public service. As so, it should not be different than phone, water or electricity services.

—Javier Pinzon, Chicopee, MA

The internet's basis in universal freedom is built upon net neutrality.

—James Walters, ,

I don't want to be penalized for my services because there is not an even playing field on the Internet. That would not be fair.

—Elmo Dunn, Longwood, FL

Freedom

—Simon Novak, ,

The passing along of ideas is very important for the human race.

—Robert Rogan, Detroit, MI

It gauranties the fairness of the system.

—Glen B, ,

The Internet has been one of the most amazing tools available to this generation for expression and commerce. The freedom to express oneself or do business through this medium should be available to all Americans equally, not simply those who can afford to pay off the telecom companies. As it is now, many artists and small businesses can exist because the Internet gives them the exposure to do what they love and be seen by enough people to make a living off of it, and there is no need for them to be obscenely rich to start. Such a medium should never be about how much money you have; it's rapidly becoming recognized as a basic human right in other countries. Don't put America behind the curve.

—Gilbert Vandling, Endicott, NY

The internet is still in it's infancy, I want to see it properly evolve and thrive

—Kip, ,

A free internet is vital for innovation.

—Scott Townsend, Fort Myers, FL

Because free open knowledge is important.

—Nhung Jarrett, San Antonio, TX

What if, when the US telephone network was being built in the early 20th century, the Bell System had been allowed to charge higher rates for phone lines with better sound quality, and to charge companies extra to have people connect to their phone number more quickly? Sounds like some bad ideas, huh?

—Sarah Cardin, Portland, OR

It will be the same if you deny calling a phone number and give priority to who pay the most of the money to make calls

—Hicham Regragui, Altamonte Springs, FL

Keep the Internet as it is - don't change it.

—Neil Lillico, ,

Levels the playing field for all.

—Bryan Litson, ,

I deserve the same internet as any corporation. I pay a larger percentage of my income in taxes then they do!

—Danee Costa, Birmingham, AL

Corporations should not receive preferential treatment over individual taxpayers. Fight for me!

—Mr. Royce Quibodeaux, Austin, TX

With no Net Neutrality, there is no future at all!

—Christian Nommay, ,

The internet was founded on net neutrality. Allowing extra charges goes against everything that it was made for. Only the rich soil be able to afford the fast service and extra items. Do not allow this to happen.

—Ron Crowder, ,

Net Neutrality's important to me because it allows for free expression and sharing ideas without being forcibly removed or censored.

—Matt Ringquist, Redwood Falls, MN

don't take away our rights
—Victor C. Soule, Milwaukie, OR

Allowing the internet to become a means by which some companies can profit greatly from will have dire consequences for many. Please don't allow for greed to destroy something that's so dear to so many.
—Julio Freitas, ,

I want a open internet for everybody. Please do not slow it down for anybody. Please do not block or slow down for anybody that cannot afford the new very high fees.
—Regula Kummer, Toledo, OH

The US policies shape how the internet is used and accessed around the world. Common carriage is the most democratic way that citizens can participate in the free and democratic exchange of information regardless of their status or position.
—Wilf Rimmer, ,

Fair practices for consumers
—Aileen Rivera, Richmond, VA

Because I use it for everything. It is just as important as the electricity that runs it.
—Albert Gostick, ,

Ending net neutrality allows those with the means to control access to the internet to their advantage. It may initially be motivated by profit but ultimately it may impinge upon free speech as some can pay to have better carriage while others are effectively blocked. It is just another step toward oligarchy and away from the democracy of the US Founding Fathers. Its effects will be experienced in jurisdictions outside the US, marking a profound and inadvertent effort by the US government to damage democracies elsewhere - the very antithesis of what America had always advocated and fought to protect. The FCC should maintain ISPs as common carriers and not allow net neutrality to die.
—Tim Segulin, ,

Our rights as citizens are being abrogated by big companies. Are they in existence to service our needs or the other way around. Right now it feels as though we are being completely ignored.
—Naheed Oberfeld, Rockville, MD

The Internet needs to be a tool of democracy. Creating a two-tier system will only allow for corporations that can pay a premium for bandwidth to lock everyone out that is unable to join the game. This is not a game and Net Neutrality must be retained.
—Timothy John Akers, San Carlos, CA

System works just fine as is. Why 'fix' something that's not broken?
—Aaron Michael Quantz, Woodland Hills, CA

All people should have access to the information and communication options available today.
—Jeanne, Martell, NE

Equal access for all is the American Way!
—LeaAnn Rosen, Sedona, AZ

If we lose the Internet to this watch the Internet shrink.
—Steve Dickheiser, Independence, MO

The Net Neutrality is important because the Internet is a Public Utility and should be regulated as such. We don't pay to have electricity or gas quicker than others. Everyone gets electricity and gas with the same level of delivery rates.

—Jairo J Angulo, Los Angeles, CA

Keep the net open and free!

—Mark Waltamath, Auburn, GA

It's the reason companies like Amazon, Netflix and Hulu among others have been so successful

—Sam Hill, Flagstaff, AZ

It is thanks to the original nature of the internet from it's BBS days that contributed so much towards many advances in our current world. By not giving any priority over any information, then could we have a balanced and neutral distribution of information free of bias, allowing people with things and ideas to share and people in-need of information to be able to have access to what they need. Should premium access be only allowed for those who can afford the premium, valuable information might be left on the way-side out of the information "highway" and probably left to oblivion. There have been many times when people with great ideas with no financial capabilities, but thanks to the open and neutral internet did they manage to get their ideas out to contribute to our modern civilization. A huge part of humanity's future might be locked away should this net neutrality be taken away, should the people that is on the verge a breakthrough needed was some circuit diagram or chemical formula that is not on the "premium access" network, the idea that is coming to fruition will be delayed or even shut-down because information could not be shared freely enough.

—, ,

Telecom corporations already hold the power of duopoly in most of our cities where you only have one choice between one shoddy service or another. Removing net neutrality will only increase their stranglehold on the American people.

—Perry Cavender, Dallas, TX makes the internet open for everyone.

—Michal Krzyszczyk, ,

The Internet has great potential. I would not see it squished.

—Luke Sciarappa, Westborough, MA

LIMITS FREEDOM! We pay outrageous prices already for internet here and not you want us to pay these prices for censorship. NO WAY!

—Janko Bajagic, ,

Internet must be neutral and free in a real democracy.

—Arlene Merryman, Berkeley, CA

A free and open internet is the single greatest technology of our time, and control should not be at the mercy of corporations.

—Tristan Coysh, ,

A free and open internet not gated by fast lanes allows us to utilize this great tool for a multitude of different things. A slow lane would greatly inhibit the ability to have an open and flowing place of ideas

—Cormac Doyle, Long Beach, CA

I support free media and having the Internet controlled is another attempt to control the public. Keep the Internet open, free, and uncensored. Thanks.

—Tareq McDonald, Chantilly, VA

I would prefer to avoid the probable "hacker's" complete take-down and sabot if this should happen...

—Guy H Swansbro, Madison, WI

I want to be able to access any website regardless of their ability to pay for "premium access". Do not allow the big telecoms to restrict or throttle down sites that don't pay a fee for access. Please keep the internet free and reclassify ISP's as common carriers.

—Linwood Sasser, Simi valley, CA

1984!

—Christopher Panayi, New York, NY

It gives us the opportunity for educational standards and purposes for the future

—Kayla Ingram, Savannah, GA

Equal access.

—Rory Brennan, Seattle, WA

I oppose any advantage that could be given to large groups with more money than the average citizen.

—George Marsh, Tiffin, OH

The internet is great because it is fair and open. Big telecom is on the wrong side of history.

—Mike Verde, ,

It is important for the same reasons any media has to represent the people who use it. If it's not, it becomes a tool for dictatorship and unequal use of power and diffusion of ideas. Use that money you got for censorship to bring a better education and spread truth. That way the users will do a good choice about what to read.

—Juan Andrés Mingrone, ,

I already pay my ISP for internet access. I also already subscribe to many services provided over the internet (Netflix, Amazon Web Services, Microsoft Azure, Xbox Live, etc.) In order for these services to continue to exist and remain economical, the ISPs must be reclassified as common carriers. No ISP or other group should be allowed to prioritize Internet traffic, nor charge content and service providers for carriage.

—Doug Wilson, ,

Because it's free press not charged press!!!

—Paul A. Watts, Belvidere, IL

I work for a small business that would be directly - and adversely - affected by dismantling net neutrality. Furthermore, I telecommute, which is one more way net neutrality helps me; I don't have to pay big money to be able to do my job quickly. If net neutrality goes away, my ability to do my job could depend on how much more money I can afford to pay!

—Robert Hood, Hixson, TN

it gives everyone with a computer access and doesn't play favorites, much anyway.

—Kevin McKelvie, Chicago, IL

Freedom

—Jean Boulet, ,

The Internet has integrated a natural sense to human the psyche. Any negative reform will impose adverse to social behaviour that will hugely impact upon the economy and society.

—Peter T. Wilson, ,

Average citizens deserve it; so much of the private sector is in the hands of the 1% wealthy; access to the internet with reasonable fees is extremely important to an open and democratic society.

—Sara Metheany, Warner, NH

Freedom of expression and net neutrality

—Adnan Zia, ,

Because it is necessary for the free exchange of ideas, especially for those in the lower economic classes.

—Mary Hopkins, New York, NY

Net Neutrality is the most important expression of Freedom of Speech in the digital age. The internet is a wonderful tool for the discovery and proliferation of knowledge, and it is absolutely imperative that it remain an area free of the influence of government or corporate influences who wish to mine its data in order to control us.

—Jeremiah Parks, Ann Arbor, MI

Without true net neutrality large internet providers will be able to fleece internet content delivery companies for more money. This will lead to higher bills for consumers. Companies such as verizon and comcast should have their content delivery sides of their business compete on a level playing field. That can't happen unless they are reclassified as common carriers.

—Brien Pike, Valley Springs, CA

Fair opportunity for new vendors, healthy competition that makes capitalism thrive.

—Chris DeCoste, ,

I believe it should remain free so everyone can gain fair access.

—Beverly Holton, Capitol Heights, MD

Discriminatory pricing doesn't work. Especially for something as important to humanity's development as information dissemination.

—Jordan Hooley, Middlebury, IN

The internet is a clearly a utility and must be declared as such and run/monitored as such.

—Dr. Dennis A. Nagy, Chapel Hill, NC

I shouldn't need to explain something so simple as the need for Net Neutrality.

—Thomas Johansen, ,

I use the internet every day and vehemently oppose any action that would curtail my access to the entire internet. To put control over who can access what and charge people when they want access to the entire internet is fundamentally wrong!!!

—Elizabeth L Audas, Des Moines, IA

We need to be fair. Think about this, if you steal the freedom from many of us, it will affect the worldwide economy by slowing down some businesses websites (because not all can afford the silly high fees you are proposing!) and so then how are we able to see their websites when you allow big greedy businesses to thrust products we are not interested in (and probably won't buy!) into our faces via websites we love!? How is this helping the economy?? All you are doing is feeding big businesses who will then probably lose anyway because you take away the ones we are interested in from us!! Grow up and stop being selfish and stupid! The internet is FOR ALL OF US NOT A FEW RICH PEOPLE!!!

—Chelle Snail, ,

Hasn't the US government implemented enough tyranny already?

—Chuck Reid, ,

Benefitting from internet use should not involve slow and fast lanes or require different fees levied by giant telecom firms. It is unconscionable that the FCC is eve considering those changes.

—David Sanderson, Lamoine, ME

The people's interest's need to be put ahead of already wealthy corporations for once. This proposal can only benefit the corporate interest's and the politicians who are helping to push this policy through. There is absolutely NO WAY that this policy will benefit anyone else. The public is fully aware of all of this.

—Werner Fritzsching, Brooklyn, NY

The internet stood for freedom of speech, now, as usual, people in power want to make it exclusive to the few. Please reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Dominic Tuck, ,

Privacy is a choice which is not for others to stop.

—Andrea Stevens, Brighton, CA

The Internet has changed our lives by giving us access quickly to anyone and everything in the world. It has made our lives so much easier.

—Linda I Hixson, Ludington, MI

I aspire to become an internet content creator as a career, the proposal would make it almost impossible for me to pursue this goal.

—Thomas Williams, ,

Because big business should not dominate our lives

—Barry Ewart, ,

Mr. Wheeler, you claim that you support Net Neutrality but your "Fast Lane - Slow Lane" proposal is the exact opposite. Please stand by your word and support REAL Net Neutrality.

—Frank Ward, Depoe Bay, OR

Don't let the big telcom companies turn the Internet into a HAVES and HAVE NOTS issue for who gets the best service.

—James Tinker, Houston, TX

Open Internet is crucial to drive innovation, without open internet only companies with deep pockets will be able to thrive. Smaller companies with limited resources will have to divert crucial resources from R&D towards paying ransom to ISPs.

—Virat Gohil, Tustin, CA

As it stands, internet limiting, filters, slow lanes, retaining personal information and search history, blocking websites etc are a massive breach of personal rights, privacy and security. It would be abhorrant to pass these laws

—Chrissi Taylor, ,

We are a small business and depend on the Internet for our livelihood!

—Karin Piergallini, Pinehurst, NC

Allowing price based access favours the monopolies and harms the small players and individuals. Net neutrality is critical for a fair future for everyone on the internet.

—Dylan Merrick, ,

B/c I don't like being raped

—Jon Ramsey, Atlanta, GA

An open Internet is necessary for liberty.

—Alan Cumings, Fairfax, CA

The Internet belongs to everyone. Not to big telecoms.

—Xavier Mendez, ,

This is America. Keep the internet free!

—Rob Rushing, St. Peter, MN

The internet has become a necessary utility for my banking, shopping, interface with the Federal government, and social interaction. It must be reclassified as a common carrier, not handed over to corporation for their manipulation and control, where profit and ideology are their only driving factors. Keep it free! Keep it serving the citizens!

—Bobby Coleman, Fort Smith, AR

The only good internet is an open internet!

—Todd Wyant, Kalamazoo, MI

The internet is for everyone and not for the haves and the have nots. Leave our internet alone.

—Susanne Martin, ,

This is our network--all of us, those with whom I disagree as well as those with whom I agree. If it becomes just another possession of the wealthy few, it will have become worthless, a travesty, empty of meaning or utility.

—Straight Wayne, Sykesville, MD

Because I rely on the internet for my livelihood and my education!!!

—Bennett Hoffman, Tallahassee, FL

Freedom of information is possibly the most important democratizing factor for America. Do not establish commercial boundaries that implement a class division on accessing information on the internet. Stand up for our rights not sell them away to lobbyists.

—Richard Butler, West Milford, NJ

Net neutrality can increase economic growth and innovation by helping small businesses and entrepreneurs compete.

—Brian Machida, Richmond Hill, NY

Keep the internet open and neutral.

—David Leclerc, ,

Net neutrality enables innovation from smaller organizations, without net neutrality my American dream of starting up a digital technology company can't be realized.

—Jake Kiesel, South Jordan, UT

Because reasons

—Cody Kuntz, Big Rapids, MI

The internet helps me keep in touch with the friends and family that are close to me, and without them, I'm nothing, please let the internet stay neutral, Please, I beg of you,

—Logan Hancock, Simi Valley, CA

I don't think that rich corporate business websites should have priority over the internet. The internet should be a level playing field.

—Rodney Gould, Springfield, MA

Users like me pay for access to the Internet at large, not an ISP's preferred vision of it. We sign a deal for a certain amount of bandwidth, and some ISPs want to only selectively honor that contract in order to avoid investment. Users have shaped the Internet so far, and made possible such unprecedented success. ISPs, meanwhile, have enjoyed large and virtually guaranteed profits. Please don't sacrifice the former to increase the latter. Title II status would recognise the reality of Internet use and importance today, while still allowing healthy profits and opportunities for commerce.

—Mike D Markovich, ,

I have a startup business that depends entirely on the internet for marketing and delivery of my services. If web pages take more than 1 or 2 seconds to load, my prospective customers will leave. I cannot compete with big companies who can afford to pay for "fast-lane" access. I will be out of business before I get started. Protect startups and small businesses who depend on equal net speeds for their web business success.

—Richard Harris, Plattsburgh, NY

Letting ISP charge more for services will eventually hurt the customer in the long run. The trickle down affect will hurt us the little people while corporations keep on earning money hand over fist. We the people deserve an open internet to do as we please. If the ISP don't like this idea then tell them they can quit being an ISP, fat chance that will ever happen with these greedy corporations.

—Anthony Ciuffini, Staten Island, NY

Keeping net neutrality is keeping democracy in tact. It's vital to maintaining fair and open channels of communication for one and all.

—Paula Hartnett, Bedford, NH

I believe in Net Neutrality for everyone.

—Corinna Bourbonnais, ,

Because Canadians have nothing to gain from protecting a big telecom monopoly and everything to gain from encouraging competitions.

—Valtchan Valtchanov, , i do a lot of professional communicating via internet, in addition to staying in touch with family and close friends. Having to pay more for what we already have is just wrong and shows more corruption and greed.

—Syd Potter, Olympia, WA

More fascism! More fascism! Censor,censor,censor!

—Paul R Albrecht, Phila., PA

This is a first amendment issue just as with telephones.

—Francesco Capodieci, Daly City, CA

It would be easier to say why it is not important!

—Mary Sue Baker, Sarasota, FL

The Internet is one remaining source of information and self expression that is not affected by political or corporate interests. Please legislate to keep it so.

—Christopher Byrd, ,

As an Internet professional, my livelihood is directly related to the success of an open Internet. Please enforce network neutrality by classifying broadband Internet providers as common carriers.

—Joseph Baldwin IV, Pataskala, OH

So businesses of all levels can be successful and not throttled by monetary amounts

—Jan levicek, ,

North America is at best as a capitalist democracy, where the marketplace can allow anyone to rise to riches. When corporations work together to block competition it is unhealthy for progress, the American Dream, and citizens in general.

—Brian McLachlan, ,

All Internet users deserve equal access to online information, no matter who the provider is. If the federal government stops enforcing rules to keep the pipelines free and open, then certain companies will be able to get greater access to Internet users. That creates a system of haves and have-nots — the richest companies could get access to a wider swath of Internet users.

—Pay, ,

I hate Netflix. They should deny selling their services to people with poor internet connections.

—Marcel Mitsuto Fucatu Sugano, ,

This will severely impact low earning families who can't afford higher costs for internet access.

—Leonard Starling, Gaithersburg, MD

There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Linda Berton, Appleton, WI

The last freedom. If the internet goes, then we become slaves to the big corporations.

—Francis X Mullen, Philadelphia, PA

The Internet has been one of the greatest economic facilitators in history, don't stifle or impede this by allowing the largest network providers to impart their will on the public.

—Jeffrey Trudeau, Boxford, MA

Because the owner of the Internet is everyone not a company

—Harvey, ,

The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Kris, Salt Lake City, UT

the net was always supposed to be free when it was created we already have to pay for access at least keep an equall playing field for everyone

—James Smith, House Springs, MO

Information in real time is extremely important to me and millions of others. Please allow me the right to choose what information I want and be able to get it immediately.

—Gabrielle V Pla, Kapaa, HI

Please work for the consumer for once - NOT the rich and powerful telecom companies. WE need you. We're drowning in these absurd prices, with slow connections.

—Judy Kinsman, Florence, OR

I'm 25 years old. My future - along with the future of all US citizens - relies on the internet and the mass amounts of innovations it will bring. That includes everything from our entertainment on Netflix to very important aspects of our lives like health management applications and trackers. The web needs to remain an even playing field for this future to be realized, not a field commanded by two telecom companies.

—Eduardo Morales, Hialeah, FL

Because its Fair!

—Ron Rabold, Pittsburgh, PA

I'm the Communications Manager at a small non-profit. We depend on an open, neutral internet to get our voice and message to those who most need our services.

—Laura Kramer, Bryn Mawr, PA

it's already slow enough

—Beatrice Stodola, Sarasota, FL

The corporate media is killing the planet!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Martin Henderson, Goleta, CA

Don't sell out to Big Business - the Internet is vital to all the people.

—Glenda Goldwater, Portland, OR

The Internet should be free and equal, just like people. Corporate greed is ruining every aspect of life and we all need to take a stand. This is a perfect place to do so. Thank you for your time.

—Michael Seager, Mentor, OH

I want the same standards for everyone, not just big companies. Fair internet should be a given nowadays ajd not something we fight for.

—Ivan Petkov, ,

My entire family totally supports REAL Net Neutrality.

—Wayne Carroll, Miami, FL

Net neutrality, and all it stands for is a simple, basic, human right.

—Ken Lines, ,

No company should have the power or authority to regulate access to the internet or restrict content.

—Jesse Glassford, ,

As a senior citizen I depend on internet accessibility more and more. Allowing the big telecom carriers to buy premium access will make it more difficult and/or more expensive for me to function the way I want to. Real Net Neutrality is vital to millions of us regular people - don't cave into pressure from those with unlimited funds who want to make more money!

—Arline Taylor, River Falls, WI

Our ability to participate in this forum should not be dictated by the depth of our pockets. Participation for all!

—Lesley Johnston, ,

I support a free and open internet.

—Tracy Dunlop, ,

Internet access is no longer a luxury--it is required for economic success in this country. The government should foster the ability of We The People to pursue life, liberty, and happiness. Thus, it is incumbent on the government to keep the internet open and unhindered.

—Jed Holtzman, San Francisco, CA

Net Neutrality deserves to stand as is so that Americans of all classes and financial means can benefit from its availability without the threat of having to pay more for their accessibility. I depend on the internet for access to healthcare information and the ability to communicate with my primary care physician via an electronic health record. Net neutrality is key for persons on fixed or limited incomes.

—Frank Thacker, Ironton, OH

Net neutrality is critical to continued innovation. Creating an uneven playing field on the internet isn't the way to stop piracy.

—Justin Iravani, Salt Lake City, UT because we should have level environment for small businesses to succeed and innovate as they compete against big business

—Jason bowling, Virginia Beach, VA

We need a free and open internet. Stop trying to make money out of everything. Services, as opposed to businesses are important for the survival of our species.

—Robert White, ,

The Internet should be a public commodity like water and electricity. It should cost little but I pay a good amount for it each month. Especially if I'm paying for it, no one with more money should have better access to it.

—Jean Toles, Portland, OR

No one should be able to buy the internet.

—Robin Gilton, Alto, NM

Its is the freedom of the internet that allows free flowing ideas and the continued advancement of technology

—Stephen Preston, gig harbor, WA

Take your hands off the internet. It belongs to the people not the shady corporations.

—Juliana Mazzeo, Lynbrook, NY

"...enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power" -- If ISPs can charge customers different amounts, then they can continue to increase revenue from customers who can afford to pay a rising premium, while delivering increasingly slower speeds for lower-class customers, all instead of incurring the cost of improving their infrastructure for the benefit of everyone. The rest of the developed world has faster internet access at lower cost than we do. The only way to overcome this -- short of taking away the monopolies that ISPs currently enjoy -- is to mass all internet customers into a single interest group that can collectively give ISPs an incentive to improve their service. If ISPs get to have a monopoly, then customers must all be in the same boat -- effectively turning the marketplace into a 1-on-1 situation -- or else ISPs will be free to divide and conquer us.

—William Montgomery, Pottstown, PA

Tired of cable company monopoly. Tom wheeler is a crook

—Daniel carey, Pittsburgh, PA

Aside from the fact that the people of the world and web companies want web neutrality, the only ones that want paid fast lanes are the ones that will profit from it. That says it all. You cannot make an argument against that.

—Mike Reff, Fargo, ND

7/14/2014 Dear Mr. Wheeler, Net neutrality is free speech on the electronic airways. I am for free speech for everyone in America, not just for those who can pay for it according to an artificially created pay-to-play system--but then, such a system really isn't free speech.

—Martin Iseri, Fair Oaks, CA

It is important to keep a level playing field about who has access to use the internet, like access to use a road. Most roads are open to the public--as should also be the case for the internet.

—Pauline Druffel, Spokane, WA

ISPs function like common carriers and should be classified as such. This will the internet open for innovation and a truly free market.

—Anna Dembska, Hancock, ME

no fast lane please.

—Brad Gans, Bronx, NY

We as people who pay for internet services should have equality in the services we use and shouldn't be restricted on which webpage loads faster, why try to fix the internet if it's not broken? Why bring greed into the lives of all the internet users? Net neutrality for the will of the people not the will of a few.

—Joshua Kurian, Riverview, FL

The net has always been about the free exchange of ideas and the information to make those ideas grow! It is counter productive

—Jon Russell, ,

Net Neutrality is a no-brainer, corporate greed is out of control, just for a change, could the right thing be done?

—Marcheta Gray, ,

I cannot afford to pay more for my internet. I am barely making ends meet. If I get slow delivery from some companies, I will have to eliminate using them, which will make things really hard for me. I don't have unlimited time on my internet and I live so far away from businesses, in the desert. Internet is already expensive and I am too old to drive to each place I need to go to buy necessities. Please don't ruin the internet for those of us who really depend upon it and cannot afford to pay more than we are already paying. Thank you.

—Shirley Withers, Borrego Springs, CA

This is a fundamental pillar of our democracy. For the 21st century, it is the equivalent of oneman, one vote.

—Vida Moattar, San Rafael, CA

my business and an independent contractor depends on the free and open access the internet provides. please do your duty and maintain the best interests of the American population, a responsibility you have been entrusted with. thank you.

—Kevin, Albuquerque, NM

Net neutrality gives everyone an unfettered access on the internet. Our information highway must be uninhibited as our automobile highways are.

—Manuel Avakian, Detroit, MI

Net neutrality is the reason the internet has been so amazingly popular and successful. Destroying net neutrality would effectively destroy the internet. Don't let this happen!

—Bob Jackman, Lehi, UT

Limiting Internet access seems unconstitutional. The Internet is in a sense the collective global consciousness of the human race. This is not something that should be limited, or controlled by any one group of individuals. To do so would be unfair and unjust.

—Matthew Brown, ,

The free sharing of information is the best chance we have of advancing as a species.

—Brooks Tilley, ,

Americans depend upon the Internet being accessible and free to every citizen. This should not be compromised in any way.

—Mr. Dan Rich, Atascadero, CA

Having fast and slow lanes will stifle creativity in startup internet companies! Please do what is necessary to keep this from happening.

—Don Hawkins, Pittsburgh, PA

The internet is where I make my livelihood, learn, stay in touch with loved ones, and play. Net neutrality threatens some of my activities and will result in an unacceptably dangerous precedent allowing traffic shaping, and ISP 'fees' resulting in more expensive services.

—Barak Gall, ,

Must not destroy the internet and our democracy by destroying net neutrality.

—Joel Carlson, Lacey, WA

The internet should be accessible equally to all humans. This action serves a few interests, the Capitalists, and not all members of our society.

—Stephen Kreutzberg, Surprise, AZ

Don't let carriers slow down our internet access!

—Michael Abler, Santa Cruz, CA

We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Rodrigo Sevillanos, Bakersfield, CA

Part of the first amendment, freedom of speech.

—Barbara Mullin, Lewes, DE

While I can understand that handling the pressure of lobbyists is a rather daunting task- this is one facet of our society that has truly withstood the onslaught of corporate fancy. Net neutrality, amongst other issues, is one of the things you should stand your ground on to protect the interests of fairness between the public and corporate entities alike. Anyone with half a brain would see that only the remaining monolithic companies would gain from this and all competition would eventually be "weeded out" when all bits become the playthings of greed.

—Konrad Krzewinski, ,

Because tomorrow doesn't belong to the greedy

—Dmitri DB, ,

It is in the interest of fairness to all.

—Len Farr, Tarzana, CA

Net neutrality is very important to us all..

—Ferold, Columbia, MD

Because I have a website

—Mark Dalderup, ,

The internet is a valuable resource. Please keep it open and free of corporate plundering. It was created as a common carrier service.

—David Houlton, Winston, OR

Giving control of internet access to Big Telecom is only another example of the "For Sale" sign on all services to the highest bidder with the only winners being the corporations and the politicians and decision makers who are bought and paid for by those corporations! Enough already!

—Dolores Farrell, Sitka, AK

Please let a "free" market make the decision where to do business and how it is done.

—Jim Robinson, Greensboro, NC

The internet must remain an equally accessible foundation to build upon. As it's functions replace more and more services (i.e. postal delivery) it is becoming more of a required tool - unmolested access should be considered a right before a small handful of greedy organizations are able to hijack it's use for their own ends. Where is the common man able to turn? Start protecting us.

—Blake Lazurca, ,

Net neutrality is why the internet is what it is today, if this bill passes it will just make big companies have more impact on doing things that we the people have no say. Please do not have this bill pass, it would destroy any evidence of what can be considered a free country and free internet.

—Bryan Chin, Westford, MA

Because it gives everyone a chance to get more information and be informed. I feel that corporations are always trying to manipulate situations and control consumers. Keep net neutrality for equal playing ground.

—Chris Mendel, Columbus, OH

Keep the Internet free. We need someplace that is an equal playing field!

—Joshua Meyers, Warren, MI

I used it for business, staying in touch with family friends and research for teaching.

—, San Diego, CA

As a disabled writer, the Internet is crucial to my ability to do research efficiently. I also get news, family pictures, and deal with finances over the Internet. Please give us Net Neutrality through reclassification of broadband providers as common carriers.

—Carole Dianne Smith, Winnetka, IL

We deserve the same freedom on the Internet that Big Companies do, and will only accept the reality of equal rights for all internet users.

—Stephen Wider, Asbury Park, NJ

Keep the internet free for all users and businesses.

—Alison Stewart, ,

Open access to free internet is an equalizing tool.

—Meghan McAvoy, Oldsmar, FL

Big business should not have a monopoly on high speed internet.

—Marilyn Zimmer, North Chelmsford, MA

Internet is ALREADY too expensive This is all about screwing the public by greedy providers

—Ronald S Osborne, ,

Inequality is criminal

—Robert Deutsch, ,

We all need Freedom, To View the Truth and say what we need to say

—Keith Logan, ,

they already took most of our rights.

—Joe Walnoha, Splendora, TX

Being disabled, It is an absolute lifeline.

—Curtis E. Killings, Glendale, AZ

There should be no preferential treatment in favor of those with more money for a resource that is so important to everyone.

—Amy salmon, Enterprise, AL

The internet is part of our democracy.

—Joan Palmer, Pasadena, CA

Please side with the interests of the average, ordinary citizen and not with the interests of giant corporations. We need free, open access to the Internet for everyone.

—Merle Dockendorff, Fairfield, IA

The Internet is America's Last Frontier. To fence it in with corporations deciding who pays more and who pays less will stifle free speech, reduce innovation (see innovation under Ma Bell when it was a monopoly), and cut back American economic growth. This is EXACTLY what we DON'T need! All for the sake of greater company profits for a few corporations. Besides, I don't see anybody going broke!
—Alan Hoeffler, Mesa, AZ

freedom of speech for all forever
—James Barron, ,

I have friends all over the world because of the Internet.
—Jeanne Sipahigil, Liberty, IN

I can't afford price gouging by Big Telecom! If there is no level playing field, it hurts everyone, especially consumers!
—Bea Douglas, ,

Censorship is unacceptable, especially when it is done by moneyed special interests.
—Logan Mulford, Knoxville, TN

Because it is a utility that we all need to access equally -- not segregated by cost.
—Meredith West, Chicago, IL

Why change what has worked so well for us all?
—Richard Knablin, North Bend, OR

Freedom.
—Chris Kostiuk, ,

We need to maintain freedom. Net neutrality is freedom. Freedom should not be sold off for the sake of businesses and money.
—Mike Blume, ,

I am starting a small business to try and escape the poverty of a minimum wage job. I believe effecting the internet in this manner would only push me deeper into the waste land of being a have not.
—John Moore, ,

I already pay for my internet access. Please do not create a multi-tier internet where I must pay for access, then pay again, then pay again, and pay yet again.
—Howard Wilson II, Mustang, OK

Net Neutrality is another way of saying access to what is now the most important mode of communication should be free and open to all.
—Mrs. and Lynn Phil and Fischer, Alamo, CA

Innovation in America requires an open internet. Our future success depends on it.
—Ms. Sandra Spangler, Berkeley, CA

There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."
—Elly Hastings, ,

Bigger is not always better.

—David Knight, , freedom of expression is a basic human right and therefore does not need to be a privilege

—Grant, ,

The internet allows me to continue to develop my mind and to grow as a person. It provides current information in a timely manner.

—Melodie Williams, ,

Net Neutrality is essential!!! no messing around with that

—Elise, ,

You won't censor child pornography but you will censor an open internet. It shows where your allegiance is.

—Paula Lynn, Bala Cynwyd, PA

Abandoning Net Neutrality can only benefit the already-established powerful and wealthy individuals and families who run the world's corporations. Net Neutrality is a prime example of freedom and liberty for all.

—Paul Balchin, ,

As a person living in a rural area, I know that the loss of net neutrality would further stifle the options available to me for internet service and content available to me. The internet is probably the most powerful tool in the world. To give the power over this resource to companies who would answer only to their stockholders would be a devastating mistake. What would keep them from manipulating information during elections by moving some candidates information to the "slow lane"? How would learning institutions fair under these new rules? Poorly, I believe. If nothing else, learning institutions would face further increases in cost which they can sorely afford. There are a myriad of reasons not to do this. I'm sure, if you stopped to think about it, you would be able to come up with many more.

—Suzanne Simmons, ,

There is NO way I can pay higher fees - I would be totally shut out.

—Ronnie Moehrke, Augusta, GA la independencia de las redes de Internet, se hace mas necesaria que nunca la Libertad de <Expresion, es justa i necesaria.

—Carles Capella Bonavida, ,

Net Neutrality is essential, it allows free speech, it is the future, it allows for innovation and itself is an innovation that must remain indefinitely. We can continue to move forward and use the internet to further innovation all because of Net Neutrality, or we can hinder Net Neutrality, and watch innovation dry up because of greedy corporate interests and bought out or politicians who are not well informed on this issue. Not only will internet innovation be stifled, but countries that maintain Net Neutrality and realize how critical Net Neutrality is for innovation, they will outstrip the US and the countries that follow in the footsteps of the US. Net Neutrality is far too valuable to lose. For the people, for the future of your country, and for the continued transfer of information, communication and partnerships across the globe that is made possible because of Net Neutrality. Without Net Neutrality, the Internet, which is like a nervous system for the human race, allowing for instantaneous transfer of information among individuals, academics, companies and thinkers. By perverting the current system and removing or altering Net Neutrality, you will sever the nerves and spinal cord for the US. Look at the printing press? Would you want books and information to only be printed and information shared by the powerful and wealthy in the past? Had that technology been stifled and choked out because of corporate or political reasons, society would never have developed to where it is today. Information among scientists, engineering, inventors, entrepreneurs, and thinkers would travel at a tremendously slow rate without the printing press. Not only that, but other countries who had the same technologies at the time - China for instance - and had the wisdom to let the technology grow instead of stifle it, they would have far outstripped those in Europe. Don't wait until it is too late and you feel the repercussions of your actions. Make sure it never happens to begin with. For once Net Neutrality is tampered with, the West will plummet, our entrepreneurial tech companies will have too great of a barrier to entry, and innovation will slow to a crawl.

—Chris, ,

The principal value of the internet to the masses of individual users is its freedom of access to information. Preserve net neutrality

—Johnny Bloom, Manteca, CA

The internet must remain on a level playing field for all, or it will change as we know it. Those with deep pockets will control it.

—Ray Fryer, Hopkinton, MA

I need the internet to communicate with my family in the UK in a speedy and low cost way.

—Jennifer Smyth, ,

It is one of the last true freedoms we have.

—Tasso Karpouzis., Brooklyn, NY

Corporations are dominating this country, putting all of us "little" folks at a disadvantage. The internet was one area where the playing field was level and it needs to stay that way. We don't need to be squeezed for another cent or to have our information filtered any more than it is. It's time to put our democracy in place.

—Jodi Daniels, Maylene, AL

The Internet must remain free. It must not become yet another money making business.

—Mona El Baradie, ,

It is unfair to consumers to negatively affect their online browsing and surfing, and to the smaller firms that will be disadvantaged by raised fees they are unable to afford, while the large corporations have no issue doing so.

—Lucy, ,

Neutrality is VERY important to keep some freedom.

—Olga Proniewski, ,

Equality when it comes to access to information and freedom of expression

—, ,

True Net Neutrality is essential to innovation and we will quickly begin to fall behind other countries that support an open and fair Internet. This is truly a matter of national security in the information age.

—Mr. Colin Haymes, Austin, TX

Open & free internet access for all has now become like a basic human right to education and freedom to communicate and receive communications.

—J A Carroll, ,

Internet is a PUBLIC Utility which should be equal for all that use it.

—Neal Keplinger, Eloy, AZ

We have been fighting anti-civil rights actions around the world that selectively limit internet access and censor public sites. This should be a no-brainer: we should not allow it here either. Please do not allow corporate interests rights to destroy neutrality of the internet. We need to move in the direction of MORE individual freedoms, not fewer individual freedoms and more corporate power.

—William Peckham, Weirton, WV

The thing we love the most about the Internet is that it's a level playing field for free expression, economic opportunity, and innovation. But Big Telecom can't stand this – and now they're trying to squeeze more money from Internet users by destroying the free and open Internet that people everywhere built together. These telecom giants are pushing rules that would force everybody who can't afford the outrageous new fees into an Internet slow lane. You claim you support the open Internet, but your proposed rules would allow Big Telecom to charge steep tolls for premium access — and block or slow down websites and services that can't afford the new fees. This makes you a liar! Don't be like Obama.

—Esq Hon. & Mrs. Paul Deis III, Anaheim, CA

Everyone big or small should have a level playing field

—Jasen Hardman, Boise, ID

To preserve access for those with low monetary means such as students and the poor to access the Web as often as they wish to without economic burden.

—Millard M. Judy, Flagstaff, AZ

Free internet is the best way for those who have not been favored with money to interact with the world, learn, create, and try out new ideas with an equal chance. There is NO REASON to punish us and our pocketbooks to further oligarchical interests. They have no cause to interfere in our usage of the internet and they can have access like everyone else. They didn't invent the internet, please tell me why they should be able to control it ? Our government is to protect THE PEOPLE and not the OLIGARCHY . Please remember who we are.

—Melissa Crislip, Hopkinsville, KY

Corporations should not have greater access to the net. Those who possess wealth should not have advantages over those who for access to information.

—Lynn and Roger stapes, Dexter, OR

Creates an unequal internet to the detriment of everyone. Bad bad idea!

—Chris Melikian, ,

To promote the innovation and diversity that has helped make this country great and strong the internet needs to remain open to allow for the type of ingenuity that America used to be known for.

—Kyle Jolly, Burbank, CA

I use T Mobile instead of Verizon and I don't want my Internet connection slowed down because I don't use one of the big carriers.

—Anne Carpenter, Ann Arbor, MI

We need a level playing field for everyone on the internet.

—Grant Horsley, ,

I have friends and family that rely on neutral internet for their small businesses. The destruction of net neutrality will harm them along with countless other small business owners that utilize the internet for their business.

—Joseph Walkenhorst, Cincinnati, OH

The internet and all businesses behind it are based on a free and open internet. The US already has a disadvantage against other countries because of how poor our internet is (I have lived in several third world countries as well that are better in many ways) and this is with the existing rules.

—Lauren Buchholz, Seattle, WA

First Amendment of the U. S. Constitution "Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press...."

—Mary A. Vorachek, Salem, OR

I am running an online business and I rely on Internet for my life being. Slowing down the internet will directly impact my life.

—Roman Filippov, ,

Would you turn all of our highways into toll roads, and restrict the trade of goods? If not (you are sane) then allow the same freedom to the trade of ideas.

—Fred Zbikowski, ,

Access is important to everyone. Why take that away? If it ain't broke don't fix it!

—Stacey Gunderson, West Des Moines, IA

Keep it fair

—Darcy Bucsis, ,

I use the Internet daily for business, access to necessary information, for news that is not covered or intentionally ignored by big corporate media, and for political participation in local, state, and U.S. government affairs. The Internet is in fact a common carrier utility that my tax dollars funded and well more than 50% of American citizens depend on. The big telecom corporations did not originate it nor do they have any right to decide who gets to use it, or to marginalize users who they do not like. Reclassify the 'Net as a Common Carrier Utility NOW!

—Glen Kohler, Berkeley, CA

I have a low income. The Internet is my main contact with my friends and relatives.

—Donald Dimock, Monmouth, OR

The essence of democracy, capitalist or otherwise, is in the representation of the demos, which fundamentally requires equal access to representation. The removal of net neutrality undermines the American economy's functionality as we know it, & firmly establishes this country as a plutocracy: whether that is where we are currently already or not, it's not where most of us want the economy to be, and it is not sustainable.

—Ari Burnham, Mill Valley, CA

Free speech is too important to allow commercial interests to meddle with the means of communication. Keep the internet "free" and open to all, regardless of economic means.

—Anders Mattsson, ,

I depend on the fairness of open internet for my work.

—Bill Kingston, New castle, NH

Problem already exists with near-monopolies in Canada. The Big 2 in my region overcharge for poor service. With the proposed changes, rates will go up, and, service, again, will decline.

—Matt Martineau, ,

I do not want to pay more for less bandwidth... Why segregate the internet so big corporate America can charge more for less... if its not broken don't fix it.

—Jay Vergara, Rutherford, NJ

All telephone traffic is carried over the internet, why would the internet not be a common carrier if the telecom network is?

—Cor van de Water, Sunnyvale, CA

Free exchange of ideas should not be set aside for profit.

—Tobey Layne, Santa Maria, CA

Net neutrality is imperative for everyone who uses the Internet. Leave everything in place if you believe in the individual rights of every citizen of these United States.

—Linda Messick, Oakland, CA

The free internet is how the world has advanced so far in the last 20 years, please do not take that away.

—Kan Ru Chen, ,

Real net neutrality (not the faux net neutrality proposed by Chairman Wheeler) is the single most important pillar upholding our democracy. Please don't destroy it by allowing corporations to charge for it.

—Ric Bernat, Portland, OR

Because anything else is unequal

—Hester Kenneison, ,

Big telcoms. Shouldn't control the internet simply to increase profit

—Darryl paterick, ,

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—George Drellos PhD, Chicago, IL

My tax dollars helped to develop the Internet, I am against big telecom companies from dictating how it should be used. I am a small business person who uses the Internet to work with clients. I have had to change telecom companies when their rates became excessive. I fear that your current proposal would most certainly raise the rate I currently pay for bundled services.

—Donna Williams, Columbus, OH

I use the internet daily for personal and business purposes and have a right to use it without being held hostage by big money corporations. If the brakes are not put on big business America will no longer be the land of the free and the home of the brave. Look at what's happening around the globe. How long do you think Americans are going to lay down and take their American Dream being purchased by mega corporations who siphon off their profits by sending their money and jobs abroad?

—Nolan McSwain, New Orleans, LA

Net Neutrality is the only practical way that us common folks can communicate easily with others who share our concerns and with those who can implement our concerns. This is important. It is also the reason that the internet was developed. Now that it is working well and giving every American a voice, the folks who are used to running the show without opposition from the rest of the population aren't happy to lose their monopoly. After all, America is a democracy so please don't take away our ability to take part in it. Thank You.

—Mary Mutch, La Crosse, WI

No one should be able to 'dictate' what I read or watch. The last time I checked I was still living in the land of the free

—Jacqueline Jenkins, Floresville, TX

I want fair and equal treatment not just biased to bug business

—Jimmie Cantu, La Feria, TX

The Internet is the backbone of modern communication platforms, applications, commerce and all forms of development. Keeping this basic service open and untiered to all is essential.

—Pierre Morissette, ,

FCC you will be jailed in few months or years (when fall the dollar and USA government) if you end the Net Neutrality, same as cut our Liberty and Free Will

—Noe Rodriguez, ,

I own a small business and if these "internet fast lanes" come into being then my business will not stand a chance against bigger companies that can afford to pay the extra fees.

—Cameron Henderson, Traverse City, MI

It's freedom

—L, ,

Net neutrality is crucial to ensuring the spread of new ideas. With the ability to prioritize bandwidth comes an issue that small companies or startups in any industry are effectively censored. This would almost certainly stifle creativity and progress.

—Brandon Saurette, ,

We're tired of the takeover by the wealthy 1% and corporations.

—Dr. Barbara Wollman, Friday Harbor, WA like air and water, the we the people deserve access to being able to communicate

—Barbara Rowland, Salem, OR

Ordinary Americans are having a hard time, as it is, paying their monthly internet/cable bill. The Internet is not democratic as it currently is and NEEDS TO BE RECLASSIFIED BROADBAND CARRIERS AS COMMON CARRIERS. The FCC messed up in the past and needs to correct their mistakes, and NOW is the time!

—Nancy Gutierrez, PALM DESERT, CA

It allows freedom to express you opinions and is free to all people

—John Cooper, Glasco, KS

I wholeheartedly support that internet service providers are common carriers. It's so obvious to me I can't understand why they are not classified as such. The internet is how most of the world communicate and receive information. The internet far outpaces television, radio - other media that are classified as common carriers. I live in an area where the internet is slow, frustratingly slow at times, where my computer times out while trying to connect to websites. The internet is my main source (yes phoning and texting have become more of a secondary source and I haven't had TV in 3 years - a medium that's on it's way out. I'm 59 yo and saw the writing on the wall and refuse to pay corporations ridiculous amounts of money for pablum.) to communicate, receive information and research finding/applying for jobs - which is so important as I'm unemployed. Going to a two tier system is a bad idea. While the corporations pushing for this will make a lot of money, they will freeze out a good portion of citizens in the US that can't afford to pay more, non-profits, rural customers, etc. I do NOT believe that these corporations will give a faster service to those that pay more BUT will slow down speeds for those that can't pay. The only thing that would give equal access to all citizens of this country for service providers to be classified as common carriers. Thank you, Linda Masters

—Linda Masters, Nantucket, MA

Net Neutrality is essential to innovation and progress of the world wide web. Making the web a pay for play for content providers would destroy the fairness that makes the internet great. To allow telecoms to hold the internet hostage for profit is against the best interest of the people and small and medium size businesses. It is only in the interests of the massive telecom companies. The FCC should show they have the interests of the masses in mind and not the few. If Net Neutrality is not reinstated it will be a blatant miscarriage of justice and proof that government agencies are beholden to corporations over the people's interests

—Derek Smith, Woodbury Heights, NJ

As a small businessman, it's important to me as far as getting parts fast. Don't kill my business.

—Bill Lamb, Lone Wolf, OK

Freedom of expression and information are fundamental to an open society.

—Joshua Nichols, ,

This has huge potential to allow providers to block, slow down, and otherwise inhibit the Internet. This could be the next IRS type scandal if ISP's are allowed to make these decisions. Please dont allow it

—Rick Clowers, Oliver Springs, TN

The internet was designed to open and free, where voices from every connected place could interact... it needs to be that way for it to survive. I will reduce net usage or just go offline if net neutrality is destroyed...

—Fred Munro, ,

Because, allowing "lanes" to the highest bidder will hinder growth and competition at the same time as it transforms pipe providers into content monitors.

—Chris Paris, Sandy Spring, MD

Net Neutrality

—Ronald Joy, ,

No one company or group should the right to ban 1st amendment freedoms

—Juny Bayard, Alexandria, VA

ISP's should be considered Common carriers under Title II. They should have no right to shape a user's internet traffic. I fear for how a bad decision may trickle into Canada.

—Korey Jones, ,

do not allow monopolies to form

—Zareh Gorjian, Glendale, CA

It is very important to maintain a free and open internet. The internet has become as ubiquitous as the telephone. Because of this, it should be classified as a common carrier.

—Walter Zink, Mesa, AZ

I am an older person on Social Security. I could not afford Internet access if the telecoms change the entire system. I have limited mobility and the Internet is a large part of my information-gathering and connection with friends, family, and community. Fast lanes and slow lanes are absurd. I want to be able to locate small businesses and ventures, local community information, and so on, that could get eliminated or forced to the bottom in a multi-tiered system. I want people to be able to find my sister-in-law's artwork, my brother's stunning photography, and my elderly mother's blog, not just the content the Telecoms want us to have!! Please stop this nonsense!!

—Beth McCammon, Columbus, OH

No corporation doing business in America should be allowed to censor, slow down or otherwise interfere with websites or content it doesn't agree with. To do so would be a disastrous violation of the First Amendment, the bedrock of democracy. In fact, fourteen years into the 21st century, the idea of corporate control of the internet shouldn't even be an issue considering that the United States is at the bottom of the list of developed countries for citizen internet access. Americans should have MORE access to the internet, not less!

—Joanne Kondratieff, Shawnee, OK

Net neutrality guards freedom of speech.

—Nancy P. Kelly, Oakland, CA

Just keep the internet open and free for all and not have special rates and favors for those that believe them self to good to have what everyone else has. Why should there be charges beyond normal. people are limited by what their equipment can handle anyway.

—Sam McKinney, Portland, OR

I am senior on a fixed income. I cannot to pay a lot just so I can use the Internet. Please allow net neutrality (no fast lane) to continue to exist.

—Karl Cook, Evansville, IN

Do not put our access to information in the hands of corporations!

—, Phoenix, AZ

BECAUSE CORPORATIONS TAKE TOO MUCH ALREADY and have no concern for individuals!

—Janet G Heinle, Santa Monica, CA

I use internet research and databases for my work. These can be supplied by individual users. Don't prioritize traffic on ability to pay.

—Kathleen Morzinski, Tucson, AZ

I would die for this cause, are you prepared to do the same?

—Nathan Stowe, Trabuco Canyon, CA

Don't be stupid.

—Jeffrey Ching, ,

The FCC must realize that Net Neutrality is the essential freedom of the internet itself, and cannot and should not be compromised in any way.
—DOuglas Vance Maxwell, ,

As a content creator and professional software developer, I rely on the open Internet for my living and a good portion of my social life. I would like an equal opportunity for my products to compete with others on the market, and to be able to communicate with my friends online however I choose. Without Net Neutrality, many of the things I take for granted and hold dear on the Internet could be taken away or shut down due to arbitrary restrictions placed by my ISP. Without Net Neutrality, ISPs could compete on an unfair level, or shoehorn users into using products created by partnering companies simply by degrading the experience for users who might wish to try a competitor's product. This is not acceptable. Please uphold the standards of Net Neutrality and reclassify Internet Service Providers as Common Carriers to protect what we have before it's gone forever.
—Travis Smith, ,

Keep the Internet FREE,as it should be ! Without the Internet ,I won't be able to contact my Family or Friends! This is how I stay Socially connected! Being Disabled I Dont get out much! This will Shut me in more! DON'T let these Big companies CONTROL the Internet as We know it!! This will HURT everyone who uses it!
—Trina Hawkins, Sioux City, IA

The internet provides a valuable forum for everyone. It was developed with public resources and uses public airwaves. ISP's should be classified as common carriers.
—David Smernoff, Portola Valley, CA

Please save freedom respect your constitution
—Jakub Leszczynski, ,

Mr Wheeler everyone knows you used to work for the cable companies and we can see that you are still in there pocket.
—Louis Drinkwater, Chelsea, MA

It is important because it represents the majority of internet users.
—Sean Kelleher, ,

There is too much have/have not in our society. Important to keep it available.
—Susan Marchand, Highland Park, NJ

stop making the poor poorer and get over yourselves to control everything. Government is supposed to represent the people who vote them in - not support the big corporations who think only of their wealth and happiness. Stop screwing the little guys.
—Suzie Mason, ,

Freedom of information and expression is key to the World Wide Web. Please do not provide big business with the means to impose regulations and huge costs on the internet community.
—Jeff Roberge, ,

The internet is a FREE and OPEN form of communication - the epitome of FREEDOM OF SPEECH. Don't be greedy, FCC, and monetise this form of global communication. Remember - we live in democracy, not dictatorship.
—Shru Chow, Baton Rouge, LA

Access to a free and open Internet should be a human right.
—Natalie Van Arman, Baltimore, MD

It is already expensive and I can't afford internet service and there are others in my same predicament. How can you have a just society when so many people are left out?

—Mercedes Moore, Clearwater, FL

Broadband providers were protected from common carrier status in the hope that they would innovate and improve, but the American customer remains overcharged for some of the weakest broadband in the developed world. Americans shouldn't be sentenced to using one carrier based solely on the neighborhood where we choose to live, and we shouldn't be charged outrageous prices because the ISPs choose to divide the country into monopolistic non-compete territories. In addition, the ISPs shouldn't be allowed to choose which content we see and how fast we get it based on extorted money from content providers. A democracy depends on an informed public, and fast-track internet "lanes" effectively silence the voice of the non-rich.

—Shelley Reid, Mohegan Lake, NY

'Big Telecom' already has enough power over our access to the internet. Don't give them further power to 'gouge' even more than they do already!

—Patricia Tietzen, ,

Tired of everyone controlling everything and ads and big brother and control.. the internet is free expression, its full if everything, information, everything and anything.. everything is controlled now adays. No way I want this to happen to the internet and become a prison and controlled noooo way.. it satays the way it is free.... and clear...

—Jason Hastings, ,

The internet should be considered a utility as it is as necessary as phone service or electricity. Please do not allow corporations to take control of access for regular people and make it slow and expensive.

—Ruth Soza, TUCSON, AZ

THE INTERNET OF TODAY IS THE WAY OUR WORLD COMMUNICATES THERE SHOULD BE NO FAST OR SLOW LANES. FCC YOU CAN STOP THIS NONSENSE AND '

—Elaine Balgemann, Mesa, AZ

The internet as we know it has become a cradle for growth and innovation. It provides economic opportunity and a playing field with which to exercise our rights as individuals to compete in an equal opportunity environment. As a owner of a software as a service company I am able to create jobs and compete with larger companies because of net neutrality. Disrupting this environment serves only to farther divide the rich and poor and do irreparable damage to global innovation.

—Jake Reimer, ,

The whole world will be losing if we cannot continue to have internet freedom. The government should not continue stooping to corporations giving them more power.

—Pedro Machuca, ,

The internet is a public utility, it is unbelievable you would consider it anything other than this in this day and age, the extent it is used in every persons every day life makes it indispensable. Please do the right thing for once and classify the internet as a public utility and do not go though with this proposal. It will have far reaching consequences and create dissent among the population.

—Sean Covert, Concord, MA

It levels the playing field. It allows small business to compete with big business. And everyone's voice has the same accessibility as everyone else's. It helps to preserve the free market and free speech. Anything else undermines our democracy & puts money yet again in charge. Don't sell out our country!

—Barbara Breck, Portland, OR

Slowing down parts of the internet will in effect make those portions of the internet wholly unavailable to ordinary users of the internet. Slowing down parts of the internet will in the long run simply ruin it for everybody. When it becomes nothing other than propaganda and advertisements, I for one will no longer use the internet.

—Nancy Brown, King, NC

because it's fair for ALL Americans

—, Richfield, NC

Because if the powers that be want their cattle to be complacent they better make damn sure we have a good source of entertainment.

—Jonathon Cameron, ,

I support independent unbiased media

—Georgia Farrance, ,

I have been forced off my POTS (Plain Old Telephone Service) copper wire telephone service by Verizon, so now have to depend on my internet service for phone using VOIP. Of course this phone service is far less dependable than copper wire telephone service was. And now we're moving towards "fast lanes" and "slow lanes" for the Internet, through which ALL my communications must be now routed. Because the FCC has already allowed the telecoms to let the traditional/regulated phone systems fall apart while they force paying customers into unregulated VOIP phone service. For Pete's sake, does the FCC really not understand how important regulated utilities are to a civilized country? The Internet should be treated as the utterly necessary public utility that it IS: you MUST NOT allow our telecommunications as a nation to be further degraded and turned into "for the rich" and "for all those other slobs" service! NET NEUTRALITY is essential to a functioning democracy.

—Bona Riensis, New York, NY

I am 95 and my only access to information and friends.

—Charlotte Flynn, austin, TX

The internet must remain fair for all to access at the same rate of speed. Net neutrality must remain in place as is.

—Leah Payne, Wakefield, RI

We end people always get the short end of the stick when it comes to the voices of the common men who pay your regular salary and the big corporations that can influence and push people even the president into decisions wherein we get the short end again. Net neutrality would prove me wrong and prevent an oligarchy from having the only word in DC. Sincerely, Robert I. Niles MD

—Robert Niles M.D., Maryville, TN

The Internet must remain free and open and unhindered by corporate telecoms.

—William Masopust, Edmond, OK

As a college student its important for me to have any and all information available whenever and as quickly as possible. When it comes down to learning about something its important to get all information available and if something is slowed or blocked then not only would I be limiting my education but there can sides never heard of on this open source of information I call the internet.

—Johnathan Avila, Galveston, TX

Justice cannot be for one side alone, but must be for both. E.Roosevelt

—Amy Immel, Albuquerque, NM

We don't want to live without it. It's crucial to our democracy.

—Janice Frankel, Chicago, IL

Cause i run an internet company anything that could effect my business is terrifying. www.poolsuppliescanada.ca

—Greg Laver, ,

Internet providers have to be treated as telecommunication companies.

—Noah, ,

The net should not be governed by a country but open to all

—Kacey, ,

Competition is supposed to be on an level playing field. Killing Net Neutrality will tilt the playing field for the big companies and hurt everyone.

—Jason Maass, Yelm, WA

The internet should be open and free. Corporate control is a negation of democracy and leads to fascism. It would be tyranny and cannot be allowed.

—Paul Rechnitz, ,

Large corporations always attempt to skirt the law for generating even more profits, at the expense of people and customers. Don't legalize their actions.

—Andy Ritter, Fenton, MO

The only point that matters was that it was created to be for all. Don't change that.

—Larry Lootsteen, ,

The internet has become an essential form of communication and business. Big telecom companies have taken that away from everyday people and made it into something too expensive to use for many people.

—John Haas, ,

Without Net Neutrality, the very diversity of the Internet is at risk.

—John C. Wiesner, Castro Valley, CA

Look at Europe if you need guidance.

—Michael Tomolillo, Santa Cruz, CA

I do not want to see an internet dominated by telecom giants charging exorbitant fees.

—Patricia Landriault, ,

Important part of freedom of speech.

—Stephen Paterson, ,

I am a librarian, and very concerned about maintaining free public access.

—Debra Ames, Brockport, NY

I collaborate with fellow artists over great distances by means of the internet. To do so is already difficult and complicated. Anything that exacerbates that situation interferes with my freedom of expression.

—William Lepard, ,

Don't destroy Net Neutrality with unfair pricing and Internet service providers' censorship.

—, Syracuse, NY

All content providers should have equal opportunities to deliver information to their consumers.

—Mathew Yanovsky, ,

Giving internet providers this type of control is only hurting the consumers. Throttling speeds on certain sites after consumers have paid for high speed internet is wrong. You will also be hurting small business internet start ups. This is a huge insult to the American way of life.

—Michelle Ogaard, Magna, UT

It is FUNDAMENTALLY important!

—Gerald Ferreira, , the net was not created by a business, it is a tool to bring the world together, do not discriminate against people due to their income levels.

—Scott, ,

For those of us who live in rural America, the Internet has become our only real way to stay connected to the larger world and even our neighbors as our populations shrink and our denizens age.

—Russ Pollock, Taloga, OK

Nothing supports a democracy like an unfettered internet. Business must take a back seat to this.

—Yui Daoren, Santa Fe, NM

These are basic utilities, just as they were in the era of the Baby Bells, and they should be treated as such, and regulated in a way that's fair for everyone who wants to use them.

—Margaret Schneider, Saint Louis, MO

Because there is notion of freedom in Net Neutrality

—Ilia Kornishin, ,

Those in the 1% can afford anything. They pay a smaller percentage of their income in taxes, and now they are about to get another perk to being rich.

—Elizabeth Roberts, Chicago, IL

This would be cloud highway robbery for millions of cash-strapped current users!

—David Christman, Oxford, OH

Net Neutrality is important to me

—Fyodor, ,

All citizens deserve equal access

—Jeannie Coleman, ,

I am retired on limited income and disabled. The Internet is a necessary lifeline.

—Donna L. Walcott, Port Huron, MI

Only a free and neutral internet is a good internet

—Thomas Becker, ,

Why is the FCC even considering this? Take a look at Europe. Protect the rights of the common citizen by ensuring equal access Internet. Does money but everything on the U S? Why us the FCC in the pockets of Big Telcom ? They make enough profits without being granted special privileges because they are powerful.

—Patricia Hanaford, Fenton, MI

freedom of expression is a right - and what right do you have to take that away - starting to look like China

—Shannon, ,

Equal access for all. It's vital for democracy!

—Adam Laycock, Los Angeles, CA

As a disabled veteran I rely on the Internet a great deal. I cannot afford to pay more for it, nor could I tolerate slower speeds.

—Roger Gantner, Elk Grove, CA

It's an important free-market concept that where there is no competition, the government must step in to prevent abuse of monopoly power. Content creation is no monopoly, but content delivery is; the pipe to each household or business should be regulated under common carrier rules, not controlled in their own interests by powerful content originators.

—Marcus Redivo, ,

It's our human right to have net neutrality.

—Brooke Shergold, ,

Net neutrality guarantees equal access of information for ALL people, not just the rich. It also guarantees the rich cannot control what information is on the Internet—one of the first steps to a totalitarian government is control of information by those in power and that means the wealthy. On a personal level, as a freelance writer and editor, I could no longer earn my living without complete and equal access to all information on the Internet.

—Amy Henry, Northampton, MA

It's obvious that we small people don't have the clout that biz already has.

—H Motter, Mankato, MN

The internet belongs to the people, History tells us so.

—William Cantrell, Vancouver, WA

In a free country all possible must be done to facilitate communications.

—John Renfrew, Marquette, MI

Freedom of speech, freedom to innovate, prevention of ISPs and Telcos from discriminatory pricing and control of access.

—Brian Wheeler, ,

Equality

—Jesse Lyons, Edmonton,

The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers.

—Donna Grabow, Volcano, HI

We all have the right to open internet. Too much 1% now.

—Dan Jensen, North Plains, OR

The average and poor people must have a free and open internet.

—Henry Jones, Columbus, OH

A fair and open Internet is key to evolving into a more free and democratic global civilization.

—Trent Rhode, ,

Everyone should have the same access to information regardless of source and regardless to how much money they have. Open Internet is necessary more than ever now.

—Melissa Pappas, Saint Paul, MN

The internet should be shared equally.

—Penny Moyer, Littleton, CO

Assuming that you, the members of the FCC, are reasonably intelligent, you really shouldn't NEED telling why Net Neutrality is important to any normal person - including me! It's blatantly obvious!

—James Fussell, ,

I'm paying for internet bruu

—Shah, ,

Speedy access to the internet should be available to everyone. Not just corporations who have pockets deep enough to pay for preferential treatment.

—Doyle Young, Chesapeake, VA

People need a media to express freely.

—Jacques Picher, ,

Freedom of Speech is guaranteed by our constitution!;

—Gerald Oliver, Broken Arrow, OK

The internet belongs to all of us. There is an overriding public interest in keeping it open and out of the control of corporations. The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers"!

—Joachim Marx, New York, NY

https://exed.hks.harvard.edu/Programs/ccs/overview.aspx?utm_source=fallcross71414&utm_medium=email&utm_term=callforapps&utm_content=overview&utm_campaign=

—Michele Dawn Sanderson, Walnut Creek, CA

Because the flow of information is critical for a society!

—Leda Raptis, ,

Seize this opportunity to support the interests of the average American citizen over corporate agendas

—Jeremy Carter, Radford, VA

We do not want any "slow lanes"

—Christine Anderson, Lafayette, CA

Broadband internet access has become a utility in function. Whether wired or wireless, it is a dividing line between those that have and those that do not. Many government functions and services require access by default in both Canada and ht US. Public computers such as those at libraries can be dangerously compromised and should not be used for sensitive transactions. This essentially forces citizens to have high speed internet access at home. It is as essential as phone access, electricity and water. High speed broadband access is to the 21st century what the telephone was in a previous era.

—Dan Araujo, , freedom of speech and rights should not be controlled by anyone or any corporation or govt!!!! Also crammed with ads n crap too is wrong!!

—Terry, ,

I don't want to have to pay more to use my favorite websites!

—Brent Janow, Spring City, TN

Free speech

—Bo, ,

Common Carriers must be the norm

—Ms. Bertha Underhill, Camp Connell, CA

Net neutrality has been working since Day 1 and we should not fix something that isn't broken! Keep net neutrality!

—Eliot Schickler, Brookline, MA

Net neutrality is important because most of my content comes from the states so even in canada, it will slow down the delivery of the content i look and appreciate from the states

—Bryan Frechette, ,

The internet needs to be open and unrestricted to all. In fact, it should be a highly maintained resource like roads, electricity, and water.

—Brad Harrison, ,

A level playing field should be important to everyone. Having a tiered system would only benefit a few corporations at the expense of the American Public. Corporations already control way too much of the lives of private individuals. Corporations are NOT people, should NOT be deemed to hold religious beliefs, and should NOT have control of the internet!

—Robert Long, Austin, TX

I'm a starving college kid with two part-time jobs and a shared apartment. The last thing I need right now is to be trapped and gouged of money by my own Internet providers.

—Kyle P., Cary, NC

Equal treatment in at least one forum.

—Garr Thompson III, Canton, MI

1 st amendment.

—Mr Vincent Ross Johnson, Somerset, KY

The internet is an important tool for knowledge. We cannot leave it up to money hungry companies to censor and effectively control what informant is out there.

—Nilton Boza, Brooklyn, NY

I use the Internet for professional purposes every day. I support real Net Neutrality, not the Internet for special interests.

—Lester Q. Strong, New York, NY

It's a freaking money making scheme and you know it, and the price of accessing the internet is already way too high! Keep the internet free!

—Richard Lund, Minneapolis, MN

It will cripple small businesses.

—Travis Lane, Redondo Beach, CA

It's the only bastion of freedom left!

—Gary Kolb, Carbondale, IL

On a limited income, it's the only way I have to keep up with news, friends, family and learning new things. Please don't take it away from me.

—Alice Green, Wheat Ridge, CO

I've submitted enough comments to them and if the FCC hasn't caught on yet, it's because they don't want to. Corporations run this country and they're running it into the ground.

—Elaine Hughes, Ambler, PA

Freedom is what makes the internet and this country great. You can't put the rights to provide content into the hands of the few. It breaks the system our society was founded on. Thank you for listening.

—Jan Balkema, Cincinnati, OH

We need to keep the internet FREE and accessible to ALL of us and NOT something else that is the playground of the rich. Keep all internet providers as "common carriers".

—Gretchen Smurr, Woodland, CA

The internet should be available to the public, like telephone & utility usage. No companies should be allowed to control the flow of the internet.

—A Adams, Cupertino, CA

It's what makes my voice equal to everyone else's.

—Andrew Perron, Pittsburgh, PA

Being equally connected to a wider community should not cost money; to charge will disenfranchise those who cannot pay, further ripping the social fabric into haves and have-nots. This is contributing to conditions that will tear down the delicate balance that we all need to live together in one world.

—Carolyn Warman, Carrollton, TX

It is crucial that EVERYONE has the same access to the internet.....don't screw this up

—Jusef White, Fremont, CA

I don't want my media chosen for me.

—Enrique Baloyra, Biscayne Park, FL

It is simply fair.

—Adam Pickering, ,

Imagine if the companies that made electronic voting machines were able to decide who would get to use them and were able to make it more difficult to vote for the candidate of your choosing? Allowing companies that provide the infrastructure for the internet to invade the neutrality of the net is tantamount to that. The turn of the 21st century will be remembered as a time when government was outsourced to the highest bidder (or highest briber). We see it now from our military to our prisons, and the result is a military that encourages war and a prison system that breeds incarceration. The dismantling of net neutrality will be the final nail in the coffin, the tipping point beyond which we will be unable to recover from the privatization of America. The mere fact that it's up for discussion is indicative of how poorly the importance of the issue is understood.

—Art Glick, Renick, WV

I don't want to be a lower class internet user. Real net neutrality, please, nothing less.

—Paul Mayer, Livingston, TX

All of us should be able to get good access.

—Barbara Adolay, Davis, CA

Sick of high prices and slow speeds

—Adam milligan, ,

It's just the right thing to do. Big Telecom companies are already making a lot of money. Now they want a way to charge us even more money to get the same service.

—Darryl Murphy, Central Islip, NY

It's essential to free speech, to Democracy! Keep corporate hands off our internet.

—Cynthia Howard, Biddeford Pool, ME

The internet should be like a municipal water system.

—David Gustafson, Moline, IL

We the consumers don't need to be gouged any more than we already are

—Katherine Hutchins, Phoenix, AZ

Net neutrality is democratic. Anything that corporations and America's billionaires want is plutocratic.

—John Irby, Colorado Springs, CO

Free flow of information is the only safeguard against tyranny.

—Ryan R Stanley, ,

The internet needs to remain wide open without any speed barriers or pay-bands. I fear that, should net neutrality be abandoned, the imposed limitations grow until only the rich can afford to use the internet. Free speech (for those without the money to 'afford' it) will be limited, and that cannot be allowed to happen, so that's why I'm getting involved...

—Brad Massier, ,

Open access to community & information sharing.

—Jonathan Virtue, ,

Equal access keeps America competitive.

—Robert Acheson, Rochester, MN

Democracy rests on an educated citizenry. Don't put free access to information in the hands of corporations.

—Jeanne Kyser, Cedar Park, TX

I like my internet the way it is. Free, decent price access, and NOT run by China!

—Hudson Ball, Traphill, NC

If you let this slow lane proposal happen, what will be next? It's a big step in the wrong direction that will send society towards a global police state... We are already being policed enough... Please help freedom of expression rule!

—Martin Lacombe, Sudbury, ON

The mainstream news media of today are far too similar to each other and offer highly selective and low quality journalism. The only real alternatives are on the net. And they are poorly funded. Without net neutrality, we will lose them. This will greatly diminish the vitally need exchange of political views in the marketplace of ideas. Similarly, competition in all aspects of the net is now impeded by the antiquated system of franchise agreements. The oligopolies are feeding us pablum and bilking us monetarily. This is America, the country that invented the internet, yet we pay more for broadband and get less of it than do citizens of other countries. Why? For no good reason at all; it's just exploitation. The system needs to be overhauled.

—Jerald Vinikoff, Mechanicville, NY

The internet is the only democratic institution left in this country; the only true forum for freedom of speech. Take that away, and our country dies with it.

—Daniel Valverde, Forest Hills, NY

It is important to recognize that the Internet is a public utility with equal access (Net Neutrality) available to all on an equal basis. Anything else will result in a 'digital divide' based on wealth and the ability to pay.

—Robert Sims, ,

The original internet that was made available for use by "the general public", and its predecessor, named "the ARPANET" were designed and developed with funds that ultimately came from American taxpayers. Where the basic internet infrastructure was financed by the American public, a strong case can be made that it still is the property, at least in part, of the American people as a whole, and the we all should be entitled to make use of it in the way to which we have been accustomed. Many of use it on a daily basis, and some of us use it quite intensively for a variety of different purposes during the periods of time when we are "connected". The proposal to allow certain types of businesses to establish "fast lanes" for themselves by paying a subscription premium, probably will amount to simple theft of some portion of the bandwidth that we have come to expect, with no clear reason or justification, aside from the fact that certain access providers have just said that "they want it" as a way to increase their profits. No justification that this change would be "in the public interest" has been, offered, and it would be truer to say that the change is being made "in the interest of a few specific companies" and it comes at the expense of the millions of private citizen users who (probably) will be seriously inconvenienced by having to live with slower throughput for their own electronic communications. It seems quite likely that many "private citizen users" will be impacted by this change in their interaction bandwidths. So to conclude, the proposed decision to force reduced internet "performance" on a very large number of "private citizen" users, for the benefit of a much smaller number of "elite" users and service provider business, ~IS~ nothing more that an act of government sanctioned theft from the American people, for reasons that appear to be totally arbitrary for the great number of American who make frequent use of the internet as "private citizens".

—Karl G. Heinemann, Acton, MA

The internet has become the modern way to communicate it needs to be kept open and free as possible. We will never give up the fight to keep it so.

—William Tucker, TUCSON, AZ

We need net neutrality to avoid leaving all the internet's potential in the hands of companies who would exploit it.

—Aaron Butt, ,

Dammit, the Internet does NOT belong to a few communications giants with the money to own it, IT BELONGS TO US! The internet is a public communications COMMODITY, important both for emergency and general use. DO NOT SELL IT!

—Hank Rodgers, Silverado, CA

Communication shouldn't be biased, and that's what the internet is; unbiased communication. Net Neutrality allows for this. Any other methodology is unethical.

—John Reissig, Victor, NY

I am living on a fixed disability income. I can not afford much in the way of entertainment so I only have t.v. and the internet. If there are premiums placed at higher rates than I pay now, or I have to deal with extremely slow and frustrating connections, I will lose a valuable form of enjoyment in my life and I will be forced to just have t.v. as my only form of entertainment. This would be a financial burden and would add to the mental health issues I am on disability because of. Please leave the internet alone!

—Amy Polnoff, Atwater, CA

Save Net Neutrality. Broadband providers already make too much money.

—Larry Blanchard, Ferndale, WA

The little guy has a voice.

—Scott R. Avey, Fort McCoy, FL

I agree with all statements made in this letter and could not make those points better myself!

—Sandra Miller, South Bend, IN

I believe the internet should be designated as a utility to allow fair and equal access to all users.

—Brian Maccan, ,

The Internet was invented in the UK by individuals who could have made alot of money off it, but instead chose to give it freely. Because of them the world is now more connected than ever before, do not take this away.

—Matthew Henderson, ,

This signature indicates my support for these legal challenges. I will submit my personal opinions and experiences on net neutrality at fcc.gov/comments.

—Abulhair Saparov, Pittsburgh, PA

The net should be the same for all! We want a fair internet.

—Paula Serraller, Hondarribia,

save net neutrality..Keepit the way it is..Do not have fast and slow lanes.

—susan De Nolf, Winter Springs, FL

Net Neutrality is absolutely necessary for the free and open exchange of information and services online. Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers.

—Ms. S Dwyer, Granger, IN

The Internet belongs to ALL people, not to big companies. So equal access should be a basic right for all people, not fast lanes for deep pockets and slow lanes for the less fortunate. Do not let Big Business take the Internet!

—A van Liehout, ,

It is the single most important tool equally available to the everyday public today. By allowing the big telecommunications companies to change that so that there is no longer equal access is a crime.

—Ellin, Gillette, WY

I work from home solely as a business entrepreneur and need constant and effective access to the Internet at its most capable speeds.

—Andy Kirk, Los Angeles, CA

I don't like discrimination. all website should run at equal bandwidths.

—Malay Tiwari, ,

Equal access to the internet is the gateway to free expression, new ideas and innovation. Allowing large companies to pay for improved access would create a high class and low class internet that would further hurt the poor and disadvantaged.

—Benjamin Martin, Wallingford, CT

Because its the most propaganda free source. If I want to find something I can find it no matter how bad it is atleast I can find it. Internet helps me to see the real world. And with knowing what the world is we know where we should be working on.

—Arnout Posthumus, ,

There's no reason to throttle the Internet, especially in an age that bandwidth is getting cheaper all the time. Do not allow such a callous use of unnecessary power!

—Andrew H Sheridan, Houston, TX

Open internet is what consumers want. Why make the rich richer?

—Michael Webb, Green Forest, AR

Corporate bull shit,,Are you part of it?

—David H Satterfield, Wilmington, DE

The health of our democracy depends upon the free flow of information. I can think of few things more damaging than allowing some businesses to dominate the Internet and receive what amounts to preferential treatment just because of their greater wealth.

—Felicity Devlin, Tacoma, WA

We must maintain our freedom. Accepting this disgusting proposal is a denial of all George Washington and Abraham Lincoln stood for. Maintain our freedom

—Tim Landry, ,

The FCC's focus should be on pursuing regulations that strengthen Net Neutrality, rather than helping big corporations undermine it to ultimately allow for censorship and predatory price gouging. Reclassify ISPs as common carriers; protect Net Neutrality and it's consumers from the oligopoly you have allowed to be created under the proposed discriminatory Internet Rules.

—Morgan Butay, Concord, CA

The Internet has been free for 20 Years and I like to keep it that way.

—Willie Haywood, Selma, AL

This is the path to free speech and the social future of the human race.

—Carl Johnson, ,

Because big business should not be able to control anything in this world.

—Michael Z, Sugar Land, TX

free speech

—Louis Mariani, Whitehall, PA

Do not allow carriers to make decisions on which sites to slow down or limit access to. This is against freedom of speech.

—Marie Hammer, Gainesville, FL

Net Neutrality is the reason the Internet is a viable business platform. Without it, all small business will cease to be competitive.

—Dillon mcaffrey, ,

Don't tread on me!

—Rafael Bigas, Kissimmee, FL

It's gives me the power and freedom to learn new skills to keep myself being a better as a citizen.

—Pedro J. Baez-Rivera, Lafayette, LA

I don't want cable companies to turn the internet into another wasteland of bundled channels.

—Chris Jeter, Fairmount, IN the fuckers are already to big on their own.

—Miriam Baum, Alta Loma, CA

There has been wave after wave of innovation because any programmer with a dream, and an open internet, can create the next big thing. With paid for fast lanes, a barrier to entry is created which will stifle innovation in favor of entrenched corporations. It would be nice if the FCC would be looking out for the consumers and innovators who create and benefit from an open internet, not the large corporations who line the politicians pockets with contributions.

—Leonard Robert Darnell, Loma Linda, CA

The internet is our only communication platform that is unregulated with genuine freedom of speech, albeit positive or negative. Restrictions applied to the digital space pave the way for a future in which individuals of our generations and, more critically, the ones to come are left incapacitated to speak their minds; or understand those different to their own. To make any reasonable decision on policies, ethics or whatever the topic, you need to approach the subject with an understanding of all surrounding sources of information. An unbiased, individual perception that is challenged by this proposal.

—Thornten-Zayne Haywood, ,

It's important because ITS THE AMERICAN WAY....NO fast lanes for some and none for others...

—Robert Hodge Hodge, Portland, OR

Crowd sourcing is #1

—Mike Dale, ,

This resource is our Community Commons, and as such, it is under common ownership of all of us. In order to exercise, we all need equal common access.

—David Dorn, Livermore, CA

Freedom of Speech is our right.

—Kathy Priola, Santa Fe, NM

Net neutrality is going to be a significant story in human history, this is where we can unshackle ourselves and start taking the steps towards a more understanding and free world for all. We can stop any one company or country from ruining this bastion of free expression that billions around the world have created and use daily.

—Noah Oughton, ,

If the net is controlled it allows big business to control the flow of information. This is about controlling the public and not allowing them to make decisions based on the whole picture.

—Gayle, Graham, WA

Keep the internet open, no fast lanes

—Roy Murray, Pittsburgh, PA

As a small business owner I rely on open internet to reach my customers on social media, the freedom of public information should NOT be stifled

—Dee Ives, Westfield, WI

The Internet is the next-generation telephone system -- and was always conceived as such, from its first proposal by the RAND Corporation. Packet-switched digital networks were meant to supplant circuit-switched analog networks as a way to eliminate single-point-of-failure vulnerabilities against the threat of USSR nuclear strikes against telco COs. The Internet is our common carrier for the twenty-first century. It's time to begin regulating it as such.

—Michael Kaufman, New York, NY

As a young entrepreneur, much my success will be determined on the visibility of my business online. Don't take away the "little guy's" possibility of success over greed!

—Alexis Simontacchi, Tucson, AZ

Choice is important for everyone. Don't take it away.

—Garth Parkinson, ,

The Internet itself, for which the public paid, belongs to the public. The ability of the US itself to rebuild depends on keeping the Internet free from complete corporate control and, in fact, restoring corporate constraints altogether.

—Diane H Fabian, Fort Atkinson, WI

Having access to an open Internet is like being able to freely use the roads on an equal basis. I value content that often comes from sources without a lot of money to pay extra tolls. Regulating the internet as a public utility makes a lot of sense. Maybe then some of the profits could be put back into the infrastructure allowing us to catchup with the many other countries that provide faster service at a better value.

—Dale Konle, Watertown, WI

I work over the Internet, and I am self-employed. Also, this attempt to build a two-tiered Internet is appalling, and puts the majority of us at a disadvantage. It threatens the democratic nature of the Internet as we know it. We shall not let this happen.

—Regine Bohar, ,

It is fair and just policy, nothing more. A God given right to world citizenry!

—Paul D. Felleggy, Houston, TX

Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Do not stifle innovation or destroy the internet - reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers".

—Alex Gemmell, Marina del Rey, CA

Get the fuck of the peoples Internet!!

—Carl Fridman, ,

The Internet is for everyone, not just those who can afford it!

—Garret Johnston, Ashland, OR

Freedom of the people to express their views is central to a democratic republic.

—, Ellsworth, MI

Simply and boldly put, stop trying to takeover control of the Internet for the New World Order. Divine workings will not allow you to remain in force AT ALL much longer! Satanic destructive operations to kill the people of the world and assume control will be crushed! Power of the Almighty Divine Intelligence governs all!

—Gary Alan, Larkspur, CA

For better services, protection from monopolies and common sense.

—Eh, ,

Our First Amendment is very important, and I believe the pay-to-play proposal of the internet providers puts that amendment in jeopardy. Please preserve net neutrality!

—Kathleen Flynn, New York, NY

A free and open internet helps the spread of ideas, drives entrepreneurship, promotes innovation, and corporations should not control how we access the web.

—Jeannette Ordas, ,

It's not fair to anyone. It would destroy the very fabric that is the world wide web. It would also increase rates, and things meant to be free couldn't stay available. Everything operates just fine as it is, and it's also unfair for the corporations to judge what we can and cannot have.

—Dj, Denison, TX

The internet has become even more important than the telephone. Do the right thing! Reclassify and throwout rules that benefit the wealthy while leaving the rest of the country at their mercy!

—Tamara Carpenter, Kalamazoo, MI

We average joe's who use the internet for our daily usage cannot afford to be forced into the internet slow lane. Don't let Big Telecom take even more advantage of us than they already do! They're rich...and we get poorer so that they can stay rich. Please stand up for we little guys and NOT Big Telecom!

—Jeff Docherty, ,

The way of progress is freedom, not privatization. As a political scientist, this flies in the face of the lessons we have learned from history, It is regressive and will be loathed by citizens.

—, Summerfield, NC

This country was founded on the idea of personal freedom. In the spirit of this great principle keep the internet free and flowing for everyone. In this time when corporate power seems to be taking over so many aspects of our lives, please do the right thing for people, not corporations(which irrespective of the Supreme Court are not people),

—Steven Goldstone, New York, NY

It is dire that we preserve the neutral nature of the internet in order to foster the spirit of competition that our capitalistic society was founded on. By enabling a private agent to enforce their will and interest on the public affords them too great a power to stand as a middleman; a power that in effect can shape the future of the United States in relation to other nations of the world -- likely for worse.

—Egon Bohler, Columbus, OH

I want to not be charged more for something that should be a common carrier. Everyone has a right to the internet, the cable companies shouldn't be able to dictate how much people are charged and then provide terrible service. Look around, already people hate the ISP's because of the terrible rates, terrible customer service, and illegal buisness dealings. Please fix this and not make it worse by giving them more power.

—Cindy, Chicago, IL

Equal access to an open Internet is essential for both users and content providers...allowing the big telecom providers to throttle Web access by charging steep (and they will be steep) premiums, or to censor content, will destroy the Internet as we know it today, crush free expression, and destroy the new frontier of American entrepreneurship.

—Juan Rojas, ,

Stop killing the planet

—Mr. Michel R Siziare CD, ,

I use the internet every day for my work, to stay in touch with my friends and family. Please keep this possible.

—Karen E King, Sunland, CA

The free flow of information in the mid-to-late twentieth century was mediated in large part by public ownership of the airwaves and the attendant regulations imposed by the FCC. By not classifying ISPs as common carriers, the FCC is abdicating its regulatory responsibility to ensure that the internet develops as a public forum and protect upstart internet technologies from being squelched by incumbent firms capable of paying for superior access to the public via the internet.

—Mr. Brendan McGrail, Cleveland, OH

Segregating the connection speed of websites based on whomever pays the most is intrinsically wrong. We already pay the telecoms for a specific connection speed. The web hosts already pay the telecoms for connections to the network. That's it, and it works. What is being proposed is similar to allowing the owners of expensive cars to travel at faster speeds while owners of a lower end model would be ticketed at the same speed. It's ludicrous.

—Kevin Rice, Frisco, TX

I make my living as a web developer. The internet being free and open allows for an even and open playing field for all. The entrepreneurship that the internet allows is staggering. A small startup can compete with the giants without having to have huge amounts of money to pay for "fast lane" access. Common carriage is the only way to ensure that a free and open internet stays for all.

—Jamie Hall, ,

Net neutrality not only assures internet users that each site is given the same speed, from their server to the user's computer; it also ensures that every site, regardless of its content, is instantly available. This means that small business, websites with fascinating but obscure information, like sites written by theoretical physicists on the nature of quarks, is available quickly and just as speedily as those who can pay, like Wikipedia and YouTube.

—David R. Litwin, ,

We must all have equal access to information for our society to be successful.

—Mr. Dale Gilman, Beverly Hills, MI

Linking the World's knowledge should not be 'sold' to profiteers.

—V Smith, Olmsted Falls, OH

We can't let corporations co-opt what belongs to the citizenry. These corporations are already TOO powerful. DO NOT EMPOWER THEM ANY FURTHER .

—Brian Kuhn, Santa Monica, CA

This will hinder startups and online small businesses, it will stifle growth and jeopardize north american innovation.

—Allan Los Angeles, ,

Net Neutrality is the digital embodiment of freedom, I fight for freedom.

—Francesco Chinnici, Hatfield, PA

Don't sell the greatest development in American history to a few corporations, please.

—Wendy Lou Pollock, Lakewood, CA

Net neutrality is of utmost importance today. Freedom of information should never be restricted.

—James, ,

No more corporate control of our lives!

—Barbara Warren, Tucson, AZ

Because it's the only reason the Internet has become so useful, so ubiquitous--allow bandwidth control and you ruin it.

—Eli Gallagher, Columbia, MO

Because I already pay my cable/internet provider nearly $200 a month - part of that is already a fee for high-speed. I cannot AFFORD to pay any more than that! I WILL NOT pay any more than that, it is already hideously outrageous, but the cost of doing business as 100% of my work is internet-based. If I'm in the "slow lane" I won't be able to complete my work. This is utterly outrageous. For the amount of money I pay already I will go where I want, when I want. I don't look at porn, I don't download music or movies, I'm just an ordinary person trying to make a living. Don't let this happen!!! Do you want us all to starve to death because we can no longer afford to make a living?

—Beverly Pinnegar, ,

By allowing "fast lanes" you will allow established companies to starve start ups of the bandwidth they need to survive. This hurts innovation and ultimately the entire Internet.

—Deanna Stanley, Rockville, MD

Because it IS the internet.

—Tyler Weiss, Carlsbad, CA

As a real estate agent, I use the internet as one of the most effective ways to network and gain new business. I already spend a lot of money just for the privilege of practicing real estate and the concern that it could cost more to do business through internet websites and services is unfair to independent contractors and small business owners.

—Deborah Griffith, Charlotte, NC

Good afternoon Ladies and Gentlemen of the FCC, It has come to my attention that there are lobbyists from Big Telecom companies trying to push through a "slow lane" proposal. That would be absolutely detrimental to society and free expression as we currently know it. The internet is required for our information age to keep running smoothly. If we take these things away, people will be forced to pay higher rates to companies that already make enough money. Please consider the opposite of this proposal. Let the internet stay a place of Free Expression and let it be affordable. The internet is a great thing in the right hands. Thank you.

—Parker P, ,

I have a limited income. Why should I and my children be penalized because I'm part of the working poor?

—Yvonne Game, Minneapolis, MN

I use the internet, the telephone and we are the people, for the people and by the people

—Mary Mahoney, Boston, MA

Because alternatives benefit only corporations, not citizens. Giving private connections to such an important commodity is dangerous.

—Sara, ,

It protects 1st amendment rights; it's good for the economy; and it provides a level playing field for everyone, not just the people who can afford to pay for access.

—S Harrell, Fort Collins, CO

Accessibility must be affordable for all.

—Brigitte McKinnon, ,

What is the next step? Banning books? Please keep a free America- do NOT kill Net Neutrality!

—, Southbury, CT

All are equal, and that should apply on the web too.

—Joakim Nilsson, ,

The internet doesn't belong to any one company. When I pay for Internet service I expect to get unrestricted access. Anything else is a slippery slope. Show these corporate entities you don't work for them and that you now work for the people of the United States.

—Bob Hibbits, Gig Harbor, WA

All my communication and business and volunteer organizing is done by email and the internet. Without the internet being classified as a necessary public utility, it will take us back 50 years in what we can accomplish. It is imperative that the internet be a Common Carrier!!

—Constance Engle, Hendersonville, NC

Net neutrality ensures a business and democratic friendly communications and information system that is equally available to all.

—Kenneth Craig Chisholm, London, ON

Greed is one of the seven deadly sins!

—Barb Vessey, ,

In your north American terms a free internet is equivalent to freedom of speech and freedom of assembly, an asset that should be protected from commercialization.

—David Rumsey, Basel,

Net neutrality is the only fair and right option.

—Derrick A. Hester, Morgantown, KY

The internet should NOT be controlled by large telecommunications corporations. The internet is a place where everyone has the same voice no matter what. There are no exceptions.

—Gregory Bedard, Salem, MA

I live alone. My adult children are scattered across the country. The web is the tool I use to stay in touch with them. Please don't take that away!!!!

—Michele Neff, Buckeye, AZ

Please explain why the Internet should be free for a few select corporations to make any more money than they already do off hosting the Internet? The Internet is a utility. Comcast, as much as it'd probably like to, does not own or run our municipal waterworks. Nor should they. There's no difference. There's already way too much power concentrated with corporations at the expense of millions of people. It's wrong, unfair, unjust and you know it.

—Dave Dunkak, Portland, OR big business does not belong running the net. It also does not belong trying to run the govt

—John Cleary Jr, Staten Island, NY

No one service provider should be able to arbitrarily control my access to the Internet. The Internet belongs to all of us!

—Marc Fontana, Santa Clara, CA same service for everyone

—Pm Coedes, ,

A level playing field for internet access is the only fair way to approach this. Be fair.

—Anne Richardson-Daniel, Los Angeles, CA

b/c it's a UTILITY!

—Elizabeth Bookout, Hanahan, SC

Net neutrality epitomises the Universal Declaration of Human Rights & the freedoms that so many of our servicemen have died to protect in perpetuity!

—Chris Burrell, New York, NY

I have written more than one note regarding my feelings on this matter. They boil down to this: creating 'fast' internet service for some content providers amounts to creating 'slow' internet service for all the rest. No matter how you spin it, it's still a two-tier (or multi-tier) system, wherein more established and wealthy companies can assure themselves of far better throughput than smaller ones. This is anticompetitive and bad for our already struggling economy. It will serve to further pauperise the consumers who want to access content over the internet, contributing to the ongoing economic trend which is eliminating the middle class of our great nation. Others have noted that the decline in the middle class is a harbinger of doom for any democracy; so if you value our way of life as envisioned by the founders, please do not allow big telecom to dictate their draconian policies to you, the governmental department tasked with regulating them.

—Caleb Cullen, Houston, TX

For the same reason it should be important to everyone; the internet is one of the basic resources of innovation in our country. Allowing ISPs the right to dictate which organizations and endeavors will be successful throughout all other industries is irresponsible. Such a system will always favor corporate partnerships and freeze out all innovation which can't afford the entry fee.

—Bennett Schwarz, Fresh Meadows, NY

An open, unrestricted internet ensures the United States stays competitive in today's online world. Tech companies have always thrived in the US, but a "slow lane" would fetter the average citizen and would severely limit their ability to innovate using the internet.

—Cameron Dutro, Alameda, CA

It is our free right to interconnect with others on internet. Let's leave as it is now.

—María Carmen Santana del Gil, ,

I sent a more lengthy personal message yesterday. Please read it.

—Michael Martini, Montclair, NJ

Net neutrality is important to me because I don't like getting screwed by my local broadband monopoly. The slow lane is the first step towards irrelevancy for new businesses or people who won't (or can't) pay for the fast lane.

—Jon Swanson, Seattle, WA

As the US is the hub for much of the world's Internet traffic, we need you to protect the world's free and open Internet.

—Salil Dhingra, ,

"Destroy the internet" may sound dramatic, but truly this will fundamentally change the internet as it is now. The internet will become only a place to find large corporations, leaving small businesses helpless.

—Stephen Cook, ,

No changes to the internet!

—Ed Davie, Forest Grove, OR

Net neutrality is an important benefit for all mankind now and for many generations to come.

—Toby Cordwell, ,

Net Neutrality is equivalent to democracy -- all US residents should be treated equally.

—Duane J. Matthiesen, Lexington, MA

The internet offers the opportunity to learn about what is going on in the world and to express your concerns on issues. It is the ultimate opportunity for free speech. Please keep control of this out of the hands of the big telcom companies and classify it as a utility. Thank you,

Gail Breakey, Honolulu

—Gail Breakey, Waipahu, HI

I'm paying my internet provider to provide content to me, why should they be allowed any say on what I want to see? I'm paying them to provide a specific speed of service to me, not to allow them to charge content providers extra to deliver the data I want to see at the speeds I'm paying for.

—Darrell Budic, Madison, WI

The internet should belong to all of us

—Edward Hartwell, Austin, TX

Information flow and access are critical to balanced education in today's society. Net neutrality is important to close the wealth gap by raising those on the bottom along with the rest of us. Lack of net neutrality places far too much social control in the hands of those who are motivated by greed for capital and power, rather than long-term health of our society.

—William D. Wickart, Hillsboro, OR

We cannot let the internet be controlled by the few corporations who aim to strong arm the net and control flow to those who pay. This creates a pay to win system. How many great ideas will be lost because the playing field isn't level? You claim you support an open internet? Prove it and shoot down any attempt for corporations to gain control. Please, for once do the right thing for the sake of doing the right thing and not because a few business had the right amount of money to contribute.

—Stephen Guiwits, West Covina, CA

The Internet is probably the freest place in the world. Sure, some people probably abuse this freedom, but there are others who use it respectfully. I am begging you not to implement the "slow lane" - we will not stand to pay more for better Internet. Do this and the Internet will be dead in a year.

—Whizzer0, ,

Net Neutrality is an essential part of freedom of expression without which there can be no democracy.

—Ulla Schmid, ,

THE INTERNET MUST BE CORRECTLY RECLASSIFIED AS A UTILITY AND REMAIN SO IN THE FUTURE.

—Jeff LaFlamme, Santa Fe, NM

All content should be equal.

—Chris Russell, ,

Net Neutrality is the very essence of a true democracy.

—Jeff Cantor, Sarasota, FL

Save the Internet

—Pedro Patino, , freedom of information is the cornerstone of a democratic society

—Caroline Tuiolosega, ,

Free speech, news reporting by multiple sources allows accurate accounting of events without any one network controlling what individuals see.

—Linda Williams, Crestview, FL

In my opinion, Net Neutrality is important for maintaining an even playing field for all Americans regardless of their economic status.

Allowing corporations and the wealthy the opportunity to enjoy faster internet speeds than the "rest of us" adds to income inequality in this society. Everyone should be allowed access to internet information with equal ease and expedition. Don't allow another means for the "have's" to have faster and easier access to information than those less fortunate.

—Tom Ryan, Portland, OR

The Internet is the only media where free speech is still alive and these restrictions will destroy internet freedom for a vast amount of people.

—Mark C. Dias, ,

Net neutrality is important in safeguarding freedom of choice for all internet users. This equates to freedom of speech, guaranteed by our 1st amendment. If these concepts are bridled, we become subject to tyrants who will quickly move into the void. Americans will no longer be free. Sad.

—Sue Taylor, Colorado Springs, CO

The internet was invented for everyone - not just for those who can afford it and not just for big business to make money out of. DO NOT DESTROY THE INTERNET

—Liz Carlton, ,

Because I'm a software engineer at a networking company and I want the internet to remain free so we all have a level playing field.

—Joshua Verburg-Sachs, Seattle, WA

I don't want my opportunities on the Internet to be limited - like if I wanted to open a small business or operate my own website. What makes the internet so great is that is for everyone and connects everyone in the world, for the most part, equally. As soon as we start limiting access to the internet or certain parts of the internet, it loses it's awesome equal-ness.

—, Gulfport, MS

There should not be one service for the rich and one service for the rest of us. This is discrimination and unfair. The rich don't have enough? They want to take even more from us. You people are greedy and selfish if you pass this law.

—Maggie Grant, ,

We must have equal access to the internet with neutrality for all websites.

—Debra Lurie, Richmond, CA

Net neutrality is the foundation of an open internet. Please ensure we support acts that promote it, not ones that destroy it.

—Mark Haro, Williston, ND

I am a single grandmother raising my grandson in a world that is now computerized. I cannot afford expensive fees for hi speed internet and it is important for my grandson to be able to keep up with the world.

—Diana Willison, ,

Mr. Wheeler, you are trying to do what Myer Lanske and the mob tried to do in Cuba, right before the rise of Castro.

—Tom Klemesrud, Sioux Falls, SD

Letter previously sent to Chairman Wheeler. Stop giving America away to corporations.

—Robert H. Feuchter, Jamaica Estates,, NY

Dear Federal Communications Commission: We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Peter Bikoulis, ,

Keep net neutrality now!!!!

—Brian Heiss, Sparta, MI

I have submitted a comment to Chairman Wheeler, Docket # 14-28 re keeping things the way they are for a free internet equally fast and accessible for all, and to make the internet a public utility and oversee it as such.

—Probyn Gregory, LA, CA

It's been proven time and time again that ISP's will act in their own best interest, and not their customers. This is perhaps the worst example yet.

—Chris Szamocki, Sullivan, WI

Free access gives me family safety as I am a senior citizen.

—Bill Wiebe, West Point, TX

You will be destroying the foundations of democracy, which is that there is equal access to government. Without equal access to information streams we will not have equal access to government.

—Morrie Cordero, Seattle, WA

Fairness!

—Curtis Baker, Ocean City, NJ

Net Neutrality is important to me because the most widely used communication and education tool in modern times is the internet, and access to it is vital for every person in this country.

—Samantha Turetsky, Ormond Beach, FL

I do not believe that the Internet should be treated any differently from any other system that functions as a common carrier.

—Jane Murphy, Ripley, NY

I don't trust the telecoms. I have seen what they do when they are given some freedom. This is the reason why Canada's telecom market is ruled by pretty much three companies. This is the reason why, for a service that's available elsewhere for $30 a month costs us Canadians $80. Telecom companies are not to be trusted. If they are allowed to create slow lanes, what then, is stopping them from completely shutting users out of the internet until they pay them an extraordinary fee? The people on the internet have already shown their disapproval for slowing down access and the censorship of the internet. I am asking for the broadband providers to be classified as common carriers.

—Stanley Tsang, ,

Internet plays nowadays a huge part in social interaction between people. If the internet is limited or censored. This poses a threat to democracy. No corporation should have power like this.

—Ida Suninen, ,

Freedom of expression is a Charter entrenched right which I do not want extinguished, diminished, distorted or manipulated b the FCC et al.

—Laura Langstaff, , don't let corporations take control of what is now free and open

—Vince N Alexander, Wilsonville, OR

Service providers cannot be allowed to control what, how fast and whether or not the internet is accessible. Their sole purpose is to provide the service, not control the content or speed. They are paid for the service provision not to censor.

—Libby Yuill, ,

Justice and equality of opportunities, information is Power, Power to the people!

—Ana Gregorio, ,

I want my Internet to be the same as everyone's. No special deals for monied interests or greedy gatekeepers.

—Phillip Cripps, Cathedral City, CA

It maintains choice and innovation rather than stagnation through draconian practices that create oligopoly.

—Paul Scapinello, ,

The Internet is a fundamental part of our daily lives. Allowing service providers to restrict, slow or block access to Internet resources in exchange for arbitrary fees is an unacceptable path forward. It will cripple the utility of this tremendous resource by impeding or blocking access to information based on arbitrary criteria and/or fees.

—Shane Denovan, ,

I use the internet all day for my web design business and my Photography business. Any slow down of speed or restriction of access which slows down my production or will cause my companies more expense could be disastrous in the current world market .

—Rick Waller, Grass Valley, CA

We have enough controls on our lives now. Please allow us free access to the internet.

—Dave Wilson, ,

Charities and non-profits don't have the profits to stand on equal ground if we bias internet bandwidth based on how much websites pay the providers!

—Houston Wong, Kirkland, WA

Because I attend school on the internet and if you start charging then I will have to drop out and I will not be able to keep close contact with my friends and family who live far away.

—Alleen, Malad City, ID

Everyone should have equal access to the internet separate from their ability to pay for faster access.

—Gordon Ivens Jr, Los Angeles, CA

It will redefine how the internet works and could completely eliminate competitions. New companies will have trouble growing. We could be paying double what we should be, paying the internet provider for access to internet and paying the content provider for them to pay the internet provider as well.

—Muhannad, ,

Slowing down the internet will cause numerous business bankruptcy because many will discontinue using the www.

—Anthonie van Harreveld, El Mirage, AZ

I rely on a free and open internet as does my son (student) and wife. Please do not allow the internet to become a "fast lane" "slow lane" tiered model.

—Kris Kemp, Covina, CA

I, as an American citizen, am tired of taking a back seat to major corporations. Every person deserves an equal share in internet services. Something must be done to inhibit the amount of control call and internet providers have on consumers (citizens). It's about time that we are seen as human beings rather than consumers, being asked to send our mine every direction. Please stand up for my rights. Matthew Sanchez

—Matthew Sanchez, Denton, TX

My livelihood and, because I'm housebound due to health issues, all the fun and interest I get out of life, are dependent on a free and open Internet and even-handed Internet access.

—Faith Freewoman, Rochester, NY

Next time: It will be Europe WHO suffers from bad descisions.

—Bjørn West, ,

All websites, big or small, deserve the rights to deliver their contents at the same speed. Telecom companies shouldn't be given the rights to slow down certain sites.

—Jingjing Zhang, ,

Without net neutrality, there is no democracy.

—Ann Stockdale, Gig Harbor, WA

Don't let big business destroy Net Neutrality.

—Andrew Binkley, Santa Fe, NM

I use many small websites that would be infinitely slower to access if this unbalanced pricing policy is enacted. This is simply unacceptable! The Internet is a utility by which people conduct all kinds of personal and regular business, just like the telephone. There should be no difference in speed for any particular website, and there should be no preferential pricing.

—Rose Marie Wilson, Wantagh, NY

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and/or interfering with websites, apps and content they are in competition with, don't like, or simply don't care about.

—Francesca Martinez, Denton, TX

The US government is ruining this country. It's evident the people are just a number that need monitoring and control. We are well beyond any concept of 1984 and it is absolutely shameful the audacity the US has with it's people and the world. It seems pointless to even submit a comment because the FCC is just going to do what it's told and in the end the citizens lose. We having been in a losing position for decades or longer. Freedom is an illusion and the state giving the citizens privacy is a thing of the past. We will never be given privacy again. Our government is becoming a very negative presence in the world and and the US is a pretty scary place to live these days. When will the day come we are similar to Nazi Germany fearing whether someone is going to come to our door one day and take us away for speaking against the government? It's a shame.

—Mark Borys, Alto, MI

internet accessibility for all is crucial

—Robert Wynn, ,

What if we were restricting verbalized free speech to 5 words a minute, but corporations get 100 words a minute? That would be unconstitutional. Just because the speech is in electronic format doesn't mean that corporate "people" can control everyone's free speech.

—Michael Gorski, Indianola, IA

The internet should be accessed by all, at good speeds.

—Ryan, ,

Net neutrality is important to me both because individual and independent folks can compete on equal footing against those companies with much larger marketing budgets. This is good for both the little folks and the big cooperations selling the same products on the web since all are competing on a level playing field. The second and perhaps more important reason for maintaining and promoting Net Neutrality is that information can be accessed equally from a personal blog or a large media company on the web and not selectively filtered because somebody has paid the internet provider to have higher speed presentation of that information.. The little guy with a personal blog can share his research and collection of specific information just as well as a big newspaper or a well funded special interest group to anybody who wishes to explore the web for particular information.

—Warren Bean, Garland, TX

Free speech is free when everyone has it.

—Mary Peters, ,

You the FCC are there to ensure that the public is being treated fairly and not being taken advantage of by large corporations. Net Neutrality is important to ensure access to all and freedoms that we have fought for for generations. This will allow small internet businesses to thrive and prevent increasing the terrible unemployment levels we are experiencing. This will give others the opportunity to start their own business, that there would otherwise be unable to start without Net Neutrality.

—Kelly Oxtoby, ,

I want everyone in the country to be able to communicate with everyone else equally, in a timely manner, without special fees.

—Antonia Wood, Rainier, WA

Because I believe it goes my human rights. It takes the power out of the internet, from the people, leaving it no longer what the internet is as it is now. Its a pointless discussion.

—Dylan Evans-Fairburn, ,

Pure logic

—Johan Meuris, ,

Power and so-called privilege based on corporate greed has to stopped. Now is the time.

—Diane Vandiver, Bolingbrook, IL

We need unrestricted news

—Richard Kommrusch, Fort Collins, CO

Internet is a form of expression of speech and is used for knowledge, speech and knowledge SHOULD (and I don't usually use that word) FREE.

—Christopher Strong, Billerica, MA

This is about power & secret double billing.

—Jeremy Zimmerman, Yucaipa, CA

Keep the internet free and open.

—Michael Thompson, ,

It's bad enough to live in a plutocratic dystopia in the analog world. Why would I want that in the digital one too?

—Stephan R. Hanna, Rochester, MN

As a teacher I know how important equal access to knowledge and information is to our future. An equal and free internet is vital to the education and the innovation which will make our nation strong now and in the future. Allowing for profit companies to dictate the speed at which information can be obtained will hamstring our economy and cripple us on a global scale. There is nothing right about letting highly profitable and unscrupulous companies monopolize the industry to an even greater degree. Please do the right thing.

—Howard Webb, Fort Collins, CO

Neutrality is being NEUTRAL and not favoritism.

—Harold Henry, Miami, FL

It is evident to me that we can no longer trust private corporations with public necessities. Our privacy is gone and now they want complete control of this entity - which they have made a necessity for most of the businesses and private persons. I can barely afford it now.

—Patricia Artz, Federal Way,, WA

Things tend to work better when we are free to operate on a level playing field. If we allow private interests to control who had access to what and when, than we will inevitably lose freedoms as well as the spirit of the internet that has been so beneficial to society as a whole. Take a stand if not for you but for our children, do the right thing. Do not fall in to the pockets of those only interested in turning a buck. Thank you for taking the time to listen.

—Chris Frederking, North Las Vegas, NV

The internet should be about equal and affordable access, where free expression is always possible, along with quick and convenient access to information. There is no reason for expensive, priority access.

—George, ,

Keeping net neutrality is keeping the first amendment intact. Let's not sell our freedom of speech to the highest bidder.

—Steven Vaughan, Beaverton, OR

SAVE THE INTERNET FROM BIG CORPORATIONS

—Deborah Baker, Brighton, MA

I support net neutrality and not Big Telecom and the FCC proposal! Reclassify!

—Areti Spiropoulos, Montreal,

Regulate the internet as a utility - it has become essential to daily life. Please do your job and put the interests of the American public first.

—Mark Aflatooni, Austin, TX

Big business should not decide what the rest of us can see.

—Dr. Al Littlefield, Omena, MI

The internet is just as crucial to the reasonable, complete execution of day-to-day life in America now as the mail, roads, and electricity. Lacking fair and equal internet access, it is simply not possible to do everything expected of an American adult without incurring significant sacrifice of time and money.

—Nathan Harling, Redwood City, CA

Net neutrality is the foundation of the internet. Allowing corporations to ruin the freedom of sharing, regardless of status and ability to pay. Destroying net neutrality will ruin a lot of hardworking small businesses.

—Amberr Meadows, Lawrenceville, GA

To protect our free speech. The US government basically started the net. The U.S. = us, the citizens of this country.

—Richard A Saxon, Portland, OR

We need a free and neutral internet to help continue to further the human race and not a few corporations.

—Christopher Douglas, ,

We are already paying our telecoms for this service.

—Christopher Wigley, , internet highway should be the same for all.....cablevision is already charging fees for different speeds.....now we have another possible increase.....when will the greed stop??????????

—Cf Massey, Brooklyn, NY

I need it for my mental health and well being. And my future financial stability.

—Mr. Chris Robbins, Clay City, KY

The internet is one place where everyone has equal access, equal opportunities, and level playing field. Why change that?

—Alex Velasco, ,

Because of privacy is a naturerli thing,I don't read my familys letter or look in there money bag ,that belong them and as a cristian person nothing goes around without he know.

—Morten Stehr, ,

Net neutrality may well be the most powerful tool for self-advancement in our society today. Those without financial resources must not penalized with restricted access speed. Big telecom did nothing to create or advance the Internet. Where do the get the notion that they should be allowed to control it? Common carriers MUST be maintained

—Michael Darmody, ,

As a public educator we need net neutrality and to encourage the students I serve to be competitive in the this changing economy!!

—, Claremont, CA

My work depends on equal access to broadband.

—, Bishop, CA

Keep the playing field level. Big Telecom does not have my best interests at heart

—Geoffrey & Linda Symcox, Pacific Palisades, CA

No internet only for the wealthy! Have you no love for democracy? You will destroy it while you enrich yourselves! Shame on you!

—Richard M. Rabin, Chevy Chase, MD

Paying for premium access is not neutrality.

—Horace, ,

No restrictions means information flows freely ... Just as air is avail.

—J letscher, Novi, MI

we would like to save free expression, and free speech in the digital world

—Pam Uri, Blaine, WA

Because the internet isn't meant to be owned by anyone.

—Nicholas Kottwitz, Longview, TX

Net Neutrality is of crucial importance for the comfortability of using the internet and the freedom it provides. And just to remind you, freedom is something that should belong to the mass and not to the few.

—Borislav, ,

Totally in fair and remover this is not blinding to all we can see that is happening and who is getting favoured here and that are not the tax payers

—Shiraz hanif, ,

Internet access is not a luxury item. It is a necessity and should be treated like any other utility.

—Jeff Davis, Rehoboth Beach, DE

Dear Federal Communications Commission: We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: - Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. - Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. - Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. - Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality. With hope and all due respect. Thomas Elghozi

—Thomas Elghozi, ,

Because corrupting a product on purpose with the aim of extorting more money from customers for a better service is bordering on actual evil.

—Kyle, ,

to guarantee that both individuals and companies access to services with the same rights and conditions, and also to ensure that the contents of the websites, the search results and display, the business opportunities and actions, etc. are not influenced by other interests favorable to these companies.

—Carles Alcala Ruiz, ,

Net neutrality is essential for a thriving democracy and for energetic commerce.

—, Anchorage, AK

I value the opportunity to use websites that might not have the financial capability to pay for fast access. There is no need to ruin the Internet by making it the playground of the corporations.

—Karn Purvis, ,

I depend on fast Internet service, but I couldn't afford to pay extra for it.

—Robert W.Hearn, Maywood, NJ, NJ

The need to be told why?! Amazing...

—H Carlsson, ,

Legislated unequal access is legislated inequality!

—Rael Nidess M.D., Marshall, TX

I am a Senior and I use the Internet quite often. I believe that common carriage is a fair and equitable policy. I find that ISPs are already charging too much and interfering with my use of the Internet probably because they don't like my content. I would appreciate you reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers and ask that you not destroy Net Neutrality. Thank You, Marilyn Folden

—Marilyn Folden, Albuquerque, NM

Everyday I use the internet for business and to keep informed. It is a valuable resource for the citizens. Don't make a divide between first and second class citizens.

—Deborah Zajac, Tempe, AZ

Please support the American people, all of us. Please do not censor innovation by allowing the few to direct and control.

—Ronald Drahos, Bloomington, IN

The USA already has the highest cost and lowest internet speeds in the free world. If you let the telecoms eliminate Net Neutrality, it will only make the USA even less competitive in the worldwide economy!

—David Farwell, San Jose, CA

This is important due to free speech and the attempt to limit it. Each day we see that money talks and now that ONLY MONEY talks.

—Russell Petersen, Arvada, CO

We, as society, need the internet to be free, neutral and not tied to any group or company's decisions.

—Guillermo Cerpa, ,

We deserve and need freedom the government cannot be allowed to control everything

—Jonathan Omilian, ,

The Internet works just fine for me without tiered rate structures controlled by profit seeking corporations. Please reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Lawrence Crowley, Louisville, CO

The internet has quickly become a key mechanism of modern life. It's how we communicate with friends, seek out news and entertain ourselves. I think it would be a terrible mistake to limit those interactions to just large companies that can pay for preferential treatment. If this fast lane / slow lane plan had been in place in 2005, when YouTube was just a startup, would we have it today? The life and vitality of our online experience is rooted in the innovation -- not in the big pools of money trying to control things.

—Randy Childers, Mission, KS

I have a small business that can't buy big influence, and don't want to disappear from search engine searches.

—Martha E. (Mitzi) VanSant, Smithville, TX

As an internet user, I want a real net neutrality that insures equal access and speed of content delivery to everyone. A two tiered system that gives Big telecoms the power to control content and delivery speed based on pay to play is not neutral and open - and leaves the door open to censorship, blocking, discriminatory delivery and reduced innovation. Keep the internet open and neutral by reclassifying the internet as a common carrier.

—Chris OBrien, Key West, FL

I use the internet every day for communication and research... it is an intrinsic right for every Canadian under the Charter of Rights and Freedoms to be able to access ALL information and to share that information and their individual opinions with other citizens of Canada and elsewhere!

—Suzanne Maltman, ,

Freedom in almost any of its forms has become more of an illusion rather than an indisputable right. Unrestricted access to the Internet might be the only way in today's world to still hope that freedom is an universal birth right and not a fabricated idea.

—Radu Bistran, ,

It protects consumers

—Peter K, Flushing, NY

It is important to all of us to be able to communicate quickly and well.

—Susan Deane-Miller, Poughkeepsie, NY

It epitomizes freedom. Which is one of the corner stones of America. To create second class citizens and second class internet is to enact treason among the people. It is a disservice that emphasizes on inequality and monetization. Do not let tyranny be the future of the web.

—Jonathan Charles Stogner, Watervliet, NY

Because every voice should be respected and protected; the internet should forever showcase the best of ourselves; the powers that be, continue to show how weak they really are when they refuse to stand against terrible inequality. The oppression and neglect of those who have nothing by those who have more than they need.

—Ceejay Horrell, ,

This is important to me because the Internet is a place of freedom. A place free to express opinions and ideas; a place of information. If your plans come to fruition; you would destroy all of this, which I don't think you fully understand. We U.S. citizens and the World are against this and all other forms of Internet suppression. Stop this now! As long as you keep doing this we will never be quiet or stop protesting! Leave the Internet and it's users alone!

—Caitlin Stoltz, Landenberg, PA

It allows the sharing of ideas freely with everyone equally, which is crucial to safeguard civil liberties and Human Rights

—GW Diedericks, ,

As a user of internet services for nearly 2 decades I already pay too much for internet service that is both too slow and does not offer enough data for my laptop and tablet computers. It is not fair for low income internet users like myself to be subjected to a two-tier system. Broadband providers should not be allowed to pick and choose which websites, apps and contents they don't like and block or slow down access to them.

—Alan Miniotta, Wheat Ridge, CO

I earn some money by freelance writing to augment our Social Security payments since my husband's pension was stolen. Where will we, and others in the same position as ourselves, be if the internet is ruined? I can't make up the $1000 a month we are missing, but even a couple of hundred dollars helps a bit.

—Le Hunt, Port Wing, WI

The free internet is a basic element of a democratic society. Any form of censorship is the antithesis of democracy.

—Donald C. Mitchell, San Diego, CA

Without common carrier status many libraries and schools will be boxed out of efficient internet access at affordable rates. As a low income woman on disability living a minimalist life, watching shows on Hulu and Netflix my access would be priced out of my survival range if the 2 cable companies get the monopoly on the cable services. As it is we are so far behind the speeds European and Scandinavian countries enjoy because a lack of competition and desire keeps us crawling along

—Sharon Bodman, Siletz, OR

I am a Canadian citizen. I do not want the FCC to affect us in Canada but it is need in the US and US only.

—Christopher, ,

I am a small business owner and I can't afford to pay any excess so that my website keeps up with those of large corporations. Stop considering this ridiculous and backward law now!

—David Thring, Los Angeles, CA

The internet represents possibility to EVERYONE, not just big business. It's clear that legal and economic favoritism only breeds radicalism. Stop the injustice! It's your JOB!

—Harry Farrar, Phoenix, AZ

I am disabled and it, (the internet) can sometimes be my only contact with the world. I have a wide range of interests and the internet provides me access to the information I seek. If I am told what information I am allowed to view then that is censorship. As far as I know, this is not allowed in the U.S.. I am tired of my rights being taken away by the rich and powerful! There will be a price to pay if there is a decision to take away the open internet. Robber barons and warlords will come tumbling down just like they always have. I may not be around when it happens, but if I am I will be on the side that overthrows the current dealers of the oppressive actions they continue to perpetrate. Think hard before you make any decision that hands more power over to the rich. There will be repercussions. You will be at the top of that list. KEEP THE PRESS FREE! OPEN INTERNET 4EVER!

—Lori Rose, Dunbar, WV

The internet has changed the world for the better, and it continually does so, but it's done this by giving everyone the same opportunity to use it as a tool for good. By changing the rules it has a very adverse affect on the good the internet has done and could eventually destroy the internet's usefulness as we know it.

—Peter Nossal, Coraopolis, PA

America = Freedom Free market, free enterprise, for ALL, not just the wealthy.

—Evan Skallerud, Vero Beach, FL

Taking away net neutrality is the same as saying that the common person cannot express their views to the masses without having a lot of money. If you look at the demographics of who has and who hasn't got a lot of money you will see that there is a gross imbalance and that taking away net neutrality will be abolishing government of, by and for the people, the main precept this country was founded upon. This is unconstitutional. Broadband carriers MUST be classified as common carriers. Real net neutrality must be established and maintained.

—Laurel Kramer, Seattle, WA

Because know one should have better use than anyone else.

—Sandra Nickerson, Dundee, IL

There are plenty of people giving you The Un-USA Constitutionality & Immorality of what you are trying to, so I will give you a business reason why what you are trying to do is horrible idea and damages The USA business world. I am creating a few companies that requires a free for all to afford Internet and requires access to all possible and future customers (not just those that can afford to pay more to have Internet access to my website).

—Mr. 'Great White' (Shark: Beings Rights Earth & Person), Community of Homestead, NW of Homestead, FL

The Internet needs to remain a level playing field for free expression, economic opportunity, and innovation. This is the only option that makes sense in a "Free Country". Corporations already have way too much political power, which is destroying this country.

—Jason Laberge, Malibu, CA

Net Neutrality is more than a concept - the explosive potential of the internet to benefit small business, cultural exchange and democratic reform cannot be permitted to be controlled by a select few corporations that can have a vested interest in denying or restricting those public benefits in favor of a corporate focused agenda. Net Neutrality is not a business concept or an ideal - it is a necessity for the future growth and benefit of Western society. It is not, and cannot, be for sale.

—Blake Moorcroft, ,

The people need an internet without speedbumps

—Joost Heesters, ,

Net Neutrality allows free and equal access business and consumers. The best way to avoid stifling our economy and maintain our dominance in the world market.

—Chris Anctil, Portsmouth, NH

As is well known and I have mentioned in several communications with the FCC, the Internet is already PUBLIC PROPERTY, paid for by US over all the years. Without equal and neutral access, it becomes gradually privatized by thieves in the ISP racket who think, somehow, that THEY are the Internet, when, in fact, WE ARE. It's a public utility to the same extent that water and sewer systems are. Just admit it, and make it official.

—Steve Ditore, Seattle, WA

One word "FREEDOM", instead of "CONTROL"

—Werner Thayer, ,

Poor people actually need internet more than rich people. Poor people need to be able to find jobs using the internet. Poor people cannot afford high fees. Stop persecuting the poor!

—Rose Pectin, ,

This affects the future in very profound ways.

—Sean Cooney, ,

Net neutrality is essential for the continued use of internet for the support of democracy.

—Ken Zimmerman, Ithaca, MI

Because the Media is already owned by corporations. Its our right to have a source of real news.

—Wanda Allen, Bartlett, NH

It isn't your place to decide.

—Elise Wright, buford, GA

Because it should be free for the people not for some company to make a profit on.

—S Robertson, Shrewsbury, MA

Net neutrality is crucial to me because on the internet is one of the only places that I feel like I can make a difference in other people's lives. The fact that I am an author means that I research a lot of the things that I put into my works, and net neutrality allows me to do this.

—Dimitri Marek, Sturgis, MI

Providing a means, even if indirect, to censure providers and users, respectively violates freedom of expression and unfettered observation without bias imposed by others.

—, ,

Open Internet best supports the principles of democracy.

—Bob Conrich, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Point #3.

—J Dowker, ,

The Internet needs to be FREE and OPEN

—Ursula Kinsel, New York, NY

The American public deserves an internet with a level playing field. It should be classified as a Utility that serves PUBLIC interests, NOT Corporate profits!

—Mary McNellis, Stillwater, MN

We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Michael D Purdy, Staunton, VA

I am a small business owner and use the internet for marketing purposes. Since I am not big enough to afford to pay through the nose to ensure my data flows freely, I will be forced to suffer with exceedingly slow internet while once again the "Big Boys" who can afford to pay will likely shut me out of my industry. Net neutrality is the only way us little businesses can compete effectively. Please don't take away one of the few tools we little guys still have. Thank you.

—Bert Carpenter, Tempe, AZ

Please protect the Internet! It's too important to the world to let greed sink its claws into it and warp it into something crippled _and_ crippling. Please consider the bigger picture and the future ramifications of your choice. Let the Internet be something that propels our civilization's evolution forward, not holds it back. With a heartfelt plea, The international community.

—Live Standal, Nøtterøy,

An open and equal internet supports economic growth.

—Derek Watkins, Arnold, MD

IT IS OUR FREE RIGHT TO HAVE UNLIMITED NET TO SEARCH AND SEE WHAT IS GOING ON IN THE WORLD. MUST NOT TAKE THAT AWAY FROM US!!!

—Diane Poole, Marion, IN

The current internet is democratic. The slow lane option will make it plutocratic and oligarchical.

—Ivan Hentschel, Wimberley, TX

Unstifled freedom of communication and expression is a better social policy.

—Jose Alfaro, Maywood, NJ

Access to the internet is a given right just like the freedom of expression. Don't cave to corporate greed by taking away our rights.

—Brian Tomazic, East Meadow, NY

Net Neutrality is a necessity to prevent ISPs from censoring anything they feel like purely because they're allowed to do so. When a customer pays for internet service, they are expecting that internet service to allow them access to any and all parts of the internet, without hindrance. Allowing ISPs the opportunity to block or interfere with any of that defeats the purpose of internet usage. If I want to play a video game such as World of Warcraft, chances are I want connection to be as unhindered as possible. Now say I pay $70 a month to have fast internet access to help with that (or video streaming such as Netflix or Youtube, or any number of other things for which I may want faster speeds), but my ISP wants to charge Blizzard (Warcraft's owner) to shell out a chunk of money to them to maintain fast speeds for users and Blizzard decides they don't want to do so. My connection speed with Warcraft is slowed, even though I've paid for increased speeds. So now, I'm being charged for delivery of goods, as well as Blizzard being charged for delivery of those same goods. When I send a package across the country to a family member, I am charged up front for this service. When my aunt receives the package, she isn't. It wouldn't make any sense. When I pay for a service, that service shouldn't come with hidden strings attached to any website or service that I may wish to use (and potentially pay, as well). My ISP can charge one end, not both. And I won't support a market where such a thing is allowed. Extortion is illegal. Legalizing it for my ISP makes zero sense.

—James Perry, Redlands, CA

Internet is one of the key resources of the 21st century, and it should be available equally for everyone.

—Thomas Seidl, ,

it is everyone's right to have equal access

—Linda M Bishop, el dorado springs, MO

I believe that by doing away with net neutrality internet services prices will go up a lot. Not good for low income and retired people.

—John Florack, ft collins, CO

The internet is one way ordinary citizens can communicate and take action to maintain our rights and share ideas. If Big Business can quash this avenue, it will do so, and it will be difficult, if not impossible, to regain that avenue! The Supreme Court has already severely damaged our democracy by its decision that Corporations are People! Please do not further the move down this road to eliminate the full and free voice of the people. Thank you.

—Rani Kokatnur, Lompoc, CA

I feel we need an internet as open and equal as possible, to help preserve freedom of expression and cat videos.

—Paul Bodine, Vancouver,

Free internet is the same as freedom. Protect freedom!

—Tim Walker, Saint Paul, MN

My livelihood depends on it, as does my personal well-being.

—Ms. Vickey Kaiser, Fredonia, NY

Protect real net neutrality!

—Eva Agnello, ,

It is (at least!) not good for democracy if people with lots of money can buy preferential treatment for the information which they want to see spread.

—Ernst Mecke, Helsinki/Finland,

I believe that the Internet is the last open forum for ideas. It is vital that we keep net neutrality alive.

—Lawrence G. East, Jacksonville, NC

The internet is just as essential as paved roads and we shouldn't have to pay extra use them.

—Matthew Cleveland, Elizabethtown, PA

In my opinion BIG TELECOM is much too greedy, and as a result, it is imperative that the FCC reclassify Internet service providers as common carriers.

—Dorothy Decker, Ashland, OR

The internet has become a fundamental need for many. It provides information, access to goods, and communication that has become the norm. Discrimination by ability to pay appears to be a discrimination issue.

—Shelley Ross, ,

Net neutrality is crucial to fostering Internet entrepreneurs. Please don't shut down that economic spirit and give the Internet to the handful of companies that got big first.

—Christopher R. Martin, Cedar Falls, IA

The broadband providers should not be allowed to determine which sites are given preferential treatment in regards to access for users. As long as the subscriber pays the monthly rate, they should have free access to use it how they choose. Please keep the core beliefs of Net Neutrality alive. Let the Internet continue to be this advanced wonderland of information and platform for socializing that it has developed into over the years.

—Matt Ezero, Peru, NY

The internet is not broken, it does not need to be fixed. New ideas and innovations will be stifled if this "slow lane" is implemented.

—Brandon Louthan, Ypsilanti, MI

Net neutrality is net fairness. It is right up there with life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

—Joseph Moran, Chapel Hill, NC

we need a free internet for all!

—Sergio Sanchez, walnut, CA

My business and livelihood are completely and utterly dependent upon a free internet--don't let Big Telecom ruin lives of real people like me.

—Cindy Larson, Berkeley, CA

Rich corporations should not be allowed to charge customers any kind of fee to use the internet. The internet should be open for use by all, and corporations should not be allowed to charge fees and determine what kind of access internet users receive.

—Donna Ream, St. Petersburg, FL

Net Neutrality is vital to protect the Internet from monopoly control by the large telcos. Net Neutrality helps protect and nurture entrepreneurial startup companies.

—Brian Clark, ,

Net neutrality is a significant force in reducing the growing inequality of our times. Please be a powerful voice for the common good of all.

—Mrs. Susan Campbell, The Villages, FL

I am a small business owner and advertise my law office and legal services on the internet. I cannot afford to pay higher fees in order to compete with the cable and telecommunication companies. As a small business owner, I could not compete with such deep pocket, mega corporations. I'm really worried that my business is going to be trashed even more..... still have not recovered from the Crash of 2008. I am certainly NOT happy with our air waves since the last time you de-regulated - against the desire of a whopping 90+% of the country. Just look at the shit for news and entertainment Americans are awash in. There's an old saying you Washington beaurocrats (sic?) should learn: "If it's not broken, don't fix it!"

—Lorraine H. Sherman, Gainesville, FL

Listen to the people. Not the big corporations.

—Mark Leicester, West Newton, MA

it is perhaps the most democratizing tool ever put in the hands of a supposedly free people. Amongst so many difficult things to implement this is one of clearest and easiest. The deck will remain very much stacked in favor of the corporations. Don't make it inappropriately worse.

—Chuck Jaffee, Grass Valley, CA

Free internet access means free worldwide communication and freedom for everybody! This should be a fundamental right for everybody everywhere!

—Silke Granget, ,

Net Neutrality is the fabric of the future!

—Sung Hong, ,

Fragile freedoms once broken can never be mended.

—Deacon Don O'Shaughnessy, ,

We need free and easy access to information. Period.

—Barnet Love, Portland, OR

I'm totally blind, therefore the internet is a necessity for me, dayley, it's how I stay connected with friends from all over the country, and, if I have a problem with something, google, is your best friend!

—Steve P, ,

Freedom of choice should remain unrestricted

—Richard Lamping, ,

That gives me the ability to keep in contact with my family and order things I need at a reasonable price.

—Doyle Patee, Wichita, KS

I do not want some mega corporation deciding what I can and can't see, and charging me as they do it. If I pay for Internet access I should be free to go where I want. We have also already seen how they plan to exploit the current bill with the Netflix Vs. Verizon debacle (Verizon slowing Netflix streaming to trick people into buying a more expensive package)

—Austin Davis, Kerrville, TX

Because equality is something to live by

—João Gonçalves, ,

All modern tech innovation absolutely depends on net neutrality

—Chad Large, ,

We all deserve equal access and use of the Internet, not those with more money getting to have priority over the poor. How is allowing the rich to have control over what is seen online going to help any of us? The rich have control over far too many things as it is. The Internet is the one free place left where everyone is equal. This cannot be taken away from us. It will send us down a Path of Darkness from which we will never recover. The Internet needs to be protected! It is vital that it remain an equal place of neutrality for the whole world.

—Mgon M Emjion, Lakeland, FL

The thing we love the most about the Internet is that it's a level playing field for free expression, economic opportunity, and innovation. This slow lane proposal would destroy the equal playing field that has been a part of the internet from the beginning.

—Brian Cadden, Bel Air, MD

My job. My recreation. My connections. New Businesses. Freedom of Speech. It is the only place left to connect us all without an overhead rendering it an uneven playing field

—Adam Greenberg, San Francisco, CA

Internet access is like any utility. The US HAS ALREADY THE HIGHEST COST AND LOWEST QUALITY. Don't make it worse.

—Holman Robert, Pueblo, CO

Stifling new businesses by catering only to established companies will stagnate the market and is the opposite of the free market.

—Bryan, ,

Every one should be able to use the internet and not have to pay an arm and a leg to have it. There are a lot of people out there who won't be able to have the internet because it costs too much for them. I don't think those big companies really give a shit about the people who work part time.

—Elizabeth Wiebe I don't make a lot of money, ,

Keep the internet open & free.

—Josh Michel, Lutz, FL

When the little guy-business or browser-doesn't have big bucks for the "fast lane" s/he's seriously handicapped. The business may never get off the ground, and the browser won't have access to all the information. Please support real Net Neutrality.

—Wendy Fast, Dansville, NY

An open and free internet has become a basic foundation to democracy. Putting it on a pay to play basis amounts to censorship. It further entrenches the corporate takeover of American Democracy that we have seen in the past eight years - beginning in the Bush Administration.

—Avery Leinova, Portland, OR

For the US to continue to lead, let alone thrive, in a world where so much depends on the Internet, access must remain open and equal for all content.

—Ansley Barnes, Rumford, RI

The Internet is the greatest force for equality in modern times. I urge you to keep it neutral.

—Colin Morrison, ,

Some people ask me, why is Net Neutrality important to me. I ask them, have you ever had Comcast? Net Neutrality is important to me because it's the one thing that can shackle criminals like Comcast and not let them take advantage of their customer base.

—Charles Grove, Catonsville, MD

We don't censor the telephone. We don't censor mail. We also must not censor the internet. If it's not neutral, it's not free. If it's not free, it's not American. Last but not least; I am making this comment on a common carrier.

—Ed Parks, Oklahoma City, OK

Net Neutrality allows small business owners the ability to promote and grow their business without unfair interference from competition that simply has enough money to pay for faster web speeds (and potentially use their wealth to take harmful action against their smaller competition).

—Reed Wolcott, Ann Arbor, MI

Internet service providers have no right to exploit the web. It's free in other countries. It was created by the people, for the people. Reclassifying is classist. It controls our right to common carriage. Do not impose Oligargic rules on the Internet.

—Jen Wiils, Santa Barbara, CA

I consider any attempt by broadband providers to shunt some or all of my internet usage to the "show lane" an assault on my First Amendment rights to free speech.

—Sally Small, Clarington, OH

It is important to me, because it is one of the last truly neutral resorts on this planet.

—Jan Hinsky, ,

It is ridiculous that we have to tell you why this is important & why regular people deserve a piece of the pie we bake everyday as well - stop being asses!

—Mary Webb, Williamsport, OH

The open Internet allowed sites and services like Facebook, Youtube, and Skype to grow from the small startups they were to mainstream content companies they are today. Content consumption continues to grow and without Net Neutrality we risk cutting out the next Youtube or Facebook because they most likely won't be able to pay for privileged access to consumers.

—Ryan Andres, ,

It is a platform for free speech and expression and should not be totally controlled like this. It is a vital part of economic balance and expansion and should not be regulated.

—Joshua R. Fotsch, Washington, IL

I see the internet as the last bastion of human freedom.

—Attila Kiss, ,

If the internet is changed the way you blatant criminal plan to change it I will simply cancell the internet as I'm sure you will find out millions of other will do also. This will cripple the criminal telecom companies and hopeful bankrupt them. The greed has got to stop!!!!

—Shannon Winter, cumberland, MD

Please do not leave me in the slow lane!

—Norm Hartz, Fair Lawn, NJ

I am a small investor and I want an even playing field when I get on the computer. It is hard enough against the big boys. Why should big business have faster access than individuals? Be fair. Don't do this.

—Peggy Mullins, Pearland, TX

Why do you keep making the same mistakes? The world WILL rise against you if you take their freedoms away. We are ONE species, stop trying to screw everyone over, be intelligent for once eh? Better future and all that crap?

—Markos, ,

I am a small business owner. I can only compete in the market if the information I post has a chance to reach my target audience.

—Dror Schneider, San Francisco, CA

please classify all broadband providers as common carriers

—David Last Name*Taylor, ,

Small start-up businesses cannot be disadvantaged by higher fees for faster internet. They have to compete on a level playing field to succeed and create jobs.

—Jeffrey Honey, ,

I need the internet to be able to be in instant contact with family members who are thousands of miles away. It is not fair to slow the internet down for those who are not able to pay higher rates.

—Martha Iancu, Newberg, OR

Please maintain net neutrality for ALL

—Elin Heard, Jerome, AZ

The internet was invented by our military with our tax money. DO NOT GIVE IT AWAY TO GREEDY CORPORATIONS!

—Rolando Arango, Fairfield, CA

America will suffer intellectually and technologically if this plan is allowed to go through. As creators is the internet we should be leading the way not lagging behind in the interest of greed.

—Robert Sweeney, Staten Island, NY

Net neutrality is critical for innovation and economic development in this new century.

—Victor Grund, Amherst, NH

It keeps the playing field equal! Let's keep it that way -

—Deborah Sinico, New York, NY

NO ONE SHOULD CONTROL THE INTERNET!

—Lynn Morris, Chicago, IL

I have disabilities that keep me home 98% of the time and I depend on the internet so I need complete Net Neutrality.

—Erika Gray, Merritt Island, FL

My volunteer position requires me to have fast, clean internet access. I deal with the Democratic Party.

—Richard F. McGrain Jr., Charlottesville, VA

You should not be able to BUY the internet too!

—Nan Buckley, zionsville, IN

The internet is a public utility and should give equal access to all.

—Sonya Zink, Park Falls, WI

Given my profession in the IT field a more relevant question would be why Net Neutrality isn't important to me. Net Neutrality, on par with curbing corruption in Washington, is one of the two most important issues of our day. Keeping Net Neutrality principals in tact and defined in the context of the importance of common carriage is the equivalent to standing for our first amendment protected access to free speech. Not speech that's disenfranchised by those who could afford a louder megaphone to drown out the speech of lesser means, speech that is transmitted on a level playing field. A Common Carriage implementation of Net Neutrality is not only important for protecting our first amendment rights in the spectrums of bandwidth provided for internet communications, but it's also important for securing an actively competitive field of business. The declassification of broadband communications from common carriage is recognized by anybody even remotely aware of the issue as a means of creating an uneven playing field between businesses that broadband providers choose to give preferential treatment to and those they don't, and preferential treatment is open to any manner of negotiated bribery. The United States of America and the world deserve better than turf wars between the biggest broad band players. We deserve better than having to pay protection money for our traffic to not be discriminated against by broadband providers. In many states, the corrupting influence that broadband providers have had in state elections has made it illegal for local communities to build and provide for their broad band communications needs. Such is the degree of power and influence already held by broad band providers. Such is the barriers to broad-band communications they have already pushed in desire to turn more profits. Not classifying the services they provide back to a common carriage service would only further their strangle hold of power over our State and National legislatures and the agencies they empower to protect us from the very threats that the FCC is FAILING to protect us from today. In summary, protecting consumers from the abuses of the telcom/broadband industry is the FCC's job and failing to treat a utility service such as broad-band communications as a common carriage services is nothing more than the FCC not doing it's job. Do your jobs or resign and get out of the way so someone else can.

—Andrew A. Pilling, San Marcos, TX

To prevent abuse of power

—Jack Davis, ,

I run an internet-based business, for me the internet is a utility, if there is no neutrality, my ability to earn a living is impacted, this is NOT ACCEPTABLE!!

—Lance A Silkes, Memphis, TN

Free and open international communication is extremely beneficial for a peaceful healthy society.

—Nathan Srigley, ,

Free and open communication among its citizens without regard to wealth is critical to a functioning democracy. Allowing some to buy a better means to communicate is an anathema to our democratic principles.

—Jack Stansfield, Stanwood, WA

I rely on Open Internet for personal email, information searches, political petition submissions, shopping for myself and my church, and some still photo up and downloading. I do not want my laptop broadband access slowed or restricted by high-volume streaming of TV and other video to hand-held digital devices!

—Michael C Davie, Odenton, MD

Do not want to be at the mercy of big corporations and their fees and manipulations.

—Jackie Stone, Sacramento, CA

The internet should enable society to evolve, not sink back to the cable company delivery monopoly dark ages. Every content delivery startup should have the same opportunity without being at the mercy of telco royalties. It's hard to believe how anyone buys into the way that telcos sell this: we won't change the speed for "everyone else" just give extra speed to those who pay big fees... Even if that's true, they will just leave the "everyone else" behind as infrastructures naturally speed up to keep up with the rest of the world... One way or another, we will end up in a situation where if you don't pay big royalties that only big companies can afford, you will end up in a "slow lane".

—Wojciech Tomalik, ,

The net is the backbone of whatever near term future we are going to create. It must be kept open and evenly available for all. Before the age of flight, if we had restricted the oceans in the same way, the world would not have been the same. The new open seas of the internet must be kept open.

—Michael Klaric, Los Angeles, CA

The internet is a utility and ISPs are utility companies and need to be regulated as such.

—Michael Chidester, Somerville, MA

Do not mess with the internet

—Robert Hopper, Leland, NC

Small startups need to have the exact same download/upload speeds as their established rivals. ISPs should NEVER be allowed to set speed based upon internet traffic type, or whether a particular company should be routed to higher speed networks because they've paid a ransom fee to the ISP. Joseph DiVenere

—Joseph DiVenere, Naperville, IL

KEEP FREE SPEECH & FREEDOM OF INFORMATION OUT OF THE HANDS OF BIG BUSINESS AND THE RISING OLIGARCHY IN OUR COUNTRY!

—Greg Grafft, Los Angeles, CA

I have time warner cable and the are already charging me $69/month for internet. Also added to that cable tv and phone. When promotional fee expired charges outrageous. The internet should be free to all people everywhere. We cannot trust cable and internet providers. Every few months it costs more and more. This is not fair.

—Linda e. Roger, Huntersville, NC

Information must be allowed to flow freely.

—Robert S Rinehuls, Tallahassee, FL

Everyone needs access to the internet at a fair and reasonable price and at decent speeds.

—Gary Hanney, ,

Contact with the world through the Internet is very important to me. I use it constantly to inform myself of new developments and find out information about medical and housing services provided. I do not use the TV for me the Internet is what it is all about.

—Jill Sarkady, New Haven, CT

I'm horrified to realize that our political auditorium has sunk to the level of petty prejudices! We need a free and open internet in order to separate the lies from the spin. KEEP IT OPEN!!!

—Ms. Diana Wiley, Fort Worth, TX

Net Neutrality is a necessity for both economic activity based on the internet but also scientific experimentation. I believe that the economic arguments will be largely covered in the comments of others. But with respect to scientific experimentation (the way we will generate new tech for internet-based things) we need net neutrality to not confound experiments of the Computer Science domain.

—Dr. Matthew Links, ,

For freedom of information and creativity.

—Kathy Lowery, Lebanon, TN

As a freelance writer, I rely on the internet in all kinds of ways. Fast and slow lanes would hurt my business and my income. Keep it free and fair. The big telecom companies did not invent the internet; their profits are already astronomical. Stand up for the users, not the abusers!

—Dianna MacLeod, Langley, WA

Folks everywhere can communicate with everyone else in an instant for the first time in the history of the human race! What wonders may come!

—Anne L. Gibson, Arlington, TX

The rich get richer, the poor get s*t

—Rex P Haire PhD, Martin, TN

The internet has enabled the world to do many things that are otherwise impossible due how open it is handicapping users will slow innovation and communication

—Malaivai Skeete, ,

If anyone should have to tell the FCC why Net Neutrality is vital to any free society, these employees should not ever have been employed at the FCC,period!

—Michael McGuire, Denver, CO

Because it has always been. There is no need to change it now!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!

—Joel H. Eizenstat, Athens, GA

It will be very difficult for smaller business to survive

—Trevor Jacobson, ,

This is important to everyone. Just because you are old men who don't use the internet doesn't mean there aren't millions who do and need Net Neutrality. Don't be stupid; prove your own stereotypes wrong and do the right thing: keep the internet free.

—Cory, Union, ME

maintain a level playing field.

—Basil Matychak, Huntington, NY

is the rich gonna win again ?

—Robin, ,

Because I am an American citizen, all of whom deserve net neutrality.

—Dorothy Holland, Santa Barbara, CA

I am a small self-employed business owner. I rely on the Internet for my work. However, I cannot afford any additional fees beyond what I already pay per month. Having a slower Internet that I still have to pay for means that I will have less earnings and unhappy clients, which may destroy my little business. Please do not destroy my tiny business to give more profits to already profitable and wealthy corporations. Thank you for your consideration.

—Donna Watson, Stevens Point, WI

We need a open internet

—George Hawirko, ,

Internet access and speeds should be equal for people and organizations alike. The information and services provided by non-profits or small businesses should not be disadvantaged compared to their peers. Our economic system is already fraught with inequality. Let's not allow the telecoms to make it worse.

—Amanda Rubin, Greenville, SC

We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality. This is important to me due to the fact that I use the internet for business and to acquire employment.

—Angela Grattan, Salinas, CA

I need to communicate internationally for my business, and US ISPs imposing further tolls would be an added burden on lawful commerce.

—Michael House, Redwood City, CA

No country should be the net police. Why try to fix something that isn't broken?

—John, ,

The Internet is too important and too ingrained to our society to leave to the whims of corporations.

—Matt Harrop, Lawrence, KS

The net has brought the world together, shared ideas, created massive opportunities. Not only will this damage the economy from 1000s losing their jobs, it will also grind to a halt many opportunities that our generation and future generations have for innovation, invention and entrepreneurship. Please don't let big business monopolize on the greatest freedom this world has seen.

—Aaron triff, ,

The internet was and should be for the free sharing of information. Let the last vestiges of it alone.

—Dennis Franz, ,

NET NEUTRALITY IS VITAL AS OPPOSED TO PARTIALITY PROPOSED

—Dorothy Kalkhoven, ,

Take away control from the ISP's. The internet is meant for everyone, not just big business. Do not let ISP's monopolize the internet. As it is Broadband has market monopolies since you are only allowed one choice in cable in most areas.

—Joseph Langa, Livonia, MI freedom of information is a human right and should never be regulated

—Al Crimi, ,

Net neutrality supports social progress.

—Adrian Delgado, Buffalo Grove, IL

If you can justify this to MY satisfaction I will be happy to support you. Unt then, BACK OFF!!

—Karen Hjalmarson, , because internet is supposed to be free not controlled.

—Rose Barragan, Sonoma, CA

I'm sick of the super rich and their corporations taking everything from the people. Please don't allow this to happen yet again.

—William R Kavanagh, Oak Park, IL

As a small business owner & citizen I think it is critical to keep the internet free from further manipulation (slow lanes etc.) by the telecommunication providers.

—Theresa knapp, ,

I met the love of my life on the internet. I met a lot of the people I am good friends with on the internet. The only way that people can keep having the experiences I was blessed with is on an open internet through the common carrier system. Please restore it. I know I am not alone.

—David Toboz, Burnsville, MN

As a screenwriter, I rely on Internet neutrality to level the playing field and, therefore, ensure that the independent filmmakers with which I work are able to market our films to the widest possible audience, not just those who can afford Internet "fast lanes." If telecom companies control Internet access and speed, they will become de facto censors, preventing many artists, filmmakers, and activists from reaching their audiences. This is bad for art and commerce, as well as democracy.

—James Suthers, Burbank, CA

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality is critical to provide the best possible useful service for everyone involved and any other option would cripple service to tens of millions of people and would ruin the Internet for many.

—Nebi Berisha, ,

My information is mine.

—Melvin Roy den van Berg, ,

I use the internet for advertising, marketing and contacts. A slower speed would disadvantage me. Please keep the internet neutral, and equal for all.

—Ron Galen, Richmond, CA

I am a big fan of the smaller retail sites, which would face extinction if Net Neutrality is destroyed. At this time, we need to support small business owners, not take away their means of livelihood.

—Richard Vanore, Hazleton, PA

Internet should be developing forward, not going back. Administering suggested "slow lane" laws and principles is will fundamentally destroy what was achieved and will prevent internet from improvement going forward.

—Bogdan Kosenko, ,

We must be sure to protect online privacy. Net Neutrality must be foremost in the minds of all who use the Web and sustained forever.

—Ms. Elaine Smitha, Olympia, WA

Preserve our 1st Amendment Rights!!!

—Charles J Owens, North Fond du Lac, WI

There is supposed to be equal availability for all users, and everyone should have premium access and not be penalized for not being wealthy by slowing down their websites or blocking them.

—Michael Matthews, Redding, CA

A free and open internet is good for everyone. It allows the free and fair exchange of knowledge and ideas across the entire globe. It has transformed almost every aspect of society for the better, and has the potential to do so much more. As a British citizen, I'm asking you to reclassify Internet service providers as common carriers under Title II, as doing otherwise will surely force other countries to follow suit - leading to the collapse of the Internet as we know it.

—Sean Stayte, ,

A free internet is essential to democracy, freedom of speech, and the creativity and exchange of ideas that world progress thrives on. It would be criminally shortsighted to allow greed to throw up a barrier to any of these things.

—Jo Eng, Spring, TX

I am no longer willing to tolerate the takeover of our country simply to promote corporate and ruling class profits. The Internet is a public utility and simply must be managed for the benefit of everyone. We will make sure that happens, one way or the other.

—Warren Colison, Minneapolis, MN

I operate a small online business and feel Net Neutrality especially in social networking plays a vital role to keep the wheels turning. I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Michael Strand, ,

Net neutrality allows people to share ideas and collaborate without fear that (if someone disagrees with) their ideas will be removed. By charging tolls for "premium access", the internet would essentially become "pay to play", similar to the power that corporations currently have over the U.S. government, where more money equals a louder voice. Please reclassify internet providers as "common carriers." I appreciate your time.

—Becky Grajeda, Chicago, IL

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality is critical to provide the best possible useful service for everyone involved and any other option would cripple service to tens of millions of people and would ruin the Internet for many.

—Aaron Berisha, ,

Why Net Neutrality is important for the world: The internet has given the little man in society a chance to compete with the major players in business, this has led to a boost in innovation which should continue for years to come. Many people have been given easier access to worldwide communication which has led to many bonds being forged and will hopefully contribute to developing a worldwide understanding of each other. Why Net Neutrality is important to me: I have made many friends in the past few years. I love them and want to be able to speak to them again and again whenever possible. If I am going to lose these friends it's going to be over something personal, not because of price gouging which would lead to a permanent and unfair separation.

—Harry Tucker, Carshalton,

Internet Service Providers must be classified as "common carriers". We have already seen evidence of predatory behaviour from large ISPs such as Comcast in the absence of such classification.

—David Hodges, Gustavus, AK

Net neutrality is extremely important to me. Without it I will not be able to do my job, conduct research, or even afford internet service as I do today.

—Jesse Parker, ,

Because putting barriers around the Internet is like caging an animal. Neither the animal nor its spectators will be happy with the outcome.

—Shiro Yoshida, ,

The internet is the lifeblood of the new economy. Allowing big corporations to artificially reduce supply to increase profits is wrong and will hurt America's future.

—Peter Johnson, Santa Cruz, CA

Everyone should have equal footing on the internet, no one should get an advantage because they have money to pay for it.

—Tara Sinclair, Swansea, MA

A free and open internet protects freedom of speech, drives entrepreneurship, and promotes the spread of ideas. All of these things have been fought for since before this country's birth, and we should not let these principles be compromised now by large corporations.

—Philip Willard, Cleveland, TN

Net Neutrality is the cornerstone of the internet. Think of Internet providers just as electricity providers - they are just passing the bits around, regardless of what these bits are. Having fast lanes is giving power to the already more powerful, and this world doesn't need that, we need more equality and that's what Net Neutrality is about. Besides, creating fast lanes is empowering private companies to put priorities on websites - and their priorities will never match people's best interest as a whole.

—Jean-Yves Toumit, ,

I'm 66. I travel through time and space thanks to the internet. Don't allow the carriers to decide who gets to go on the fast lane.

—Angela Meister, Grandview, WA

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality is critical to provide the best possible useful service for everyone involved and any other option would cripple service to tens of millions of people and would ruin the Internet for many.

—Beni Berisha, ,

Everyone needs equality!

—James Hsu, La Jolla, CA

Knowing your background with a big media corporation, Mr Wheeler, I am not surprised at your current stance. But I would think you would want to be regarded as someone who is capable of thinking about the long term impact of decisions. The present proposals are just not adequate to deal with the depth and breadth of the internet. Please think of the whole, and not the few.

—Mary Bennett, Seattle, WA

Open and uncensored communication is critical for the maintenance of freedom.

—Diana Dee, North Hollywood, CA

What we resist persists, suppression creates a resistance that will as what suppression does, explode. Life on earth is in too fragile a state, because of such action. The way out is transparency, no more allowance of lack of development. Thus, the internet must remain an equal access source for all as those who created it intended. It is through innovation that problems are solved, as the few in self interest are the problem their greed and desire for control, is the problem because it denies the very expression of life within, of which the internet was a consequence of and as - it was life seeking expression. TO shut down the net for self interest and protection of limited products, is to shut down life, which is not working, we need only look around to see that lack creates a consequence of fear, and an action as fear is blind. The net should be free, the controls should be on what is impulsive, which is porn, ads for liquor, the smoke and mirrors show of greed that is politics and law, we are not going to solve problems allowing this to continue. And we, the people, of which you are who are voting/deciding, you must chose for the people and not the corporations - their track record around the world is to leave the garbage for the life on earth and build an alternate reality behind castle walls using earth's freely given resources all the while calling everyone else welfare babies. LOL, we so often project onto others what we in fact are. Keep the net open to all, do not allow control through economic means, it has not served us well.

—Rebecca Dalmas, Wellfleet, MA

This is a must!!!

—Ann Marie Lahaie, Lynn, MA

The internet is information and education and we should eliminate class distinctions if we can in these areas.

—Frances Rove, Prairie Village, KS

Internet is not a cash cow. It's a social and economic engine. Freedom of access to the global community should be respected just as human rights should be respected all around the world. Any effort to restrict, limit, impede access to the internet for any reasons (especially pecuniary ones), is an attack on individual freedoms and it should not be tolerated. If anything, it should be sanctioned and condemned as anti-democratic...

—Joel Turcotte, ,

I am a minority and I use the internet to connect to others like me who are not usually represented.

—Karen E. Hoffman, Glen Ellyn, IL

I think common sense holds the key here. Germany fell into the hands of dangerous criminals seventy years ago. Media was exploited through coercive propaganda. Millions of people died as a direct result. Humanity requires checks and balances to remain on a positive path. Open media is healthy. Please be reasonable and keep Net Neutrality.

—, La Jolla, CA

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality is critical to provide the best possible useful service for everyone involved and any other option would cripple service to tens of millions of people and would ruin the Internet for many.

—Deborah Berisha, ,

The internet presents a unique opportunity for the sharing and access of knowledge don't kill it for the sake of some companies bottom line being improved

—Alex dineley, ,

Net neutrality is important because I don't want an internet that is owned and operated by a few mega corporations.

—Mr. Dennis Lynch, Felton, CA

I use the internet to share written works, watch videos, for research, and to find jobs. This work could only be effectively accomplished through a common carrier.

—Andrew Roberts, ,

Our kids depend on the open Internet for schoolwork, and we depend on the open Internet for consulting work and volunteering. Having lost our primary job last year, we need the low cost for individual access. Fast lanes will only use more bandwidth for those willing to pay more, and we're afraid we'll be clipped out of the picture, or be forced to wait on our connections that we depend on, like using a 300 baud modem in the 80s.

—Lisa P Vervena, Shoreview, MN

As cable tv has now become too expensive for a lot of people we have turned to the net for a lot of things like communications, reading the news, entertainment etc. If you go along with the big companies you will be taking away one of the very last reasonably priced means of communication and entertainment from the masses. The constant erosion of the few freedoms that the working poor have will eventually in all likely hood at some point result in mass protests and maybe even violence as the masses reach the breaking point. It is this constant losses of our rights and freedoms a bit at a time that will lead to this. Our two Countries were built on rights and freedoms, but this latest half-baked scheme by big Telecommunications giants could just be the beginning of the end for them as it will lead to other methods to get rid of them, such as electing Governments who are more friendly to the working class and less friendly with big business and this could change the political landscape for many many years, to come.

—Chris Brown, ,

It promotes learning and creative expression without the threat of censorship and price manipulation.

—Josh Wensley, ,

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality is critical to provide the best possible useful service for everyone involved and any other option would cripple service to tens of millions of people and would ruin the Internet for many.

—Shukri Berisha, ,

Net nuetrality is important to me becasue almost ALL of the media is owned or influenced by BIG MONEY. If I have any chance of all of finding alternative information and/or the truth I NEED the entire internet-free of big money and corprate interests.

—Don Greene, Fort Lauderdale, FL

It is time to protect a free, unrestricted internet with equal access for all Americans.

—David Greene, North Huntingdon, PA

Internet is something that was meant to connect people and even businesses. We are all for net neutrality and preserving the way the internet is and the way it was always meant to be. Don't ruin the internet to the point that it will be unusable to most people and even hurt some businesses. Keep it for people and not for big business!

—Steven Beothy, ,

I grew up with a free, open and neutral Internet. I now live in the Middle East but use US-based Internet services everyday and I have seen firsthand how powerful and democracy-building a neutral Internet infrastructure can be. Let's not destroy one of the most treasured inventions in human history in the name of narrow and transient economic interests.

—Thomas D. Pellegrin, Dubai,

The Internet belongs to everyone

—Ryan Babchishin, ,

WE NEED TO GET SPEEDS LIKE JAPAN AT THEIR SAME FUCKING PRICE!! ONE-THIRD OF COMCAST'S SLOWNESS!!!

—Denis DellaLoggia, Wilmington, DE

So I do not have to worry about whether I can afford to visit web sites

—Alan Sparkes, ,

The internet is too important to allow its use to be dictated by price. Please do not vote for this odious legislation.

—Gareth Healy, ,

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality is critical to provide the best possible useful service for everyone involved and any other option would cripple service to tens of millions of people and would ruin the Internet for many.

—Willow Berisha, ,

Its vital to freedom and for the sake of consumers.

—Chris Chapman, , because it is the last frontier for corporate america to capture before they buy up the rights to the oxygen in the atmosphere and send us working citizens an enormous monthly bill for it. it is the last frontier for information,contrasting views,for research, for the arts,for freedom from the corporate agenda that they are trying to impose on us.

—Lawrence O'Connor, Saint Augustine, FL

Many people are already limited in their access to the internet because of the ongoing, monthly subscription costs and charges. A recent retiree, not part of the 2%, I would like to be able to afford continuing a subscription to the internet. Everyone should have equal access without having to go to the public library and such other places. Please do not move to increase the already exorbitant monthly costs for the public and small businesses to gain access and maintain modern communication technology at home and at work. The internet is essential even to those who cannot afford; without access many will fall farther behind in being able to keep up with the economy and society at large. Please keep the Internet open. Thank you.

—Peter Jack Tkatch, Burlington, VT

The Internet has transformed society in an instrumental and positive way. It's also responsible for America's superior stance within the global landscape. All because the Internet has remained OPEN. Don't allow lobbyists to prevent growth – from a technological and cultural standpoint.

—Alex Badalyan, Austin, TX

Freedom of expression is a fundamental right. Most things in life have an online component these days and taking away the right to express oneself online is an unjustified impediment to freedom of expression. From slowing access to a competitor's website, to blocking access to another website, to deleting posts you simply don't agree with, all of these create a chill that makes people self-censor. It also blocks people from having access to different points of view. Open-mindedness has gotten me a lot more positive things in my life than closed-mindedness. I'm writing to you today to make sure the internet maintains its neutrality so that all voices can continue to remain heard and understood.

—Lynn Kruszewski, ,

I'd rather not have the last non corporate controlled thing in the US be taken over

—David A Tarrant, Norwich, CT

Net Neutrality is the basis of innovation on the internet. Big corps shouldn't have preference just because they pay for it.

—Doreen McCammon, Nevada City, CA

corporate control will inhibit freedom of speech and increase cost to consumers

—Michael Bradley, Granada Hills, CA

The notion that this proposed slow-lane/fast-lane won't be abused is laughable. This is not about innovation, it is about rent-seeking.

—Rodrigo Hulse, Portland, OR

BECAUSE I AM SICK AND TIRED OF CORPORATIONS DOING PAY FOR PLAY, ACROSS ALL INDUSTRIES IN THIS COUNTRY.....THE NET IS A PUBLIC UTILITY - MAKE IT SO.

—Joe Karr, Middletown, NY

pay to play undermines everything the internet has stood for since inception; which is access to free information world wide. ISP's already charge to access the web, don't add charges with a pay for play internet!!!

—William Cullen, Glenrock, WY

The Internet MUST be kept neutral. We, the people, need this freedom. Take it away at your peril! This is a WARNING!

—Leonard Mehlmauer, San Marcos, CA

Money should not be able to buy the internet.

—Pascal Marais, ,

Without Net Neutrality there is always the danger of imposing an authoritarian censor on what is and is no available for the population to have access to.

—Susan Forbes, ,

According to the Declaration of Independence, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men" I am EQUAL with all other humans. If I start an online company, It is the governments job to ensure that i have the same rights and access as the CEOs of these large corporations.

—Mikie Smit, Homer Glen, IL

Net neutrality is important because it provides equal access to the internet regardless of your political views or wealth.

—Michael Lapointe, ,

Without equal access to Internet pipes the Internet will eventually degrade into a society of 'haves' and 'have-nots'.

—Wayne Vanderkaden, ,

Knowledge is power and I believe people should have power, not corporations.

—Nancy Hiestand, Davis, CA

I don't want big telecom to be in charge of the internet and to pay the extra cost for what is now free.

—Rosemary Rogers, Athens, OH

Service and speed is already degraded for users due to limitations of technology. We don't need artificial degradations to make matters worse. With hindsight, it probably would have been far better had the US government retained ownership of the Internet.

—Ronald R Hammersley, Palm Bay, FL

I use the Net in my work. My work performance would deteriorate if my connection were to go into the slow lane. Please, please, help all Net users who don't have deep pockets, keep their connections out of the slow lane.

—, Berkeley, CA

As a lower income person, I do not consider the prospect fair of having less access and slower speed than someone who can pay more. It should be equal like telephone service.

—Nancy Hauer, Saint Paul, MN

Dear Sirs, There are multiple reasons to maintain an open internet that effect me, my family, and the general public at large. 1. My children are both public high school seniors. The school (Asheville High School, NC, not a wealthy suburban school) provides each student a laptop. Getting homework done is completely dependent on internet usage. Net neutrality is essential for the progress of this country, whose students already can not compete in testing scores compared to other countries in the world. 2. I am a physician assistant,, and the provision of care to patients is entirely dependent on internet access. The amount of medical information currently available as well as the tools to integrate that information to a given patient's problem list, medications, lab data, and ancillary care within the practice and in coordination with specialists, and pharmacists are some of the issues dependent on an open internet. In addition, Continuing Education immediately available is essential to practioners' knowledge as well as best practice patient care. I am certain the issue of education in the form of immediate access to information is germane to many in the STEM fields, and likely others I can not imagine. 3. Issues of daily life, for example, when I go to my auto mechanic (a 2 man, father and son small operation) there is not a time that he does not reference something on the net. In conclusion, not just here in Appalachia, but throughout this great country, the education, business, activity, and continued progress of this society is as dependent on an open internet as it is on water, power, and infrastructure. The discussion to consider changing that for the sake of windfall profits for a few corporations should, in my mind, not even be on the table. Period! It would be truely unconscionable (using the legal definition, which I just obtained on the net(!)) for the FCC to not reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers". Thank you for your attention to this matter. Sincerely, Mark Peters 5 Carter Crest Ln Fletcher, NC 28732-9721

—Mark S Peters, Fletcher, NC

Be Cause It is Freedom OF Speech and not an Auction HOUSE For the HIGHEST BIDDER !

—Alita DeMarco, Ypsilanti, MI

I happen to be a writer. The Internet is how I make a living. I have no intention of gibvng away my living to a "common carrier" who thinks that I should pay more than everyone else just to get exposure.

—Walker Bennett, Sedona, AZ

Don't let corporations and big telecom to overweight all other sites on the net!

—Jean-Luc Lo Cicero, Dayton, OH

I need to know that the truth is available to me.

—Carol Harder, Germantown, WI

Net neutrality is something that's keeping things at bay. Destabilizing net neutrality will destabilize the internet. You don't want that.

—Piero Ronco, ,

Internet is for people's use. It doesn't belong to private companies that works 24-7 to finds way to screw us.

—Guy Riendeau, ,

We already pay hefty fees for using the internet. Please do not allow (once again) big business and the rich to make their access better while our access gets worse because of not being able to pay the increased fees.

—James and Kathleen Day, Phoenix, AZ

You kill innovation, democracy, access, and freedom if you divide the Internet into those who have versus those who don't. This is one more gigantic nail toward killing our democracy. We are now a plutocracy and an oligarchy. You evidently intend to keep it that way if you support your corporate masters and give the telecoms and cable companies what they want. And, by the way, the American people through taxes via the military to Bell Labs built the internet. When will the cable companies reimburse us?

—Ms. Jane Lynam, Centerville, MA

Net Neutrality is significant and important for humanity because it supports and encourages a level playing field for free expression, economic opportunity, and innovation. These new proposed rules are draconian and fascist in nature. If the United States/ the FCC actually believes in the American expression of free speech and individualism, the right to carry arms and all the rest, then stand up and support net neutrality. It is good for everyone. These new proposed rules are bottom line, bad for business and creativity/innovation and staying competitive with the rest of the world.

—Maggie Tchir, ,

We need a free and open internet.

—Marilyn Vey, city, NY

The Internet as we know it relies on the level playing field it provides.

—, Woodbridge, VA

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler claims he supports the open Internet, but his proposed rules would allow Big Telecom to charge steep tolls for premium access — and block or slow down websites and services that can't afford the new fees. There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Christina Tavares, Eugene, OR

Why is net neutrality important to me? Hmm...let's see. Primarily, because I am a person who believes in democracy (vs. the corporatism that is taking over our country). FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler proposed rules allowing Big Telecom to charge steep tolls for premium access — and block or slow down websites and services that can't afford the new fees--are antithetical to a healthy, highly functioning democracy. There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: You, the FCC, must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers." Do the right thing and support the values our country was built upon.

—Allison W. Ewoldt, Tucson, AZ

As an online student it is imperative that I have open and full access to the internet, without "slow" and "fast" lanes. Further, the internet and broadband should be regulated as a utility.

—Daniel M. Potter, Portland, OR

The internet has provided the average person the ability to access the largest storage of recorded human knowledge ever created. To force those less fortunate into a slow lane would be no different than cutting off access to public schools or libraries. Please, do not hamper the people's access to knowledge in any form.

—David, ,

I use the internet and appreciate that it has been available. Do not take it away from me.

—Angelique Pinkstaff, Whittier, CA

I don't want crippled internet caused by greedy ISPs that see financial gains by favoring their selected traffic over mine.

—Russel Brooks, WALLA WALLA, WA

An open and neutral internet is a place that fosters innovation and promotes investment into services that benefit everyone.

—Nathan Kohlman, ,

The American government is very concerned with JOBS and gross revenue for the country. If this is allowed to pass, you will cripple a very real income generator for a great deal of people AND limit the potential of a great many others in the process in a misguided attempt to please a very small, very WEALTHY minority! Quit flushing your country down the drain for the greedy desires of people who already have far too much and do something constructive by allowing EVERYONE the same rights and privileges to a utility (which the internet IS) that was PAID for by the bulk of the taxpayers using it, not the rich slime overseeing it's commodification.

—Mike Carrick, ,

The main reason I don't watch cable or satellite TV is that I don't want to be force fed inane drivel and big media propaganda. Please don't debase and pervert the Internet for all humanity. Unless you support censorship and the segregation of wealth and global resources.

—Joe Monette, ,

All I've seen for the decade with my cable provider (Comcast) is higher rates/fees, less functionality and declining customer service. I know that if they gain access to mandating Internet rules, it will end up costing me and my family more time and money.

—Brian Domingos, Falmouth, MA easy access to wide-ranging sources of info, data & ideas!

—William Solomon, Shipman, VA

The INTERNET must be treated as a UTILITY-like water- NOT a CORPORATE FIEFDOM!

—Patricia McHUGH, SAINT LOUIS, MO

No one company should have control of the internet.

—Krista Gremos, Indianapolis, IN

Most of the content I read and care about would fall into the slow lane. All have paid for the development of the internet and now certain people want to control and marginalize most of us... but turn the internet into nothing more than an advertising vehicle for big business and you kill it for everyone. People will not pay to get nothing more than advertising for large corporations. There are those who want this to happen, they hate free speech. They are foolish, the internet is one of the most powerful tools for startups and small businesses. Please protect net neutrality. I support the lawsuit bring filed. It is a tool necessary to use against a nonresponsive government. Show it is unnecessary.

—Janet Davidoff, Edgewood, NM

The internet is the most powerful way for the people of the world to connect and share, to lower the barriers of ignorance and separation. As such it should be equally accessible to ALL, not at the discretion of the few.

—Lynda Barry, Wailuku, HI

I have used the internet to run a business, as a consumer, and for educational and research purposes and I would not be able to do the things I have done in an internet slow lane.

—Charles Colenaty, Port Orchard, WA access to communication and information should be for everyone.

—JoEllen Daniel, Glen Allen, VA

We need to protect the internet for freedom, information, expression, innovation and our economy and more.

—Sheri Strite, Portland, OR

Net Neutrality helps foster the best in social and technological innovation. We can't afford to lose it.

—Matt Ramsden, ,

A free, open, equal-opportunity internet is necessary for democracy to survive in the USA.

—, Palisade, CO

We are already paying through the nose for Internet service and to have pay a premium is unacceptable.

—Meg Chrisler, Garrett Park, MD

In an age where the Internet is the prevalent means of mass communication, limiting internet access in any form is tantamount to limiting the freedom of speech

—Boris Layvant, Philadelphia, PA

the net was created by its inventor to warrant better information - not worse

—Frank Bernhard Rudolph, ,

The Internet can be a great boon to mankind as long as it is not overly commercialized and fragmented and innovation stifled. Please show that regulatory capture of the FCC has not become downright corruption and make the right choice for the USA and as an example for the world.

—Dave Barron, ,

Please, no changes in internet accessibility. I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect Net Neutrality.

—Charles Repsher, Eugene, OR

Too much 'Big Brother' already. It ain't broke, so why 'fix' it?

—Keith Jackman, ,

It would cut off most of my relationship to the world. From free time to business pursuits; from shopping to political involvement, information, association and education, art, music, science and history; from contact with my family and friends, my participation in society would be largely cut off. It would impoverish my intellectual life and isolate me. And I would not be able to pay my rent. Internet access for the many for whom it would become unaffordable is equivalent to denying telephone, electricity and participation in the life of the world. It would impoverish our country too, by curtailing anyones access to collaborative development of the arts and ideas. I am against anyone invading my privacy, censoring my interests and removing access to sites they don't like. I find the misclassification of "Internet Access" a further erosion of ordinary people's constitutional rights and a boon to the owners of corporate media to manipulate through (irrefutable) propaganda. The content must not be in the sole control of wealthy commercial and political interests, especially our incumbent corrupt government's representation of those interests, lest our ability to refute disinformation and verify fact be curtailed. Mass surveillance, by private or public sector is equally noxious. Someone said "this is the 1st Amendment issue of our time." I agree! No amount of "regulation" under your proposed misclassification will keep the internet free, open and serving the public good for more than a few hours. Keep the internet equally free to all users and regulate it as a Common Carrier.

—Shoshannah Benmosché, New York, NY

Freedom

—Doug Johnson, ,

The Internet must remain free so that anybody can express thereself and be able to have there voice heard.

—Jorge Garcia, Gaffney, SC

Unbiased public access to internet is today's human right. Corporations, have huge profit margin already, they have no right to bully the public who makes them have billion dollar profit margins. Public and social health is endangered without net neutrality

—Samira Guccione, Burlingame, CA

I fear of the social and economic consequences of undermining a true "free market" in internet access.

—Carla Beak, San Mateo, CA

This is a NO BRAINER Wake Up FCC

—George Thorward, Happy Camp, CA

If Net Neutrality is compromised, then the rich and big corporations can have fast connections. So their views and opinions will dominate and the ones without enough money will have a hard time letting themselves being heard.

—AM Judistira, ,

I am totally against big corporations being allowed to control the internet for their personal profit. Corporate domination of American life in all phases must be stopped to preserve our basic freedoms. Reclassify the internet service providers as common carriers.

—Kathryn Zimmerman, Deland, FL

Because the internet does not need and cannot be governed by medieval principles where those at the top get everything and the people are left to fend for themselves. If forced to the people will fend for themselves. Please do not act stupidly in the name of short-sighted greed. It is counter-productive and the last thing our nation needs in a time of global competition.

—John McNally, Monroe, NH

Just the fact that I am able to join in the discussion is proof that internet neutrality and freedom is needed. Without a neutral and open internet, Freedom of Choice and Freedom of Speech is taken away. Very few people can afford to pay much for the access to internet. As well, the internet contributes to the economy of countries by allowing people to see and buy through it. The purchasing of goods supports small business and individuals, who are, in turn, able to contribute to their country's economies by supporting other business through purchasing, and by contributing taxes. If "Big Telecom" is allowed to take away the ease of accessibility of the internet for those who are not the 99%, it will cause both social and economical damage around the world. It will profoundly affect the world and it's people by taking away the ability to communicate with each other. Many places in the world rely on affordable internet to use their cell phones (data plans and VoIP). Being able to afford to access the internet has improved the economies of many places, and kept people in touch with family and friends around the world.

—R Cormier, ,

Net Neutrality would slow the innovation of internet companies and stifle the growth of new companies.

—John Fahey, Seattle, WA

Net Neutrality is important to me because I believe we need free flow of information for all, rich poor, private or public. We do not need the corporate power brokers holding the rest of us hostage, and slowing down free flow of information. They control too much as it is. It is "we the people" , not "we the corporation".

—Elizabeth Dokken Dokken, Edina, MN

I believe in freedom of expression.

—Jordan York, ,

This does not encourage nor support innovation - why bother to compete when one can be outbid?

—Ian Weatherseed, Old Greenwich, CT

The people view and use the Internet like a utility - please make it official!

—Stefan Mohr, ,

My traffic should get the same speeds whether it's coming from Google, Netflix,WordPress, or PornHub - and not just from companies that have aligned themselves with any one particular ISP.

—Aaron Outram, ,

It provide ordinary people with similar access to the Net as those with enormous power and resources.

—David Rattray, ,

ISPs should be literally Internet Service Providers and nothing more. They shouldn't care who is generating traffic and how they're sent over. Their responsibility is to deliver the internet traffic and it's their job to pay for any increase in traffic. It's just the nature of their business. It's just sad to see how ISPs are using their dominant positions in the market to create this bogus arguments of how there's too much traffic and FCC is either too corrupt or too incompetent to do anything about it.

—Phillip Han, , a completely free internet is a basic human right...

—Colleen McCarthy, ,

Governments should protect people and regulate corporations; not protect corporations and regulate people.

—Noel St-Laurent, ,

I want to choose what I search, not have a corporation do it for me, or only offer their paid choices.

—Jane Callaway, Santa Rosa, CA

We must protect the right to free speech and neutrality. To not do so threatens democracy.

—Jw, ,

If we don't have Net Neutrality, then we lose our freedom of expression.

—Jausen Hyldahl, Seattle, WA

We get more information that anywhere else. I get papers from all over the US and the world, and it is a great way to educate our young people. If we want to set an example for this world, this one way to do it, an informed public.

—Shirley Smith, Longview, TX

Freedom in all forms is the AMERICAN WAY!

—Nathan Vogel, san francisco, CA

Being outside the US where the servers are, I'll likely be left in the slow lane if a fast lane and slow lane is created by law in the US.

—Dan Parker, ,

Net neutrality is important for start-up companies, small businesses, and generally for the sharing of new ideas.

—Sarah, ,

Communication requires reciprocity.

—David K. Stewart, ,

It's our right.

—Jashandeep Singh, ,

It's a matter of basic justice. The ether is part of the commons. It should no more be enclosed and sold than water or air, although the same kinds of people are trying to monetize that too. Why should telecom corporations get a profit for making things harder for me. Under the split level proposal they get paid for putting up toll booths on a road they didn't build. This is not new. I think of the poem from the late middle ages: They'll hand the man or woman who steals the goose from off the common and let the greater felon loose who steals the common from the goose.

—Mike Emery, Ramah, NM

Small scale websites and services represent a major part of the internet. They are essential for small businesses around the world, and especially so in the United States. As a small business owner, I can't tolerate something that would discriminate against me like this. Since this ultimately about a lack of available bandwidth, this would only be a short term fix anyway. Money needs to be allocated to upgrading the global Tier 1 networks so that this isn't an issue in the first place. And that money should come from the big ISPs and Tier 1 providers that currently make massive profit, not struggling small businesses and private consumers.

—Ryan Lewis, Bend, OR

I'm a student artist who counts on an open internet as a platform of free expression and communication.

—Samuel Moledo, Greenwich, CT

We can already pay for more bandwidth. So can big corporations. Setting the ground work for something like this is counter productive for the small guy!

—Dave, Berwyn, IL

Sir Bernard Lees invented the WWW and gave it to us all. That spirit of generosity needs to be retained. It would not be right to make hefty charges to those who can afford it and leave the rest of us on slow track.

—Clive Sawers, ,

Higher fees for faster content will create a greater divide between the haves and the have nots.

—Judith Murphy, Pelham, NY

The internet is the last means of personal expression available. The progress that will be thwarted by passing this is incalculable. Please don't catapult us into a dark age for the short end money.

—Anthony Martinez, Pacific Palisades, CA

The Internet is arguably the most influential communications medium in history. The degree of interconnectedness it allows, and the physical barriers that we can bypass with this incredible technology have done wonders for allowing everyone the chance to become part of the human experience as a whole. Never before have people been able to see and experience the ideas of the world with such ease and convenience, and I truly believe that we are all better for it. I urge you all at the FCC to support this incredible thing that we call the Internet. It deserves all of the life and support that we can possibly give it, and not to be taxed and tolled by those who would seek to diminish its universal appeal. We are now at a time when the world and its people are more open and accepting as a whole than we ever have been, and it would be among the greatest of our shames if we inhibit and destroy such progressive thinking.

—Jordan, ,

I do not want big companies to control how I get my news, limit my access or dominant certain markets.

—Dave Mattingly, Candler, NC

An open internet and functional internet is the open gateway to world peace and enlightenment.

—Tyler Owens, Mankato, MN

Businesses should not be able to purchase the ability to determine the rates of speed at which I access information. The Internet is great because it is a great equalizer; it forces businesses to improve their services so as to avoid being uprooted by a startup or small business. If a businesses' services are truly superior to others', they should be able to prove this superiority via their actual services; they shouldn't be able to purchase the maintenance of their market lead by purchasing higher access speeds that startup businesses cannot afford, and that NO CUSTOMER WANTS. This is a means for greater profit at the cost of customer rights, under the guise of supposedly offering us better service. We're not buying it; please listen to the people: not the businesses who want only to make (more and more) money off of us, while doing less and less for us.

—Tasha Golden, Ft Mitchell, KY

Important in the light of the US Constitution's First Amendment and its derivative legislation.

—Arthur Connor, Idyllwild, CA

It is the only free thing left

—John Cabe, Lenoir City, TN

Net neutrality is important for freedom of expression and the free interchange of ideas.

—Gerardo Solis, ,

Corporations And Governments should have less power, not more.

—Tim Fisher, ,

I'm a small business owner who relies on the Internet to survive. Broadband Internet providers should be classified as common carriers and regulated as such to protect fair access to this critical service for folks like me.

—Jerry Hudgins, Point Reyes Station, CA

I DO NOT THINK FASTER SERVICE SHOULD GO TO THE PEOPLE WITH THE BIGGEST POCKETS $$$$$$$$$$$$!!!!

—Linda & Family of 6 Roe votes, Fairless Hills, PA

it is a no-brainer

—Daniel J McCormick, moline, IL

As Canada so often follows the USA, I'm asking the USA's FCC to take a bold lead in this matter, strongly in favor of consumers and fair access for all.

—Gilles Detillieux, ,

Equal access to the internet for provides for a level playing field for all. To make it harder for some to access it completely and freely, by definition disenfranchises their freedom of choice and restricts their right to 'life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness'

—Linda Guenther, ,

Don't let corporate America controll access to the net. This is a free speech issue, don't let them take away This right.

—Jeri Kim, Mililani, HI

We need a fair and open internet, the way it's always been.

—Judith J. Tabak, Renton, WA

this is my work environment , please dont send me into indentured servitude to those companies i dont want to work for anyhow

—Eric Soulliage, ,

This is a form of economic oppression. The internet is for free exchange of data for all people. Slowing it down for those that do not jive with big business is wrong and it is discriminatory.

—David McLuhan, ,

It keeps the playing field a bit more level. Not all of us are rich. In fact, most of us are not.

—Rita Bauknight, Lincolnton, NC

as someone who has grown up to adulthood with the internet, it is something that has become a great part of all our lives. It was something akin to the wild west, where there no rules, where money didn't matter, where people could express their ideas, and create movement through the world with other users. Now with net neutrality being threatened, the very concepts that the internet has been founded on are being threatened. I hope that my small contribution will add to the overwhelming support from the common people to stop Big Telecom companies from taking control of something so fundamental to society.

—Daniel Eapen, ,

Democracy and free societies can only survive if there is free and open communications for all members of that society

—Rod McConnell, ,

The Internet is a 21st century tool that has become a required utility. This would be put out of the reach of all but the rich. If we allow this to go through, then Orwell's 1984 is closer to reality. I don't want a dark reality controlled by big money corporations that feed off society to fill their coffers. We are already over-charged and under served when compared to some nations. Enough is enough, more power to the people!

—Don McLeod, ,

Common carriage fosters innovation and investment.

—Leonard Friedman, Atlanta, GA

The internet should remain a level playing field

—Gloria, Boise, ID

Net Neutrality is essential to speech freedom.

—Bennett Yang, Pearland, TX

It fosters and sustains the dissemination of knowledge and information between human beings; innovation, free-expression, global communication. To affect Net Neutrality (I.e. the way millions and millions interface with the internet, a technological bedrock of our modern culture) any adverse way WILL, in turn, harm those very things.

—Duran N Burby, Haverhill, MA

I would think it's pretty obvious.

—Matt Schmidt, ,

Even something seemingly innocuous as allowing content providers to pay for preferential treatment in terms of speed is potentially disastrous as it could dramatically increase costs which would then be passed down to the consumer. In a time when we are all struggling with increased costs due to the likes of Obamacare for instance, having the price of even basic internet or content access shoot up would be the last thing we need. Instead, ideally all broadband should be re-classified as a telecom service, especially considering how internet access is essentially required these days. It should also be free from bandwidth caps, possibly metered and paid for in a manner very similar to electricity. Failing that, the original 2010 Net Neutrality rules should be re-established with solid legal footing, so it would avoid the same fate as what befell it in January. Thank you for your time.

—Brian Ross Edwards, Fishers, IN

An open society must not have impositions of powerful interests placed upon it. Anything less is a hallmark of repressive regeims.

—Robert MacLeod, ,

With out Net Neutrality all innovation on will die on the internet. Never again will everyday people, the PEOPLE that MATTER, be able to make web services that they need, at the standard they need.

—Matthew Bailey, ,

The world is inexorably moving away from command and control by all types of institutions towards more free flow invention, sharing and development of innovative products, services and solutions. The reclassification of the broadband providers as common carriers will actually help them to make this transition and allow for the flourishing of new innovation and investment, which, paradoxically, will also help them. If not, the transition will happen anyway (see the maker movement) and it will be much more painful, if not mortally detrimental to these companies. Get with the program guys!

—Angela Smailes, ,

The people paid for the internet and therefore we own it. We should be able to exert total control of it, not a couple of corporations.

—Lowell Young, Mariposa, CA

Same speed internet access for all. No speed lanes for the wealthy and corporations.

—Carl N Oerke Jr, River Edge, NJ

Net Neutrality is important to every single person, including me, in America. It is, like telephone service or water service or electricity service, etc., vital to the everyday lives of each of us in order to communicate, learn, read and discuss political and social and economic and cultural events and thoughts and analyses with others in order to share what we live and do so in a timely and expedient way. Allowing corporations to purchase faster internet lanes and higher priority internet lanes will vastly diminish the possibilities for every individual and small business startups and owners: it will create a caste society and will decrease economic opportunities for all but the wealthy and big business. It will affect campaigns and it will affect elections in the most adverse of ways. Keep the Net open, free, and neutral! Please.

—JJ Frankel, Chicago, IL

We have always had net neutrality. That is a FREE AND OPEN exchange of ideas etc. The only reason this issue has reared its hideous head is because of the greed of "Big Telecom". If the current state of the internet changes, I shall know that I no longer live in a free country.

Instead, it will be a country in which big business and greed run even more unrestrained than they already do, and control every aspect of government, which is already upon us. Yes it will be a very bleak day if the big corporations get their way with net neutrality. I for one will consider leaving this once great country. Because I will realize that we are no longer a free society.

—John R Hughes, Chicago, IL

At this point the Web has become an integral part of Modern life. Many of us have find it's use comparable to any other public utility. Thanks for listen and take care of We the People.

—Scott Kaminski, San Leandro, CA

The free exchange of information and ideas is stifled when it depends on who much money you have.

—Jeffrey Pozin, ,

Keep the internet access open to everyone.

—Helen Radtke, Reed City, MI

The internet needs to be free and open. The carriers are the only ones that would benefit from destroying net neutrality. The internet is one of the greatest tools for people to communicate and learn. And uses for businesses, large and small, are endless. Without net neutrality, we will see innovation and growth be curbed drastically all over the world.

—Kevin Keller, Rochester, MN

It is ours, the people's, it is a wonderful and essential part of or rights of free speech and expression. It doesn't 'Belong' to anyone entity. And you or anyone else has any right to tamper with it. It should be as free as the air we breath!!!!!!!!!! Just leave well enough alone. Not everything should be about money, greed control etc. some things are just better left alone. If a household is fortunate enough to have a computer of some kind. It is already costly enough to operate. Internet should be affordable to all. And no restricted access.

—Phyllis Hester, Westwego, LA

I live in a city that has had a massive economic restart owing, in part, to technology startups. The de facto requirement to by access to a "fast lane" in order to compete with larger companies would be devastating to those companies. Further, much of the US economy is now held aloft by similar startups across the nation, which would be similiarly cut off at the knees by any sort of pay-for-use "fast lane". To continue fostering innovation in our technology economy, I urge you to reclassify broadband as common carrier utility.

—Mr. Jonathan Sackett, Durham, NC

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way

—Thomas Edwin Eddleston, ,

So everyone has an equal opportunity to be creative rather than the continuation of money and power superseding all

—Karen Simmons Sicoli, Seattle, WA

Big govt./corps are destroying America from unconsummated GREED.

—William Parlette, Linwood, NJ

Net Neutrality is democratic. There should be no need for any other comment.

—Dave, ,

Otherwise the internet won't work. It needs to be there.

—Evan Snoswell, ,

Linking big money and premium internet access is rank discrimination.

—Gerald Livingstone, ,

The internet is a means of communication and shouldn't be made the exclusive domain of the marketplace. I understand that most venal elements our society wish to seal it off from the relatively free expression we have hitherto enjoyed. To allow these corporations, the worst elements of human culture, to control our means of expression would be catastrophic.

—Mr. Dale Edwin Wittig, San Francisco, CA

Free expression is the only true freedom.

—Alan Rideout, Chesapeake, VA

NET NEUTRALITY....It's important to me, to you, and the corporations and the telecoms, because if you destroy it, I'll shove what you leave left of it up your asses!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Richard Johnsen, Hartwick, NY

Because I work in the video game industry, I rely on the internet for my livelihood. While, as a corporation, my employer could be posed to take advantage of an Internet "fast-lane", un-regulated internet would subject us to threats from both ISPs and our competitors. My company has brought significant innovation to our genre of online gaming. But it was not the first of that genre, nor is it the biggest. We stand to lose a substantial portion of our player-base (and the resulting income) to the two companies with larger market shares if they can promise game connections with lower latency. Not to mention the potential for being held hostage to ISPs hiking rates on our service, since we rely on it to deliver our product. I implore you to reclassify broadband under common carriers and protect it as a utility. Thank you for your consideration.

—Daniel Fishman, Alpharetta, GA

It was developed with public funds and needs protection by the agency that is supposed to represent the public, the FCC. Do the right thing; protect the internet from the big corporate giants that have only one thing in mind, profit.

—Carolyn Knoll, Kailua, HI

Stop bowing down to the greedy lying telecoms (same ones who lied about no commercials for the cable industry because the customer pays monthly - how did that work out!). Get real. NEVER trust big corporations!

—Mercy Hobson, San Marcos, CA

If you want to continue to be a leader in innovation you cannot let incumbents in an industry put up barriers to entry to these innovators. Use the highway system as your guide, where anyone can travel anywhere in shipping goods and providing services.

—Alex Wielhouwer, ,

The Internet is now everyone's news paper and must be protected for all as access to free speech...A basic right..

—Gerald and Mary Lou DeVane, Palm Coast, FL

As a working musician & realtor, I depend on a level playing field on the internet to promote my business. Please do everything in your poer to preserve net neutrality.

—JAB Wilson, Destin, FL

The free and open internet is the only unfiltered access to news and communication left. If corporations control the internet too kiss free speech goodbye.

—Rebecca Kane, Goodells, MI

Net Neutrality opens the world.

—, ,

I love a free and open internet

—Ilse V, Glen Allen, VA

Plain and simple, since it's inception, the internet has created a global equality, and this needs to be protected at all costs.

—Joshua Lense, Moorhead, MN

I spend a great deal of my life online, and it has been a privilege to see the internet grow into what it is today. With speed being such a massive factor in web usage and the spread of new content, giving telecommunication companies the ability to restrict who can use what at what speeds will kill fledgling companies and websites they don't like -- and is tantamount to modern-day book-burning.

—Morgan Willis, Warwick, RI

Because it is vital to freedom of expression in this age of rapid and ubiquitous electronic communication. It is not just countries like China that are a serious threat to such freedom but mega-corporations that would obtain a strangle-hold on communication in pursuit of profits. It is in your hands to make certain that these basic freedoms are preserved.

—Adam S. Wilkins, ,

I have been online since 1981 and consider it freedom of speech and right. to have to pay extra for a right is not american

—Judy Sachter, Los Angeles, CA

I want to support open Internet. It is important to me to be able to access ALL INFORMATION and no one person to be able to block or slow down websites and services because they can't afford the new fees. Our Canadian Constitutional Rights are to protect us from those who interfere with this process.

—Erika Furney, ,

Being able to start businesses on the internet is key to small business owners like myself. Giving large corporations preferential treatment closes down one more avenue for small business to compete with big business.

—Tracee Washington, Atlanta, GA

Net neutrality is essential to democracy and the well being of our nation.

—Barb Baird, Rayland, OH

Cable is over priced and obsolete. Instead of lowering prices to remain competitive, these companies are trying to change the rules of the game in their favour. If you can't see that you're blinded by the money they are offering you.

—Peter Bowden, ,

As a small business owner with two business websites, I fear my businesses will be affected if there are fast and slow "lanes" on the internet. I cannot compete with huge international companies who can pay more to make their sites faster. And as a consumer, the internet will become limited and less useful if some sites take forever to load. Keep net neutrality. And stop sending me replies saying how much you support it when you're proposing action that will destroy this beautiful gift we have.

—Deborah Reade, Santa Fe, NM

Please demonstrate that you represent the American people instead of the media giants by continuing Net neutrality. There is a reason that the citizens have lost faith in government, show that you are with the people.

—David A. Brunk, Los Angeles, CA

Free internet for free speech.

—Suzanne Bernardin, ,

I protest vehemently. My children who do not have huge incomes, nor I. We should not be deprived of ready access to the offerings of the world. The monetization would negatively affect the spread of democracy worldwide. The monetization of the internet would not benefit any real human being, it would only benefit non-human corporations.

—Richard Tomkins, ,

Preferential treatment of data harms consumers. By holding the internet hostage companies are forced to pass outrageous fees to consumers - ISPs are effectively double-dipping!

—Scott Teibert, ,

I don't want anyone other than myself choosing the items I get when I search on the internet!

—Glenda Denniston, Madison, WI

The greater the automation should lead to less cost.

—Joah Moat, ,

The internet is the most important tool mankind has for learning and entertainment purposes. Creating a slow lane will only hinder those who are unable to afford the high prices that have been set by greedy telecommunication companies. It's time to stop this corporate greed NOW!

—Roger Hopper, ,

I do not want the internet to go the way of cable tv where the little man has no voice and the subscriber is constantly assailed by adverts.

—Rachel Waugh, ,

It is my voice, my livelihood, and my freedom of express. I work remotely and I work for a startup company that needs to avoid unnecessary expenses.

—Andrew J Lenards, TUCSON, AZ

Fracturing our Net Neutrality has a damning effect around the world. We need to keep our friends, not demean USA reputation among others.

—David Willett, San Juan Capistrano, CA

Any restrictions passed will benefit large telecom companies, and will therefore limit smaller companies. This will result in less consumer choice, & higher prices for goods and services.

—Brian Lindberg, ,

In my field, physics, where my colleagues invented and developed the web, access to data, papers, collaboration meetings is absolutely required to develop our science. This is particularly true for my colleagues in Russia, Cuba, and Nigeria, where the response time now is iffy. Relegating the traffic that drives human intellectual development to the slow lane to support the profitability of commercial entertainment makes no sense.

—Art Olin, ,

Allows my wife to communicate to the world her ministry. Facilitator, Cal-Pac DisAbility Ministries Task Force and Chair, Committee on DisAbility Ministries United Methodist Church *****

 Four friends brought their friend to Christ, tearing a hole in a roof they wanted so badly for his life to be changed! What would you do to change a friend's life? <https://www.facebook.com/calpacministryforall> <http://www.umdissabilityministries.org/> <http://pastorsharon.com/>

—Dale McCart, Irvine, CA

A free and open internet is essential for the future of our democracy

—Richard Selleseth, Lodi, CA

I am opposed to the FCC's proposed rules that allow corporations to take control of the Internet. I support equal and open Internet access. Please change the FCC's proposed rules and regulate broadband Internet providers as common carriers so that the Internet will not be divided into a fast lane for corporations and a slow lane for everyone else.

—Erik Schmitt, white plains, NY

The power coming to my Fridge doesn't come at any different speed than the power to my lights as it's all the same power. The same holds true for data on the internet so allowing carriers to throttle one data type in favor of other data types should not be acceptable. I feel this will be used to reduce reliability of IP based services that compete with the carriers' other business models. IE VOIP/ IP TV.

—Mark Stickler, ,

Telecom gouges us for this vital service enough without allowing them to gouge us even more. Additionally, it would unfairly hinder new small businesses which would not be able to afford the unnecessarily higher prices from artificially made "premium" access.

—Douglas Barnes, ,

Net neutrality is as important as free speech! Please do not let these large corporations squash the internet to their liking.

—Jon Eidson, Weatherford, TX

Because the government paid to provide the infrastructure to the people and now big business is trying to double tax us for arbitrary fees. Internet fast lanes have no meaning and it is all invented to generate more revenue from a business model built on the backs of tax payers.

—Nicholas Netzer, Highland, IL

Net Neutrality is a free speech issue for me. Telecoms should not get to decide my Internet traffic priority.

—Kersti Markey, Salt Lake City, UT

Internet use and access should not be for only those with money!

—Anne King, Seattle, WA

Because I use the computer a lot.

—Marilyn Brunger, Claremont, CA

I believe in freedom and democracy and this is being eroded.

—John Higgins, ,

Access to information, whatever the source , ought not be governed by wealthy suppliers purchasing access and shutting out competitors.

—Christopher Cassidy, ,

Competition and innovation.

—TJ Firebrook, Raleigh, NC

In two words,"democracy" and "equality" for access to what society has decreed as an essential service which is becoming mandatory in order for common citizens to participate in a democracy.

—Peter Follert, ,

For once, please put the interests of the American people before the interests of big business. The two are not synonymous. Not even close.

—Steve Bradley, Greenfield, MA

The reality about freedom of the press is that you do not have freedom of the press unless you own or control a press. With the broadcast media largely controlled by a few large corporate conglomerates, the Internet is the only remaining bastion of freedom of the press. Ending Net Neutrality will give the corporate conglomerates the same control over the Web that it has over broadcast media.

—Roland Buck, Arlington Heights, IL

I don't want the telcos playing games with my service, my small business' service, or my customer's service. These "small fry" depend on an affordable, open internet without having to pay a toll for priority service.

—Jeffrey A. Robbins, Fairbanks, AK

Don't destroy the inter net!!! How can you do this to people all around the world! I just don't get it!!! Who gave you this power??? By the way, my internet is pretty slow as it is.

—Jean McCauley, Tucson, AZ

I want equal access for all. The net has been egalitarian and should remain so. I already resent the lack of more choices for getting the Internet. We invented the Internet and other countries have better and faster Internet than we. I'm also very concerned for the direction this country is going with an elite class building itself with crap like a tiered Internet. Some pay more for a decent speed? No! The elite need no more perks at the expense of the rest of this. It needs to be regulated as a utility.

—Meghan Shepard, Seattle, WA

The rules the FCC makes in the US affect all other countries around the world. If the internet isn't classified as a common carrier, as the utility that it has become, then no amount of "oversight" will prevent companies from exploiting their control over the source of our data flow. You may think you can supervy these companies so everything is "fair" but you can't, especially when the effects hit other countries outside your jurisdiction. Please consider the rest of the world when you make your decision. I urge you to not only classify the internet as common carrier, but also close the loopholes in common carrier status and update it so there are internet specific rules.

—Margaret Hutz, ,

To protect individuals and smaller companies net neutrality must be signed into law. Without net neutrality ISPs can show favor towards specific companies when routing traffic. This can have a detrimental effect on innovation, hurt smaller companies and allow for data discrimination. For example I start up a new web company and get a Comcast internet connection. Down the road a competing web company also has a Comcast connection however this company is owned by Comcast. Comcast favors their web company so they route the traffic so that it has higher performance over my company so I cannot compete. They could also offer different packages to customers to allow better service to specific websites. The current structure of our telecoms represents a monopoly. The telecoms own land lines, cell phone towers, cable, satellite and other entertainment services that either directly or indirectly compete with the internet. This normally would be fair competition however the telecoms are also the ISPs which provide the gateway to the internet. More and more people are cancelling cable and satellite services in favour of online services like netflix. To offset losses and to keep subscribers the telecoms are making internet streaming less attractive with bandwidth caps, extra charges and outdated infrastructure. Due to the telecoms vendetta technology and innovation are struggling to compete on the world stage. The telecoms should be forced to breakup making the ISP portion of their business a completely separate entity. This will ensure that the ISP has nothing to do with the cable/satellite offerings (even phone services some day compete with the internet, skype etc) thus ensuring fair competition.

—Luke Taylor, ,

We do not live in China, or any of the other nations that do not respect individual rights and freedoms. Keep the internet free for every American.

—William D. Prystauk, Easton, PA

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. Please keep the internet neutral.

—Jim Krenz, Canoga Park, CA

Restrictions are completely against any sense of fair trade. The bandwidth belongs to the people.

—Mike Rothstein, New York, NY

The destruction of net neutrality will hurt innovation and make it harder for smaller companies to compete by giving too much power to the large monopolistic companies which already exist.

—Chris, Lehi, UT

Much of the world today is digital - based around technology and the internet. Giving so much power over something so important to modern life to a select group is just a bad idea, and worse, sends the message that we believe that it's okay. A monopoly is never a good thing for consumers, but everything nowadays seems to favour the corporations over the consumers.

—Alex Tam, ,

If you have to ask, I question the validity of this petition, along with human intelligence in general. None of this should be a question.

—Chris Rogers, Los Angeles, CA

Net neutrality will help keep internet access for individual consumers like me reasonably priced. Once ISPs are allowed to charge more to content providers those charges will be passed on to us. Then we will be charge higher rates for faster and in hindered access. Only the ISPs will benefit no consumers .

—Edward Lewis, Santa Fe, NM

It's important because the public didn't get to vote on it, and we don't know the details. So many sites on so many hosts will go down if the price goes up. The FCC should have NO right to do this. It's awful and I have no respect for the FCC now.

—Cameron Howard Voss, Irvine, CA

Because I believe that every human citizen of the United States deserves an equal right to internet access. Otherwise, the more affluent will be allowed a more active community involvement and therefore, privileged status. This goes against core American values. It is a shameful day when the voice of money and privilege is the only counsel utilized by supposed servants of The People (that means all...)

—Judy G Driggers, Mint Hill, NC

Small business, small entrepreneurs, individuals, and the poor all have the same basic access now. Creating a fast lane will create an initial cost hurdle to any start-up that cares to compete. It will squeeze out any ideas that don't have big dollar investors behind them. It's contrary to the free market ideal.

—John Sarsfield, Mount Vernon, OH

Keep it free

—Mona Mulligan, Montclair, NJ

People need to be able to communicate with each other....freely and openly!

—Shellie Correia, ,

The internet is already very profitable - do not get greedy. Telecom giants should be forced to innovate to cut down their costs, not just increase fees for everyone else.

—Julia Chelaru, ,

Because it is.

—Rose Larson, ,

The internet is the most important innovation in history. Please leave it free for the people.

—Cory J Braden, ,

The internet exists outside classes, as much as anything does. Don't change that.

—Mr. Neil Williamson, St Catharines, ON

As a small business we rely on the internet to sell and export our products, things are hard enough in the present economic 'regime' to earn an honest living already. Privileged lobbying rights in order to make exorbitant profits for a few directors and share holders is against the spirit of free market enterprise. If there is ever to be a way forward out of this utter economic mess for ourselves and our children we need to get back to a fair and level form of free market capitalism. Our ancestors left this corrupt and 'class' ridden society for a better life over in the New World. You used to represent a land of hope and opportunity, enshrined in the declaration of independence. Time to take back the moral high ground and stand up once again as a social and economic beacon throughout the world. If you can't what hope is there left in the world! For all of us who do an honest days work for an honest and hard earned wage..... With optimism and hope, Chris Early —Chris Early, ,

I , like everyone else, cannot afford more excessive fees for broadband.

—Bernard Altimas, ,

Criminals!

—David Reid, Colorado Springs, CO

Net neutrality allows freedom of speech, sharing of ideas, entrepreneurship, innovation, competitive markets and holds powerful organisations to account. It must NEVER be stifled by corporate interests and mainstream media groups.

—Stewart Thomas, ,

I use the net to check prices before going to buy something because of limited income. If prices are raised I would not be able to do so. It would cost me more for most things.

—Evert L Hastie Jr, Wichita, KS

The Internet represents a fundamental development in the human experience. net neutrality will keep it from becoming more of a commercial cesspool that it has already become in many respects

—Bradley A Chamness, Cape Girardeau, MO

I'm a physically disabled 80 year old woman, living on Social Security and I depend on the internet for my medical appointments and reports, as well as communication with my family and friends. I already pay Verizon, monthly for my internet access. The internet was originally designed to be open to all and I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality. Why should Big Telecom become richer while I become poorer?

—Patrice Summers, Santa Barbara, CA

The current Net Neutrality is important to me because it is the way I keep tabs on my UN Congresspeople and Government officials. I use it to learn a vast number of things I might never find if my costs were increased or Internet bandwidth were reduced.

—John Grinols, Chaska, MN

No one should be able to use money to limit the sharing of knowledge, it's just that simple.

—Cat Capps, Kenosha, WI

I do not want the rich and powerfull taking away the internet high speed bandwidth from the common people.

—Hernan, ,

I am sure you know that one of the things internet users love most about the internet is net neutrality. Net neutrality is unfortunately not granted in all countries, we all know there are governments which censor content mostly based on political views. Net neutrality allows every website to be treated the same by the ISPs: no website functions faster than the others just because the owner has money to "buy" a faster speed for their website from the ISPs; no websites function slower than others, no websites or content of websites get censored. Basically net neutrality allows all of us to have access to the information we need, without additional fees and without having to wait for a website to load slower than the others. I urge you not to pass any bill which creates a slow lane. It is not what the internet users wish, not what the internet creators had in mind when they created the internet and it is not in your moral rights to do so. Your job is to defend peoples' interests, not the interests of corporations. If people are unsatisfied with the existence of corporations and governments in their current form and want to get organized online in order to put an end to this system based on money and power, it is not the free internet's fault, it is your fault. The slow lane would also put an end to creativity and competitive behavior on the internet. If you are a scientist and have a website about physics, but have no money to pay to the ISP, your website will load slower than the websites sponsored by corporations. This is not competition, this is oligarchy. Whenever people are abused by governments, resistance occurs. If you pass a law favoring the slow lane, we will find a way to circumvent the slow lane, sooner or later. The corporations may have the money, but most of the brain cells belong to the rest of humanity. It doesn't have to be like this. We shouldn't waste our time trying to figure out ways to circumvent your laws and you shouldn't pass laws which are in favor of who pays you the most. The American Congress and Government always accuse other countries of being corrupt, but you have basically legalized corruption by calling it "lobby".

—Ana Matei, ,

The Internet is like a utility and equal access is essential to democracy, capitalism and innovation.

—David Shore, Ossining, NY

Net neutrality is vital for fairness, to take it away is a slippery slope in an already skewed world

—Louise Shiers, ,

The internet is a basic right. Do not allow corporate greed to taint the last bastion of freedom

—Patrick Cooke, ,

Besides freedom of expression and the ability to freely communicate with others the world over, one need only look at the wealth and jobs that have been created largely because of a free and open internet. Please do not interfere with and stifle innovation by limiting the internet in the interest of a few large corporations whose only interest is they're own.

—Denis Polsom, ,

Internet Neutrality is important to me and everyone in my family for every day life. The children use it for home work and general up to date information> My wife and I use it for work and any information we need with a priority on most recent information or information not yet published. All consumer goods now offer a website to read a manual or to get technical assistance and few offer a hard copy of anything because of this. So without internet freedom we would be limited to what we could accomplish in our everyday lives not to mention what we may seek as entertainment.

—Tim Newby, ,

Stop letting corporations make decisions that usurp the rights of the citizens of this nation. If not for the people who support them, they would not exist. Leave my internet access as it was meant to be.

—Betty Eastham, Fort Pierce, FL

Losing Net Neutrality is the first step on a slippery slope to outright censorship and full corporate control. As it stands you and most people may not see it that way, but actions such as these lay the groundwork for a dangerous future for the consumer.

—Mr. Cam Brown, Winston-Salem, NC

Net neutral is about keeping the information age free, its important that I can access and share my music across multiple websites without tolls being imposed on my everyday use. Its important for those of us who want to choose if we are advertised to by companies and its important that my music, websites and media are accessible at the same level as major record labels and major advertisers. The fact that major social sites already stifle small business and content goes to show that culture and communities suffer when tolls are imposed.

—Vitus Wight, ,

I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality. Put a stop to this greed for profit sickness that that blights the people.

—John, ,

This might just be the most important "free speech" versus technology and corporate greed "case" of this generation. Please act responsibly.

—Steve Doerr, Alexandria, VA

The monopoly broadband carriers have been suppressing competition in their markets, including even potential future competition by municipalities who are not served or are underserved by the incumbents. This is because we do not have true common-carrier net neutrality. The 1996 Telecoms Act was promoted as a means to bring broadband across America, but the incumbents did not keep their promises. It is time we set things straight for all Americans, especially those who have mediocre third-world service despite the incumbent carriers' huge profitability and monopoly status in their respective markets.

—Robert Spector, Somerset, NJ

Keep the internet neutral for every citizen and do not hand it over to an Oligopoly starring Verizon, Comcast and AT&T who will raise prices and lower service to the average American. Shame on you if you let this happen FCC.

—Craig Smith, Chicago, IL

Freedom of expression insures freedom!

—Rusty Simpson, Baltimore, MD

The neutral net is changing the world for the better. Don't ruin such an amazingly good thing!

—Robert Nelson, Salt Lake City, UT

The internet provides access all types of content. No one should have better, faster access because they have more money. Likewise, no provider should be allowed to regulate content access/speed based on ability to pay or relationship with the provider.

—Douglas Stiebler, Albuquerque, NM

Common carriage fosters innovation and investment ! FCC, Please don't allow big Telecom to charge steep tools for premium access !

—Paulo Avelar, Redmond, WA

We count on you to be For the people not the corporations.

—Michele Temple, Woodside, NY

Net neutrality is essential for the free exchange of ideas worldwide, which is a guarantor of democracy in the Western world, and an impetus for it in places that have yet to embrace democracy.

—Valerie Davis, ,

Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers. Charging steep tolls for premium access would slow down services for those who can't afford the new fees.

—Scott Stauter, Mountain View, CA

internet providers should provide access to the internet. that's it. allowing them to decide who can go where based on how much that individual, organization, etc is willing to pay them is wrong. any content that is freely available on the internet should be accessible by all equally.

—Frances Murray, ,

The 'Net is our 21st Century Commons! Don't deny our gift of civility!

—John S. Sonin, Juneau, AK

It is the last bastion of freedom of speech and sharing of ideas. If America plans on remaining at the top, becoming a place that blocks ideas it not the way to do it.

—Paul Shenton, ,

The Internet belongs to the Taxpayer!

—Werner Dillenburger, Lakewood, WA

The internet is our most important resource. We must protect it.

—Chris McLeod, ,

EQUALITY and PRIVACY!

—Patricia Diaz, ,

Access to the internet should be everybody's right.

—Mariann McCornack, Warren, MI

Don't mess with net neutrality!

—Lee Thompson, ,

It is time to regulate the internet as the public utility it is.

—Carlton Russell, Anchorage, AK

US Government... best government corporations can buy!

—Bruce Johnson, Carson City, NV

Access to the internet should not be controlled by big business interests hoping to make a profit from those willing to pay for what should be equal and balanced access for all. No one owns the internet!

—Wendy Adler, Santa Fe, NM

To protect freedom of expression.

—Ronald Pollack, Saint Louis, MO

Don't allow "deep pockets" to control the internet as the consumer will become major losers

—Henry Bartlet, ,

Net Neutrality is foundational to Internet free speech and democracy.

—Ian Gartshore, ,

Keeping the whole of the internet on a level playing field allows all kinds of new ideas to grow and flourish without fear of being stomped out by bigger companies abusing regulations made to favour them.

—Robert Tennant, ,

We all need equal access!!!!

—Noreen, Portland, OR

I know I won't be able to afford the fast lane, and my ability to use the internet for information, study, and so on, will be vastly limited. I'm working on a book that entails research. This will impact my ability to do that research in any kind of real way. The internet has become a public utility. It needs to be classed as such and kept neutral, not sold to corporations such as Comcast. Imagine if you could only get electricity at certain times of day, and then only in certain amounts, so that you couldn't have lights and stove on at the same time. This is similar. The internet is not only for entertainment as the Arab Spring showed us. We must protect its open nature for ourselves and for future generations, and not let money and profits drive what will amount to as censorship.

—Fionna Bright, Fort Collins, CO

FAST & FREE

—Jonathan ROWLAND, Phillipsburg, NJ

The internet may be the last utility left in this country that treats ALL users equally rather than giving preference to those who can pay more than others.

—Ms. Anna Myerson, Camden, ME

A free and open internet is important to a healthy democracy.

—Grant Marshall, ,

A First Class postage stamp, placed on a letter, provides the sender of that letter the same level of service, irregardless of the socioeconomic status of the sender. The Internet should be regarded in the same way. People can purchase varying levels of content; that is fair. The backbone speeds of the Internet should not be throttled/increased to lower/speed up the service, depending on the end user's willingness/ability to pay.

To Big Telecoms, this puts them on an equal level with the casinos of Las Vegas... THE HOUSE ALWAYS WINS!

—Michael Flaherty, ,

We deserve privacy!

—Dean Szczepkowski, Fort Wayne, IN

I already pay $60 a month just for internet access. If corporations are allowed to piecemeal access like they get to do with television, I won't be able to afford access any longer. I can live without television, but it need internet access for my job and for school! The internet is a necessary utility!

—Connie J Crew, Lansing, MI

The Internet is one of the greatest inventions of the modern era, and it has shaped the 21st century into what it is today. The changes in the past 20 years have summed up to greater than centuries of progress, all thanks to the Internet. The Common Carrier proposal is one that has worked in the past for other services, so it stands to reason that the Internet will benefit from it as well. With the classification of the Internet as a Common Carrier, we will be opening thousands of new doors for ourselves as well as future generations to help innovate and better our global, interconnected community. Thank you so much for taking the time to read this.

—Patrick, Kissimmee, FL

as an artist I need to be equal with large companies

—Dennis Heley, Fennville, MI

Net neutrality is one of the most important things for the freedom of the world. Please take a stand and keep the internet free! Thanks!

—John Lies, Scottsdale, AZ

You can't have 'fast lanes' without there being a 'slow lane,' - by the very definition. This is common sense. The USA already lags pitifully in internet infrastructure.

—Michael McDermott, Clifton Park, NY

The impact and importance of the Internet is bound profound, and is perhaps human kind's greatest invention. This innovation has worked because of it's openness and accessibility. By allowing ISPs to prioritize speed related to amount of money paid by people or companies I believe, as well as many other people and companies believe, that you will be breaking this innovation. Please re-classify ISPs as common carriers?

—David Ruch, Brooklyn, NY

It's truly the last bastion of free speech left. It is the great equalizer in terms of knowledge. With it, ideas can truly flourish to their maximum potential. Never in the history of humankind has one medium been able to level the playing field so well.

—Kelvin Wilson, Fort Walton Beach, FL

Politicians and lobbyists for big business only have nefarious, selfish interests in mind. You're making the world a terrible place to live for your children and their children.

—Steven Kennett, ,

It is a moral issue. The inequities in our society are crippling our society. Let's not add one more inequity.

—Mary Ellen Gonzales, Santa Fe, NM

We all live on the net anymore. It is important that all the content we use and interact with is freely available without further monetary censorship by the ISP crowd. Fast/slow would work if broadband were available in a free market place, but virtually all ISP's offer broadband in a monopolistic market place where there is no competition in most communities. This is the same model that water and gas utilities use and they are heavily regulated to prevent the destruction of cities and towns by overly greedy companies. Either the Internet must be made available in a market place or the ISP's must be regulated as utilities.

—Michael Forster, Portland, OR

The benefit should be a public utility equally available to all as open communication is critical to support of democracy where government is supposed to be by and for the people. That generates a NEED for the people to have open and effective access to information. DR. SHARRI HARWICK Please do the right thing for our people.

—Sharri Harwick, Shawnee, KS

I like having unfiltered access to information. I want more freedom and transparency on the internet. Thank you.

—Scott Bosse, Williams, OR

corporate control equals oppression!

—Annabelle Singleton, ,

I need the Net to work with my doc's on my rare disease, to keep up with friends as I am too I'll to have them over, to research cures and medications. Please keep the Net neutral! Thanks for reading my note.

—Colette Clarke, Austin, TX

First the ISPs didn't want to be responsible for content, now they want to prioritize content?!?! They can't have it both ways.

—Steve Claassen, Auberry, CA

The internet as an even playing field is what allows for the diffussal of new ideas in an efficient manner, and an ability to innovate.

—Ahad Baig, ,

It's important to continue innovation. Ending net neutrality gives too much power to telecom companies and will pass on too much cost to consumers.

—Andre Blair, Windsor, CT

It's an issue of free and open expression.

—Garry Ryan, ,

When i first read about the internet and how it was going to be available at libraries, i thought wow this is great. Just like a public library, all should have equal access to the internet. I do not believe that one's internet speed should be based on whether or the link you are accessing has paid for a faster speed or to slow your speeds down on purpose. This is increasingly frustrating for low income families or municipalities who can only get one type of internet service in their area. The only service we can get in our area is Comcast. They already have cornered the market and they are a monopoly. The internet should be classified as a utility just like electric or phone.

—Sharon Harrill, Columbus, NJ

The Internet has become an essential part of free speech!

—Jeff Wells, San Diego, CA

Net Neutrality is absolutely essential to ensure the continued drive towards future innovations. The internet is owned by everyone, not just big corporations and everyone deserves equal treatment.

—Ryan Matte, ,

We need to fight fascism!

—Sebastian Natera, Brooklyn, NY

The Internet is critical to many people on a daily basis, this will make life a lot harder for many and destroys the key principle of net neutrality and equality online.

—H Dhinsa, ,

If net neutrality were to go away, my favorite online communities and the sites I use to express myself may go away with it. That's why it is vital that it be maintained.

—Andrew H. Nielsen, Blair, NE

Don't sell out like the Supreme Court has with their recent proclamations.

—Michael Halloran, Salem, OR

Please don't let the Internet be destroyed. It's too important.

—Daniel Clough, ,

The Internet is amazing primarily because it is a ubiquitous meritocracy, which wouldn't be possible without net neutrality.

—Benjamin Schnur, Chicago, IL

The internet has become a common utility, and a staple. If the cost changes for the majority it will hurt businesses over time. Don't penalize the consumer now for short term earnings from big businesses.

—Daniel Menafro, Asbury Park, NJ

Net Neutrality is important to me because it represents a cornerstone of freedom and democracy where every person can freely express themselves. It also makes it possible for all individuals, the world over, to have access to information, free on-line, that is the equivalent of one of the largest and best equipped libraries in the world. Access to this information provides an avenue to freely discuss with others the future direction of this world we live in and provides individuals and groups to share the "truth" about what is going on in the world, something that corporations and governments often try to silence. Net Neutrality is becoming a corner stone of justice and the protection of human rights of individuals and groups, the less powerful in society, giving them a voice to stand on equal footing with the most powerful corporate and government forces in the world.

—William Finseth, ,

The internet is the final frontier in free speech and free expression. We cannot afford to let corporations put a strangle hold on the voice of the people. We will not accept your regulations. The internet will remain a level playing field to all.

—Isaiah Mueller, Copiague, NY

Keep net neutrality

—Diego, Rancho Cucamonga, CA

i believe it's your first amendment, as soon as money becomes the focus, freedom of speech is no longer relative. j.xo

—Mr. J Dinn, burlington, ON

We must have a open Internet so everyone can be heard and not just one particular agenda.

—Jere Wilkerson, Cambria, CA

The internet helps provide freedom of information to everyone. This should not be governed by a person's earnings but by their yearnings.

—Tristan Colonna, Eau Claire, WI

I don't want the internet to be an object of commercialization. The internet is a place where we can choose to be who ever we want and talk about what ever we want. The internet has given opportunity to people to experiment and take stride in different ways. By setting up a slow lane, it will hinder the growth of entrepreneurs and freedom of speech.

—Pilseung Chung, ,

Free Speech, Free Will, Free Countries are we not?

—Rob, ,

A free and equal access Internet is necessary for communications between many groups. The particular place where this has had greatest impact is with very small minorities and these are precisely the groups that will be most harmed by a multi-tier internet. These groups have flourished under a free internet in a way that would not be possible over any other medium and to the make this less acceasible is to strike directly against minorities. Such groups almost definitinally have fewer resources and could not access high-price tiers of internet service.

—Jake Ackeral, ,

We don't need or want the same corporate largess that hurt thousands of Americans by causing an economic firestorm dictating how we access the internet. For once, look beyond the corporate schemes that are devised to make them more money and help the "little guy." Two speeds of internet will not help us. It is flawed thinking and another example of why so few have any faith left in our government.

—Laura G. Jones-Bedel, San Diego, CA

My Internet use is as important as the Internet use by large corporations.

—John Hunter, Penn Yan, NY

I use the internet access, which I use personally but also for work on a near continuous basis. So much is being said about income inequality: a two tiered internet system will only make it harder for entrepreneurs and those struggling to build business with relatively little to invest more difficult. The internet shuld be considered a utility, i.e. everyone needs it and the price of access should be democratic in both cost and the level of service provided.

—Stacy Zamudio PhD, Maplewood, NJ

Fuck Net Neutrality, Fuck Censorship

—Wilson Koder, ,

The internet is a world wide resource, don't allow a few private companies to diminish this resource for everyone by creating a new profit model that only benefits them and people who have more than enough money to not need the "fast lane" they're trying to create that will surely take away resources from the regular internet. It will eventually shift away from a freely open and available system to one that requires more money from everyone, not just the "fast lane" users, but also from the people who don't use it because these companies will find a way to raise prices on normal users too or deny them access to content based on their internet speed.

—Mr. Marcus Jones, Bronx, NY

Because the little guys need to know that one day they might be able to make it big. Because it's only fair.

—Jessica Rose Marcotte, ,

I need an open internet in order to do research. Don't mess with something that is so critical to learning.

—Eileen Grant, Tempe, AZ

I believe net neutrality promotes innovation and investment. Conversely, allowing Big Telecom to charge high prices drives down investment and keeps small businesses and private people at an unfair disadvantage.

—Donna McCarthy, Palmyra, VA

The airwaves including cable fiber media is public domain and should only remain equally. Available for all

—Mr. Jeffrey Davis, Canyon Country, CA

No. Just, 'No'. OK?

—John Hannon, ,

In the early 90's I developed software called SmartFolders, the first of it's kind, an Object Manager for Windows. Microsoft patented it and worse internal e-mails showed they wanted to "sec someone on him" My attorney in Thompson v Microsoft never told me he knew Ballmer and violated a number of other rules including calling up witnesses asking them to convince me, that I had no chance; yet he told and Oakland County Judge I did have a decent chance. Because I am an innovative developer with some minor health issues who can barley afford a laptop, software and connection; this will further give me challenges in competing against those corps. with smutty developers who work on ideas of their own, then see another idea (through "Partners in Innovation" :-/ and include those ideas also.

—Robert Thompson, Clawson, MI

We paid for it!

—Robert Eckel, Southampton, PA

It's the line in the sand, the place to start to take back what corporate America is trying to take control of that they have no right to exert control over.

—Jeffrey A. Coleman, Palmetto, FL

The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality!

—Karen Bateman, ,

Without an affordable internet, my computer is dead. There is no reason to even own one. Without it, my low income life returns to ignorance and hope for a better life dies with my access to usable information. Without hope, my life becomes dysfunctional, I may even become a danger to society.

—Thomas Daniel Smith, Columbus, IN

A free world needs to be able to communicate freely.

—John Kernan, ,

Because it is fair. Why should the big internet carriers have it all their own way.

—Ken Bickerton, ,

I have the same rights as the broad band people & deserve the same access to the Internet Do Not Allow This since we are all equal!

—Bob Hudson, ,

Please don't let you go on the wrong path pushed by the lobbying power of the big companies. You should protect us, the private users all over the world!

—Jan Derk Boerma, ,

Dear Chairman, I have experienced the frustration of using less than optimal equipment to access the internet and have wasted more time than I care to think about waiting for downloads, etc. So, I have paid for upgrades to provide the best and fastest service I can. If some large corporations are now going to use up all the fastest bandwidths, my investment in new equipment will have been wasted. That would not be fair. I believe everyone should have access to the same service. Thank you for your consideration.

—Mary Kosmark, Brooklyn, NY

From a rural area in Ireland, where internet has only recently come along, and is still in need of development (averaging 70kb/s download speed) your new laws would simply destroy half the world wide web to areas like mine.

—Connor, ,

Don't take my internet away and give it to private corporations!

—James Myers, Indianapolis, IN

The net started as free and open. It should remain that way. Last public forum.

—John D David, Houston, TX

I don't want to have second class status on the internet.

—Johann Seitz, Cheshire, CT

i use it & i want it kept of spying by the government it kept —Salvatore J. Cento, brooklyn, NY

The net is much like a library and should be free for all to use it. Don't make it a right of only those who have money!

—D C, Eugene, OR

It's only right not to give in to the greedy and the rich. You're there to protect the PEOPLE of this land, not corporations.

—Barbara Haener, Chesterfield, VA

It's crucial for volunteer organizations that are trying to do good work and stay afloat financially.

—Carol Dodson, elgin, SC

Giving ISPs monopoly power over the Internet will destroy consumer and small website ability to affect Internet accessibility.

—Monica Odani, Lomita, CA

Anything less than complete net neutrality is a corporate takeover of a public utility. Our FCC and government should represent the interests of the people over the financial incentives of big corporations.

—Gary Hennemuth, San Francisco, CA

i do not want to have to pay more to inform and educate myself than i already do. with taxes, fees, and surcharges, our internet is already more expensive and slower than many other countries less developed than we are.

—Mary C Grimaldo, garland, TX

The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress.

—Jaspal Marwah, ,

It's repugnant moral injustice for internet providers to peek into my data packets, packets that I use to interact with others online. It's doubly wrong for them to use this spying to prioritize my online interactions. It would be a massive step back if net neutrality is crucified like this.
—James Koval, Alameda, CA

This is one of the key underpinnings of our democracy
—Barbara Bennett, Boulder, CO

I only have one option for high speed internet, which I already pay $74 a month to access. The internet is not reliable but I need it for work, and the only other options are slower speeds. I cannot work effectively if I have to wait longer for the websites I use to load.
—April Paris, Oklahoma City, OK

Net Neutrality is important in that it affords everybody equal opportunity and access to the net. Creating a "cast system" where wealthy corporations and individuals have significant advantage is wrong and must be avoided. Let all of us continue to have equal access and opportunity to the net.
—Anthony Scarfone, Phoenixville, PA

It's already too late to do what the telecoms want. The internet has already become too much a part of American culture for anyone to tolerate the creation of "fast lanes." Any attempt to take this direction is foredoomed.
—Ken Roberts, Aurora, CO

Free non-corporate speech
—Robert Lederman, Rutherford, NJ

it mans freedom, not being controlled by big corporations who has money. This is more important than life itself!!!
—Sam Chen, Georgetown, TX

WE THE PEOPLE FIRST AND FOREMOST , NOT LARGE NON TAX PAYING CORPORATIONS !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !
—Mark Schwiebert, lakewood, NJ

Greed and power has no business in our internet access. Big business makes enough money off of this service as it is.
—A Moe, Portland, OR

Don't meddle in net neutrality.
—Andre Laurion, ,

Our problem with campaign financing did not begin with Citizens United and McCutcheon supreme court rulings. For the last 30 plus years, special interest has gradually taken bipartisan control of our nations Congress. With the exception of the committee that oversees the VA, special interest has been party to every Congressional committee, bribing Congress members to shape legislation to favor special interest. Special interest has now taken control of the Supreme Court. Do not let special interest control freedom to communicate using the internet.
—William Roberson, Manchester, TN

Because it creates a neutral playing field for All!!!
—K Eggers, Addy, WA

Equality is a primary human value that should be guaranteed.
—Frank Heuijmans, ,

I'm already paying more here in the US for a worse service than most of the developed world enjoys. I find it appalling that we should even consider slowing down the internet even more for private individuals and small companies that cannot afford to pay premium prices. Wake up, and move into the twenty first century!

—Alan Jenkin, Huntsville, TX

I need neutral access to all information.

—Charles Edwin Griffin III, Harbor City, CA

The Internet must remain open and free!! This is vitally important for free speech, free press, and free society. Big corporations cannot be allowed to funnel, limit, dictate, or in any other way influence what information the American people access -- or how or when -- at any time! Please keep our great nation great and protect freedom of press and speech and free knowledge. -Amber

—Amber Allen, Rochester, MN

The internet is the only true bastion of free speech and equality. Taking unnecessary steps to favor the already deep pockets of major corporations is a slap in the face to people everywhere and is in the best interest of no one. Keep net neutrality alive. It isn't broken.

—Dave Hutton, ,

It gives us guys a chance to rebuild our democracy

—Judith Davidsen, New York, NY

I believe it would be unfair for poor people to not have the same luxuries as wealthier people.

—Joseph Kern, Minneapolis, MN

I'm a pensioner and I need to access the many different web sites without a large fee to view them. I go to militaria, dealticker sites, etc for the specials that are there.

—James Settingington, ,

The internet has become a major source of news and information, and like the press, it must remain free to report without bias.

—Joel Trupin PhD, Marshfield, VT

Stop messing with our lives!!!!!!!!!!

—Daniel A. Miller, Huntsburg, OH

As a creator of independent online media, a level playing field is my only means of creating a sustainable living.

—Tyrel Pinnegar, ,

It's one of the last places where Americans truly have freedom of speech, and I will not stand for big greedy companies who want to take that away from us just so their dumb asses can have a little more pocket change.

—Mason Carlsen, Bainbridge Island, WA

Corporate interests are 2nd to the interests of the majority of all human beings. A corporation does not breathe air as I do, why should it be raised above me?

—Trai Thomas, Minneapolis, MN

As a Senior Citizen, I feel losing Net Neutrality would place an unfair monetary burden on me. By having to pay higher fees to use the same product I have now, would be unfair to all Seniors. The INTERNET is for all, not just for the rich to make a profit at the expense of everyone else. Keep Net Neutrality.

—Tim Slade, Oreana, IL

Dear FCC, the internet, by its very nature thanks to the likes of emails and social media, is a form of telecommunications. People use computers, smartphones and the like to communicate with others across the entire world; putting in expensive toll booths is to cut down on communication, which could go catastrophically bad. Don't do this; for the sake of the worldwide community that uses the internet, for the sake of giving everyone besides big corporations a chance for once, and for the sake of free speech itself. Just do the right thing and reclassify service providers as "common carriers". Thank you.

—Jim McGrath, ,

Don't allow Big Telecom to charge steep tolls for premium access and block or slow down websites and services that can't afford the new fees.

—Andrea Lee, ,

Any corporation or business should get the same access any one does. They do not own it.

—Michael Redfern, Salem, MA

The internet is free for all and should stay free

—Birgitte Ring, ,

Freedom of speech is our fought for right !

—JC Bower, Sumner, WA

All traffic should be allowed the same priority. Access to content shouldn't be based on who is able to pay more.

—Carlos Barba, ,

Freedom of Expression.

—Dan Griffin, ,

IT' OLIGARCY VS DEMOCRACY AGAIN. NET NEUTRALITY IS ONE WAY TO SAVE DEMOCRACY. DO YOU CARE?

—Sharon Rieke, Florence, OR

Net Neutrality offers a level playing field to companies big and small to operate and innovate on the web. If Net Neutrality did not exist 10 years ago, there would be no Google, no Facebook, no Netflix because they would not have had the capital to compete and have to pay ridiculous tolls to have their traffic prioritized.

—Jose Paradis, Peabody, MA

It makes the internet a good thing for everyone

—Cynthia Carter, Seattle, WA

The internet is the future of our generation and the future to access all types of information that relates to our lives, our country and our world. Without this, we would essentially be repeating what happened in the Dark Ages where mass amounts of information was "censored" by being banned and/or destroyed by those in power and those that controlled the laws. Which in this example is the big telecom companies.

—Kevin Vose Landivar, ,

I want object reporting without interference by the Harper government.

—John Donovan, ,

Because restrictions on information and communication is the beginning of despotism. Those who would control such things fancy themselves our masters.

—, Walla Walla, WA

No privileges to big corporations that are not available to each and everyone equally.

—Thomas Mansheim, Jersey City, NJ

Your support is just so valuable.

—Cort Brumfield, Portland, OR

The internet is one of the few places people can freely express themselves. Without net neutrality, the only kind of expression allowed will be the one corporations like.

—Jason N., miami, FL

We don't need something unnecessary that also benefits big business and hurts the individual.

—Scott Davis, Portland, OR

Because the internet for some, particularly those living under oppressive regimes is a lifeline to inform the world and be informed by the world. Additionally, in poorer countries or those from poorer backgrounds it is a tool for education and entrepreneurship the opens the door to a better life. Finally, because of its scope and reach it allows everyone with a good idea or creation to reach as large an audience as possible, allowing concepts that could enrich millions of peoples lives to be disseminated quickly and easily, where only 15 years ago the same ideas or inventions may never have seen the light of day. To create a two tiered internet would effectively rule out the vast majority of the worlds population from contributing to the world and it's economy in favour of a profit for a few telecommunications companies. A profit, it must be pointed out to the staunchest of supporters of corporation, which would in the long term contribute an infinitesimally small amount to the world economy when compared to the potential contribution of the thousands of internet based company start ups that would be scuppered at the first hurdle. So before believing that this is some ideological argument between hippy dippy everything should be free to the people socialists and pragmatic and logical capitalists, imagine a world where google, yahoo, Amazon, Facebook, Twitter etc were unable to grow in the relatively us encumbered manner they have. Think about it like this and you realise from any perspective this is a bad idea. Bad for social mobility, bad for the fight against ignorance, bad for the spreading of knowledge and most importantly of all bad for the future growth of world economies.

—Michael Longley, ,

The Net belongs to everyone, and trying to limit access to sites because someone says so is akin to censorship. It's to prevent information to spread, to curb free speech.

—Francisco Ralha, ,

Defend common carriers and the status quo. Special interest groups should be stopped!

—O Roman, ,

Because it is the whole reason why the internet is the internet!

—Christopher Rivera, Bronx, NY

The internet is for everyone....not just the big companies or the rich.....information should be for everyone on the same level

—T Forhan, ,

We cannot prosper as a society if opportunities are more and more owned by only those who have deep pockets. Innovation can come from the ground up, in fact it has to, and competition is the best thing for us. If regular people are crippled by their lack of access to a lot of money we will only hurt ourselves.

—Terence Nathan, ,

My kids go on the Internet regularly for learning and entertainment. Having to access via slower lanes and possible fees may put this access out of our reach. I urge the FCC to keep the Internet to keep the Internet accessible for common folk by reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers under Title II. Thank you.

—Gwen Schauerte, ,

We need to have an unobstructed internet for all. it is the life line of everybody and every nation.

—Arvind Rangan, Houston, TX

The Internet is a public utility, just like electricity or water, and must be kept available to all citizens. No preferences should be given to higher volume or corporate interests. Equal access for all individuals must be protected.

—Stuart Russell, Concord, NH

I own a small Internet (e-commerce) business, and paying extra fees for band-width privileges could kill it.

—Aere Greenway, Salt Lake City, UT

Equal access should be available to all, not just to those who can afford to pay for it.

—Dianne Wendt, Wheeling, IL

What price freedom of speech? From America to Zanzibar. Why must large corporations dictate the speed of our communications. Could they say no access today we have dedicated x hours to commercial traffic?

—Alan Parker, ,

There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Daniel Pansieri, , level playing feild

—Arnie Carr, ,

Keep something in this country a truly equal opportunity endeavor.

—Mike Bell, Strongsville, OH

As a senior citizen who uses the internet to shop and pay bills its important to keep the internet open for all. If the republicans in congress don't stop sitting around playing games and do their job without the internet I will be come non existent. So please don't ruin something people need so much.

—Bill Ridgeway, Scranton, PA

The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress.

—Karl M. Levin, Canoga Park, CA

I find the idea of fast-lane/slow-lane repugnant. This scheme lets big Telecom off the hook. They want to maintain hugely profitable services while at the same time failing to upgrade their infrastructure. Canadians and Americans deserve better than this. We already lag far behind many other jurisdictions in terms of available speeds and bandwidth. Lagging behind really isn't an option, is it? In 2014? Do the right thing and reject this scam. Respectfully,

—Bruce McKenzie, ,

The internet is crucial to life now. It is not a luxury, it should not be dependent upon those whose only goal is to make as much money as possible, the public be damned.

—Brandon Gregg, Burlingame, CA

Because it's important for the internet not to be policed by big media companies who want to restrict us. It's like a tobacco company wanting to police hospitals for people using their products.

—Sohum, ,

I live in an isolated area of Northern BC, I have no Power or Phone services available to me, and therefore rely solely on the internet for outside communication. I use the internet for phone communication, and it is paramount that the speeds be as high as possible, or it is almost impossible to carry on a phone call. I rely on my internet for emergency calling as well, mine and my wife's live literally depends on a fast internet connection. Please do not allow the big telecom companies to affect people like me, who require an open, fast and reasonably priced internet. Thanks, Kevin

—Kevin Mooney, ,

I must admit, it's very important for me and family members the NEUTRALITY OF THE NET.

—Benjamin Ricardo, Los Angeles, CA

An open internet fosters innovation in business, technology and social welfare. Let's not limit that innovation with a tiered system that blocks the intellectual resources of our nation.

—Sean Kohnen, Los Angeles, CA

Because all business of every size and consumers and internet users the world over deserve a fair shot. As a small business owner that uses the internet for every step of his work, Net Neutrality is essential to meeting my everyday demands. Don't ruin my business and thousands more in the US by playing favorites with mega-corporations. No Pay-to-Play!

—Eric Young, Downingtown, PA

The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Joe Buhowsky, San Ramon, CA

I think it is important to ALL of us!

—Mrs. Karen Raccio, Maple Grove, MN

This proposal is simply too cost prohibitive for most consumers. Even though Corporations are charging too much money for goods (especially since 2013), employers have failed to increase wages. Thus, the average worker won't be able to continue to afford even the basics. Instead, wages must be increased or prices of goods need to decrease. It is wrong and shameful for you to continually pick-pocket the American public, in particular the working poor/class.

—, Peoria, AZ

Freedom of speech is the one of the biggest reasons for the internet to exist. And this freedom of speech can not have limits or price to it.

—Muzammil Shaikh, ,

As a small business owner I am concerned that I would not be able to compete with the big guys and their deep pockets. This slow lane would seriously inhibit small businesses.

—James Priester, Denver, CO

Freedom is the foundation of the free flow of ideas. The net is a world-wide public highway open to all... keep it!

—Jenny Fisher, Los Angeles, CA

The US sets an example for the rest of the world - and the freedom of information is a vital necessity if this world is to thrive. Yes, pay for services attached to access, but don't allow them to start charging for the speed of your access. Communications and data costs are penny's to the Gigabyte, in real terms - the fact that they want to start gauging the consumer should be denied, vehemently, as it goes against the will of the people!

—Michael Hamm, ,

The pursuit of knowledge and truth is not a service that should be governed by an ability to pay basis. Allowing such a system to come into existence will pave the road for corporate tyranny. Do not allow legislation that will let this happen it would be just as much of a human rights violation as stopping people from learning to read. Keep Net Neutrality viable and keep the internet fair and just. Anything else makes a mockery of the democracy this country is supposed to be.

—Kerri Coyne, Easthampton, MA

The majority should decide what the 1% can do. Democracy is about the will of the majority, not the will of the rich.

—Jean-Francois Berube, ,

I don't get much money on my pension and could not afford higher fees for a slower internet. The internet is a tool i use for all my banking and paying bills also just for my entertainment, Slower internet would take all this away from me.

—Terry Jacques, ,

The net was developed by taxpayers dollars. Please don't give it away to corporate interests that do not have ALL people's interests in mind.

—Alan Myerson, Culver City, CA

Net Neutrality is important to me because it would allow control and freedom for all consumers to be able to use the internet without exorbitant price increases and use of websites and apps without hindrance.

—Danielle Henon, Philadelphia, PA

I want to know by what right will these companies take control and not only decide who and when for internet users transmissions by even CHARGE for it? Who will receive this money? What will they do with it? Surely what was a public right will not become a source of revenue for a private company?

—Miriam Green, Chicago, IL

We are seniors living on a fixed income, which shrinks each year as our costs for utilities rise. We also live in a small rural town with limited internet access. We need real Net Neutrality to maintain the current level playing field for all internet users.

—Veronica Z, Florence, OR

We The People, support an "Open Internet". Do not take this away from us. Do not interfere with our Freedom of Expression.

—Jean Bailey, Seattle, WA

Money should not control the internet.

—Joann H Miehl, Loysville, PA

Net Neutrality is important to me
—Thomas Jablonka, Tucson, AZ

I am disabled. Most of the time, the Internet is my connection to the world.
—Chris Abbey, Medford, OR

A free internet is as important as free speech and the needs of association and expression in truly democratic society. We need to protect Net Neutrality!
—Stephen Johnson, ,

Everybody from small businesses to hobbyist websites, blogs, etc., will be subjected to slow lane blockage at the whim of the big telcom and cable companies. These companies should upgrade their own infrastructures using the gobs of profits they rake in every year. If they spent less money greasing the palms of politicians and current and former cable company lobbyists they would have been able to update their systems! How come second world countries have both faster and less expensive internet than the USA? Corruption and greed is the number one reason! Cut the garbage and make net neutrality happen NOW!!!
—Bill DeFelicio, Seymour, CT

This move will stop free enterprise and equality and ensure that no one has a chance to play in an equal playing field. It supports only big organisations. This will create a monopoly .
—Sarah Bisset, ,

If you do not know the definition of neutrality, I suggest you look up it up for clarification.
—Perry, Chicago, IL

Equal opportunity is a basic American virtue. Net neutrality works toward equalizing opportunity.
—Richard Mavis, Portland, OR

Please don't sink the individual citizen's best interests because BIG MONEY is pushing you to do so. Corporations already command too much influence. PLEASE DON'T BE A PART OF THAT INJUSTICE!
—Kanta Masters, Encinitas, CA

As an internet user of 20 years + I have come to believe Net Neutrality a fundamental necessity to the freedom it provides and its principle of access for all.
—Bernice Roust, ,

Net Neutrality means freedom. To destroy it is to destroy America.
—James Ferrigno, San Francisco, CA

Freedom of speech, freedom of press and freedom of assembly
—Carl Riccitelli, San Francisco, CA

The FCC is not there to merely represent profiteers.
—Laurie MacKenzie, , in a word, it is "freedom" of the press

—Jordan Holtam, Weaverville, NC

There can be no freedom if you favor one product over another. Net neutrality is important for protecting free speech, innovation, and healthy competition. Don't let something this unjust happen to the world.

—Kyle Krattiger, Porter Ranch, CA

Because more money doesn't make one more free than others. I don't want to have to pay more for the same access we have now. This isn't a turnpike, it's one of the last free places where everyone stands on equal footing.

—Raymond A. Gibson, Hollywood, FL

There have been too many concessions to big business and big money interests. The internet cannot be privatized to ANY degree. It must remain open and neutral for the use of all without privileged access for anyone! Thank you.

—Kathryn Seib Vargas, Ossining, NY

Net Neutrality allows anyone, regardless of economic class, to become educated, freely express ideas & innovate -- things that allow anyone with talent who's willing to work to rise higher economically. Plus these freedoms are at the core of the U.S. Constitution. Computers & mobile technology are core essential tools in today's society; so free & equal access to the internet is essential for everyone. This is why the FCC should take a constitutional stand by reclassifying the internet as a Public Utility.

—Catherine Palma, Davis, CA

We paid for the internet development and implementation, who gives them the right to dominate it. Stop it NOW!

—Robert Satler, Marseilles, IL

Net neutrality is vitally important, not only to conduct a small business, but to communicate with family and friends quickly.

—Shinann Earnshaw, Bend, OR

The internet promised to usher in an age of true democracy. This is important for all humanity.

—Paul Mackenzie, ,

The internet has become a de facto public utility. The FCC should classify internet companies as common carriers.

—MSN Mary Strand RN, APRN, Eau Claire, WI

The Internet should be declared a Public Utility. Access should be inexpensive & bandwidth equally distributed. There should be no tinkering to favor BIG Money. We should not favor BIG CABLE with more of a monopoly.

—Pamylle Greinke, Peconic, NY

Free Speech. small business won't have a chance if you sell the internet.

—Patricia Jacobson, Jerome, AZ

As a result of the economic downturn, which is still heavily impacting my state, many use the internet to support their small businesses. It seems totally unfair to allow big businesses, who already have plenty of money, to have priority on the internet over small businesses. If the gov't keeps deciding to support corporations instead of its citizens, it is not serving the people or creating a democratic society. Remember, our government is supposed to be OF, BY AND FOR the people.

—Tera A., Santa Rosa, CA

Free and open only!

—Scott Towsen, Madison, WI

Governments must be fair and neutral. Keep protections from corporate avarice!

—, Duluth, MN

I like freedom

—Jason Trentlyon, New York, NY

You already know why, you're smarter than I am. So the question is why your restricting our freedoms in this way? I'm guessing greed has got ya'll done up good.

—Michelle, ,

I don't want the net run by corporations the the way they control T envision.

—Michael Walker, Jacksonville Beach, FL

Keeping net neutrality promotes free speech and innovation.

—Sultan, ,

So much of everyday life has migrated to the internet, it would be a hopeless loss to squelch the freedom that has created it!

—Robert Cassano, Wayland, NY

Reclassify broadband internet service as a common carrier. It has always been so, de facto. Make it so de jure, and subsequently maintain net neutrality for all.

—Aaron Linder, Saint Louis, MO

Internet is as important as Healthcare for us Canadians! If this goes through, other countries will have to create their own regulations

—Vin Mahesan, ,

Americans pay more and get less than Europeans for most every telecommunications service. Until the telecoms can switch that equation so that we get more and pay less, providing them with another chance to flex their economic might will only disadvantage Americans further. Net neutrality must be a cornerstone of the way forward.

—James McIntosh, Ann Arbor, MI

Ready access to the Web is a necessary, even vital, to my family's daily life. Never mind that those of us who already pay a premium for high speed access will have to pay even more for poorer connections.

—Douglas A. Ames, Plainfield, CT

If the internet is a highway, then some with more money should not be allowed to travel faster. A "Common Carrier" designation will prevent this undemocratic effect.

—John Laird, Kittery Point, ME

This slow lane proposal will stifle innovation and kill jobs. No one wants that.

—Clarke Macbeth, Independence, MO

Net neutrality allows everyone to enjoy using it. people from all over the world can use it and do wonderful things for the world as a result.

—Evelyn Dow, Springfield, ME

The internet is the greatest expression of freedom and of peace and unity that humanity has ever accomplished, and this attack on freedom has no place in the so called 'Land of the Free'.

—Ciaran Lovejoy, ,

We need to have equal access to internet for everyone. As it is internet service is priced high. I don't want to have the ISP being able to dictate what we can see at full speed and what we have to pay extra for.

—Johnny Matos, Orlando, FL

Dear Federal Communications Commission: We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Arthur Hakhverdian, Los Angeles, CA

Please preserve and protect the constitution at all cost!

—Tony, West Palm Beach, FL

THE RICH AND POWERFUL ALREADY CONTROL MY GOVERNMENT, OBVIOUSLY! WE WILL NOT LET THEM TAKE AWAY THE ONLY VOICE THE PEOPLE STILL HAVE, WHICH IS A FREE AND OPEN INTERNET! AND THAT'S WHAT THIS IS REALLY ABOUT, SILENCING THE LAST TRUE VOICE OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE! DO NOT LET THEM!!

—Paul Palla, Waynesboro, PA

Being on limited income, I use the internet for ordering medications, making appointments and banking. It is vital to me and I can't believe greed is what will stop access for many people. Me included. Please look beyond dollar signs and do the right thing for everyone if only because it's the right thing to do.

—Pamela, Ringgold, GA

Please help prevent corporate greed and censorship!

—Patrick Coyne, ,

I am a human being not a corporation.

—Erica Robinson, Houston, TX

Net Neutrality will provide everyone with access, and not allow the 2 or 3 providers to do whatever they choose.

—Barry Cutler, Springfield, PA

The internet belongs to everyone. And everyone should be able to use it openly and freely. Don't segregate the internet because one group thinks they are better than the rest.

—Kristopher Kvenvold, Harvard, MA

Putting ropes and blindfolds on the internet is akin to stepping on free speech. I believe that is the 1st amendment to the US constitution. Back Off!

—James McLellan, ,

Prevent large corporations and the wealthiest people from limiting access to free internet. This country is EQUAL JUSTICE FOR ALL!

—Suzy Mound, Jerome, AZ

Equal access to the Internet is important to a well-informed citizenry and a well-functioning democracy.

—Jane Jones, Rockwall, TX freedom of communications

—Ron Taillon, Half Moon Bay, CA

I need good and free access to our internet.

—Andrew Somers, Madison, WI small business

—Khalid ahmadzai, ,

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Paul Whiting, Portland, OR

It allows all user to access the full net , with out over extending anyones budget.

—Craig Dearborn, ,

I VALUE MY FREEDOM OF SPEECH!

—Gary Morris, Neskowin, OR

The open nature of the Internet has been crucial to its immense success. Changing the principles of the Internet to favour entrenched, monopolistic telecom companies just adds extra cost and effort to providing services via the Internet, drastically hampering the innovation that is crucial to current and future economic growth. The sort of people who created the Internet - engineers, not telecom lobbyists - should continue to be the authority guiding its operation.

—Joel Crocker, Bethel, ME

Net Neutrality is all about liberty, privacy, freedom of choice and the pursuit of happiness.

—Mark Brewer, Charlotte, NC

FUCK OFF

—, ,

If the Internet is every man's voice, then bandwidth is its volume. Turning down the voices of the less wealthy is tyranny.

—Kevin Wong, ,

So that I can watch my 4K porn without paying premium for it and finding out the website has been blocked.

—Mathieu Landry, ,

Without real Net Neutrality, small independent business people and self-employed contractors like me will be unable to compete with wealthy individuals and companies that can pay fees for better service. Keep the Internet equally available to everyone!

—James Findlay, Los Angeles, CA

The Internet is too vital a tool in student's education particularly never mind in other aspects of our personal lives to create tiers like big business has done with cable and phone service. And by student's I mean from middle school up to thousands of adults continuing their education to advance their careers. It's not about whether we can choose to be online or not (like cable TV). It's about making it a national utility so we are all on a level playing field.

—Vernice, Rockland, MA

Protects First Amendment privileges from corporate control. The Internet is the commons in the 21st century.

—Milton Cruz, Los Angeles, CA

This is important to me because I play video games a lot which uses a lot of bandwidth and when internet is slow, it would take a long time for a game to start or the game won't start at all.

—Tyler, ,

We need a neutral internet to protect the free flow of ideas and enable small organizations to compete with large corporations on a level playing field.

—Scott Wilson, Groton, MA

To preserve true freedom of expression!

—Ken Sparrow, ,

research for school and career. Communicating with friends and family

—Sharyn White, San Pablo, CA

No one should have an advantage over anyone else based on whether they can afford premium access to the internet.

—Janet McKenna, Sacramento, CA

freedom of information

—Bill Liddle, Schenectady, NY

I don't like all these local monopolies. Let ISPs last-mile connections be available to all on equal wholesale terms,

—Stephen Marney, Sarasota, FL

Not paying for a service that again is going to be riddled with law enforcement because the laws are as unethical as the internet's content.

—Martin Latreille, ,

Everyone should have equal access to the internet. Hosts, providers and users. No company should be able to refuse or downgrade service. This is an infrastructure more robust and as important or more important than telephone, highway and television. Businesses would not be lobbying for these changes unless it gave them an unfair advantage or would reward them in profits at a cost to consumers. Please help the U.S. take its place as the pinnacle of internet access compared to the rest of the world instead of turning it over to predators looking to fleece the American public.

—Wayne Counts, Cary, NC

By trying to segregate and split up services on the internet like what one would do on Cable networks, you are taking away what it means to be interconnected. You are destroying the lives of small web publishers, and shoving big services down our throat, some of which we don't want. By doing this, you cause a fight between each industry, and that is not what is needed. You also take away the right to free speech, and freedom of choice, by censoring (and slowing down) websites which you choose not to support. As a developer, who works from home on the internet, I feel that this will hurt my job, and it will hurt the income of many who suffer the same fate from being a small web service. The internet is fine as it is. LEAVE. IT. ALONE!

—Christopher, ,

I don't want profit driven corporations serving as gatekeepers to information from the internet.

—stuart Mork, Seattle, WA

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is obviously the correct thing to do.

—Stephen Robinson, Amherst, MA

There is precious little left in the USA that is not monopolized, bastardized, and corrupted by huge corporations. Give us a break!

—Carole and Larry Geier, Garden City, KS

The interests of the giant corporations are well taken care of in this country. It's time government started looking out for the people it's supposed to be representing. Look out for us!

—Jon Enge, Los Angeles, CA

Net Neutrality keeps free speech free! otherwise, those who cannot afford the fees will be disempowered.

—Annette Guidry, Boise, ID

This benefits corporations not people. Let's for once have it work the other way around. I am so sick of special interests and corporations running this country. Please leave our internet alone.

—Joshua, Cary, NC

Democracy requires learning and communication. We cannot let big business limit these by having a for-purchase "fast lane" internet system.

—Karen DeMoss, New York, NY

Don't sell out our internet to the highest bidder! It should be treated as a public utility, fair and open to all, equally.

—Jennifer Minish, Tucson, AZ

ISP's should provide internet, not decide which sites or services should get more or less bandwidth!

—Steven Maes, ,

A multi-tiered Internet is a not only a threat to free speech but will be a burden to consumers.

—SM Dixon, Mesa, AZ

Net neutrality is essential for the small start-ups to continue to innovate.

—Paul Deeter, Keaau, HI

Internet access has become a mainstream utility, plain and simple. The FCC has a responsibility to keep internet access equal for all users.

—Kristopher Seluga, Milford, CT

Do not make hierarchy out of our source of free information!

—Faith Mishina, Hilo, HI

The majority of people in this country will be adversely affected by losing Net Neutrality. Nonprofit organizations, small businesses, and individuals will feel the hammer of costs that many will not be able to pay. Information access will be limited. The only benefit is for the largest corporations, and they have enough money already.

—Jennifer Yukl, Cedar Rapids, IA

Look at what big money is doing to politics. We need to have a vocal democracy to point out all the wrongdoing.

—Sharon Moss, St. Louis, MO

As a citizen I want unfettered access to news and information at websites of my choosing. I don't want Comcast, Verizon or Time Warner Cable to be able to control my speed of access to sites in any way based on controversial site content or fees paid by site holders. As a small business owner I want potential clients to have the same access to my site as to my big company competitors.

—Susan Terwilliger, Ithaca, NY

Freedom should be important to everyone

—Virginia McGee, Sierra Vista, AZ

So Nazi's cant hijack the country. Without the net MASS media can continue their attempt at dumbing down America. The rest of the world understand we are a Facist Country teetering on collapse. Hitler controlled the media just as you want o control the net. You already have the ABC stations and newspapers. Be happy with that. You Nazi's are not lasting much longer!

—Matt Brinck, Winston Salem, NC

It's the only way to get the truth.

—, ,

Because big corporations have enough power already! Stop this!

—Alexa Belle Ritchie, Wilmington, DE

It is just part of the freedoms that we have come to expect- Freedom of thought, Freedom of Speech- and recently Freedom of Communication via the Internet.

—Julie Drysdale Faletanoa'i, ,

I believe on Democracy and this should be upheld on the Internet

—Kelvyn Guest, ,

Net neutrality has allowed upstarts like YouTube and Netflix to become the household names that they are today. It allowed for Google Docs to become a viable alternative Microsoft Office. Without net neutrality, the incumbents of today are essentially galvanized against any new startups or "disruptive" market changing ideas. I believe that the Internet is the great equalizer, and to impose arbitrary limitations on that democratic approach would be limiting to future innovations. Is it really worth the short-term (monetary, personal) gains that lawmakers can glean from special interest groups? To me, that tradeoff seems shortsighted, handcuffing future generations to a more locked-down version of the information exchange we have enjoyed thus far.

—Nathan Smith, Frisco, TX

The internet is my connection to the world. I'm retired and can't drive. I haven't watched TV in years because it's such a piece of crap anymore. I can barely afford the internet now. Please don't put it into the hands of corporations. They are ruining this country. Don't take away the one place for equality that is left.

—Ms Shari D Farrar, Hackett, AR

People must have access to free & affordable news & knowledge. Corporations will control & filter news to suit their interests - money is their motive. The internet belongs to everyone. It is free speech & the largest open communication service. We all must have affordable access. Protect our freedom!

—Doug Brown, Otis Orchards, WA

Without users your Internet is nothing.

—Marc Piel, Paris, France, TX

It is our democratic right.

—Linda, ,

We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality. Where you try to control others for your own gain (or political agenda) there will be more half of the country that will hold the governing bodies accountable for their actions. Not to mention that he who controls others is no longer in control of themselves (the only person they really can control. We don't live in china or Iran, so stop trying to control us and enforce laws like this behind our backs!!! Soon enough the country will see through all greed, corruption and put responsible and respectful figure heads that are 100% accountable for thier actions!

—Kipp Wiebe, ,

Common carriage has been built over years, it should not be turned into a fast and slow lane for the purpose of profit

—Eddie Lopez, ,

The internet needs to be treated as a utility like power and water. Please don't let big business created a tiered system the supports censorship.

—Al Dempsey, ,

The internet has become the greatest medium for free exchange of views among the peoples of the world, as well as THE common medium for information and entertainment: it is the modern equivalent of a free press. You CANNOT permit it to be controlled for profit by large unaccountable corporations.

—William Langford, ,

Thomas Jefferson correctly said that the public needs to have access to accurate information in order for democracy survive. Net neutrality will preserve that.

—Mike Lyons, Sandy, UT

Please keep your promise and keep the Internet a PUBLIC UTILITY.

—Ro Woodruff, Rancho Cucamonga, CA

Net Neutrality is important to me because it is a method of communication and expression. It is something that all users pay for. Making them pay more to access certain sites is like saying it should cost more to call certain people (not based on their location, but based on their popularity). It's important to me because without it, a small handful of companies will have more power than any company should. It's important because it signifies to me that my government still works FOR me and represents me. It's important because we are a country of wonderful individuals -- not a country of corporations. It's important to me because, as a web developer, the internet IS my livelihood.

—Tina Granzo, Portland, OR

The ability to communicate around the world freely

—George Rayner, ,

Communication technologies are both communal and proprietary: language depends upon transmission, and all people therefore depend on the means created to facilitate communication. To force internet users into "fast" or "slow" lanes is to deny their fundamental right to free speech by discriminating against them on the basis of financial means. One may be poor, but one should not be expected to speak more slowly because of it.

—Shane Lange, ,

A level playing field where all data is treated the same is required in order to allow for innovation.

—Frank Burkhardt, Warner Robins, GA

The Internet is a part of the everyday lives of all Americans. It's the way we communicate with friends and relative, the way we start up new small business, the way we get information, and the way we get news. Don't even think of making slow lanes and fast lanes! Utterly pro-Comcast and anti-the rest of us!

—Judy Chapman, Wheeling, IL

Internet is expensive enough as it is. Your proposed new rules will end up costing us, the consumers more, for a slower connection. Please think about this, isn't it time for someone in govt to do us right for a change??

—George Branigan, Medford, OR

We, the people! Government is supposed to represent and protect the masses, not the elite. Do the right thing for the people.

—Mr. Tom Gallagher, Burlingame, CA

Because Capitalism is a FAILURE and Corporate Capitalism WILL destroy us all. Get with it, you worthless American LOSERS in Congress! Terrorists is what you now are to the REAL WORLD!!!

—Max, ,

Internet should be a public utility and regulated - thus I'd just a money grab and will hurt those less fortunate (the working poor). Everyone already knows how cable tv is a huge ripoff, and now the providers want to to everyone off for internet. The internet has become such a mainstream part of life - much like electricity, running water, trash collection, sewage treatment that it should regulated and not left up to the greedy providers to decide.

—, Washington, DC

Openess

—PE Ruben V. Valdez, El Paso, TX

Internet speeds should be the same for all, not faster for companies that can afford it. Imagine if telemarketing calls were able to get through faster & more often if telemarketers were able to pay for "quicker" telephone lines, and could cut off existing phone conversations.

—Bruce Miller, Forest Hills, NY

Equal Internet for all or only giant corporations will have true access to the Internet.

—Kenneth Carolus, Cincinnati, OH

Why should Big Telecom members be allowed to charge exhorbitant rates that people can't afford. The internet should be for the people, not greedy Internet Giants.

—Stewart Marsh, ,

I rely on the Internet to teach my classes!

—Patricia Garrison, Ellensburg, WA

Net Neutrality is important as it provides everyone with a level playing field not just the privileged ones as always.

—Joe Amorim, ,

Can't afford to pay for fast lanes.

—Edmund Light, Eureka, CA

The internet was developed with our tax dollars. It belongs to the taxpayers, not the tax dodging, politician buying big telecoms. The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Joseph M. Glombiak, Haymarket, VA

1.Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. 2.Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. 3.Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. 4.Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Robert Johnson, ,

This potentially Draconian legislation will do nothing but further cement the world's view of the US as a place where people now have their freedoms eroded with the passing of each and every year.

—Tracee Andrews, ,

We cannot have a vibrant democracy without equal access to what should be a public utility - the Internet. Fast and slow lanes amount to censorship by monied corporate interests. Stop selling our democracy to the highest bidder!

—Cynthia von Hendricks, Albuquerque, NM

Net neutrality is an essential corollary of the right to free speech.

—Steven Williams, ,

The internet should be open and free for EVERYONE! This is just another ploy by Big Telecom to take away more of our freedoms and charge us for what is now free and open for all. Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality. In this economy, most internet users cannot afford added fees. We rely on the FCC to speak for us little guys who have no say. Please save Net Neutrality. If Big Telecom manages to pull this off, it will change the internet forever. Thank you on advance for reading my concerns.

—Lynnley Wilson, Richton Park, IL

Access to information should be open and transparent, with no restrictions. Would libraries charge certain authors or publishers more to put their publications in their halls? It's the same principle. Don't be greedy dicks.

—Daniel Espana, Haltom City, TX

It is important that everyone have access to the Internet. It does not need to be available to just those that can afford it!

—Arlene Tilly, Grand Rapids, MI

I believe the internet should be a cheap, fast resource for everyone to enjoy.

—Arito Tavares, ,

Net Neutrality is intrinsic in a Democracy.

—Alexander Mackenzie, ,

For the same reasons that it is important to everyone else! Freedom, freedom, freedom (I am a patriot!).

—Connie Bosley, Laredo, TX

Net neutrality is crucial for the development of the human race! And you want ti sell it to the corporations that already make billions on it and provide a crapy service?

—Carlos caceres, Bakersfield, CA

Why should corporation with mega money be allowed to regulate the internet for the public! AND the FCC is a tax supported agency that should be fighting for us not for Big Telecom! Wheeler, you are just another political and special interest whore! I cannot afford steep fees and should NOT have to to idiot!

—Maggie Schafer, Boulder, CO

I already pay to use the internet @ CenturyTel.com

—Gary Glore, Saint Peters, MO

The Internet is one of the primary fortresses of truly free speech. Without net neutrality, corporations decide which ideas flow freely, and which are stifled. Our Internet access in the United States is already slower and more expensive than many other countries net access. The corporations controlling our Internet don't deserve or need any more power over this vital form of communication.

—Janet Machak, Ocoee, FL

It protects freedom.

—Leo, ,

To maintain a free society it is essential to maintain neutrality

—Annfaber, Cincinnati, OH

It made the internet the awesome tool for social and economic change that it is. The slow lane and higher fees for smaller companies will stifle innovation and economic growth.

—Todd Starbuck, Charlottesville, VA

Net neutrality ensures all people using the internet have an equal voice. Creating fast lanes will stifle the voices of our most important information sharing system. Removing net neutrality is a very bad thing to attempt.

—Patrick Hickey, North Las Vegas, NV

Let's keep the Internet free and open to all without reservation, and NOT cater to the likes of Comcast, Verizon and their well-heeled cohorts!

—John Witte, Portland, OR

It avoids financialisation of a public resource.

—Adam Nealis, ,

So much of the strength and beauty of the Internet lies in its freeness. Please don't take that away.

—William Ambrose, Mount Morris, MI

Objectivity and non-partisanship in any possible way is crucial in a time of corporate statehood such as this. Why would governments reverse progressive laws? This is all very counterproductive and counterintuitive.

—Ed Pugliese, ,

Let not greed guide your actions.

—Andrew Lenz, Leverett, MA

These corporations would be taking something from the public that is ours.

—Jay Schmidt, Lincoln, NE

DO NOT DESTROY THE INTERNET, The people made it what it is and we want it to stay FOR the people, NOT some money grabbing company :/

—Alice Thomson, ,

You realize that you are destroying any chance of free speech by controlling who can go where, right?

—Lee Hill, Chickasha, OK

I want ALL the information I want not just what powerful and wealthy corporations/ "people" feel I need to know.

—Roberta King, Miamisburg, OH

Treat us equally! Do what is in everyone's interest and keep the greed away.

—George Evers, Lake Hopatcong, NJ

Net Neutrality has provided me the opportunity to get involved with progressive grassroots thinkers. Many of the sites I support do not have major funding and would be left to take the slow lane, making it less likely that others will join learn out opposing viewpoint and ways to implement change. This is a sure fire way to suppress information, by making it harder to find and retrieve. Please keep our Internet free for all voices to be heard equally for the good of the people.

—Joann Pena, Spokane, WA

Net neutrality protects the biggest fertile soil for innovation and start up business that has ever existed in history. This is clearly an un american move by ISP's to seek financial regardless of the blatant destruction of american equality.

—Patrick Welsh, Bossier City, LA

For We the people not/government!

—Linda Wiley, Willits, CA

Democratic rights....

—Craig Cavanagh, ,

a thriving communications commons is a vital component of civil society and citizenship oh, and a shout out to your friends at the NSA - hi guys !

—Marcello Pavan, ,

yes. don't mess with it.

—Cosmo Keenan, ,

Net Neutrality is extremely important to all people. Anything else is no more than censorship, spying, & taking away our rights to free speech & privacy, to name just a few that you've already corrupted! Stop playing big brother for corrupted globalismites & the demonic banksters!!

—Joy Brannan, Lander, WY

It's the only way to provide for equal access to the Internet at reasonable rates, for everyone who wants it. The Internet was conceived as a place where everyone would have access on a relatively equal basis, and it is essential to preserve that.

—Paul Trollope, ,

This is one of the most important decisions that can be made in this decade if not longer. The internet belongs to us all. Corporations are capitalist whores who take over everything possible. I adamantly insist that you maintain net neutrality! It is all we have left. We should be ashamed our system is so far behind the rest of the world.

—Chris Baker, Coeur d Alene, ID

Net Neutrality is important because the net is a common carrier and any attempt to reduce common equal access is a power grab that is immoral and shameful and greedy and disgusting.

—Dr. Susan Koppelman PhD, Tucson, AZ

Access to the internet, open access, is the lifeblood of our small, home based business. If history is any indicator, turning over control to Big Telecom only means that the access I now depend on will be priced out of my ability to pay. Net Neutrality is the only answer for our survival.

—Melvin Hughes Jr., Sparta, TN

Common and equal access to the internet is vital to free and open communication as well as commercial development. Ideas should not be prioritized by the buying power of the entity expressing the ideas, nor should the commerce of innovation be hindered by existing entities whose creativity might be boosted by the presence of fresh new innovations from others.

—Kurt Oliver, South Pasadena, CA

I rely on the internet to work from home so I can be available to my kids, have a presence in my neighborhood, and reduce fossil fuels.

—Shay Chan Hodges, Haiku, HI

I deserve free choices, not paid-for advertising.

—Mary Lyda, Cave Junction, OR

Freedom of speech and freedom of the internet are both inextricably linked to the overall generation and exchange of ideas and ultimately the direct growth of the economy. Any attempt to tax or otherwise impede the aforementioned would be a short sighted, penny wise and pound foolish approach to raising taxes and/or increasing corporate profits.

—Jim Eppelin, Atlanta, GA

Free open internet is the way it should always be.

—Morley Alldred, ,

The internet is the greatest source of information sharing the world has ever seen. Putting big telecom in control of it will unfairly tilt the intellectual playing field in their favor.

—Ross Johnson, La Habra, CA

So that small businesses and individuals are not driven out by the desires of large corporations.

—Michael Kersey, Houston, TX

Simply put, Net Neutrality is Freedom: Freedom of speech, freedom of access, freedom of thought, and freedom of creativity.

—Arlen Cwir, ,

I want to be able to use websites managed by individuals or small companies with just as much speed as websites owned by large companies. The websites with less funding are often so much more innovative and extremely important to an intellectually aware democratic society.

—Solona Jade Sisco, Hummelstown, PA

Net Neutrality can be categorized as a synonym for freedom of speech, worship and action and therefor must be, under every circumstance imaginable, respected dogmatically and those responsible for winning the common people this privilege, or, in this case, this crucial and inalienable right to hold power over a whole realm, ought to fight for our rights pragmatically.

—Nikola Kazimirovic, , its bring freedom of expression and democracy to the people

—John James Parr, ,

You must be joking by all these changes. Net fairness is important to us, therefore, we don't want changes that will damage level playing field.

—Farrukh Aziz, ,

The Internet has been a beautiful thing because it's equally accessible by anyone who uses it. Establishing different levels of accessibility will build walls between those who are able to pay more and those who cannot thereby increasing the distance between the rich and corporations on the one hand and everyone else. The level playing field must be preserved!

—Paul Kaneko, Santa Cruz, CA

Keep the internet free and open for all of us!

—Nancy Cubbage, Seattle, WA

Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Max Barack, Glenview, IL

It is the only fair and democratic way for this free country to remain free!

—Jerry Aronson, Boulder, CO

Do the right thing.

—Michael Klachko, Goleta, CA

Net Neutrality is a step towards treating the internet like a public utility that it is!

—Thomas Zachary, La Crescenta, CA

Neutrality is the only way for me to maintain a reasonable speed on the net. We know from past behavior that companies like Comcast work to screw individual subscribers like me and kiss-up to other corporate users.

—, Waukegan, IL

Our ability to compete on the world stage is dependent on our ability to leverage the Internet as a tool for innovation and collaboration. Don't rob us of our most valuable tool, and sell it to those who would suppress advancement and evolution in the name of profit.

—Zeen R, Somerville, MA

The internet is the last remaining truly free market. Don't sell out to corporations.

—, Tucson, AZ

Knowledge and communication should never be owned or controlled by private interests.

—Alex Ewing, ,

Net Neutrality is important because watching a YouTube video or browsing a web page my ISP doesn't like should not influence the quality of my internet connection.

—Thomas Zehentmaier, , it is absolutely vital that the internet remain a "commons" both to maximize efficiency of information transfer and to prevent the suppression of control by "big brother"

—Amyan Macfadyen, ,

The Internet is now considered an essential service. It should not be held hostage by corporations hell bent on making large profits.

—Richard Bentley, ,

I can't believe I'm being asked to actually explain why net neutrality is important to me. If we don't have it the shape of our world will change for the worse as corporate control of the internet will ruin EVERYTHING for EVERYONE.

—S, Reno, NV

Please preserve the net neutrality.

—Nikolay, ,

Our country was founded on "Of, by and for the people."

—Robert Swiatek, Buffalo, NY

Providers of internet should not have the right to push values onto their subscribers.

—Pak-Kei WONG, ,

It is how I connect with the world.

—Jill Timm, Wenatchee, WA

Net neutrality keeps the corporations from owning the Internet more than they already do.

—Wray Wray Stanley, MALVERN, PA

I want to be able to start a website and have everyone everywhere access it at the same speed. This will destroy the small guys and innovation along with it. Facebook would not exist without net neutrality, and neither will the next big website if you pass this law.

—Ryan Veenkamp, ,

Net neutrality means that the lower class has the ability to communicate without paying the large fees created by the upper class.

—Joshua Buzzell, ,

I am speechless that this conversation is even necessary

—Vicki Fletcher, ,

I hate slow connection

—Rafi'ulfath Riwansia, ,

I value my choice and independence and do not want to live in a big brother state.

—Brandi Martens, ,

The internet is

—Morris smiley, ,

I've yet to see one single benefit for consumers from slowing down traffic to and from less popular sites. It prohibits the growth these sites would be able to achieve from the average customer. If it's an infrastructure issue, maybe the telecom companies should be investing in providing the service they promised, instead of forcing slowdowns as a kind of blackmail to site owners and content providers. Instead of tackling the issue of bandwidth crunch head on with vastly enhanced capabilities, telecom giants are simply finding a new revenue stream. By slowing down websites that refuse to pay up. That is not how the internet should work. ISPs are paid by the consumers to provide internet access. I pay $50 a month for 250gb of bandwidth at 22mbps. (keep in mind, that's BITS. there are 8 bits in a byte, so my actual speed is 1/8th of that since byte is a much more standard unit of measurement for size of a file, megabytes, gigabytes, etc) I foot the bill for the ISP to provide the internet to me. Slowing down website traffic unless site owners pay for faster delivery of their content to clients is double dipping. so not only do I pay for my access, they pay for their bandwidth AND their "fast lane" privilege now? sure the sites don't have to pay, BUT WHY SHOULD THEY EVER HAVE TO PAY OTHER ISPs TO SEND CONTENT TO ME AT ANY SPEED? I'm already paying AT&T every month. And the sites pay their web host for their content. This isn't going to significantly speed up my service. I'll still going to get the 22mbps delivery of web content I always did. But now a good chunk of the internet will also run slower? Slower than I paid for? That's no good.

—Daniel Loeb, Avon, CT

This is a Freedom of Speech Issue.

—Peter Edelmayer, ,

Communication is a fundamental human activity, so the power of modern communication technology needs to be safeguarded for all people.

—Sacha Mallais, ,

The best aspect of the internet is net neutrality. Let's not destroy that.

—Mr. Eric Gooch, Spring Creek, NV

Net Neutrality is perhaps the most critical issue in our world today. Preserving the internet as a place of free flowing information is of paramount importance.

—Natalie Faye Masters, Dallas, TX

In a free and democratic society, free and unfiltered access to information is essential. Otherwise those who control the flow of information have far too much power.

—Bill MacMurray, Chicago, IL

It's the poor person's press, it's the poor inventors' venture-capital fund, it's the only open, honest channel for political fundraising; it's the last best hope of democracy.

—Lewis Taishoff, New York, NY

Equal access to internet!

—Agustin Cerani, , equality for all!!!!

—Robert Garrod, Tigard, OR

An open and "same for all" communication link for everyone on earth! It's simple don't complicate it or give it to your friends.

—William Kautz, Geneva, IL

the internet should be free and open.

—Monica Jelonnek, Dover, NJ

Without the internet I could not continue to research the issues that are important to me nor could my voice be heard when I take action on these issues. A free internet should be totally 'free' for all people so that ideas can be shared for it is only by doing this that we are able to move forward and bring peace to the world.

—Noenoe Barney-Campbell, Honolulu, HI

Users of the internet who use video bandwidth etc will not settle on a few paying providers who get priority traffic they'll settle also with companies who experience restrictions & this will effect everyone's quality of service. It will effect entrepreneurs driving economy & growth. It is the volume of data that's probably slowing things but that can be fixed with better infrastructure & protocols. Korea is an example of countries aiming at 1000 mbps rates, that's how far things can be developed but obviously US speed won't be as fast but higher sustainable speeds can be achieved with the correct resources & infrastructure. Look how far we've progressed & progressing and what's possible, so please don't take people's basic right to equal speed & priority & please follow the path to a better more free internet.

—, ,

The internet should provide equal opportunity for everyone.

—Jeff Sciarra, ,

What has made the internet revolutionary for communication is its equal access to opportunity. Net neutrality is one of the last bastions of rapidly vanishing democratic principle. Were Big Telecom permitted to impose pay to play “fast and slow lanes” to prioritize, block and slow down content, the internet would once and for all be relegated to just another corporate tool to further marginalize those without the unearned privilege of hegemonic moneyed interests. Please resist this encroachment of fascistic power. Thank you for your consideration.

—Monte A. Devendittis, Freeport, NY

Open Internet spurs innovation. You're plan stifles it

—Silas Varughese, ,

I am low income and I totally rely on the internet for practically everything. You companies already charge too much for what we get now with your collusion tactics. How much money do you think we have, and how much more money do you want to steal from us?

—Peter Fortt, ,

Quick access to news and information necessary and ability to keep more current with family members!

—Mark Carver, Euless, TX

The internet is important and should be free from control and regulation by anyone.

—Jane Corbett, , too many corporate monopolies control our lives now.. stop corporate control

—Robert G Wilson Sr, Rochester, IL

I support net neutrality.

—Lee Tizzard, ,

The last arena for truly free speech.

—Andrew Politzer, Bethel, CT

The voice of the many can drowned out by the voice of the few without a true public Internet with Net Neutrality. Without a true public Internet with Net Neutrality the voice of the many can once again be drowned out by the voice of the few.

—Mike Hansen, Deerfield, IL

The internet is an important place for freedom of expression. For democracy's sake, I want to keep it open and equal.

—Oscar Fredriksson, ,

Freedom of information exchange

—Kane Russell, ,

Because a free and just internet is necessary for the liberation of the human race

—Nicolas St-Gelais, ,

We must keep fighting to keep corporations from destroying EVERYTHING!!!!

—Susan L. Rogers, Pearce, AZ

We stand with the experts at Free Press who are fighting for Net Neutrality and believe that: 1.Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. 2.Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. 3.Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. 4.Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Robert Davis, Henderson, NV

To Whom It May Concern: There already exists a great divide between the classes the Internet has been an equalizer Do not perpetuate class warfare for greed

—Derrick Heyward, Missouri City, TX

The internet backbone is subsidized by all tax payers. Regardless of the investments made by big telco, those dollars come from tax payers. Big Telco should not be able to cherry pick class of service after getting the benefit of building the infrastructure on taxpayers backs.

—Justin Gobeil, , foundation of continuing democracy

—Patricia S. Mann, New York, NY

it's a human right of free and a lot of information

—Natalie Asthausen, ,

Because I occasionally download a video or large file, I appreciate being able to do this without dragging through a long, slow-speed delivery. If I were a business, I would be penalized by this prospect. The internet is free and equal for all. Let's keep it that way.

—Clarice Keegan, Mountlake Terrace, WA

I am an academic, a graduate student, a K-12 teacher and an environmental activist here on the California coast. We must have free and total access to the Internet to participate fully in life.

—Pamela Lichtenwalner, Stinson Beach, CA

net neutrality is important to me because it prevents cock sucking nigger ran telco companies from fucking up the greatest invention in human history by dissecting free speech and neutering free enterprise. with that being said fuck you tom wheeler you stupid telco cocksucking lobbist fuck prove your self worthy of being the peoples representative and tell your owners to give your balls back and quit being a bitch sincerely frank timoney

—Frank Timoney, Phoenix, AZ

The internet provides a vehicle for the free exchange of ideas and entrepreneurship that is needed now more than ever in this day and age of global corporations consolidating entire industries. Homogeneity was the beginning of the fall of the Roman Empire. Don't make the same mistake.

—David Rouse, ,

Keep the internet free of restraints!

—Ted Barrett, Seattle, WA

It is important to me because I believe an open and equal internet promotes innovation and economic development. Imagine, if it were not for an open internet, youtube, google, amazon, netflix, etc. might not exist. These are great creations of the internet and were only able to gain traction through openness... higher barriers to entry might have stopped all this innovation. The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Chris Ghersinich, ,

It's the only hope for the little guy, the common man, to have an equal say in this lopsided world we now live in.

—Cynthia Mantel, ,

It's of great importance to keep internet free and neutral! We all pay monthly fees to our national telecommunication companies for their services and any new charge would be unbearable for the most of us.

—Miroslav Cunic, ,

President Obama has just authorized millions to be spent on widening the use of the internet, now you want to destroy net neutrality? It doesn't make sense, the proposed changes would only funnel this money into the big telecoms coffers not improve the expansion of the internet to impoverished areas.

—James Kelly, Mount Laurel, NJ

The internet is the new world nation. And if you think you can violate the only free nation in the world you are mistaken. The internet will make all other nations, big-corps invalid and give the people back their power over them self and the option to help the earth from greedy capitalistic forces. If Tom does not support this, his days are numbered and they will disappear faster than him and his kids if he has any want to think about. Anybody that tries to make the internet worse will be dealt with in a very harsh manner. You have been warned.

—Ben Johansen, , because the internet doesn't belong to just the wealthy and privileged.... it belongs to everyone equally.

—Nikhil Bose, Houston, TX

This is a matter of free speech for all. Speech for a fee or if a large corporate media or other interest is not the free speech that is essential for democracy. Net Neutrality is essential for democracy to survive in the 21st century.

—, Avon, CT

Freedom and fairness - it is just that simple.

—Christine Vanhoek, JACKSON HEIGHTS, NY

Net Neutrality is important to me because it protects small businesses, open communication, education, and research resources. It also saves time for those who access the internet regularly and may go to smaller less known websites. Limiting the internet to only the content which is most popular or desired limits awareness in society and takes away the individual choice to see, learn about, or use websites on any topic as opposed to limited which is nearly similar as limiting expansion of the mind, education, as well as free speech because the ideas of websites with content, which is not liked or not part of the main would limited. It is unconstitutional and counter productive for social, interpersonal, and global expansion of knowledge, resources, understanding, and expression. For people to better coexist, become aware of themselves, others, the world thus better able to understand each other and work best, keeping the internet freely open is essential.

—Stephanie Grabreck, ,

We have lost objectiveness and fairness in all other forms of media. Preserve what's left of free communications via the Internet.

—Dick Rhindress, Stephentown, NY

All voices have the right to be heard.

—Patrick Kwiatkowski, Mundelein, IL

Net Neutrality is one of the last remaining vestiges of democracy in the US and the world. DO NOT TAKE IT FROM US!

—Valerie Parmley, Granite City, IL

The internet is our generation's great equalizer. So much of everything is controlled simply by those who have money, and killing net neutrality simply makes the internet another one of those things.

—Omar Martin, Indianapolis, IN

The internet is too central to our lives to break it into pay-for-speed lanes. Such legislation will further cripple small businesses competing against large corporations by saddling them with new fees to deliver services. It will create a system in which traffic must be sorted and thus searched, which is essentially a general warrant and which is laying the foundation for civil strife and revolution. Do not push the citizens of the United States. They don't take well to being tread upon.

—Blake Darlin, Media, PA without open communications democracy is finished

—Robert Fischhoff, Tucson, AZ

I helped build it. It belongs to everyone!

—Daniel Leavey, ,

Democratic nations must have open access to information and a free exchange of ideas, unencumbered by corporate profit motives that would shape and bend it to their will. ISPs must be reclassified as "common carriers" as the internet is an important part of this countries infrastructure.

—Maureen Slotto, Britton, SD

I require a stable internet connection to make a living. At the current state of income I can afford the internet I have but if the prices and connections change it could make or break me.

—Brandon Burnette, Bluff City, TN

It's ours, fingers off.

—Jenny White, ,

Internet access is now nearly as vital a service as electricity. Fair access must now be preserved for all.

—Trevor Brown, ,

The internet is and should be treated as any other UTILITY!

—Margaret C. McHugh, Sparta, NJ

ISPs are not law enforcement. They should not be allowed to censor the web. Real Net Neutrality is the most important policy of our time.

—Troy Dowling, Lynden, WA

I already see advertisement from Time Warner and Verizon for different speed internet options. This tells me you have already made your decision. Is this correct?

—Jean Hodgins, Ballston Spa, NY

Stop the bullshit already

—Terence, East Meadow, NY

Freedom of communication would be stifled if Net Neutrality were to be abandoned.

—Michael MacKian, ,

We are all the same...

—Wim Cossement, ,

I am a senior citizen and want affordable internet access!!!! No MORE MERGERS!!

—Dolores Foscherari, Washington, DC

We need the preservation of internet neutrality! And no prioritizing, blocking or slowing down access to information on the internet depending on how much the internet user is able to afford! This is simply the maintenance of free speech in today's modern digital world. And the FCC must protect our right to free speech! Today!

—John Culp, Saint Louis, MO

These days one can have a doctorate in mathematics with significant publications in peer reviewed journals and yet have no funding whatsoever. The internet rates should not spite the educated so that the rich but ignorant can get richer.

—Michael Iltis, Madison, WI

The big corporations will be able to crush small start up companies who can't afford a fast lane price. We are in trouble in this country for a number of reasons, but one is that the big corporations keep squashing the little businesses. Please keep the net neutral for all.

—Karen Gulsvig Johnson, Laporte, MN

The convenience of immediate responses is the primary and only as far as I am concerned, value of the internet. I've lived without computers before and will do it again if it loses its value. Gwen Sigmund

—Gwen Sigmund, Palm Coast, FL

The FCC is acting in a fundamentally undemocratic way and its actions will be remembered as equating with the worst extremes of the totalitarian communist states.

—David & Judi Woods, ,

No special Treatment to those with Big Money!

—George Jivelekas, Billings, MT

I wish for the internet to remain an open and free platform for all to be able to experience and enjoy. I don't want limitations or boundaries affecting it and how people use it. While I may not live in the United States, the actions about to be taken will have an affect on me and others outside of the US regardless.

—Christopher Morrow, ,

I edit books and articles, and for those activities I make heavy use of the internet to ascertain facts, ensure that quotations are correct and correctly attributed, and locate information about a wide array of topics. For all that I've benefitted from an internet that makes information, from whatever source, readily available. I strongly oppose any modification that would block or slow down the flow of information on the internet, or that would discourage anyone from posting there.

—Mr. Gary Althen, Grand Lake, CO

Net Neutrality, in this day and age, is intrinsically tied up with freedom of speech and press. The two cannot be separated as long as we have a society as dependent on the internet as ours is today.

—Grant Forbes, Louisville, KY

Simply put, it's in all our best intrests for the long term. Net Neutrality is a great aid to innovation, as well as personal freedom. Anything policy that restricts the internet and hinders Net Neutrality can only be considered fascist.

—John Pote, ,

The internet was created for free information exchange around the work. Don't mess with it!

—Merritt Tilley III, Wilmington, DE

Stop selling what belongs in the COMMONS to private business to enhance your own careers.

—Michael Tuller, Orlando, FL

THE INTERNET IS A PUBLIC UTILITY -- NOT A SERVICE. Many people, such as myself, need an open Internet for professional reasons !

—Johnes Ruta, New Haven, CT

Freedom of speech; we are already inundated with commercials, now we will have to pay for these same commercials, as well as limiting our choices based on who can afford to pay the most. This is not business but a corrupt way of extorting money.

—Mike Stepankiw, Houston, TX

The Telecoms don't own the internet, it belongs to everyone.

—Guy Deck, Westwood, CA

Everything on the planet doesn't need to be converted into a platform designed for someone's maximum profit. There's no freedom in that. Leave the internet alone.

—Sandy Thomson, ,

Can't be controlled.

—Charles Gaffney, ,

This will hurt small businesses, non-profits, and average people like me.

—Paul Bianchi, Ann Arbor, MI

Corporate rule of the commons is not needed here.

—Mark T. Lundholm, Palatine, IL

Please don't do this, allow people to maintain their privacy on the web!

—Henry Raab, ,

Many of the non-profit news sources I rely on to circumvent the corporate-dominated media generally available may be forced to shut down in a multi-tiered world, greatly curtailing the "free exchange of ideas" that was once the basis for the Fourth Estate. I don't think we can afford that...

—Robert W. Shaw Jr., Wellington, FL

I am retired on a comfortable but modest income. Much of my time is spent as a volunteer for several charitable activities, for which I depend on the Internet. It would be impossible to continue them if I had to start paying internet access fees which, once established are only going to go up exponentially. Our recent history does not inspire confidence that Big Anything in this country is going to give a hoot about the public good in the absence of well crafted and vigorously enforced regulations.

—Brian Tansey, Mason, OH

I work at a community college and it is imperative that access to free and fast internet be available for all. The current system serves people of all economic levels equally and should remain. The opportunity to create jobs has been a big bonus of Internet.

—Linda Pleasant, Alleyton, TX

We need the internet to remain open to freedom of speech and not interfered with in any way....

—Patrick, ,

The future depends on good oportunities for all, not just the people with big wallets.

—Steffan Wiche, ,

Net equality is crucial for building information technologies that will bring innovation in the future. We do not need fast and slow lanes for our internet information, because the internet should be equal in speed and opportunity. Why impede information and innovation? These large monopolistic, conglomerate entities do not want competitors. This why everyone should speak out and revolt against these rules that ultimately will change the course of everything to come.

—Brian Laura, Jupiter, FL

how would you feel?

—Sheree Starks, Elgin, SC

For the freedom of speech, creativity and new inventions.

—Tuire Tepponen, ,

Personal freedom is essential

—Sage walker, ,

Humanity needs Truth to Heal.

—Michael, ,

Wow, must be some great dollars behind all of this such as political contribution's, corporate greed, etc, to even consider changes such as to create fast / slow lanes. Must we always lean to the American way of corporate / political greed, personalized profit from the back of us, the ordinary citizens. Ahh, the capitalised way " the Haves & Haves not's" This going the same way as health care system. The internet has become an universal daily tool, that is embedded in every faction of day to day. Why is the government not standing up for us, in front of the corporate bully's, my apologies, forgot about the politicians future's. Net Neutrality must stay free of interference from greed & restrictions of all sources, with out Net Neutrality, we just have been set back to the early 1900's. Have they not learned from segregation of the masses, does not work. Who is going to decide on who gets what, Cooperation's, Government's, Lobbyists, or who has to most monies to offer?? I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality

—Blaine Geddes, ,

Internet and cable companies already charge enough money for services in Canada. I side with Google who is trying to do the right thing and bring gigabit internet to users at a lower price. Google, Microsoft and others are also starting to collaborate on improving the servers back end throughput, which can introduce much greater transfer speed and help reduce the bottlenecks. Innovation can be used to solve the current problems rather than raising prices to force people who can't afford the internet under new regulations off of it. Take some of that money you dump into the military to send troops over to improve life in other countries and invest in new technologies here with google and Microsoft and let everyone enjoy the internet. We can create petitions and organize groups to help fight international wars with a democratic voice instead of guns and ammunition.

—Mathew Ashe, ,

Net Neutrality is important because my favorite websites- a role-playing community where I've met a lot of friends, and a few small independent browser games- can't afford to pay to be in the 'fast lane'. These are my main form of entertainment and stress relief, and having them harmed by selective pricing would make me really sad.

—Gianina Lovett, Castle Rock, CO

It belongs to the people, not the corporations!

—Graburn Lynne, Schenectady, NY freedom is slowly being taken from the citizens of this once free nation

—Keith A Walker, spokane, WA

Please maintain freedom on the internet. Giving powerful companies an advantage only hurts the regular people who depend on this service for education, work and research on topics they are involved or interested in. This is about equal service and availability. Thank you for acting in the best interest of ALL americans.

—Julia Andrzejczak, East Aurora, NY

We paid for it. Don't allow it to be kidnapped for a monthly ransom forever.

—M C Kubiak, BMI, IL

Open internet service is important to keep the playing field equitable for all users, and not further widening the economic gap by denying lower income earners the right to equal communication opportunities by creating fast and slow lane internet service based on pay-for-extra-service criteria. We should do as most of Europe has done and protect internet neutrality. I urge you to fulfill your mandate to protect consumers, and to classify the big ISP providers as common carriers.

—Hugh Smith, ,

Retired with a very limited budget! Any charges attached to using the current free internet, may well stop me from communication with family & friends, as well as denying me searches of information on the internet, if fees apply. Handing Big Telecom yet another revenue stream after the current gouging for internet services is outrageous. Paul-Retiree

—Paul Edwards, Springfield, MA

I need the Internet free of big business destruction

—Cheri Henderson, Asheville, NC

Internet access is expensive enough as it is.

—Matt Rattmann, ,

It is vitally important for our democracy that all content sent over the Internet should be treated equally, even content that the major carriers do not approve.

—John Crowell, Woodburn, OR

The internet belongs to everyone EQUALLY!.. Say NO to the big telecoms!

—John M Dierig, Loveland, OH

As an avid user of small, independent sites for local car enthusiast groups, current events discussion, hiking events, and social events, I am very concerned about the negative impact of the payment tier plan on the small websites that are a vital part of my community. They are already struggling to deal with the costs of the access they do have, it would likely cause several of them to shut down if they were getting squeezed out by the mega corporations that dominate what is available on the internet and in the media. Please reclassify internet providers in a similar manner to electric companies so that everyone has an opportunity to equal access of the internet.

—Clifton Koski, Portland, OR

I am an independent artist and am dependent upon being able to contact other artists and potential contributors as well as potential clients. I do not want this taken away. Stop this %#$& !

—Lisa Renee Ragsdale, Minneapolis, MN

The internet is one of the greatest engines of self-education and economic opportunity for the common person in all of history. There is no valid reason the internet should not remain completely open and equal.

—Dean Rocissono, Wolcott, VT

As far as I am concerned, we no longer have a democracy: we have government by the rich, for the rich. The current FCC's proposal is just another sleazy example of just that.

—Jennifer Burr, Walpole, NH

Slow lanes are CENSORSHIP! The internet is now our most important public communication utility. It was built by the US military as a service to The People & it belongs to The People. Service providers should be classified as "common carriers". A few greedy multinational telecom monopoly corporations [far too few already for competitive pricing & probably off-shoring tax dodgers] could potentially even overthrow elections out of bias, prejudice & strict ideology ... with slow lanes for whatever political adversaries they chose. It's so frustrating seeing yet another bureau of our government caving to special interests. Instead of auto-replies from the FCC Chairman claiming his love for "NET NEUTRALITY" out of one side of his mouth, while speaking "exemptions" from the other side ... JUST DO IT! JUST DO YOUR JOB FOR THE PEOPLE! YOU work for US ... WE THE PEOPLE ... NOT greedy corporations manipulating the revolving door, rigging everything in their favor against the middle class of America.

—Barry Anderson, Kill Devil Hills, NC

The more governments serve big business and strip away OUR FREEDOM, the further democracy will suffer. It is sad that citizens are tricked into believing their governments are acting in good faith and protecting them; when the opposite is true. Money, greed, and power are the drivers of big business. Which in turn are the puppet masters of governments. This ill advised scheme to slow down the Internet is just another example how the government bends over backwards for big business. NET NEUTRALITY is THE only way to keep a level playing field. The FCC must find the courage within themselves to do the right thing. To abandon this ill advised big business plan, and act diligently on behalf of the people of the United States....and not act as spokespersons for US big business. I do hope the FCC finds within itself a backbone and a conscious. Do not allow a Internet slow lane. Net Neutrality is the correct choice to make.

—, ,

We are tired of being gouged for services.

—Lorraine Condotta, ,

The net is our last bastion of democracy and our best platform for inovation - the telcoms are neither. The internet is a public airwave - a commons that the telcoms did not create, do not own, and make plenty of money off of already. Absolutely no fast and slow lanes.

—Peter Herring, West Linn, OR

It isn't right to change the speed of the internet to the common users and giving it only to corporate and other high ranking users. For seniors we pay a high price for our usage.

—Beverly Contakos, Granbury, TX

We don't have a lot of money, and paying extra for faster internet delivery would hurt us in our jobs.

—Betty Lawrence, Asheville, NC

VERY DISTURBING & UNACCEPTABLE...the GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE must not allow Big Telecom to circumvent the public's best interests for the sake of corporate control and profits...to of course be distributed mainly in outrageous salaries/bonuses/stock options to the very few at the top....disgusting and unacceptable process from start to finish. Media conglomerates MUST NOT be allowed to create a business model that does not hold the crucial interests of the common tax paying citizen...I consider web freedom as a main key to overall freedom...DO NOT underestimate how fundamentally important this is to the common person."

—Danny Scott, ,

Equal access to the internet is an important right that shouldn't be denied based on economic status.

—Scott Banham, Chagrin Falls, OH

Nobody in my business

—Pauline P Davidson, ,

Internet content (and/or its availability) should not be determined by who has the most money!

—Jason Vance, Lansing, MI

Freedom is what the US forefathers died for. The freedom we experience today is worth protecting, whether it's online or offline. If you want to experience oppression, just allow these companies to make more profit from this move. What are they doing for the country, in turn for the extra profit this would allow? Not enough, if you're going to keep honouring the foundations of this country.

—K Kote, Sumas, WA

I depend on the internet to find product information details in my small retail business. It is also important for training via webinars. I use the internet every business day. It's that important.

—Philip R Paille, Mt Carmel, IL

everybody have the right to use the internet freely for information and social media

—Scott, ,

Quite a no-brainer, wouldn't you agree?

—Robert Bielik, ,

I am one of the many who wouldn't be able to pay for it, also grass roots politicians wouldn't, be able to raise small amounts of donations from their supporters to run for office. That is probably the reason the far right are pushing this action to make it for corporations

—Alexandra Graziano, Thousand Oaks, CA

We are supposed to be a free country

—Cheryl Kittle, ,

The internet was developed for the use of ALL PEOPLE. It was not to be an instrument to benefit only those who had enough money to afford different levels of use. It was DEVELOPED TO BE NEUTRAL AND FOR THE USE OF ALL. KEEP IT THAT WAY.

RECLASSIFY TITLE 2 AND MAKE ALL THOSE BIG PROVIDERS COMMON CARRIERS FOR OUR WORLD COMMONS.

—Nadine LaVonne, Seattle, WA

the prices we pay now are overly inflated allowing them to change the rules and increase is outrageous when when already never get the speeds that they advertize.

—Don Isleifson, , stop taking away our freedoms of speech and civil liberties the Internet is a free zone

—Chase Kerby, GLENDORA, CA

We as American are allowed certain liberties, this would be one of them.

—Rana Bindra, Cheyenne, WY

My wife and I have a small business. Net Neutrality helps us compete on an even footing with the big players. We use the internet every day and would be devastated if we are put in an internet slow lane because Big Telecomm isn't getting a big enough cut.

—Mark Laity-Snyder, Ferrum, VA

It is a free space for everyone and has virtually become a human right as not having access to the internet seriously impedes, for example, job prospects. Allowing companies to throttle it is in effect allowing them to throttle a human right. Stop this NOW.

—Fergus Sykes, ,

I am disabled. The net is my line to the world. I am on a fixed income & high internet fees are not in my budget.

—Gail Blank, Fresno, CA

Dear FCC, I appreciate the many responsibilities you have contributed to help the American people. Although the continual encroachment on removing or altering Net Neutrality is worry some. Having companies pay a fee to have priority on the internet only creates a system that increases the difficulties of innovative start up companies. Companies first stating out would not be able to afford such a tax. Companies that are well established may be able to afford such fees but if company fees go up then prices go up for the consumer; it is basic economics. Internet service providers (ISP) will say this is not the case; they will claim that this is not lower bandwidth but instead increase bandwidth to companies that pay more. ISP's are not improving the internet by doing this, they are simply limiting the pipe that people can use. ISP are considered the last "mile" of the internet. Meaning they provide the internet from their central hub to our homes. Allowing them to make this change would be like having a normal speed limit of 55mph and one day it would change to 25mph, but you can pay a fee to a company so you can drive 55mph again. In closing passing this will allow ISP to exploit their market power. It will increase the cost of internet making low income families less likely to be able to afford it. This also allows ISP to be able to interfere with websites, apps, and content they don't like, ending net neutrality. Don't destroy Net Neutrality, when this is done we will be on our way to having a censored internet like China. Please Keep the internet free.

—Ian Dudek, Grand Rapids, MI

Net neutrality is the essence of equal internet usage for all. This should be the ' American Way.

—Juliette Valente, Woodacre, CA

The Internet should remain equal to all.

—Thomas Smith II, New York, NY

The internet has always been open to everyone and it should stay that way. I am tired of big business taking things away from the common people.

—Laurel Aust, Albany, OR

Please do your job. The internet is NOT cable TV.

—Jordan Jason, Tampa, FL

Alaska would most definitely be deemed not important enough to receive these so called fast lanes. We already have slow internet, thanks!

—Aaron Powell, Anchorage, AK

THE INTERNET WAS DEVELOPED WITH TAXPAYER DOLLARS AND BELONGS TO THE PEOPLE, NOT THE CORPORATIONS, AND CORPORATIONS DO NOT HAVE A PRIORITY TO FASTER SPEEDS OF THE INTERNET OVER HUMAN BEINGS WHO PAID FOR IT WITH TAX DOLLARS!!!

—Robert Parker Stellato, REDWOOD CITY, CA

I don't want a cable or phone provider dictating what I can see or read

—Charlie Matthews, Brooklyn, NY

Because the Internet should be free

—Adam Thompson, ,

The current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it is inconsistent with the intent of Congress. I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Inga Dahl, LONDON,

ANY infringement in our FIRST AMENDMENT RIGHTS is ANATHEMA to every American!!

—Alicia Guidarelli, South Yarmouth, MA

I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Scott Whitten, Brunswick, GA

I don't need to respond to this, do I? no net neutrality = no net at all...

—Krystian Szweda, ,

Access to information that is unbiased and isn't influenced by a corporate third party is a human right

—Bardia Doust, ,

People vs. Corporatism incl. NWO. Do something about it. That simple MeSsAgE.

—Steven Scalfani, Downers Grove, IL

Access to information in a modern society is closer to a basic need than a luxury. It is essential that we preserve equal access for everyone in order to maintain a democratic society. It would be absurd to disallow phone calls based on their content, and to do so for electronic communication is equally absurd - it is the surest way to not only expand the gap between rich and poor, but also to ensure that our countries become feudal plutocratic dictatorships, ruled by the super rich.

—Matthew Ackroyd, ,

It should always be a fair and open network. It was built by the people, it should not be controlled by corporations.

—Brian Kitchen, ,

Everyone deserves equal access to air waves held in common regardless of economic status.

—Marcia Lamb, ,

The Internet is for the people not big business, leave it alone.

—Michael Armstrong, Ipswich, MA

The FCC's current proposal to limit selected traffic would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress.

—Ron Baugh, ,

It is a key to a healthy economy. At this point net neutrality should be considered a personal right and freedom for all internet users. It is wrong for a few corporations to attempt to control the information highway. These corporations are unfairly using their power and influence to take away free and open access to the internet.

—Michael Frank, ,

We are in a rural location. Generate our own power, water etc. and use wireless phone and internet. This is a lifeline for us and we pay a lot of money for this $250.00 a month. More than the mortgage. Now they want more. NO WAY! This is a utility and needs to be regulated as one!!! All we are asking is for the FCC to do its job. Thank you. We will be watching and listening....

—Billieskye C. Counts, Greenbush, ME

I'm 85 and technology challenged. The internet and free access to it enables me to learn how to overcome my problems with technology. Don't change it.

—Jinnah Kelson, Salt Lake City, UT

As a writer, freedom of expression is extremely important to me. Without Net Neutrality, my contribution to the internet will not be deemed as important as contributions that have been monetized. Ending net neutrality will de-humanize the internet.

—Whitney Kerr, ,

Net neutrality is essential to level the playing field between big corporations and ordinary US citizens. Please protect the interests of US citizens!!

—Sandra Perkins, Seattle, WA

Because I trust the American people more than I trust the FCC.

—Michael Wolff, Goose Creek, SC

The Internet must be part of the commons with access for all. It's tempting to think that internet access is ubiquitous, but that is not the case. Go to any public library and look at the lines to get on the computer for internet access. Think of the the amount of land area defined as rural and the issues of providing the infrastructure there. Think of what it might mean to everyone else when one trader has a fraction of an advantage in the market. Think of the increasing disparity in incomes and access being accelerated overnight by an order of magnitude. As a taxpayer, I have helped fund the internet infrastructure, and I continue to pay for access. It is unconscionable that I would be asked to pay more to be competitive in business, scholarship, and life. And I am one of the lucky ones who have access already. Reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II and preserve the commons for all citizens - not just some.

—Kj King, Albuquerque, NM

Net Neutrality encourages freedom of speech as well as competition between service providers and businesses. That means better services, and better prices for consumers.

—Brian J Lee, Beaumont,

Internet access must be unbridled and not governed by a 19th century caste system!

—Dorothy Avakian, Detroit, MI

Freedom (cost free) of speech is one of the most basic American rights. How can you take it away?

—Liz Lambregtse, Lebanon, NH

We already know what a corporate-run NewsMedia does to freedom of speech and, consequently, remnants of democracy. Also, considering the unleashing of corporate cash to buy elections - due to the Roberts Court - a truly open internet is crucial to any hopes for true justice.

—Curt Gebhart, Woodside, NY

It's essential to our democracy

—Barbara Leake, Los Angeles, CA

The internet is the last bastion of freedom in our time and must not become a multi tiered system but a public utility.

—Ernest Bennett, Montesano, WA

Free expression of ideas.

—James P Glaccum, Dallas, OR

The information I receive from small groups or start ups as well as my own "surfing" will be impacted when speed lanes for pay are initiated once net neutrality is ended. I believe the internet should have equal access for all, not just for those who can pay the most.

—Zenda Boss-Hall, Bellevue, WA

Access equals democracy, in many crucial instances

—Terry Buchan, ,

It is grass roots democracy best tool, in this era of increasing oligarchy. Keep it free and equal for all!

—Sara Bhakti, Kirkland, WA

It is very important to stay neutral on the internet to maintain basic human rights on a large scale. We all have a right to equality on or off the internet

—Steve McNeil, ,

I live in China most of the year and the slow internet there has stifled free speech and innovation. Don't lead America down that path.

—Dave Allen, ,

I use it everyday for information and sometimes shopping. I cannot afford higher fees for my use as I am a low income senior.

—Gretchen H. Freda, Portland, OR

This is no longer an optional service it is a Utility and should be regulated as such

—Richard Hale, Northfield, OH

Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like.

—Elizabeth Ennis, Berkeley, CA

I am fed up with greedy people and government always trying to profit and exploit from the only real free thing left in this country. Leave it alone!

—Marcelo Molina, Los Angeles, CA

Information delivery should be as free as possible for all. The internet should be considered a utility.

—Sandra Cobb, Moreland Hills, OH

equality

—Reese Forbes, St Louis, MO

I want to live in a democracy not a plutocracy. Real freedom of speech requires equal access to the village commons which in today's world means the internet.

—Karen Ard, Oak Park, IL

As a teacher, ease and speed of the Internet is necessary for both me and my students to prepare them to succeed. Don't let it become a tool of monied corporations. It should be a public utility.

—Anthony Arn, West Hollywood, CA

It is important to me because we need to be able to access information at anytime and not have to deal with slow speeds.

—Michael P Rand, Weymouth, MA

Freedom of speech, expression and information are the basis of a "free" people. When governments and corporations try to stifle that it is a sign of a growing degree of fascism; stop contributing to the decline of democracy and the destruction of our constitutional rights. Assholes.

—Curtis, ,

Without launching into a full-scale rant.... "Commercializing" the Internet by creating service tiers allowing providers to charge -- or profit -- based on transmission speed is akin to the commercialization of television. TV once held forth the promise of being a tool for educating, informing and entertaining. It quickly deteriorated into a wasteland driven only by sales of "commercial" air time. Like television, the Internet relies on the use of frequencies and transmission facilities that rely on a public resource, e.g., the airwaves. Commercializing or in effect, privatizing, part or all of such a public resource for the financial gain of a few is bad public policy and should be "illegal" if you will. Thank you for taking this comment with the seriousness and gravity intended. I look forward to an Internet regulated by the public and unfettered by private interests.

—William Killpatrick, Lafayette, NJ

I have lived in China when they jammed US news websites, and I don't want such interference here. Technological interference is bad enough.

—Suzanne Scollon, Seattle, WA

The original intent of the Internet was FREE Access to ALL, not a tiered payment sight.

—Lars H Friis, ,

The fact we pay for the product it should be our right to use as we wish if you want to control the Internet then provide it for free to everyone. Other wise find something better to with your time since your screwing us on the fact it's our tax dollars that's paying your wage so in turn you work for us anyway so listen to us for once

—Tim Nissen, ,

Net Neutrality allows every access to information. It's only FAIR.

—S Wrencher, Chicago, IL

I am a senior in a wheel chair with polio. I live on my social security which is not enough to pay Time Warner for hundreds of TV channels I will never watch. I currently watch TV with my Roku Box and get my phone and DSL internet access from a local company for far less then through the "Big guys". I also work as a volunteer membership Director for a small nonprofit TimeBank that requires the high speed internet. We along with hundreds of other TimeBanks could never afford the prices that will happen if we end up with no choices. Forcing or trying to force people and business to pay huge fees or end up finding the only thing I can use my computer for is shopping is ludicrous. This will leave most of us with out a way to watch TV, news programs, being able to keep in touch with family and friends, political blogs even church services for the house bound. You are forcing us to shop on line at the places who will pay you and that will mean we will essentially find our fixed incomes will not go very far. Please do not do this so a few companies can make more money at the expense of the rest of us.

—Sheila Malone, Waterville, ME

As I am a Virgin Media customer here in the UK, I am all too aware of the power internet companies lord over their users. Being able to block websites, control, as well as slow down the internet usage has become an unbearable daily occurrence, and I feel it is a grave misuse of their power, especially when we pay so much to the providers for much better service. If you help protect Net Neutrality, this will create a precedent for the rest of the world to follow.

—Nadine Chambers, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me as a small business owner because it allows open communication and competition. Please protect small businesses by protecting Net Neutrality.

—Alex Brancard, Denver, CO

No one should control the internet.

—Andrew Pettitt, Longmont, CO

I'm an independent and rely on a level playing field on the internet to compete with the overseas services. It's vital that we keep supporting the American economy with American workers!

—Mr. Willis Gravelle, Carbondale, CO

The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress.

—Bob Boase, ,

It's a reasonable check on those with money and power, which is basic to democracy.

—Elizabeth Della Valle, Portland, ME

This is important to me because people play games online and when Internet is slow, games would crash or freeze.

—Tyler bacon, ,

Because I believe in freedom of expression and freedom of press, and I believe that inequality on the access of information is a direct attack to those freedoms.

—Marianela Acuna, Houston, TX

Internet service provides need to focus only on sending data back and forth, the clue is in the name, service provider. Gas, electricity, water providers are not there to instruct the user on what and when their product is used

—John Earle, ,

A healthy democracy cannot exist without it.

—Gerald Nelson, Winterhaven, CA

Setting up a two-tier speed of access would not only destroy my independent secondhand book business on the Internet but would eliminate any book businesses that fall outside of Amazon's grasp. It would also erect barriers to access for less-privileged children, struggling to gain an education in order to enter the mainstream world. In sum, it denies The American Dream to individuals independently striving to achieve on their own, without begging for assistance from others.

—Danna Jackson, Bloomington, IN

The net has been and should remain a truly democratic communication service. Keep class inequality out of it.

—Lanny Landtroop, Kingwood, TX

Don't lose the basic principles behind the creation of the Internet to allow big companies to generate even greater profits.

—Ian Barton, ,

Freedom of Information and Communication.....

—Mike Sherman, Seattle, WA

Please do not allow the big cable companies to set up "fast lanes" for wealthy corporations to take advantage of while small independent voices are squelched. Time Warner provides marginal service in my area now, and there is no effective competition for them. The last thing we need is for them to pick and choose which websites get favorable treatment.

—Andrew Gillis, Ithaca, NY

Don't open up the chance for corruption among internet service providers before putting in safeguards to prevent abuse of power.

—Elizabeth Lambert, Duluth, MN

It is fair. Plain and simple.

—Patrick Watson, Denver, CO

as a private business owner who has an online identity, this will mean my business can not do as well as it possibly could especially since it's in the beginning growth period.

—Salina Kinney, Makawao, HI

I don't want to internet to become more like cable television.

—Alan D'Avanzo, Seattle, WA

Big Business has been making/changing the rules long enough. Tell them no means no! Stop raping John Q Public with fees and limited access to a PUBLIC UTILITY, as well as compromising free speech in the process!

—Jacqueline Pomranky, Clio, MI

The internet should not be for sale. Keep it open and equally accessible for all of us.

—Bruce Schacht, Portland, OR

Please do not create advantages for the already privileged few at the expense of the rest of us.

—Francis Higgins, Sacramento, CA

Why is this even an issue?? The average internet user does NOT need to have their rates increased! Internet is already expensive and to threaten an increase in rate or a big slow down in speed, is extortion!

—Carole Stephan, Pompano Beach, FL

I am in my 90s and practically housebound, so the internet is my window on the world and my contact with friends near and far. I would be lost without it!

—Jean Sansum, ,

Keep the internet fast and free for everybody.

—Mr. Mark Paullin, Denver, CO

Internet providers did not invent the internet and as one of our last avenues for any kind of free press or free speech, they should not be allowed to restrict access nor excessively reap profits from it's use. They already gain too much!

—Bruce Benson, Thousand Oaks, CA

Only a OPEN, free press and unedited exchange of ideas can keep this country improving. NO fast and slow lanes.

—Peter Stone, polson, MT

Don't kill small business!!

—Karl Smiley, Blodgett, OR

Freedom of expression guaranteed by the Constitution

—George Quasha, Barrytown, NY

It shouldn't be controlled by corporations with big money.

—, Newnan, GA

Americans will freak out if you mess with the internet. LEAVE IT ALONE. NET NEUTRALITY IS ESSENTIAL!!!!

—Mark Koppel, Greenacres, FL

As with, I am sure the huge majority of users. I am getting desperately tired of being exploited. No more please!

—Philip Crennell, ,

The internet should be equal for everyone, I do not believe the wealthy should get a faster internet than the not so wealthy, it's just not fair.

—Tudy Garrett, Glen Ellen, CA

Without Net Neutrality you take away the one access to technology that ALL can have. Give pause to the possible reasons why it is a vital system like that within the body. A neutral net system is a living breathing system-do not cut the flow of access to the body in this case all citizens.

—Ms. K Kelly, Minneapolis, MN

Please do not destroy the internet..

—Charles Ruggerio, Ringoes, NJ

ISP already charge us, as users, for faster internet - and now they want to make money on the other end as well. Can't you see why this is a problem?

—Jonathan Haidle, Portland, OR

I do research and need equal access to all websites.

—Leslie Kneeland, Santa Rosa, CA

It is critical for preserving fundamental freedoms and democracy in the digital age.

—Botond Ballo, ,

It is one of the last real examples of democracy left in an increasingly right wing planet

—Graham Warwick, ,

I believe that net neutrality is important to all Americans.

—Brad Knight, LakeViewTerrace, CA

Simple fairness. We are not all equal?

—Raymond Moody, Honolulu, HI

I do not have a digital tv receiver and like the internet for all my watching needs. I'm already seeing a lot of buffering on certain YouTube videos. This will only get worse without a level playing field. Don't shoot yourself in the foot. There is already talk of creating other networks that are controlled by others. When we all switch to them, who will you charge then?

—Jon Lord, ,

We are constantly subjected to price increases and no improvement in service. Please don't make it easier for the big telcos do "break" the internet.

—David L, Syosset, NY

Discrimination based on financial wealth is wrong

—George Ibey, ,

The US governemnt shouldn't pass laws that will affect my internet use as a UK citizen and allowing slow lanes would do just that. Beyond that, giving companies the ability to cripple internet speeds on a whim is the worst idea regarding internet usage that anyone has ever had.

—Alexander John Temperton Gorman, ,

It speaks to me of freedom of disseminating information free from intrusive and unnecessary censorship.

—Kenneth Jackson, ,

Corporations that have time and again shown themselves to be greedy and inefficient cannot be made de facto gatekeepers of the internet. It is simply too important to squander so spectacularly.

—Mike Ignatz, ,

The internet is humanity's most important resource for communication, education, and social progression and interaction. It is the most important invention of the past 50 years, with millions relying on it for everything from work to checking the weather. To allow big telecommunications companies to limit access to this fundamental resource on a pay-to-play basis would not only be directly damaging to millions of people's livelihoods and wellbeing, but also to the global economy as all economic competition is slowly stamped out. Broadband providers MUST be classified as common carriers in order to protect this resource which, as a species, we can no longer get by without. Mr Wheeler's idea of Net Neutrality is insulting.

—Callum Barrett, ,

Competition is the key to innovation and fair prices.

—Alan Asselstine, ,

Because the Internet is a goddamn PUBLIC UTILITY. It is NOT meant to be controlled by corporations. If phone service is a public utility, then the Internet, built on the telecommunications infrastructure, built by the PHONE COMPANIES, is a PUBLIC UTILITY!!! Why is this not clear, Mr. Wheeler? Because you have worked for BIG TELECOM in the past, and want to stroke your corporate buddies?

—Eric Schweitzer, West Hills, CA

The exchange of information cannot be dampened. Corporations will get an unfair advantage with the web and the internet as we know it will collapse.

—Alex, ,

The internet is an entity that cannot be constrained by this type of act. By going through with this you are holding back progress.

—Christopher Alessandrini, ,

Net Neutrality is one of the few vestiges of true democracy left in this country.

—Paul Ripley, Santa Cruz, CA

Net neutrality is required as the main alternate to the corporate media who rarely mentions poverty, trade agreements like the Trans-Pacific Partnership trade agreement.

—Gerald Leslie, Richmond, TX

On Wednesday, May 14, 2014 at 01:21 AM, and (again) on Saturday, July 12, 2014 at 07:28 AM, I received the same boilerplate email from YOUR (Tom Wheeler's!) Office stating the following: "Thank you very much for contacting us about the ongoing Open Internet proceeding. We're hoping to hear from as many people as possible about this critical issue, and so I'm very glad that we can include your thoughts and opinions. I'm a strong supporter of the Open Internet, and I will fight to keep the internet open. Thanks again for sharing your views with me. Tom Wheeler Chairman Federal Communications Commission" Were you lying - or do you believe the online public is stupid?! We want action for democratic media, not platitudes as smokescreens for corporate domination of the Internet. We want net neutrality. JUST DO IT! Seriously!! No more privatization of public assets to enrich the 1% who contribute 0%!!! No more privatizing profits while socializing all avoidable corporate messes and disasters - from exploding crude oil trains to fracking-caused earthquakes and oil spills, etc., caused by greed-driven short-cuts and deliberate negligence. NO MORE!!! As one of the cogs in the wheel that helped build and shape the net, I demand it remain neutral as originally intended before inequality pushes the majority over the brink... dashing their hopes and dreams upon the unrelenting and undeserved waves of misery, for no greater reason than to provide a handful of entitled gluttonous leeches with more blood money than the most ravenous parasite could possibly need and/or use. Please. No more blood for the 1% leeches sucking our society dry. Save Net Neutrality! PLEASE!!! JUST DO IT!!!

—Cheryl Dykstra, Niskayuna, NY

Free speech

—Mark Roberto, ,

Net Neutrality is essential to democracy. Wealthy corporations should not have special favored access or control. The internet is for the common good.

—Kathy Magne, Saint Paul, MN

Please protect the First Amendment.

—William Ferguson, Los Angeles, CA

Net Neutrality is essential to maintain any semblance of democracy in North America. The 1% undermines democracy by underwriting their puppets in the US and Canada.

—Peter Stockdale, ,

Net Neutrality is important in all countries and especially in liberal democratic countries where market forces must be carefully balanced against the guaranteed rights of citizens. It is far too easy to simply say, you can have what you can afford, and to ignore the way that this stifles communication and innovation. Take a lesson from the patent legislation and how it has restricted trade and increased costs for everyone and the benefit of only a few. Common Carrier status is the only current structure that makes sense, particularly as it appears clear that the internet of things, will require common carrier status to be even minimally functional. It is too easy to see the consequences of connected devices such as fire and gas detection relegated to the "internet slow lane" and becoming ineffective for all but those who can afford the corporate fees. TAKE ACTION NOW to ensure fair access for everyone and everything. Information and its free dissemination is foundational for continuation of civilization.

—Mark Bernier, ,

Because I said so.

—Hans Heaney, Jerusalem, AR

I am an indie game developer who depends on the internet to distribute and operate my game.

—Damian Campeanu, ,

I can't afford more expenses as a retiree.

—Donald G. Kadidlo, hudson, WI

The internet is free, open, and democratic. Don't destroy the free internet. We need to have net neutrality.

—Mark Nobriga, Daly City, CA

cost for once stick up for the smallguys

—Alice Schmid-miller, Connoquenessing, PA

Neutrality means freedom.

—Damien Griffin, ,

I use the internet to research for educational information. Education sites usually are unable to afford to pay higher costs because they are mostly nonprofit. You will be preventing people from getting educated by giving big profit companies preference on the net because they can afford to pay more. We don't need any more people prevented from easily learning when our society desperately needs educated people. Libraries will not be able to pay the increased fees as well. Every time I go to libraries recently there are services being cut due to funding problems. You will ration knowledge to an elite few who can afford it.

—Linda Jadach, Dunellen, NJ

Bait and switch - is what it is - no way!

—James DeCota, Port Charlotte, FL

It's only right.

—Pamela Meuser, Millbrae, CA

I depend on it for my research work, which deals with large datasets, and are only available online, along with the tools to mine the data, and statistical algorithms to analyse it. Why should I be denied access speed to do research?

—Mitchell Struble, Philadelphia, PA

With the growing disparity in every section of the society, Internet is truly the last bastion of equality and true freedom. It's hasn't bee poisoned by the corporations and politicians who reside in the pockets of those corporations. Do the right thing.

—Gagan Chhatwal, ,

Please don't let the big telecom companies destroy what the Internet is for - common communication between everyone, without the ability of ISPs and bandwidth providers to pick and choose what data is acceptable for their clients to see freely!

—Kevin Boyer, ,

1.Common carriage is one of the most successful policies in U.S. history. 2.Abandoning it for Internet access has created an unworkable policy framework at the FCC and enabled Internet service providers to exploit their market power. 3.Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. 4.Reclassifying broadband providers as common carriers is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like —Daniel, ,

Do something for the people please, not big corps.

—Lois Klempner, W Bloomfield, MI

Net neutrality is a neccessity for many major benefits of an open internet!

—Benjamin Weber, ,

-the proposed changes can only really benefit those with the power to exploit said changes. -the internet is one of mankind's most successful experiments into the realms of free speech and equal representation, we should fight to preserve this experiment. -the free and open internet allows for the self empowerment and organization of minority groups that might not be able to do so without it. Do not take away another safe space for these voices.

—James Barnhart, Towson, MD

The Internet is an unparalleled medium for free speech, education, commerce, and human innovation. It is a fertile ground where learning, entertainment, business, research, and human culture thrives, and it brings together the best ideas of people around the world in a way that was never possible before. It is perhaps the most powerful communications tool since the printing press. Abandoning Net Neutrality would severely tarnish the aforementioned power of the Internet, and would limit future innovations and progress made by humankind through the use of the medium.

—Matthew Gray, ,

coz i don't want you guys to dictate content and availability!

—Vincent Clancy, ,

I want full access to the net.

—Jerry Perlmutter, Durham, NC

Information freedom is one of the most important things in a country! The internet is a great source of information that should not be censored!

—Daniel Strong, Indianapolis, IN

Its called freedom

—Paul Rabeau, ,

As a small entrepreneurial business we need to be able to compete with the big companies and net neutrality is he only way that can happen. Successful Indie companies today are the big business of tomorrow.

—, ,

Free access to the information I want, not the information someone pays for me to see!

—Barbara Abrams, Walnut Creek, CA

Net neutrality only helps support the idea of mobility. Large existing companies gain more power & control, new and interesting companies that create jobs get stifled and limited on what they can do. The neutral internet has helped it grow to what it is today. Why should we do anything but maintain that?

—Aaron, ,

This planet should be for every living being on it NOT just for those who have more of the man-made construct called money. The removal of net neutrality is immoral.

—John Rice, ,

I've been able to benefit from the internet over the years. As a college student, I need to write papers, do research, and everything in between. At the same time however, I use the internet to stay connected to family and friends that live far away. Social media has allowed to connect with many people. From research to entertainment, the internet has become a crucial part of the life of ordinary people.

—Jerusalen Garcia Jordan, Austin, TX

The internet is the most important source of news for young people.

—Millicent Cox, Honolulu, HI

The internet is owned by no one, only the access. Companies should not have the ability to control it, just for their profit. No one should decide what I can see or what gets precedence.

—Arthur H. Swers, Floyd, VA

We are not a 3rd World country. Living in the USA means WE THE PEOPLE come first and WE HAVE SPOKEN. The advantages of a NEUTRAL INTERNET allows for many to prosper; engages middle class Americans to prosper, and consequently broadens the overall consumer base!

—Scott Johnson, Boulder, CO

The internet is the infrastructure of the world and these decisions on keeping it open and free will effect everyone. Please keep the internet free , the society of tomorrow depends on it.

—AJohn Martin, ,

it represents my equality and freedom to communicate as i desire at the speed i desire without corporate interference

—Lou Stammer, Columbus, OH

Because the internet should be for everyone not just the wealthy 1%. When I cannot answer a question my kids have, the first thing I do is check the internet. Affordable/free access to the internet is a freedom we all deserve.

—C Fenton, ,

Freedom.

—Thor Sigurdsson, ,

Don't Destroy the Internet

—Stephen Martinez, Quarryville, PA

As an entrepreneur and small business owner Net Neutrality is crucial to Americans like me. We may not have the economic impact of the huge telecoms but we create jobs and revenue for our local communities. My software and inventions could be "the next big thing" that keeps companies like mine in America and not looking for faster internet speeds and less regulation in Ireland, Europe, or South America.

—Thomas Ryan, Carlsbad, CA

It is important to have an internet where no one powerful group is allowed to dictate to the rest of us what we can do. In Canada, this action would not pass a Charter of Rights challenge.

—Robert McLean, ,

Short sighted profit thinking! To restrict internet is to restrict freedom, innovation and opportunity.

—Ronald, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me because it's fair and provides equality for all.

—Elizabeth J. Connor, San Juan Capistrano, CA

If you mean half of the Internet will be open, that is not an open Internet. If you know there will be extra charges, that is not a free Internet. Net Neutrality.

—James Rogerson, Charlotte, NC

Information is and always should be free. I do not care who you think you are. It is not yours to control.

—Jack Bryant, Aledo, TX

I'm a librarian--I see what great benefit access to the internet brings my patrons. Information changes lives, please keep access neutral!

—Johannah White, New Orleans, LA obtaining knowledge and truth.

—Tom Bushey, ,

The information complex that is born out of technology is not yours to monopolise.

—F G. Cargill, ,

Noble Sirs; after "Citizens United" this seems to be the only hope to have a "voice" that isn't tied to "wealth".

—John Reed, Houston, TX

Net Neutrality embodies our right to free speech and our access to free speech.

—Robert Ridgard, The Villages, FL

Protecting the little guy from restrictions and absurd fees.

—Istvan Kocsis, ,

Don't take away another of our freedoms for the purpose of corporate gain.

—Terrence Delgado, Bedford, OH

The number of times I and many others have written this message is now bordering sickening. Not because it's another web form that we're filling out...no - not by a long shot. It's because we live in a world where our corporate and political leaders feel THIS is the biggest issue to "fix"...to combat our free-speech...that, to them, is priority #1. Forget all the scandals in political office...forget massive world issues like feeding and clothing the poor (from countries WE as privileged nations have exploited)... No. The most important issue is THEIR control over our right to free-speech, free-thought, and the platforms that allow for that. We can't meet in public anymore (that's "protesting"), we can't meet in secret (that's "conspiracy")...the last place anyone on this Earth has to FREELY communicate how they feel about their world - is the Internet. FCC - I urge you to rethink your position and motivations here. I hate to remind you, but you're the FEDERAL Communication Commission..."Federal" being the operative word. "Federal" meaning by extension..."an office as a VOICE of the people, in a certain topic area"...such as in your case "communication". The PEOPLE don't want their right to free speech destroyed. The PEOPLE like the Internet just how it is. It is YOUR job to be the ACTION of the people, to our VOICE of the people. Do what's right. Free-speech is not a commodity...it's not a corporate or political plaything. It is a concept older than our modern civilization...and as such - it worth much MORE than the paper currencies invented by our modern civilization. Sincerely and seriously, Rob Murray

—Rob (Robo) Murray, ,

All Internet content should be treated equally and not policed by the ISPs.

—Ricardo Coto Oviedo, ,

Because I shouldn't have to pay exorbitant prices for no competition and worse speeds compared to the rest of the world.

—Marcus, Hugo, MN

Please. Be. Reasonable. Represent your citizens, not your corporations. Thank you.

—Dan Trommater, ,

Because profits shouldn't control information

—Lucas Donlevy-Riddall, ,

It is more important for the internet to be open than it is for the Giant Telecoms to make Even more money !!!

—Gwen Ulin, Granada Hills, CA

Please make it a common carrier! Because that's what it should be!!! Also, don't allow ourselves to succumb more to those with the money!!!

—Lily Kirsanow, Austin, TX

The websites of not-for-profit organizations and private individuals will not be seen nearly as quickly, if at all, because the websites of large corporations are given an advantage. We need a level playing field.

—Germaine Gogel, Clinton, NY

net neutrality is free speech..

—Pierre Martel, ,

the internet should continue to be available to all rather than self-selected few.

—Richard Lyons, ,

This change will cripple everyone except big business that already have a monopoly.

—Daniel Baldwin, ,

One should not have to pay more to have reasonable internet. It should be taken out of the hands of service providers.

—Kathryn L. Mier, Bothell, WA

The internet is a right. Not a commodity. Let's regulate this like a utility not sell like an advertising property.

—Brian McKenzie, ,

The Internet of today is what the printing press was to the world of that time: an unprecedented source of information, and an unparalleled outlet for free speech. This is true free speech, not paid advertising that corporations would like us to treat as the same thing. It allows people from every walk of life to express their opinions and make their voices heard. Don't make this into a 2-tier system for the "haves" versus the "have-nots". You have the opportunity to do the right thing here, and truly uphold democracy. Please use your power for good.

—Susan E Kronenfeld, Somerville, MA

Decisions made by the FCC will have repercussions beyond the USA, the proposed slow lane will hinder fair use and access to the World Wide Web.

—Lance Cahoon, ,

ISPs are one of the largest industries in North America, and if we don't acknowledge their increasing power and importance with suitable checks and balances to prevent monopolization and exploitation of a truly universal and fundamental need - modern communication - we will be left with just another group of insanely rich people who are willing to destroy the whole world before changing their practices, just like the oil industry. If you think the comparison is unbalanced, you're wrong. Communications are far more important than fossil fuels, because if you allow a monopoly (or oligopoly, as it currently sits) over such a fundamental human need, ALL FORMS OF SOCIAL PROGRESS AND CHANGE WILL BE STIFLED!

—Alexander Subotich, ,

Freedom

—Gary Glen Barrett, Lampasas, TX

The Internet is one of the most powerful tools for education and democracy that we have, and it would be a mistake to embark on a slippery slope of limiting it.

—Jack McKenna, ,

It is a categorical ethical imperative to maintain an open internet.

—Kevin Chamberlin, Framingham, MA

Stop acting as dictators do. Remember, this is America the land of the free, and freedom of choice.

—Grey Wolf, The Bronx, NY

Creating de facto slow lanes on the Internet by allowing pay-to-play fast lanes will only serve to fracture the Internet, and stifle creativity and open expression (particularly political expression). Please reclassify broadband providers as common carriers, and avoid making the biggest blunder of the information age.

—Christopher Jones, Estes Park, CO

There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers." Our friends at Free Press have been fighting for Net Neutrality for years and on July 15, they will file detailed legal comments on the agency's proposal.

—Rachel Elena Pauker, Berkeley, CA

My wife and I are living on a small pension. We are unable to be paying a lot of expense for our Internet use.

—Norval L. Hardy, Greer, SC

Because freedom.

—Alex Baluh, ,

I use the internet every day. It is my go to resource for information on every conceivable topic including positions of politicians running for office. The internet can not become a victim of corporate profit mongering. Please keep the internet open.

—Wendy Dickinson, North Adams, MA

If it wasn't for the basis of net neutrality I would never have the amazing career I have today. I owe everything I have as a person to these concepts and it's important that others have the same opportunity to inspire progression, innovation, collaboration and cohesiveness in the future world.

—James, ,

Dollars should not dictate when, or if I get news, from whatever source. We taxpayers paid for the Internet via DARPA, and the ether/airwaves belong to us. Net Neutrality is a MUST!

—Donald L. Anderson, HARPSWELL, ME

the internet is "the" major means of communication on both a personal level and in regards to my business.

—Ed Sousa, brooks, ME

We know that the FCC has grown impotent in the face of corporate influence, but can't you be stronger and wiser?

—Dr. Jim Hanson, Winter Park, FL

Free the 'Net. Now.

—Carolyn Hample, ,

Everything in life is skewed towards the rich.Net neutrality levels the playing field for the common man and woman.

—Jim Hanley, Santa Rosa, CA

This is a basic freedom, one of few left.

—Susan Miller, Amherst, MA

No extra toll fees for internet usage, no corporate control for profit. Most unwelcome changes inhibiting internet freedom. Excludes people that do not have the fees to use internet, hard hitting for students and researchers etc.

—Colette Shaw, ,

Net Neutrality important for me, because i don't want slow line and other negative effects, if Net Neutrality fail.

—Ruslan Nikolaevich Bondarenko, ,

I want to be able to access information from individuals,companies and organizations regardless of their size or wealth.

—Jonathan Walker, Portland, OR

Well for one reason is that being a retired senior and living on a fix income I manage to be barely able to afford the service as is and to change the way things are in flavor of the big company's many others won't be able to afford the chance of still have internet service at the new prices that the company's will inflict on us all, so please reconsider the people that put I faith on to help us out. Thank You .

—Alfred Alarcon, Pelham, NY

The internet conveys speech and print, so keeping it open as a public utility serves the First amendment rights of the public.

—John Rohrer, New Cumberland, PA

each person/business on the internet needs equal access for their viewers.

—Pattie Arnold, Henderson, NV

Net Neutrality is the future of the internet. The future is inevitable. The FCC is antiquated and stuck in the past.

—Daire O' Connor, ,

Internet providers will exploit the market for profit. Reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Dwayne Anthony Munar, Waianae, HI

The internet is owned by the people- not the corporations.

—, Buffalo, NY

Big companies do so much damage in the real world they shouldnt be allowed to continue to take everything they want.

—Matthew, ,

It's the FAIR thing to do!

—Lesle Kefauver, Bethesda, MD

Large corporations seek to limit access to information and so far have provided extremely poor customer service with the cable/phone services that they do control.

—Lisa Butterfield, Eureka, CA

Net neutrality allows me to continue as I always have with the things I love about the internet. It guarantees that services and websites that I use daily if not hourly will not be effected. It guarantees that if at any point myself or another embarks on an enterprise which is for the benefit of myself, himself or ultimately others, that it will not be constrained, tied down or effected by policies which do not aid the general public but those who seek to monetise something we are already paying large amounts for, and somehow are expected to accept less for something that will not become cheaper or more widely available or even quicker.

—Christopher Jose, ,

The Internet has become a necessary part of everyday life, for communication, information, learning, and entertainment. It must not be left open to interference of any kind by corporations looking to increase their already profits. It's time to make a change for the betterment of everyone. Thank you for your consideration. Simon Lonsdale

—Simon Lonsdale, ,

Corporations have too much power already given to them by the Supreme Court. We need access freely to internet info. Also need to protect smaller internet businesses from being crowded out.

—Lillian Umphres, Creve Coeur, MO

The web should be free of 'control' or 'influence' especially from Government agencies as well as Commercial interests....the web was designed to be a free and democratic space. Long may it remain so...

—Graham Bailey, ,

Freedom of speech and freedom of expression are cornerstones of Democracy. I do not want freedom of the internet destroyed by corporate or political interests. This type of Law is an erosion of our freedom.

—Kim Schurtz, ,

I use much sites that are on high population and low population. Slowing down some sites cause of the load they have, just is insane. Netflix and others have all ready Yalen avtion to charge us 1€/month more cause of this FCC hearing. This aint right way to. Let internet be free.

—Jani Grönfors, ,

Because the humanity have to be connect all together to stop the abomination of an elite.

—Baudoin Wart, ,

Freedom and neutrality are the core principles of the internet. Don't be the ones to destroy one of humanities greatest assets.

—Iain Royle, ,

ISP's must be classified as "common carriers" to enable ordinary citizens, with ordinary or fixed incomes, to have ease of access to the internet and all the Necessities it provides. By taking that away you block freedom of expression, freedom of access to information. and freedom to control ones own financial future on ones own without having to pay exorbitant fees to specialists. The most important aspect of this is how it relates to our freedoms under the First Amendment.

—Brian J. Racin, South River, NJ

We need venues to support freedom and democracy - the Internet is one of the largest and most important of these forums.

—Sydney Saville, ,

Being able to have access to many different ideas is what gives us, the people, the power to make free choices. Without this democracy is impossible. I don't want to be ruled by corporations and only be exposed to what THEY want me to know.

—, ,

Net neutrality is necessary to ensure that society and the world can connect to one another openly, freely, and without persecution. Please don't destroy the internet.

—Hootan Esfahani, Sammamish, WA

I feel that losing net neutrality will hinder what I am able to do and receive from the internet. Grassroots organizations, start up ventures, any low budget or no budget ideas will be silenced. Pres. Obama himself used the freedoms of the internet to get elected to his first term. Please do not enact chairman Wheeler's ill conceived plan as it is decidedly biased in favor of big telecoms and the wealthy. The internet must remain as it is, with equal opportunity for all.

—Mark Gillette, Ansonia, CT

The people deserve equal treatment. Big business seems intent on destroying equality and reducing every product, service and market into dollar signs and profit. The internet is a great leveller, allowing everyone equal access is vital.

—Neil Foss, ,

It is against free speech to build and maintain anything other than a completely unified Internet

—Christopher Darken, Wesley Chapel, FL

The world needs the internet to be free and unbiased so we all can share in the benefits as it was originally designed for.

—Kris Susin, ,

Only an open internet - defined as a utility - will keep the playing field equal. Your proposal will crush small businesses, as they grow slower as big business buys up all the bandwidth.

—Mark kiester, Gainesville, FL

Big telecom already has enough power over what we see and hear. The internet is important as a free forum for the exchange of ideas. Giving the telecommunication giants control over baseline internet speeds in tantamount of a plutocratic gag order and gives them the possibility of quieting any dissent, not only for them but at the behest of any of their high paying corporate customers.

—Philippe Daigneault, ,

FREEDOM OF SPEECH. The ability for small independent websites to startup and compete with massive organizations.

—Robin Adams, Niagara Falls, NY

Dear FCC, Let me tell you the story of how the Internet saved my life and why it is important to protect free access to information for everyone. Throughout my childhood I was bullied, friendless and extremely insecure. It was a miserable time. While I did enjoy reading books a lot, having nobody to discuss them with made my loneliness even more painful. After graduating from high school, I never met my bullies again, but the scars were still there. I had a crippling fear of rejection, an eating disorder gradually getting out of control, and, at a certain point, nobody to talk to for a whole year at the university. Then my family got an Internet connection, and things changed for me. Gradually I learned about the great diversity of people and their lifestyles. I found friends across the country who shared my interests and appreciated my opinions. I started travelling to places where they lived and boosted my social skills. I lost my virginity and became quite a womaniser before settling down with the most loving and loyal of all women (who happened to be living in a different city at the time our relationship started). My eating disorder went away. Most importantly, I finally accepted myself and stopped wasting my resources on trying to be something I was not. None of this would have been possible without free access to personally relevant information the Internet had provided me with. In a situation like mine, people need more options, not less. They certainly don't need service providers putting frustrating barriers in their way. Net neutrality means all people get a chance to find the information that meets their needs and assert themselves by contributing to online communities of their choice. I'm much happier now than I was as a child. Yet just thinking about the possibility of the free Internet coming to its end and millions of people like me never finding hope sends me back to those times of helplessness and misery. I urge you to save lives by saving net neutrality. Sincerely yours, Viktor Denisov

—Viktor Denisov, Newark, DE

Because I've been screwed over one time after another by the big telecom companies. They're already completely out of control. They need more competition, not more control!

—Eff Nord, ,

Net neutrality is critical to maintain innovation and a democratic internet.

—Ray Kaplan, Athens, GA

The internet is everybody's, and shouldn't belong to the interests of big corporations!

—Charles Ponyik, Denver, CO

Freedom is always important.

—Steve Carrasco, Whittier, CA

Net Neutrality is important to me because Net Neutrality is important to democracy. In fact, in this day and age, it's essential to democracy.

—Jerry Mastriano, Forest Hills, NY

Freedom and growth can only be achieved by the sharing of information. I fully recognize that freedom of speech and the sharing of ideas is counterproductive to the large corporation giants, to damn bad! Pull up your socks and join the human race, not hinder it with your greed.

Cheers and Health N

—Nigel Kearns, ,

Don't sell ingenuity and freedom to the ISPs to care up as they wish and sell it back to us at twice the price and a fraction of the use.

—Gary Dymock, ,

So much of our lives are tied up with the internet today. It is time to stop the incursion by big companies to control our use. We already pay for having the internet. It should stop there!

—Jane Dowton, Walsenburg, CO

Keep the internet free and open. I don't want more big corporate intrusion or big government censorship.

—Debbie Murphy, San Antonio, TX

I run a small business and I am dependent on the internet - I do not want to be held hostage by the telecom cartels.

—Jaime Bateman, Franklin, TN

Because I use it to communicate issues of great importance to my elected and appointed officials. The internet should be a utility and a necessity, NOT a privilege nor a luxury. We should have a right to super fast online service like those in countries such as France, Japan, and South Korea do. I would deeply appreciate it if you kept Net Neutrality in place. Thank you and goodbye.

—B Thomas Diener, Albuquerque, NM

Net Neutrality is important to me because the Open Internet has given me quick access to the essential information I need to navigate the world around me. With the Internet, I have learned basic French as well as computer programming. The Internet has also provided a safe space to discuss socio-political issues and to help people worldwide with just the click of a button.

—Jordan Blossey, Clermont, FL

I'm on a disability pension and I will be forced to drop the internet all together if this goes through. The internet to me is one of the few avenues of entertainment that I have, if the cost goes up I will have one less thing I can do.

—Len Smith, ,

Net Neutrality facilitates the free flow of information between individuals all over the world. I truly believe that without it, civilization will begin to stagnate.

—J Brill, Mountain View, CA

we need the internet to stay democratic, and to be faster, not slower and more expensive!

—Juanita Harris, Ventura, CA

I lived through the McCarthy era and remember how easily people could be silenced when someone didn't like their point of view—for any reason, from economic to religious to political. My motto since then has been "Never again!" We must keep communication open to all voices or this democracy is finished.

—Nancy Kratochvil, Englewood, CO

Most of the websites I look at won't be able to afford the new fees. You MUST reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers" or the Internet will become useless to me.

—Jason Schulman, New York, NY

Plain selfishness. I deserve it!

—Ken Gawler, ,

No person or corporation (NOT the same thing, SCOTUS!) should take precedence over another in this country. We are all equal, and should have equal access.

—Vicki Michels, Shoreline, WA

Freedom of speech and availability of information is of the utmost importance to our society!!!

—Matthew A Weaver, Genoa, OH

The internet was built by everyone, now you trying to consor everyone. The internet should be free and open, not being controlled by someone like the FCC that are not even elected officials.further you have no God Given to control the People and put us in the slow lane, and make us pay more for having the internet I. Our homes.

—Leonard P Stahl, Edmonton,

Because I'm a free person without power against corporations

—Xose Alberte Cea, ,

we have enough regulations now

—Nelson Myers, harrisburg, PA

We the consumer need choice and need healthy competition in the business sector .

—Erik Johnson, Meadows of Dan, VA

This bill will make the commonly paid for highway into a toll road. Where you now only need an idea and follow through you will need an idea and a boat load of cash so it will run smoothly so it cannot be stole and re-branded. TL;DR: this is a setup for highway robbery, from companies lacking in innovation.

—Jim R. Didriksen, ,

It's the only reason the internet works at all.

—Ben Hendry, ,

Free and equal access to information is essential to a democracy that works for all citizens.

—Mary Georgiton, Columbus, OH

Neutrality was a cornerstone principal that led to the stunning growth and acceptance of the Internet. To kill that feature would damage the Internet irreparably for no good reason: only selfish, non-democratic reasons.

—Don Alameda, Montclair, NJ

Next they will be charging us to breath.

—Deborah McNeil, Marietta, GA

No company should get speed preference on the internet.

—Rocco Romeo, Princeton, NJ

The internet needs to continue to be a place where everyone can enjoy it to the fullest without worrying about extra fees and being punished for having less money.

—Zachary Phoenix Stolz, Decatur, IL

Re-classify broadband as a utility.

—Kenneth Waddy, Evergreen, CO

Freedom is not negotiable, anything less is totalitarianism. The U.S is increasingly viewed as a corpratocracy, owned and controlled by corrupt entities.

—Mirna, ,

Free, open and equal internet is imperative to growth, commerce, and, quite frankly, democracy. Have the vision to see the bigger picture. Please.

—Michelle Davis, santa Cruz, CA

Net neutrality is need to foster innovation in small tech startups, to provide equal, tamper-free, modern communications to individuals and organizations of all sizes.

—Willie Gollino, ,

The FCC; Must Restore Net Neutrality. Internet Service providers are common carriers, just like the electric companies. The Tax dollars of the people have paid for the infrastructure, and they deliver the product. If they are allowed to set up a Two-Tiered internet, these companies will charge the people a premium price. This cannot be allowed because these companies have become monopolies, which are illegal. The electric companies were broken up in the eighties, because they became monopolies. This is the same thing happening all over again. The People Know it, therefore the FCC, must breakup the Monopolies by Restoring Net Neutrality !

—Shawn Sargent, West Yarmouth, MA

The net was created for all. Keep it this way. Much learning happens here: do not turn this mode of communication into another non inclusive feature.

—Janette Yamaguchi, San Dimas, CA

I'm not rich enough to be on the fast track, but the Internet is indispensable to me.

—Nina Ramos, St. Petersburg, FL

Open Internet is so very important for the future of our world; the ability to access and share information with and through others should never be challenged or threatened.

—Rebecca McGehee, Seattle, WA

Since the ARPNET turned into the Internet - the Internet has ALWAYS been Neutral !!!! Let's keep it that way !!!!

—Robert Allen, Saint Paul, MN

Internet was created and developed for the free exchange of ideas and communication. Now the corporations are hell bent on destroying that basic fundamental intent in favour of more profit. The internet has enriched our lives both from a family point of view and social communications. Please don't let them destroy this in favour of more profits.

—Andy Cosgrove, ,

I do not want my small Internet-reliant business to be punted into the "slow lane."

—Mr. Theodore Wirth, Denville, NJ

We need universal and affordable internet for a happy, fair and peaceful world!

—Annemarie De Andrade, ,

Why must we always take a back seat to big business?

—John Gallagher, Middleton, WI

I run a small business that is 100% dependent on the Internet. I often need to transfer large files and embed video in SMB sites I help to build. Differential access--pushing small businesses like mine into the slow lane so big corporations can hog the bandwidth--will suppress competition and innovation. That's unfair.

—Adam Cornford, Oakland, CA

While net was originally released under different rules to provide for innovation, in the long run this has proven not to be the case. What has happen is there is number of large carriers which often have limited or no competition because of how internet is provided (over phone lines or cable) and thus giving the companies greater power. Also looking at rest of the world Americans are charged more for slower speeds. In the end there has been little innovation from the current rules and changing them will improve over all aspects of the interent.

—Bryan Beyer, San Dimas, CA

The internet has caused a boom in communications and innovation. Crowd sourcing through to small businesses selling bespoke products means that the open internet is an economic driver. By creating a double speed internet many small businesses will be choked before they can start. Such a system may suit a really big business because it can basically bully smaller ones out of business. The double speed internet will mean stagnation and sloth and probably seriously effect the world economy negatively.

—Damian Evans, ,

Freedom of speech freedom to communicate between people freedom to express your opinion it's about freedom and we're losing that little by little important to keep the net three for a democratic America

—Trevor Thomas, Grand Junction, CO

We have so many big problems coming down the pipe. Locally, nationally, globally, we are going to need the best minds, the best solutions, the best intentions crashing in to each other with as much frequency as possible. And there's no way any one person, or like-minded corporate group, can man that switch board in our interest and in the interest of shareholders and 1/4ly reports at the same time.

—Galloway Allbright, Los Angeles, CA

What if the internet is God's mysterious way of overcoming all the evil in the world!? Are you really willing to risk destroying that for the sake of green paper!?!?

—Christian Kunig, Smyrna, DE

I work for, and have worked for a number of businesses of all sizes, that make considerable use of the internet. From 15 employees to hundreds of thousands of employees, all of these businesses provide competition, employment, and certainly their own purpose to the economy. These businesses should operate on a level playing field, especially when they provide services that compete with those of a company they work with to provide service either from their facilities or to their consumers, especially in this case where consumers could be individual citizens or other businesses of any size. What we are talking about here is shared infrastructure, and as such a fair market price should be established, but we should not have a system whereby preferred or prioritized service is established by anything but what the market will bear.

—Ian Corbett, Brooklyn, NY

If I cannot count on an open internet, my communication with family around the world will become too expensive for me. I shop online because it saves me money. I learn about things online that some big media won't tell me and I need to know these things about health issues and medications. I need an open internet where I can learn about new things in art and media and keep an eye out for what is going on in the world. I need it to sometimes make travel arrangements that offer good deals. I find it useful in getting reviews of movies and restaurants and places to go. If fast and slow lanes are created, how can I count on the services I get from the internet now if I cannot afford it with these rule changes that have been proposed?

—Barbara Nadel, Milford, PA

It is a public utility and the FCC is paid by taxpayers and is DUTY BOUND to protect Americans.

—Ron Sonesen, Ocala, FL

It is important to treat everyone equally and not allow more discrimination based on earning the power. Large companies already control most of the wealth, why give them a larger share? Do you not want your family and future generations to have a chance at a better life and a greater chance at freedom of expression?

—Jay Senek, ,

Turning the Internet over to corporate profiteers is a terribly dangerous notion.

—Paul Franzmann, Walla Walla, WA freedom to use the internet as it is freedom to use the internet as it is

—Merrilyn, Hodges, AL

Freedom

—Jessica Nolte, Nooksack, WA

With a limited budget as a student, Internet is expensive as it is. Increased costs and inability to access important information due to slower speeds on independent sites will lead to decreased amount of independent news sites and less voices on the Internet. Freedom of speech includes on the Internet; there should be no priorities on whose speech is more important based on financial capabilities.. That's the way a "true" democracy is, something North America is increasingly distancing itself from

—Ryan Reid, ,

I shouldn't even have to explain this. It's common sense to anyone who isn't in the pocket of a corporation.

—Chase Colvin, Taylorsville, UT

We already pay for the transit of data on the internet. If companies want to make more money on data, they should raise their prices. Creating artificial tiers undermines the ability of the community to promote and defend sites that are important to them. If we do not preserve the neutrality of internet traffic prioritization, then the freedom that the internet brings will be entirely lost.

—James Fowle, Carle Place, NY

The very foundations of the Internet are based on reasonable usage costs and free exchange of ideas. That is where its greatest strengths lie. Caving to big-telecom's desires for ever greater profits WILL KILL the Internet as we know it. Similarly, overly invasive surveillance, data collection and censorship WILL KILL the Internet as we know it. Should we stop the bad guys from hurting people, stealing identities and fraud? Of course we should, but not at the expense of ruining everything that is good about the Internet. Please, do as we ask and classify Internet Service Providers as Common Carriers.

—Chris Ryan, ,

I don't want my ISP (Verizon FiOS) to throttle my traffic, or worse, enact tariffs to extort money from websites I visit & online services I use. I am a telecommuter to the largest aerospace & defense contractor in the USA and depend on the Internet as a utility just as I do electricity. Virtually every other citizen considers the Internet to be a utility which has now become part of our daily life. It's time to officially classify the Internet as a utility and enforce equal access.

—Paul M Edwards, Ontario, CA

A level playing field for all. No favoritism to corporate America

—William A McLaughlin, Chicago, IL

The internet needs to stay on a level playing field for everyone. From the smallest voice to the biggest. A 2 tier system will serve the interests of big companies and the rich. Everyone else will be shut out or minimized.

—Nancy Gillette, Ansonia, CT

Everyone should have access to the same opportunities and information without being controlled by those who think differently. There should be no outside interfering with customer websites or anyone else that has a different point of view.

—Joanne La Barre, Norfolk, NY

Common carriage fosters innovation and investment. Do not tilt the level playing field!

—Dave Scott, ,

Changing internet neutrality would be catastrophic for online businesses, large and small. As a consumer and business owner, I find the prospect of limiting business opportunities for the general public downright offensive.

—Kial Natale, ,

Because it's only fair.

—Raelyn Michaelson, Seattle, WA

Keep the net free. It does not need government or corporation influence. The net is the last free frontier. Leave it that way please

—Aaron, Crawfordsville, IN

We need to keep the internet neutral !

—Chris, ,

Neutrality is a must, corporations do not have the best interest of consumers/citizens at heart, they have their own, including profits.

—Timothy Gordon, ,

equal access

—Sharon Manos, Phoenix, AZ

Access to the internet is an important equity issue in the 21st century. It cannot be restricted to those able to pay steep fees in a just society.

—Wendy Morris, ,

Telecoms are effectively monopolies and not strong advocates for openness and equal access.

—Harald Conradi, Los Angeles, CA

As a new entrepreneur, I don't want to be at a disadvantage to my large, established, monied competitors because I am not able to afford "high speed internet" - because I don't want to be consigned to sub-standard internet services.

—Paul Cully, Westford, MA

The gap between the "haves" and "have nots" has never in history been wider; and more than ever, people all over this nation look to the internet to find out what is really happening in the world - and even in their own towns. Destroying the open internet will be the equivalent of controlling the free press and gagging the freedom of speech that are critical to successful functioning of the United States of America. Open internet is the 21st Century equivalent of electrical utilities, water utilities, and lower tech communications utilities. You know that if you make a decision to slow down or block the internet, there will be law suits filed immediately. Will you have the guts necessary to decide for the people of this country or the monied interests of corporate communications giants? It will take guts - have you got any?

—Dona Stallworth, Austin, TX

There shouldn't be difference between wealthy people and poor people for the internet access.

—Montalbano, ,

Stop corporate interests from having too much power

—Michael Wong, ,

Freedom and access to information.

—James Miller, Austin, TX

Money should not control the speed we receive things. We already pay for the service. Equal is Equal let the little guy/girl have a chance!

—Robert Krueger, Chicago, IL

It is important that "carriers" not be allowed to be "content providers". The latest move is a step in that direction--a step that needs to be reversed.

—Brad Grigor, ,

Currently, everyone is free to be heard equally on the internet. A video I make can be seen by as many people as a huge corporation's can. The internet won't be free if people can pay to prioritize their message. Congress is america works the same way, look how inefficient that is.

—Connor Christie, ,

I believe in freedom for all to learn, to teach and most importantly, to show others things they would not have possible for them to see otherwise

—Vegar, ,

The Internet opens the world for everyone on a level playing field. Any restrictions or corporate control will reduce out connection and growth. Companies say it is to reduce crime, it will mainly be used to increase profits by favouring 'partners' that make them more money. Common Carrier status will support the people of the world in continuing to grow beyond all expectations.
—Chris Born, Bellingham, WA

Simply because some people don't like people speaking their minds opposite of what they believe does not invalidate what those people want to say. Which is the case here.
—Jeremy Freid, Canby, OR

It has worked good for an average user like me for the 20-some years I have been on the Internet daily. Why should some groups get a "fast lane" and average Jane, like me might not get to read everything I want to read without paying more. It is not fair and just. Please do not destroy the Internet!
—Carole Schreiber, Brevard, NC

It slows down the impending oligarchy.
—Patricia Forbes, Albuquerque, NM

Millions of us Americans cannot afford to be left out as second class citizens. This is America. Are we really going to let the rest of the first world be superior to us?
—Mr. Anje' Waters, Grass Valley, CA

Abandoning net neutrality means destroying equality.
—Igor Clukas, ,

It is a public utility and should stay that way.
—Linda K. Mullinax, Dalton, GA

This shouldn't even be considered - this takes lobbying (a legal word for 'bribe') to a new level. Big Telecom not only should not be allowed to do this, but they should be forced to lower prices that are already there. Why on earth would we pay the most in the world? And Wi-Fi is becoming free in so many areas around the country, the very fact that it costs Big Telecom money to provide it is laughable. Please don't let them sweet talk you. Your decision impacts the future, please stop this in its tracks
—Darryl Dobbs, ,

What happened to " For The People"?
—Avery D. Lee, Middletown, OH

The internet is as vital an invention as the wheel and if we make the right choices it will be with us for decades to come. Net neutrality is the right choice
—Byron Gamble, Silver Spring, MD

The internet should not become a luxury only for the wealthy just to fatten the profits of greedy corporations. Keep access, cost and speed fair and reasonable for all.
—J Agata, Sebastopol, CA

Because it is important that we have freedom in the internet
—Desmond Miller, ,

I live in a rural area where internet service is already slow and expensive. The internet was developed with my tax money. Why on earth would I want certain corporations to have a "fast lane" for their content?

—Rich Fairbanks, Jacksonville, OR

The constant erosion of individual voice vs corporate interests is diminishing representative democracy in our country and must stop.

—Bryan Liff, New York, NY

Nobody Needs the Internet. It is the new advertizing medium for corporatioins replacing the printed page and it replaces Faxing and telephone. Remove it's neutrality and Millions will unplug and where will corporations go to sell stuff? WEBTV/MSNTV Land line modems are gone and ISPs are asking $50.00 up to get any speed at all. There are no more modems on computers for dial up connections that used to use the telephone lines for simple communications. The ISP is now the ONLY communication medium replacing telephone lines that are controled by the FCC. ISPs need to be controled by the FCC since there is no Telephone Modem alternative any more. Now that Voice, Video, entertainment, mail and emergency allerts are all transmitted electronicly over the internet, the FCC needs to reclassify Broadband providers as "Common Carriers" under Title II.

—Edward Dijeu, Union City, CA

It's not right that the internet should only be available to the richest.

—Mary Iqbal, Saint Cloud, MN

Every time the government gets involved with "trying to save us" the services decline and the price goes up! We know that's the game so leave it alone!

—Russ Edwards, Grants Pass, OR

We need net neutrality so that we all can use the internet no matter how wealthy we are!

—Harriett Clark, Moses Lake, WA

Freedom of information, expression, and consumption

—James M Adams, Saint Petersburg, FL

The net does not belong to Big Telecom period. The rules can change when I can pay for only the cable channels I wish to watch and not all of the other crap that gets bundled by Big Telecom.

—John Hudson, ,

Because we need the internet to be open and not filtered by monopolies.

—Mary Grace Hebert, Champaign, IL

Net Neutrality should be covered under the right to free speech.

—Carol Lynn Jones, Martinsburg, WV

Freedom of speech and the unrestricted access to it are foundational elements in a democratic society. Giving a few large corporations the ability to limit both through excessive fees and restricted access would seriously damage that freedom.

—William Thomas, ,

As a country that claims to champion freedom, I ask that you please lead by example.

—Gregory Baker, ,

Net Neutrality promotes growth and innovation.

—Kalin Lundquist, Arvada, CO

The internet must be an open one. It destroys the whole point of the internet if it becomes "tiered" and not free for everyone.

—Irene Franck, New York, NY

It's a utility!

—Roger Davis, Whittier, CA

I'm a small business owner who wants my page to load the same speed and availability as amazon. Please protect me from losing connection with my client base.

—Graeme Ellis, ,

So far internet access has been a leading example of freedom and a huge success. Allowing ISPs to play favorites and charge for faster access will create an oppressive system the favors the wealthy, there is too much of that in the world already. These new rules will negatively impact the global economy and global culture while only serving to increase the profit margins of a few already wealthy companies.

—William McGrath, San Lorenzo, CA

Every voice and every vote counts. There are no "slow lane" voices or votes.

—Susanna Kaljur, Courtenay,

It's my connection with the rest of the world.

—Eleanore K. Leslie, Vero Beach, FL

The Internet is slow enough . Don't make it slower.

—Robert Carroll, Cocolalla, ID

This is a public utility and the FCC IS PAID BY taxpayers and is duty bound to protect the taxpayers.

—Lynn Miller, Ocala, FL

The internet without Net Neutrality creates potential for abuse by big telecom companies. Please keep the internet open to everyone, not just those who can afford to pay for a fast lane!

—Josh Thelin, Berkeley, CA

We cannot allow a fast/slow model; the Internet should be an open source of knowledge to all, not just those who can afford the best pieces.

—Ryan Roosa, Ypsilanti, MI

Corporations should not have control over the Internet. I shudder at the thought of what would happen if they did.

—Robert Yunus, Henrico, VA

The internet brings in too much economic and social value to be gated and controlled by a small number of powerful corporations. It has so permeated our daily lives that it is as essential as the electricity it uses and must be classified in a way that does not restrict usage to those that can afford to pay the gatekeeper.

—Alex Michael Cameron, ,

Net Neutrality provides the basis for global democracy - this is an important moral and political step forward for mankind.

—Richard Jennings, ,

Rich or poor everyone deserves broadband!

—David Sherson, Jackson, MI

As a journalist concerned for press freedom, a citizen and strong stand for democracy, and as a mother who cares about the world her children inherit, net neutrality is what makes online communications free. It's a public utility. Don't let big corporations buy our common rights.

—Nancy Black, Santa Barbara, CA

The free flow of information is critical for communications in a democracy and allowing for restrictions on the flow is the opening push to close the door, censor and restrict news and allowing for free expression and access. As an American, I see the continued erosion of our individual rights going to corporations in a myriad of ways. KEEP THE INTERNET FREE AND OPEN. (We give THEM the right to operate in our country, not vice-versa.)

—Dr. Scott Simmerman, Taylors, SC

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

—David Sides, Missoula, MT

The net is where WE organize, which is why they are trying to slow us down. They know the free net is what allows the little people to have a say in government.

—Peggy S Alcorn, Seminole, FL

Everyone has a right to use the internet. It's original intention was as a communication tool.

—Stephanie Doetsch, Beaufort, SC

Freedom is what the United States pretends to stand for, but from here in Venezuela, it doesn't really seem like it with developments like these. Thanks to web neutrality I am able to start a website here and have a real impact over in your country and around the world whether I decide to make a blog or start a business or collaborate with a non-profit. Even "small" preference to some websites on the US can have an enormous impact over the billions of users of the internet. When speaking of the Internet you can't just think about the US corporations, there's also the common folk of your country and around the world for whom you could ruin the Internet by permitting a "fast-lane". Seriously, as the Federal Communications Commission you should be thinking more about the needs of the American people and foster carrier competition and improved internet speeds, not destructive "optimization" measures.

—Alberto Delgado, ,

Please protect net neutrality! It's important world wide, listen to the experts.

—Nicola Johnson, ,

Because with all the emails I get every day and open to websites would keep me on the internet even longer than it is now with slow lanes to some websites. I really don't and shouldn't have to spend even more time on my computer than I do now and how is this going to work for business's that have people on their computers all day. It's definitely going to slow down business productivity and extend the amount of time a business can get their work done. No, I would have to say that this proposal to end Net Neutrality would only increase revenue for the Internet Service Providers and slow things down for all internet users. Say no to ending Net Neutrality

—Albert Bechtel, Seattle, WA

Net neutrality is the only way to maintain the free expression and equality of access that has made the Internet a source of economic growth and social progress in the US for the past 20 years. Of course big telecom companies want more control of content, because it will give them a chance to make extra profits from any Internet users they believe they can shake down for more money, anyone doing the exact same things they were doing before the telecom companies were granted such extraordinary powers to discriminate. This is an obvious and ridiculous grab for additional profits at the expense of the well-being of the public and the progress of our society.

—Holly C Holloway, Palo Alto, CA

The only thing net neutrality will do is silence the voices of the opposing party that is not in power. The question is when will you be the other party?

—Sean Salas, Stillwater, OK provides equal access for all

—, San Diego, CA

Simply because it is democratic, neutral and makes sense.

—Robert Stiven, ,

So I can buy the overpriced underpaid baubles the NWO produces

—Rick Canning, Aurora, IL

The belief that information should be free and accessible is deeply American and a democratic sensibility. Obviously, tampering with this accessibility is undermining a force that is helping push forth a more democratic and humane society across the globe. I believe charging for access is counterproductive and not in keeping with the realities of many people's lives as more and more Americans are struggling to make ends meet. The gap between the wealthy and the poor is an ever pervasive fact and it seems to be worsening every day. Ending net neutrality feels like yet another step into a modern Dark Ages that will help no individual except, in all respect, the few who are lining their pockets. I thank you for being open to read mine and others comments.

—Lisa Marguerite Mora, Los Angeles, CA

Dear FCC, if telcos/ISPs are allowed to decide which sites/content gets a fast lane, then they're the ones who will pick the winners and losers instead of consumers. We need content to win on its merit, not based on its ability to bribe ISPs. We need all content to be treated equally. We do NOT want the internet to become like cable TV.

—Aleksander Zawisza, ,

I believe in a Free Internet with no bottlenecks or restrictions!

—Todd Broster, Los Angeles, CA

It's important for Free speech as these rules will be adopted by countries who want to limit free speech, they can then use it to slow down the access to sites they don't approve, saying they haven't paid for the fast lane, this way they don't even have to block the site, sites that follow the countries rules and propaganda will be on the fast lane, people will then more likely read those sites as they load on your browser immediately. The other reasons not to have a fast lane is, most cloud services and data centers will move out of USA as laws in the EU and other countries might consider this unfair or illegal.

—A Govender, ,

No one should have preferential treatment on the internet

—Jeff Wyatt, ,

In the name of decency, honor and preserving what has offered the most hope to the most people ever - please Do NOT order the internet to be controlled by private telecom companies. PLEASE designate internet service providers / broadband providers as COMMON CARRIERS in order that this wondrous resource / means of communication may REMAIN WITH THE COMMON PEOPLE whose Money Paid for Its Development - NOT Verizon, AT&T or any of the other companies whose sole purpose is to make Profit for themselves, their shareholders etc... and NOT to serve the common good of our society. To Allow them to CONTROL AND CHARGE would be tantamount to authorizing ROBBERY - HIGHWAY ROBBERY!!!!!! I beg of you as a simple American citizen and taxpayer in the name of all that is decent in our nation to NOT PERMIT THE EXPLOITATION of people like myself, by permitting TELECOM companies TO EXPLOIT THE INTERNET !!!!!!!!!!!!!!! Thank you, Peggy J. Salas

—Peggy Salas, Stillwater, OK

We need access to the Net and we don't need big Cable/Telecom censoring content. The Net is the main facilitator of free speech these days. And the rights of citizens should have priority over the profiteering of corporations. Most people's cable/ISP bills are higher than the basic utilities. Don't make it worse. Ensure Net Neutrality and (AND) start putting price constraints on these firms..
—Constance Bevitt, Silver Spring, MD

I am not rich, paying more than the $75.00 I do already would effect me greatly
—James D McCarthy, Whitestone, NY

US citizens have been very successful in creating innovative software for the internet. Don't jeopardize those accomplishments in the future.
—Susan Minter, Albuquerque, NM

I use the internet, but I am unable to pay extra for this service.
—Janet, ,

Net Neutrality is internet freedom. You take that a way. The you only leave yourself with civil unrest.
—Wade Glenn Whitworth Jr, Lake Worth, FL

The Internet allows for the maintenance and preservation of Democratic order as was demonstrated by the Mideast/Egyptian challenges a few years ago. Please do not change the existing system as it is. Regards, Matt Buie Vancouver BC mbuie@telus.net
—Matt Buie, ,

Net neutrality ensures access to the wealth of information available online.
—, Wellington, FL

Our family is all over the globe . We want our e-mails to one another to be free of any interference of any kind.
—Heather Loffelmann, ,

I don't want to have to deal with slower load times and possible higher prices on websites because of FCC greed. Net neutrality should always be priority.
—Darren Soulier, Bayfield, WI

A free internet is the future for innovation.
—Jack Bowker, ,

Please preserve a democratic internet for all.
—Susan Miller, Tucson, AZ

Nobody owns the internet
—Ron Sullivan, ,

I use the Internet daily for personal and work-related tasks. I teach college students who use the Internet daily. We all need free access (like the library) and accurate information. The more the Internet is used for marketing, the less accuracy is available. Also, if the highest bidder gets specialized treatment, all of us will suffer from reduced quality and factual information. The utility of the Internet will be compromised and gradually become meaningless. Please don't allow this to happen! Keep the Internet free and open.
—Margaret Austin, Nevada City, CA

If you do this the new Australian government will adopt a similar policy. The internet is a wonderful technology. Please do not destroy it.
—John Ransley, ,

We have lost a true, free press!

—Drummond Barclay, Bainbridge Island, WA

keep it the way it is FREE.....

—James L. Stalls, Niceville, FL

Please keep information accessible for all.

—Bonnie Margay Burke, San Diego, CA

Our government is of by and for the people, not the corporations. This means that -WE-decide what makes our culture. If ISPs are allowed to filter traffic at their whim or based on some pay-to-play scheme, they will be taking the internet from us and usurping it for their own profit. We must allow equal access to everybody in order to ensure fairness. Our country does not embrace the idea of a top-down authority structure other places, why would we allow it for the internet? The people make this country what it is. The people have made the internet what it is. Let's keep it that way. Reclassify as common carriers so that the people remain the source of power. Keep your integrity, do the right thing.

—Elijah Wade, Cape Girardeau, MO

An open, accessible internet is key to a functioning democracy!

—Jesse Williams, Cincinnati, OH

On a fixed income this is how I stay connected and feel there should not be charged for its use

—Sandra&David Jennings, Coshocton, OH

It's the freedom that counts to the average person. I had hoped we were moving slowly away from ultimate control by the money men by having a safe place to communicating our beliefs and feelings. Keep NET NEUTRALITY for all and our future children.

—James S Yates, ,

The freedom of the Internet was what initiated revolution to freedom in the backwards middle east countries. Excessive controls always end up creating discontent and eventually revolution. Make the right decision for the masses not the privileged.

—Frank Egerszegi, ,

We already have expensive internet here - families have a hard time affording it.

—Stephanie Davidson, ,

The internet should be allowed to be fully accessed, good and bad. This is no different than the freedom of speech arguments. And allowing ISP's to charge for more speed should be a criminal offense. Why drive one more divide between the haves and have-nots? Why are laws in this country based on whomever can pay the most? This is another example of the transfer of wealth from the poor and middle classes to those that are already wealthy.

—Ritchie Williams, Kansas City, MO

Info,banking,ect

—Joe Sciampacone, ,

Because it is fair!

—Naomi Sobo, San Diego, CA

I believe in free speech and expression. This is also a way for the telecom companies to gouge consumers the way they do with cable services. Please do not allow this to happen kind regards Peter —Peter Bornestig, ,

Free Speech is the will of the people and as the arenas in which we the people are allowed to practice this basic right disappear it is becoming more and more important to protect the last vestiges of free speech. The FCC is a FEDERAL body, meaning that it is an extension of the will of the PEOPLE that make their existence possible. The vast majority of people in this great nation do not want to see more money in politics making decisions that go against the will of the majority and as such the FCC should have zero difficulty in determining their position on this issue — keep money out of Free Speech, keep Net Neutrality alive and well.

—Cody Saya, Los Angeles, CA

I want it to continue to be kept open for all!

—Judy Epstein, Minneapolis, MN

If we loose net neutrality, it will be the first step, and a big one at that, down the road to an corporate authoritarian hellscape of a future. What has made the internet such a force for positive change in the world, has been the equal playing field it presents to all comers. The interests of telecoms and large media companies do not trump the interests of a free society. You know this is wrong. Put aside the cognitive dissonances that seem to be in place and think about this critically. I'd prefer the dystopia told of in cyber punk fiction remain just that, a fiction.

—Matthew Stavis, oakland, CA

The internet is modern societies most important resource. Keeping the internet healthy and open is of the utmost important to us and future generations.

—Sandy Spink, ,

The internet should be treated as a public utility, not another income source for corporations. Please don't miss this historic opportunity to preserve true net neutrality.

—Laura Wolfe, Granby, CT

Please stop the commodification of the internet. 'Free' speech should NOT give corporate entities an advantage over "We The People"!!

—Bill Tower, Worcester, MA

I don't want to see a throttled, censored internet. No matter how much you assure me, corporate internet entities will discover a way to use new toll charge internet rules to eliminate the freely-availblle internet as we now know it. So please leave true net neutrality in place - do NOT bow to corporate lobbyists if you can resist them.

—Mark Bohrer, Albuquerque, NM

It is the last defence in freedom of expression and democracy. Please help save it

—Xavier Therrien, ,

Big Telecom is already drastically overcharging for their services. Without Net Neutrality we will be overcharged for an inferior product.

—Thomas Trainor, ,

feedom

—Stephan Strasser, Scottsdale, AZ

Please allow the poor people to have something left to enjoy themshelves

—George Zouzoulas, ,

I use the net for a part time job to supplement my income from a full time job. Loss of net neutrality is going to make this extra income impossible for me to keep as it will likely cost more to pay for an internet connection than I can make. Additionally, I am very concerned about Big Telecom's infringement on what we may/can/want to see on the net. I am also concerned about the effects this would have on students and educators.

—Daviann McClurg, Salina, KS

I am a retired Registered Nurse living on a small income. I need to use the Internet freely. Please watch out for us "common folk". Thank You

—Ms. Martha Mohidin, Zirconia, NC

I value my ability to choose my own Internet content.

—Evelyn Smith, North Little Rock, AR

Because no corporation I pay a service for should tell me how I should use it and where.

—Shane Smith, ,

A free internet equals a free world.

—Taunia Sabanski, ,

The Internet should be FREE in all ways for everyone; no Elite Class on the net!! It is the most important communication of millions of people especially those who are not Free like we are. Pat

—Pat Strandberg, Henderson, NV

IT IS IMPORTANT I DO NOT WANT TO SEE OUR DEMOCRACY BEING CHIPPED AWAY BY CORPORATIONS INTEREST ABOVE THE PEOPLE RIGHT TO KEEP AN OPEN AND FAIR INTERNET.

—Clara Pichi, Hemet, CA

I, my family, friends and everyone I know uses the internet daily to keep in touch and stay informed. Some rely on it for their businesses. American tax payers funded the creation, development and mass use of the internet. It has become as important to all Americans as phones if not more important and our tax money made it all happen. Reclassify the internet service providers as "common carriers" under Title II which is what they are today. Protect Americans right to freely utilize the Internet that their taxes created. Do Not Approve any for profit private business / corporation to rip off the very people who made it a reality, the American people not businesses.

—Therese Bovee McKelvey, Monroe, WA

Net Neutrality is vital to the future of this country. To put an additional price for access constitutes a harm to less-moneyed interests, a violation of the 14th Amendment. The people are getting riled up and we are sharpening our pitchforks.

—Hobie Anthony, Portland, OR

Protect my ability to access internet and link with my community.

—Aric Schichor, Washington D C, DC

Free access for all is fundamental to a democratic system.

—Octavio A. Gallardo, ,

Restricting traffic restricts innovation and fundamentally changes how the Internet works... Leave it open and encourage greater bandwidth!

—Stephen Park, ,

I support an open internet with no slow lanes and will vote accordingly.

—Grant Jennings, ,

Having the freedom to view information at will is not only a right that we United States citizens should have but denying us of this right is unconstitutional based on the First and Ninth Amendment.

—Daniel R Spillane, San Francisco, CA

Censorship through out history , has shown to be the wrong path for Mankind ,... do not destroy , the enormous potential of the internet.. Simple ... it's wrong.. don't do it

—Mark, ,

the internet should be open to all period. regardless of income

—Mike j Kelly, horseheads, NY

The internet is a common carrier not a corporate business tool.

—Ernie Robeson, Spokane, WA

Innovation should not be stifled just because big companies want to get more money

—Jamie Beresford, Easthampton, MA

We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Priscilla Sieckman, Oak Ridge, TN

The people have been victims of corporate greed long enough. Please do the right thing for the American people!

—Sean DesRosiers, Jamesville, NY

Internet communication is a vital public service. To grant privileged access to corporate wealth would gravely impair its value to society and to me personally.

—Paul Romney, Baltimore, MD

The internet shouldn't be used for even more profit for the big businesses. People with less money will be at a disadvantage, yet again, as the people with more money to spend will have faster, better internet service. Is everything in our country now open to the highest bidder?

—Mary Schreiber, New Freedom, PA

Information

—J Jordan, Farmington, MI

our economy is becoming more and more information driven. Limiting access to information will only stunt our growth.

—Gov Landrum, Denver, CO

Because the web is a public utility for all to use and experience, not just for corporations to exploit!!! Why does the US have the slowest and most expensive costs for the internet?? Other countries have twice the speed and half the costs and their providers seem to make enough money. Enough of the fucking gouging of the American people.

—Robert B. DiGiovanni Jr., Monterey, CA

FREE SPEECH

—LC Granger, Portland, OR

this proposal is an affront on freedom of expression, access to information, and equal opportunity for small business. DON'T DO IT!

—Jesse Ash, ,

Destroying Net Neutrality would go against the best interest of the public. Protecting the public should be the FCC's main concern. Enabling this policy would only contribute to the increase in cost to the consumers, who will be required to pay more to keep the same level of service. Please take action and protect the American citizens, as well as every citizen in the world.

—Vincent Morin-Côté, ,

This country is made up of people who make up a consensus by sharing information. Your responsibility is to keep access to communications fairly available to all. Corporations ducedd is not your responsaibiloty

—Loretta Marmor, Los Angeles, CA

As a Canadian, I believe in equal opportunity. Access to the Internet, like our medicine, should be inclusive.

—William Junger, ,

Equality of opportunity is important to me. Opportunities to practice intellectual freedom, for all Americans, are important to me. Access to a diversity of opinion is important to me. A tiered Internet, supported by monolithic communication corporations will most likely serve ideas that feed those corporations, their supporters - rather than the marvelous, colorful diversity of a variety of people who "fight like everything" - struggle with opinions that make the United States so grandly and richly diverse: brocaded with energetic, and ingeniously, outrageously intertwined women, men, and their children. Please! Consider well, FCC.

—Mrs. Sally E Rawlins, Big Spring, TX to keep the internet democratic

—, ,

My livelihood depends on internet marketing. This is very important in a climate of unemployment.

—Frances Woodley, Llandysul,

Because of freedom of speech. More money ought not give more freedom. Common carriers should be COMMON, i.e. everybody's carriers.

—George Toth, Alexandria, VA

Do not sacrifice free access to the internet to allow big corporate media to profit and to control

—Julie-Anne Le Gras, ,

I should be able to go where I want, when I want, and not have to pay to have special privileges to do so. NO ONE should have to pay extra for special use of OUR internet!

—Kim Hensley, Stockton, CA

Free Speech

—Matthew Golub, Richmond, VA

We do not need low speed lanes to favor certain content providers over other ones. Just leave it alone.

—Tim Elson, ,

Common carriage is valuable because it gives us the opportunity to hear new ideas & innovations. If these ideas & innovations depended on money most of them would be unheard & unseen. Yes, to a free & open internet.

—Ruth Dyke, Foresthill, CA

the internet is one of the few places where the corporate influence is kept relatively in check and must stay that way for the good of the people's welfare and need for equality

—James Lapp, Doylestown, PA

Our internet access should not be impeded by any entity. It is necessarily covered under the first amendment as a basic right. Incurring the founding fathers intentions that our government be transient in adapting to the needs of the people net neutrality is essentially important

—Nic Tedesco, Groton, CT

Limiting the Internet is just like George Orwell's 1984, BIG BROTHER is watching everything you do, even those in power will be watched —Darren, ,

Everyone deserves equal access to information, regardless of socioeconomic status. Anyone who could not afford to pay the fees would be denied equal access to information, and this would play a role in the poverty cycle by making it harder for people to get the information they need to succeed.

—Terri Hillyard, ,

Because it's fair.

—Stephen Ford, Natick, MA

Net Neutrality is an essential component of free speech and access to important information to keep the populace well informed.

—Martha H. Ames, Providence, RI democracy freedom!!!!!!

—Lorraine Fleming, ,

As a small business owner net neutrality is crucial to my customers finding me, browsing my website and viewing available services. If you do not protect the open internet this very well put my small company out of business. Thank you for listening to the voice of the people.

—Ricardo Frustockl, Santa Barbara, CA

Digital accessibility is important to everyone. 2 tiers of internet aren't accessible. Don't do this!

—Johnny Taylor, ,

Preserve our constitutional right to freedom speech and freedom of expression.

—Lisa Lee, Rexford, NY

The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. I emphatically urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality.

—Joseph Kondrot, Washington, DC

Keep the IRON BOOT of corporate greed off our necks, PLEASE!

—Gary Childers, Eugene, OR

Net Neutrality levels the playing field, increases competition, and keeps the American Dream a real possibility.

—Clint Chapman, ,

I'm on Social Security & can't even buy food anymore.

—Evelyn Zerlin, Largo, FL

I do not wish to have big corporations telling me what I can do on the internet.

—Ms. Patricia Auer, Ballwin, MO, MO

The big cable companies don't need another avenue for revenue, Bills are too high now!

—Mike Pauk, , the net is a medium for free exchange, it will push things underground and leave more negative consequences for society. it will disconnect people and destroy our communities.

—Rae St. Arnault, ,

Broadband is a telecommunications service, and internet service providers must be reclassified as "common carriers" in order to protect the "free market" of the internet.

—Daniel Gardner, New York, NY

We need an open Internet to conduct our small businesses, which are the real job creators!

—MC Hagerty, Carlsbad, CA

it is right and fair

—, Arlington, VA

Enough is enough. what I watch and say is my business, and not the governments'. As long as I do not break any laws, or hurt anybody its not of there affaire, look in your own back yard before looking into mine!

—Bertrand Leblanc, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me because we haven't the income to continue to have fees increase. Also we are as important as big Corporations and the bottom line for them is always more money

—, Vermontville, NY

Duh!!!

—AlanDoner Doner, North Vancouver,

1. There is so much manipulation around us - why add more? 2. Keynes: key to prosperity is free trade of goods and of knowledge!

—Nicco Kunzmann, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me because I won't have to pay ever-inflating prices for internet access. It is important to me to have equal access to all online entities, which fosters innovation and competitiveness to further benefit society in general and not just telecommunication behemoths.

—Kevin Charron, Colchester, CT

Freedom of the internet is essential.

—Niffer, Pittsburgh, PA

It's the last safe haven on Earth. I haven't done anything bad, so why penalize me?

—David Lorrman, ,

The Internet is the last platform for free speech and proper working of democracy, replacing traditional media along the way. It enables any and everyone to communicate with the rest of the humanity, thus providing for the people's right to know, even though their respective governments may not like it. It also allows citizens to know the real facts, so that they can make informed decisions on important matters which is paramount for a working democracy. Lastly, especially through personal websites, blogs and vlogs, it enables people to learn and understand other people's view even though they may reside on the other side of the World.

—Hakan Çelik, ,

Net neutrality falls under the free press and free speech areas of being an American Citizen. At least in my opinion. PLEASE do not give corporate America MORE control of the things we use everyday in our personal and professional lives by giving the larger internet providers the ability to control the speed. Thank you for reading my opinion.

—Thomas Corey, Algonac, MI

Net neutrality is important because it encourages true progress and innovation. The FCC's current proposals will stifle this and grind down the digital people-powered crowd-sourced commons ethos.

—Abdul Jalal Choudhury, ,

The destruction of net neutrality: is that the right direction? Is that the intention of Congress? No.

—Marie Lloyd, ,

The Net was designed to be free.

—Pietro Fornara, ,

Without Net Neutrality, the internet becomes little more than another means of consumption. Yes that is good for the economy. Our economy flourishes on means of consumption. But we would lose one free and equal means of creation. Before the internet the masses consumed what the select few created. Now the masses have a platform for creation. If you do not consider broadband providers as common carriers, which they very logically are, you hammer the death nail into a great many future creators of amazing new things. We are not talking free expression here, we are talking free creation. Please, we do not need more reality television channels.

—Jordan Munroe, Huntingburg, IN

The people need to win on this public good, not the corporations.

—Kathy Long Holland, Lake Oswego, OR

I do not like big business interests having an unfair monopolistic control over anything.

—Charles Cobb, Brandon, FL

The internet is a beautiful, powerful means of communication that symbolizes united humanity and freedom. These priority regulations will set a precedent that advantages big corporate profits over freedom of speech. The short term gains will not even come close to the long term disaster situation this will initiate.

—Adal Bermann, San Francisco, CA

Because corporations already have way too much financial and political power.

—Mr. Jerome C. Urbaniak, Oswego, IL

The internet is my free access to information and communication.

—Fran Larson, Pacifica, CA

I want the internet to continue to develop as an assessible technology with a level playing field. I do not want corporate giants with the power to control or restrict conflict, to stifle innovation and competition, and rule over the internet. EQUAL access is essential to all of us, and to our democracy and development.

—Toni Fitzpatrick, Berkeley, CA

For the sake of Democracy!

—Phil Flowers, ,

All human U.S. citizens deserve equal and free access to the internet. PERIOD!

—Hope Grable, Bourbonnais, IL

IT IS IMPORTANT because it is part of my life!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

—Naoma Foreman, Phoenix, AZ

The net is free speech and shall always remain that way.

—Randy Young, ,

America Needs "Free Press" Internet!

—William G Gonzalez, Suffern, NY

Freedom of expression and the right to privacy.

—Dianne E Dupuis, Centralia, WA

I THINK IT IS TIME FOR THESE PEOPLE TO LEAVE THE INTERNET ALONE. I AM 88 AND NOT ALWAYS ABLE TO GET OUT, THE INTERNET KEEPS ME INFORMED AND ENTERTAINED. I WOULD NOT BE ABLE TO AFFORD A NOT ANOTHER FEE. PLEASE LETS GET REAL.

—Marian Blackwell, Henderson, NC

It is as important as free speech

—Michael Paulino, Las Vegas, NV

The internet should remain free and not cater to what any one group says.

—Wyatt Stephan, Carmichael, CA

As a teacher we cannot allow the destroy the experience of 'educational' learning of our children and teachers -- if you think 'rich' means something, think about how much more 'stupid' means. It does NOT mean 'peace in our time' -- as History has shown. Join the stupid, and find out how brutal can their actions will become in the future history and culture of what was once the leader in all things to the entire planet- we now rank often below the top 25 nations in most of the things which define 'quality of life' - we rank below Cuba and many African Nations in 'overall quality of life'. KEEP THE INTERNET ONE PLACE FOR THE ENTIRE PLANET - no 'hyper' vs 'fast' lanes as I heard one lawyer parse it. You may become rich yourself from this vote, but I HOPE you think of the MILLIONS of 'just us people' who put you into office. Thank you, /s/ Paul Galioni, Ph.D., Ed.D.

—EdD Paul Galioni, Susanville, CA

Equality and competition is very important to me.

—JB Smith, North Port, FL

This take over of the internet is just another excuse for 1%ers to squeeze more $ out WE , THE 99%ers. The internet has been working fine for how many years now and because of some most likely paid off judge on verizon's side we are going to be forced to pay more. Incase YOU haven't noticed WE already have to pay to get internet access. I think its time the CEOs of verizon, att, comcast, etc. go sit on their private islands in the Caribbean and leave the rest of U.S. alone. P.S. I bet they got room on those islands for a few of them best buddy judges as well

—Rick Frigo, Fond du Lac, WI

Net neutrality is one of the most important things to democracy today. Take it away and we're one step farther from truly being free

—Davis, Anonymous, TN

As I pay cable for Internet service, I expect unrestricted Internet speed service for streaming movies and videophone access with 911 service as I am deaf.

—Clifford Andrews, Rochester, NY

The only lobby that must count about Internet and free expression is PEOPLE. Thanks to make other lobbies respect this.

—Bertrand Brosseau, ,

Innovation and progress depend on a free Internet.

—Gilles Bureau, ,

Like the Postal Service, long a bulwark of democracy, allowing equal access to a universal communication network, the neutral Internet is crucial for independent journalism, independent science, and the universal information access that could permit us to restore our democracy.

—Ron Lane, Philadelphia, PA

Kicking the small business start-ups in the face before they even get one foot in the door, and the potential to hinder the flow of potentially life saving data analytics.

—Kevin Finnegan, ,

Freedom to read about real life experiences not like the common media channels

—Paul hawthorne, ,

Freedom of expression, information, and speech SHOULD BE INDEPENDENT OF CORPORATE AND GOVERNMENT MEDDLING. Shame on you.

—Terence Kelsey, ,

Freedom benefits everyone.

—Mark Woodacre, ,

Our "broadband" is poor enough without intentional roadblocks.

—Jeremy W. Sherman, Atlanta, GA

It is only a matter of time before the ability to censor is abused. It is a loophole to avoid denying free speech. If I want to say something I can say it, and someone explicitly has the power to make sure I am not heard if they don't like it? I think not.

—Michael Pham, Woodstock, GA

Seems like it would be obvious, but here goes. The internet is a powerful tool for connecting people all over the world, for the free and open sharing of ideas, triumphs, art, warnings, literature, goofiness, poignant stories, information, educational opportunities, on and on. It belongs to everyone and it should stay that way. It should not be further 'privatized' and certainly companies with only financial interest should not be allowed to control access to the information available. This seems like it should be obvious, and should be a natural consequence of following the values that created the U.S. Keep the net neutral. Keep it free. Let's see what we can create when people are free to connect and collaborate in unrestricted ways to further our peaceful coexistence here on Earth.

—Marian Spadone, Ranchos de Taos, NM

An open and neutral internet infrastructure helps to ensure the freedom of speech and the free sharing of ideas in our world. Allowing broadband carriers to start impacting (in ANY way) the flow of information, ideas and services means that big business, not citizens and government, become the de-facto stewards of the freedom that we've all come to expect. There is no way to ensure the fair, transparent, and legal governance of net neutrality, once you hand over that responsibility to private, for profit enterprise. Lack of privacy, limiting access to information, filtering content are all consequences that cannot be undone. It is a fast and slippery slope to abuse and violations of basic human rights.

—Beth Fox, ,

Over the internet I can access many sources of information and many dissenting opinions, thus enabling me to form my opinion carefully and act accordingly. I want to be informed intelligently. Ron Bischler.

—Ron Bischler, ,

There are so many clandestine activities going on in the US, as perpetrated by the CIA and it is critically important the the PEOPLE KNOW AND BE FREE - the Net should not have special privileges for the rich and powerful like corporations and the government players they control.

—Gina Faro, Brattleboro, VT

The internet should not mirror the class system.

—Mary Te Stroete, Fond du Lac, WI

It is all about fairness and equality opportunity to use and create on the Internet. No one company has the right to act as if it is their utility to exploit at our, the consumers', expense.

—Mike Hood-Douda, Lebanon, OR

The internet was never made to be bound.

—Anderson Bui, Norcross, GA

As a senior citizen who uses the internet daily, I am already paying money to access it's incredible array of information. I joint not only the experts, I join million of other Americans who believe that the internet is just fine the way it currently is. An old adage "If it ain't broke, don't fix it" is applicable now. Leave the open Internet like it is. It serves America well and will continue to do so without interference by the FCC.

—Alexandra Sale, Longmont, CO

I am a senior with limited income and even more limited resources. Gut the internet and you might as well put a gun to my head at the same time!

—Mr Allen Watters Gildard, Apple Valley, CA

I use the Internet to communicate. With my family, with my friends, with my significant other. It is my lifeline to people who are far away due to the whims of circumstance. Right now, we have the freedom to stay in touch using any service of our choice. No one is forced to pick from a small selection of approved social networks who may not offer the specific features or privacy guarantees we seek. In a world without net neutrality, that choice is taken away. I use the Internet to learn. I read about history, science, and spirituality because I love to discover. In a world without net neutrality, I would be getting information from organisations who can afford to pay a premium. Not-for-profit sites like Wikipedia wouldn't be able to compete. I am not okay with getting my information only from content providers who play the profit motive game. I use the Internet to develop (open source software). I use the Internet to support (crowdfunding projects). I use the Internet to play (low-budget indie games). How much opportunity would we lose if the Internet becomes a game of Pay More To Play? Many of the Internet's most successful organisations and movements began with an idea that people laughed at. In a world without net neutrality, there will be no more startups who succeed with an idea.

—Alyssa Hung, ,

How are we going to prevent us from becoming China or Russia were their internet is controlled by the state same with big telecoms.

—James Eichman, Chicago, IL

Without net neutrality I would not be able to trust anything our govt. says.... therefore, not trust the U.S. government @ all..... which will only bring about open rebellion! Remember, The Tree of Liberty, now and again, needs to be fed with the blood of tyrants, corporations, and Patriots! (Guess we should now include corporations!!)

—Smallbear Rich, Haverhill, MA

No more monopolies!

—Denise Newell, San Diego, CA

It's the only freedom we have left!

—Vaughn A. Picard, ,

The taxpayers pay the FCC who should protect the taxpayers and leave the internet free to all!

—Ronald Miller, Ocala, FL

Net neutrality is vital to free speech. Additionally, I am a medical transcriptionist and I work from home, therefore I depend on the internet to do my job. Do not allow the telecom companies to deceive you into ruining the internet. You must reclassify broadband internet service as a public utility.

—Nora Parrish, Jacksonville, FL

1) Technology informs society. Democratic technology for a democratic society is a must. We urgently need equal opportunity for equal citizens. 2) Someone on my family owns a small internet based business and I might soon own one, too.

—David Peters, ,

We rely on the internet to bring us content from all over the world unfiltered by broadband providers.

—Marvin Haave, ,

Net Neutrality is important to me, because it allows myself and the rest of humanity to share media that we have created among ourselves. The world needs this ability going forward, as the rise of independent content producers is much more efficient than before. They are also much more important than they ever have been.

—Brennan Faucher, ,

There is nothing more important for a democracy in this technological era than the equal and free exchange of information . We cannot permit the further erosion of our nation at this crucial moment in time.

—Rev Yanish, Katonah, NY

I've been spending thousands of man hours on getting a small internet business ready to go. This proposal would crush that business's chances of flourishing, as well as my livelihood and that of all my employees. I am not the only one.

—John Cox, ,

The internet is the last free market the world has, and giving big companies an advantage By law would make it that much harder for new small companies to grow. Throttling speeds will eventually have a run away effect on other activities as years go by as it is applied to other services.

—Tim Ness, Boxford, MA

Don't return us to the Dark Ages! A free and open Internet is the best tool we've had for spreading democracy and equality worldwide. Don't be fooled by corporations who care about nothing more than the bottom line---their profits do not factor in the good of humanity. This decision will affect much more than American citizens and business interests, it is of vital importance to the whole planet. Please stand up for the future of free information and protect Net Neutrality today!

—Joanna Bonnheim, Berkeley, CA

There's only one way to save Net Neutrality: The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—Adelina Maru, ,

I want to keep a free and open system that already works to the good of all of us. Don't "fix" something that already functions so well.

—Mr. Roderic G Stephens, Redding, CA

An impartial Internet is essential to intellectual research and discourse.

—Spencer Hunter, Tucson, AZ

Common carriage is vital to education. Under-served children and even adults need every chance to get the best education they can.

—Natalie Wright, Santa Clara, CA

Net neutrality is important to me because it gives everyone a level playing field. We all have the same access to High speed internet. If u change that only the rich would have access to high speed internet. Let's keep things fair. Why r u trying to fix something that is not broken? Leave it alone!!

—Sharon Hill, Duncanville, TX

Isn't it obvious ?

—Greg Christiansen, Las Vegas, NV

Without an open internet, innovation and growth in the tech sector will die. Letting big telecom companies charge more for a fast lane will block the growth of small start-ups and midsize businesses with new and disruptive business models. Without net neutrality, we wouldn't have businesses like Netflix, Twitter, Facebook, or many other tech and gaming companies that used new and disruptive technology to grow and produce billions of dollars of revenue in the US. Real net neutrality must be protected. The "fast lane" is a lie. This bill is about using a slow lane to let telecom companies crush competition. Please don't cripple the growth of technology and hinder innovation in the US with these terrible new rules.

—Jason Rice, San Leandro, CA

Without spending a lot of money that I don't have I can only get internet via a dial-up connection. Loss of net neutrality would mean that I would effectively be barred from the internet.

—Curtis Eckstein, Green Bay, WI

Only a neutral net can be a fair net.

—Robert J. Kuzma, Oakland, CA

The internet as is, offers boundless access to the entire world. Put up restrictions, base these restrictions on one's ability to pay, and all boundless access STOPS. Please do not let that happen.

—Cheryl Bancroft, Scituate, MA

Because that's fair

—Marc Joncas, ,

For the freedom of everyone to have the same access as anyone else

—Peter van Rijswijk, ,

Open internet allows for research, dialogue, and positive change...

—Brian Watson, ,

The FCC's current proposal would destroy Net Neutrality, and it's inconsistent with the intent of Congress. We urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect real Net Neutrality. I want to have my privacy protected. I have that right.

—Louise, ,

The ability to access information is vital in a "free" society. To limit access to information is like censorship.

—Susan Sanocki, Azusa, CA

The loss of Net Neutrality would make it harder for individuals and small businesses to have the same opportunity to grow that larger businesses have. It would take away the ability for new artists and technology creators to get their work known based on the quality of the work rather than how much money they can sink into it. In short, it would be a gigantic move backwards culturally, technically, and creatively; all for the sake of saving an outdated and crippled business model and infrastructure.

—Robert Strahan, Warner Robins, GA

To protect new, innovative startups from being crushed by paying twice for internet traffic.

—Eric Wisti, Inver Grove Heights, MN

Small business cannot afford these proposed high cost fees. We need a level playing field.

—Shelley Carlin, , helps us retired to pay our bills with out leaving home,

—FRANCIS Glisson, Windsor, SC

My family (4 persons) are dependent on an Internet managed like a public utility, not like a fragmented or stratified communication medium. Our download and upload speeds are already much slower than in many parts of the world. We need to build up the Internet system in the U.S. as a whole, not in premium, privileged, piecemeal fashion. United we'll stand, divided not so well.

—Bo S. Baggs, Port Arthur, TX

Net Neutrality has been key to all the developments related to the internet and is essential to all Americans. Classify broadband carriers the common carriers that they really are.

—Donald Gurney, Arlington, VA

Net Neutrality is important to me because I believe in free speech for all citizens and I am also against the breach of privacy presented by the TPP. In addition, I firmly stand against the attainability of the best internet services only for the wealthy elite in our society. Everyone has something important to offer. Blocking the rights and freedoms of average citizens through such policies as the creation of an "internet slow lane" is something that I believe displays a lack of vision, as well as a complete lack of regard for the citizens of all nations of the world. Such a move demonstrates to me that those who support the creation of a "slow lane" do not believe in the rights and freedoms entrenched in the bills of rights in such free nations as Canada and the United States of America. Furthermore, I believe firmly that any person of integrity would not vote in favour of passing such a law and still claim to believe in freedom of speech while voting to suppress that very freedom for those who cannot afford to pay top dollar for it. Such an individual is voting to repress the voice of the citizens from whom he or she cannot profit. Without the interests of all citizens equally in mind, such a vote is a vote for pure selfishness. Only repressive nations, such as those which have no care for the rights and freedoms of their citizens, would consider such a backward move as this slow lane proposal would provide. It is my hope that the people who have the power to make this decision will stand for the freedom and rights of the citizens of Canada and the United States of America and for freedom everywhere! Thank you!

—Brenda R. Miller, ,

Exactly why should I vote for anybody who supports business over individual rights. That's why Net Neutrality should be important to my lawmakers.

—Todd Fundaro, Royal Oak, MI

Net Neutrality is exactly as important as Democracy, Free Culture and Free Speech. Things that must be taken in care simultaneously.

—Ramiro Rivera, ,

Because it gives everybody a voice.

—, ,

Equal access to the 'Net is the most important democratizing force the world has seen. To parcel it out to the highest bidder would enshrine the traditional, and non-American, values of an aristocracy.

—Joe Webb, Whittier, CA

Leave us alone you greedy pigs. Don't touch something that doesn't belong to anybody.

—Phil Laurin, ,

I don't have extra money to pay for internet services. Net Neutrality is the American Way!

—Nancy Dickinson, University City, MO

Free speech! 2nd amendment!

—Brian Howse, ,

net neutrality

—Deborah O'Connor, ,

As a long-time (26 years) Internet user, I would very much like to have it remain free and open as it was created to be in the beginning.

—Theodore C. Snyder, Granada Hills, CA

I don't want to have second class access because big telecom is engaging in economic censorship.

—Michael Parry, Escondido, CA

Do you REALLY need to be told!!!

—Libby Lervik, ,

Broadband providers needs to be reclassified as common carriers. This is the only way to keep them from blocking, slowing down and interfering with websites, apps and content they don't like. Todays racketeering from ATT, Verizon etc. against providers like Netflix to get them to "pay up" is totally unacceptable! This will totally kill innovation, since new/small companies cannot afford to "pay up" whenever the big ISPs want them to!

—Odin Brodersen, Frisco, TX

Protect our open internet!

—Marita Howry, Salem, OR keep the internet free from big corporations!

—Jonathan F. Yorck, Eugene, OR

I thought the world was meant to be fair and not Money means life. The way that your doing things is just caring for the rich and it's very selfish! To be honest how can someone like you I will never know! You lot can look at this and laugh but listen, you can't just push your wieght around and hide behind your money becuae people with strong minds and are not cowards are willing to fight for justice against selfish people!

—Stevie Williams, ,

Deal with it like it IS: A UTILITY!!!! No SLOW lane, EVER!!!

—James W. Davis, Bend, OR

It's MY FREEDOM OF SPEECH!

—Katherine Gibson, Vancouver, WA

Fairness.

—, Mobile, AL

it is obvious.

—Maryann McCabe, ,

I'm sick of the rich getting richer. Stop thinking of pocket books and consider doing something altruistic. Something that will benefit everyone instead a few at the expense of many.

—Hagan Riglin, ,

The internet should no be limited by those in power or those who pay to have such power

—Rodney Dickson, ,

Without Net Neutrality we eliminate freedom of speech.

—Jordan Kelso, Haleyville, AL want free use of the internet without the delays, added inconvenience and greater cost demanded by big business takeover

—Suzanne Pogell, Annapolis, MD

Net Neutrality is important to me as it is the only way the normal citizen has any rights on the internet whatsoever.

—John Felion, Red Bluff, CA

How could it not be? The internet needs to be classified the same as phones, common carrier. To much is done through the internet to fuck it up like this, to many people rely on it for everything from applying to work to making their living directly. It doesn't matter what someone is using it for, it needs to be neutral!

—Tully Irving, ,

Allowing big business to consistently outrank the rest of us diminishes our freedom of expression and choice. Not a good way to encourage a Republic.

—Joan Martinez, Silver City, NM

No one should be allowed to have an unfair advantage over others when it comes to broadband availability and services. Small businesses/organizations/individuals should have equal time with there internet communications without being pushed aside by corporations that have money. It should be a level playing field for all!!

—Todd Kiker, Concord, CA

The global success of the internet was acheived by creative individuals with little or no interference. Let it be !

—BRBeedham, ,

Because it is only fair.

—Charles B. McGarry, Washington, DC

Private interests controlling information is anti-democratic.

—Janet Hopkins, ,

True democracy, pure and simple.

—Andrew Baldwin, ,

Net neutrality is the last bastien of free speech left as corporations and government control the main media. It must be left available to all.

—Norm Hamilton, ,

It is the only way to keep our democracy going in the 21st century

—Mr. Edward Costello, Santa Monica, CA

Equal opportunity and access for all.

—Juno Yoo, ,

The internet was created for everyone!

—Athena Emmanouilidis, Astoria, NY

The Internet and the World Wide Web are based on unrestricted access for all.

—Reon, ,

NetNeutrality offers equal and unfettered access to all the internet without any barriers or restrictions where everyone is treated equal. This is the only way the market and people would be treated equaly and have equal access

—Barry Danielson, New Westminster, AZ

The Internet is an unparalleled medium for free speech, education, commerce, and human innovation. It is a fertile ground where learning, entertainment, business, research, and human culture thrives, and it brings together the best ideas of people around the world in a way that was never possible before. It is perhaps the most powerful communications tool since the printing press. Abandoning Net Neutrality would severely tarnish the aforementioned power of the Internet, and would limit future innovations and progress made by humankind through the use of the medium.

—Kyle, ,

The lack of common carrier status has caused the US Internet to be much slower and more expensive than comparable countries. This harms US business.

—Mike Bird, Tacoma, WA

The marketplace of ideas should be preserved!

—James Mitchell, Arroyo Grande, CA knowledge, information, connections, contacts, time saving, shopping, health information, job searching, net flicks!

—Roger Schmidt, Madison, WI

The "BIG TELECOMS" should not be allowed more profitability by increasing tolls for premium access while blocking or throttling back services on those that cannot afford higher fees.

—Jay S Sorenson, ,

Because it is democratic.

—Stephen Markel, Los Angeles, CA

It's the right thing to do

—Ernest mesa, Fontana, CA

I urge you to reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect Net Neutrality.

—David Paz, Lincoln, NE

Free enterprise.

—Nick Korolev, Fisher, WV

If there's freedom of the press, shouldn't there be freedom of information too? Don't hinder access to that!

—, Eugene, OR

The little guy needs protection. We need to be helping out small business and independent people online. The internet needs to be fair and not only for people who can afford ridiculous prices. The internet should be a right and not a privilege for all, not just the rich and giant companies.

—Matt Hubler, ,

The internet is a public utility. Private corporations don't own it.

—Sean, Broomfield, CO

The internet will be useless without neutrality

—Cindy Ramsey, Kodak, TN

it will be another sell out to big money over the rights of the majority.

—C Zawadzki, Schenectady, NY

We need real government that stands behind and in front of the people not more Corporate power.

—Bruce Van Tassell, Nelson,

Because openness is what has made the internet great, and net neutrality is what has protected it.

—Alex Gunyon, ,

Since the TAXPAYERS pay the FCC, the FCC must protect the taxpayers and not big business.

—Lynn Miller, Ocala, FL

The internet has been the greatest communication device in history. No one should be allowed to censor it or limit it.

—Jonathan Parsons, Fort Lauderdale, FL

We should all have equal access to this public utility.

—Roberta Frye, Culver City, CA

Maybe you like to keep your kids at a Grade 9 level education with a slow internet since it will take all night for US students to do their homework assignments. They don't even finish assignments now with faster internet. The rest of us need faster internet not slower to get our work done. So hands off and SPEED IT UP IDIOTS like in Europe and forward thinking Asian countries.

—S Watkins, ,

You can't buy yourself LOVE...

—Sjöberg Sven G, ,

My grandchildren should have a free and open internet.

—Norman Silverstone, ,

The Internet must remain neutral as it's a worldwide asset, regulated by worldwide policies, pushing for neutrality

—, ,

To me it's the same as having freedom of speech. If you are not free to use and search the internet for your own use. Then it is a suppression of our true freedom.

—David Hope, ,

Anything else is corporate tyranny. The Internet is for everyone! Remember, it's a WORLD WIDE web!

—Anna H Petrov RD, Beaverton, OR

Neutral communication between all people of the world has been vital in the development of our world and our people. Net Neutrality is important to me because it factors into every aspect of my life, and my normally limited social life.

—Zarley Price Zaremba, ,

Net neutrality ensures Democracy.

—Neil Salvage, ,

Are you kidding me..?! Leave the internet alone!!!!

—A Wolf, Cardiff, CA

Like millions of other Americans and others throughout the world, I rely on a free and open internet for so many important tasks in my life. Abandoning the vital principle of network neutrality in exchange for extra profits for telecommunication corporations is a foolish and needless thing to do, and if you ultimately choose the interests of the big telecom companies over the public's interests, the internet as we know it will be completely ruined. Please do the right thing and listen to us, the people of the United States, when we say: Reclassify the broadband providers as common carriers and restore network neutrality once and for all.

—Sara Tamson, Danville, VA

It equalizes access to information, which is the great equalizer and the only mechanism by which we have verifiable developed and advanced in such a short time.

—Mario Rocha, ,

The internet as we know it now is useful in so many ways to improve a person's education, to make a quick check of the weather or news than may impact a person or town, to make a bank transaction and a last minute bill, look for weight loss tips and health education, sell the unused bike or lawnmower, and just generally makes life easier for people everywhere whether they can afford cable for internet or use the libraries for free access. It's become an essential in everyday life, and absolutely required for schools and jobs. By changing the playing field to suit Big Telecom, many people will be hurt by it, pay more if they are able to, or do without. The internet works well as it is, so please leave it as is---a level playing field for the individual person whether that person is poor, rich, young, or old without additional hoops to jump through and fees that would be attached by Big Telecom to make it more difficult or impossible for some to handle. Big Telecom has the interest of Big Business in mind and not the everyday people who depend on the internet in so many ways. It's already hard for some of the disabled, poor, and disadvantaged to access the internet as it is if they don't have access to libraries for free use and are too poor to pay for cable, not to mention all the people who still don't have access because of poor reception in rural areas across the nation. Don't make it harder for even more people, or more expensive on families that are already overburdened. The internet is loved by people and works great as it is, so please don't ruin it by messing with this great asset to the children, families, and individuals across this nation. Thank you, Connie.

—Connie Hicks, Springfield, MO

Freedom of expression, speech and commerce must be maintained on the internet to allow everyone a chance at the opportunities online. Rich corporations MUST NOT be allowed to control online content and certainly NOT allowed to monopolize the internet in any way. The whole foundation of the internet is for information to be shared freely and this must remain intact to protect Net Neutrality. Reclassify broadband providers as common carriers under Title II to protect consumers from corporate gauging and biased content control.

—Randy Ladic, ,

It's the democratic way

—Oren Sachs, Rockville Centre, NY

If we don't allow an open internet it will only help to increase another monopoly. I do believe in equal opportunity and hope my government does too. This proposed bill would make it near impossible to startup a new company in this field. It would do nothing to create jobs or improve our economy.

—Caleb Wade Kolessner, Kissimmee, FL

The corporations are out of control. It is your duty to the people to recognize this and do what is best for all, not the ones who bribe, threatens, etc. Your responsibility is to the people. Appropriate action will be greatly appreciated. Thanks for your courage to stand for all.

—Michael Lucko, Schererville, IN

I depend on the internet. As a Digital Effects artist, I send files to clients, receive files from clients, and use the internet for research and software purchases and upgrades. I am also the owner of a very small business, and need the internet to survive... without having to duke it out with huge firms like Sony, or Disney. They can afford to pay more- I cannot.

—Michael Hoover, Los Angeles, CA

This is a bastion of our free market and all that makes the United States great. That this is even up for debate is so asinine as to be unbelievable.

—Seth Quinto, Pompano Beach, FL

It's important for everyone in the world to have access to a free and open internet with no censorship from governments interfering with content.

—Melanie Rising, Worcester, MA

I'm a full time telecommuter. Anything that slows my connections or prohibits the use of encryption is threat

—Michael Moran, Leander, TX

It's your job to: PROTECT US FROM THIS CRAP!!! DO YOUR JOB!!!

—Gloria J. Howard, MARANA, AZ

It's time we did something to benefit the American people, not the corporations who seem to run our country. You decided, decades ago, to make television a commercial enterprise. As a result, although I have hundreds of channels, I have limited choices about what to watch. I also have to sit through commercials that in total are longer than the show. AND I have to pay for cable to even have access to most programming. I already pay for Internet access, but I can browse the web at will and pick the content I'm interested in. But you're threatening to take this away and allow media giants, who already control much of TV (and radio) programming, to dictate my access, no doubt at a fee. I hope you realize that other Western democracies allow free access to all media--only the dictatorships have restrictions suimilar to ours.

—Madelyn Roesch, Woodhaven, NY

If we don't have net neutrality the future internet will be as lousy and expensive as cable tv is today.

—James Conant, Brookfield, CT

Or promptes freedom

—Finbarr Faughnan, ,

As a frequent user of the internet, and an elder person supporting an extended family, I can't afford to be relegated to a slow lane, which will occur if we lose Net Neutrality and a free and open internet.

—Lee Lindsey, Cypress, TX

The Internet is our 21st century highway. Commerce is not possible without. That makes it a Common Carrier.

—Robert Watson, Tallahassee, FL

Allowing per-site extra fees amounts to censorship, chills innovation, and further retards the development of the Internet in the United States.

—Christopher North-Keys, Austin, TX

Help keep prices fare and our internet freedom! Thats why the internet was made

—Annie Huynh, Houston, TX

It is important to keep this information highway an equal access to all facility.

—Bruce Charlestein, Fairfield, IA internet needs to remain open and free

—Lauren Matelski, Davis, CA

I use the internet frequently to get my job done at the church. If the cost of the internet goes up, my productivity will necessarily go down because we can't afford a "fast lane". The only folks who will enjoy your proposed rules are the 1%. The 99% will suffer.

—Ann Catherine Keirns, Castro Valley, CA

Comcast & others should not control my 1st Amendment rights by dictating where I can go online and how much I need to pay for access!!!!!!!!!!

—Willa O'Connor, Kensington, CA

I strongly object to the possibility that broadband providers will be able to block or slow down websites or content...this would be a great blow to intellectual freedom.

—Robert Tibshirani, Palo Alto, CA

Without Net Neutrality, common users would have their Internet access severely limited for unjust reasons. If that was to happen, then the world's most powerful communication apparatus would be of little worth apart from allowing business tycoons to stamp the Internet "commoners" into poverty. That, to me, is why we need Net Neutrality.

—Jordan Takumi Davis, Cleveland, OH

Net nurality promotes progress by protecting small startups from excessive fees.

—Kevin Shurtleff, Provo, UT

The internet should be seen as a commons that is open to all for free speech. Allowing corporations to charge fees to content providers will limit the ability of individuals and small organizations and companies to compete with the for-profit sector for speed on the internet. The proposal would make it unfair for new start up companies without a lot of capital to pay the higher prices for fast lane access. The government should be promoting the use of the internet for information and commerce for all and not treat it simply as a source of profits for the Internet Providers.

—Jane Monahan, Decatur, GA

Relegating small business users to the proposed "Slow Lane" of the internet could well be a killing blow to those businesses. The internet must remain free and open with equal access to all!

—Raymond P Silbersdorf, Appleton, WI

Keep the internet accessible to all regardless of capital power. The much needed voices will be silenced and smothered by the powerful pillows of the corporate world.

—Daniel Molina, ,

I believe that equal access to all is a fundamental right. If wealthy people have first access then there is no reason to upgrade or make the net better as the people with money don't see the slowdowns.

—Richard Mckenzie, ,

I value the innovation and free communication that comes about because of the internet. Without so, I wouldn't have many of the friends I do. Killing Net Neutrality will kill the innovation.

—PJ Vander Kooij, ,

Net Neutrality makes the web democratic.

—A M. Shanahan, Ardmore, PA

Keeping the internet neutral and free for everyone will allow the internet community to prosper as it has until now. Enabling internet providers to pick out websites they don't like is similar to taking away the freedom of speech - the internet in particular is formed upon that principle, letting anyone create and post something on the internet. Allowing providers to censor the internet will give a wrong message - that censoring media is acceptable, and that dictatorships in the world today aren't doing anything wrong. Instead of moving the internet forward, this would be a step backwards.

—Bjørn Olav Jensen, Mogreina,

It's time to stand w/the People and not more Corporate creep.

—Mary Don Cardyn & A Very, Hillsboro, NM

if not neutral then 'we' will lose it.

—Dave Brown, ,

I shouldn't have to tell them. They should just know better.

—Robin Marshall, ,

Traffic neutrality is a founding principle of the internet, and beyond that, this move would harm competition. Of all the regulations that the internet doesn't need, regulation that favours incumbents is surely high on that pile.

—Oliver Thomas, ,

Net Neutrality is key to keeping the internet open, diverse and full of vibrant content! To remove this, may cause total internet collapse, think about it, would You want the content you use, watch and enjoy on the internet restricted? slowed down? Removed altogether?

—Billy, ,

Competition will suffer, jobs will be lost, the Internet as a whole will go many steps back.

—Brian Nielsen, ,

Don't do bad things. Stop destroying the internet and discriminating against those who are not wealthy. The FCC must reclassify Internet service providers as "common carriers."

—K, ,

Net Neutrality ensures an equal chance of success worldwide. To go against such a thing will be wrong.

—Jack Crawley, ,

The Internet is an important medium for communication and research. Let it be an open resource for the people, not a restricted tool of the government.

—Laurel Hope, Oakland, CA

The internet we currently enjoy is the best possible model, it was invented on the basis of being free and open. To change that is to change the very essence of what people enjoy about their connectivity. Great things happen between people on the internet all the time such as, environmental action and people becoming business partners online. The internet does its job beautifully and very few people at large have any problem with it the way it is.

—Steven Smiglicki, ,

My family, my company and I use the Internet.

—Mrs. Susan Schluederberg, Bel Air, MD

Freedom of the internet supports all businesses and people.

—Colin Lebrun, ,

Net neutrality is important to the world. Just as free libraries helped to make a better read and informed American population, so will/does a neutral internet.

—Sharon Bittner, Oberlin, OH

The internet should not go the shameful way of privatization like everything else in this God forsaken country!

—Kai Bello, Huntington Beach, CA

This will go down in history as the downfall of the internet, and further prove the extremity of corporate greed. It is an embarrassment to humanity that this is even being considered, and all parties involved with this idea should be ashamed of themselves.

—Luigi Casole, ,

The Internet is a key source of information for millions of people, and it is a public good that is currently provided through private hands. Free expression is also a constitutionally protected right and public good, and the ability to express it should not be conditional on monetary considerations. I implore you not to destroy the Internet as we know it!

—Nicolas Saldias, ,

I don't want Monopolistic Mega Corporations controlling and restrictiong internet access and constricting access to websites that don't "Pay to Play". American's are already paying too much for their internet access, we do not need to give the big telecom companies the ability to blackmail us in to paying more for uncensored and unrestricted access.

—Tim Milam, Mission, TX

For once, be on the side of the people. Don't put us at the mercy of the large media corporations.

—Toby Dolinka, Grand Rapids, MI

